SONG OF THE DRAGONBORN

(Chorus)

*Dovahkiin, Dovahkiin, naal ok zin los vahriin,
Wah dein vokul mahfaeraak ahst vaal!
Ahk fin norok paal graan fod nust hon zindro zaan,
Dovahkiin, fah hin kogaan mu draal!*

(Chorus)

*Dragonborn, Dragonborn, by his honor is sworn,
To keep evil forever at bay!
And the fiercest foes rout when they hear triumph's shout,
Dragonborn, for your blessing we pray!*

*Huzrah nu, kul do od, wah aan bok lingrah vod,
Ahk fin tey, boziik fun, do fin gein!*

*Wo lost fron wah ney dov, ahk fin reylik do jul,
Voth aan suleyk wah ronit faal krein!*

*Hearken now, sons of snow, to an age, long ago,
And the tale, boldly told, of the one!
Who was kin to both wyrm, and the races of man,
With a power to rival the sun!*

*Ahik fin zul, rok drey kod, nau tol morokei frod,
Rul lot Taazokaan motaad voth kein!*

*Sahrot Thu'um, med aan tuz, vey zeim hokoron pah,
Ol fin Dovahkiin komeyt ok rein!*

*And the voice, he did wield, on that glorious field,
When great Tamriel shuddered with war!
Mighty Thu'um, like a blade, cut through enemies all,
As the Dragonborn issued his roar!*

(Chorus)

*Dovahkiin, Dovahkiin, naal ok zin los vahriin,
Wah dein vokul mahfaeraak ahst vaal!
Ahk fin norok paal graan fod nust hon zindro zaan,
Dovahkiin, fah hin kogaan mu draal!*

(Chorus)

*Dragonborn, Dragonborn, by his honor is sworn,
To keep evil forever at bay!
And the fiercest foes rout when they hear triumph's shout,
Dragonborn, for your blessing we pray!*

*Ahik fin Kel lost prodah, do ved viing ko fin krah,
Tol fod zeymah win kein meyt fundein!*

*Alduin, feyn do jun, kruziik vokun staadnau,
Voth aan bahlak wah diivon fin lein!*

*And the Scrolls have foretold, of black wings in the cold,
That when brothers wage war come unfurled!
Alduin, Bane of Kings, ancient shadow unbound,
With a hunger to swallow the world!*

*Nuz aan sul, fent alok, fod fin vul dovah nok,
Fen kos nahlot mahfaeraak ahk ruz!*

Paaz Keizaal fen kos stin nol bein Alduin jot, Dovahkiin kos fin savik do muz!

*But a day, shall arise, when the dark dragon's lies,
Will be silenced forever and then!
Fair Skyrim will be free from foul Alduin's maw, Dragonborn be the savior of men!*

(Chorus)

*Dovahkiin, Dovahkiin, naal ok zin los vahriin,
Wah dein vokul mahfaeraak ahst vaal!
Ahk fin norok paal graan fodnust vok zin dro zaan,
Dovahkiin, fah hin kogaan mu draal!*

(Chorus)

*Dragonborn, Dragonborn, by his honor is sworn,
To keep evil forever at bay!
And the fiercest foes rout when they hear triumph's shout,
Dragonborn, for your blessing we pray!*

TRAINING PART 1: CHARACTER CREATION

WELCOME TO SKYRIM

We have designed the Character Creation section of the “Training” chapter to give you tactical advice in the same order as you make decisions while adventuring across the wilds of Skyrim. To begin with, we reveal the benefits of choosing a particular race. Then we thoroughly explore all 18 of the skills—and the perks associated with each—so you know what each skill does, how you increase it, and what perks to select based on your play style. Finally, we present a host of Character Archetypes—exceptional explorers tailored to a specific role, renowned heroes who use the best combinations of skills and equipment to suit a particular play style.

TIP Please read through the game’s Instruction Manual and familiarize yourself with the tenets of this adventure. This training chapter assumes you have already read this information.

This guide encompasses all of Skyrim’s original content and updates, as well as the Dawnguard, Hearthfire, and Dragonborn add-ons. The following icons are used to indicate new material related to an update or add-on:

Content associated with this icon is primarily related to the Dawnguard expansion.

Content associated with this icon is primarily related to the Hearthfire expansion.

Content associated with this icon is primarily related to the Dragonborn expansion.

Content associated with this icon was added or changed by a game update.

Look for these four icons throughout this book so you know what’s new.

SELECTING A RACE

PART I: THE RACES OF SKYRIM

As you begin your adventure across Skyrim, the historic Elder Scrolls mantra “you are what you play” rings true: Although statistically, an Orc Wizard or a High Elven Thief may not be the optimal character choices based on starting skill bonuses and racial powers, this doesn’t matter in the long run. Choose the race that most appeals to you, and don’t worry about statistics and abilities.

You can overcome low starting skill values by using the skills in which you wish to become more proficient. No races have any intrinsic shortfalls that will prevent you from becoming the type of hero you want to be.

However, there are certain advantages to picking a particular race. For those adventurers who wish to maximize every advantage, it is useful to know which favored skills each race begins with bonuses to, and to understand the unique racial powers they possess; this can aid you when choosing a particular play style.

In short, this section reveals which races are best suited to a particular style of adventuring, whether that be with melee weapons, magic, stealth, or some combination of these styles.

Racial Skill Advantages

The following table shows the starting skill statistics for each race. The higher the number (over the base level of 15), the better. Values of 20 indicate this is a favored skill of the race. Values of 25 indicate this is a primary skill of the race.

RACE	SMITHING	HEAVY ARMOR	BLOCK	TWO-HANDED	ONE-HANDED	ARCHERY	LIGHT ARMOR	SNEAK	LOCKPICKING	PICKPOCKET	SPEECH	ALCHEMY	ILLUSION	CONJURATION	DESTRUCTION	RESTORATION	ALTERATION	ENCHANTING
Argonian	15	15	15	15	15	15	20	20	25	20	15	15	15	15	15	20	20	15
Breton	15	15	15	15	15	15	15	15	15	15	20	20	20	25	15	20	20	15
Dark Elf	15	15	15	15	15	15	20	20	15	15	15	20	20	15	25	15	20	15
High Elf	15	15	15	15	15	15	15	15	15	15	15	15	25	20	20	20	20	20
Imperial	15	20	20	15	20	15	15	15	15	15	15	15	15	15	20	25	15	20
Khajiit	15	15	15	15	20	20	15	25	20	20	15	20	15	15	15	15	15	15
Nord	20	15	20	25	20	15	20	15	15	15	20	15	15	15	15	15	15	15
Orc	20	25	20	20	20	15	15	15	15	15	15	15	15	15	15	15	15	20
Redguard	20	15	20	15	25	20	15	15	15	15	15	15	15	15	20	15	20	15
Wood Elf	15	15	15	15	15	25	20	20	20	20	15	20	15	15	15	15	15	15

NOTE For example, if you chose a Khajiit character, you’d receive a +5 bonus to your One-Handed, Archery, Lockpicking, Pickpocket, and Alchemy and a +10 to your Sneak skill.

Notes on Gender: There are no differences between the genders of a particular race; they share the same set of starting skill values, spells, powers, and abilities. Feel free to create the character that most appeals to you without penalty.

Starting Spells, Racial Powers, and Abilities

In addition to a slight boost to the base value of certain skills, each race has its own set of starting Spells; Racial Powers that offer a unique bonus such as the ability to regenerate or absorb Magicka; and innate Racial Abilities, such as a resistance to Frost damage. A tactical overview of each race follows.

NOTE Racial Commentary: The race you choose will affect the greetings and passing comments the citizens of Skyrim make when you speak to or pass by them.

Races and Gameplay: Very rarely, your race may also have a small effect on gameplay. For example:

When infiltrating the Thalmor Embassy dressed in the robes of that High Elf faction, High Elves (and to a lesser extent other Elves) will find it easier to sneak around undetected than will members of the other races.

Orcs are welcome in Skyrim's Orc strongholds, while members of other races must first prove themselves worthy.

The tone and color of some dialogue choices may change depending on your race and the situation.

If your race has a noticeable effect on an interaction, that will be noted when relevant. But this isn't something to be concerned about: nothing is closed to you because of your race; indeed, you may be surprised by a positive benefit when you least expect it!

Argonians

Favored Skills: +10 Lockpicking, +5 Pickpocket, Sneak, Light Armor, Alteration, Restoration

Starting Spells: Flames, Healing

Racial Power—Histskin: You regenerate health 10x faster for 60 seconds

Racial Abilities: 50% Disease Resistance, Underwater Breathing

Ideal Play Style: Thief (Defensive)

A male Argonian

A female Argonian

Little is known about the reptilian denizens of Black Marsh. Years of defending their borders have made the Argonians experts in guerilla warfare, and their natural abilities make them equally at home in water and on land. They are well suited for the treacherous swamps of their homeland and have developed natural immunity to the diseases that have doomed many would-be explorers in the region.

TIP Histskin is a fantastic ability for any character, capable of quickly bringing you back from the brink of death. Even better, as a power, it allows you to keep attacking while it does its work—no concentration required.

Resist Disease reduces the chance that you'll contract a disease from an animal or trap; it doesn't affect the severity of any diseases you might already have. Diseases are rarely a significant threat in Skyrim, although they can be debilitating if you let them pile up. Visit a shrine periodically, and you shouldn't have any trouble.

Underwater Breathing means you'll never have to worry about drowning damage. Diving is rarely required, but this ability may allow you to claim the occasional sunken treasure or explore shipwrecks more easily.

Breton

Favored Skills: +10 Conjuration, +5 Illusion, Restoration, Speech, Alchemy, Alteration

Starting Spells: Flames, Healing, Conjure Familiar

Racial Power—Dragonskin: You absorb 50% of the Magicka from incoming spells for 60 seconds

Racial Abilities: 25% Magic Resistance

Ideal Play Style: Mage (Defensive)

A male Breton

A female Breton

Bretons feel an instinctive bond with the mercurial forces of magic and the supernatural. Many great sorcerers have come from their home province of High Rock. In addition to their quick and perceptive grasp of spellcraft, enchantment, and alchemy, all Bretons boast a resistance to spells.

TIP Bretons are fantastic at taking on other mages; both Dragonskin and Magic Resistance support this and are strong abilities even in the late game.

Magic Resistance significantly increases your survivability against enemy casters, while Dragonskin is great at keeping your Magicka up; this helps you maintain the Ward spells that are your first line of defense.

Dark Elf

Favored Skills: +10 Destruction, +5 Alteration, Illusion, Sneak, Light Armor, Alchemy

Starting Spells: Flames, Sparks, Healing

Racial Power—Ancestor's Wrath: Creates a Flame Cloak that does 10 damage to nearby foes for 60 seconds.

Racial Abilities: 50% Fire Resistance

Ideal Play Style: Nightblade (Mage/Thief)

A male Dark Elf

A female Dark Elf

In the empire, "Dark Elves" is the common usage, but in their Morrowind homeland, they call themselves the "Dunmer." The dark-skinned, red-eyed Dunmer combine powerful intellect with strong and agile physiques, producing superior warriors and sorcerers. On the battlefield, Dark Elves are noted for their skilled and balanced integration of swordsmen, marksmen, and war wizards.

TIP Ancestor's Wrath is a weaker version of Flame Cloak, an Adept-level Destruction spell. While good at early levels—where you're likely to be in melee a lot—it's less valuable once you can cast the spell on your own. It's also less useful if you plan to play a ranged character, such as an archer or pure mage.

Fire Resistance is helpful against Flame Atronachs, fire-wielding casters, and fire-breathing dragons. No one enemy type uses fire spells, so it's hard to predict when exactly this ability will come into play—it's not really something you can use strategically.

High Elf

Favored Skills: +10 Illusion, +5 Alteration, Conjunction, Destruction, Restoration, Enchanting

Starting Spells: Flames, Fury, Healing

Racial Power—Highborn: For 60 seconds, you regenerate 25% of your maximum Magicka each second

Racial Abilities: Highborn Magicka (+50 Magicka)

Ideal Play Style: Mage (Offensive)

A male High Elf

A female High Elf

The High Elves, or Altmer, are the proud, tall, golden-skinned people of Summerset Isle. The common tongue of the empire, Tamrielic, is based on their speech and writing, and most of the empire's arts, crafts, and sciences are derived from High Elven traditions. High Elves are the driving force behind the rising Aldmeri Dominion, and their agents, the Thalmor, are bitterly resented by the Nords of Skyrim.

TIP Highborn will rapidly refill your Magicka, allowing you to continue casting when you need it most. Extremely strong at any level, this power is a mage's lifeline.

Highborn Magicka is like getting five free levels. It's a powerful head start for any mage—you may never need to fall back on your melee skills.

Imperial

Favored Skills: +10 Restoration, +5 Destruction, Enchanting, One-Handed, Block, Heavy Armor

Starting Spells: Flames, Healing

Racial Power—Voice of the Emperor: Calms nearby people for 60 seconds

Racial Abilities: Imperial Luck (adds a small amount of gold to most containers)

Ideal Play Style: Battlemage (Mage/Warrior)

A male Imperial

A female Imperial

Natives of the civilized, cosmopolitan province of Cyrodiil, Imperials are well educated and well spoken. Though physically less imposing than the other races, Imperials are shrewd diplomats and traders. These traits, along with their remarkable skill and training as light infantry, have allowed them to rule an empire that spans the continent for centuries.

TIP Voice of the Emperor is a weaker version of the Expert-level Illusion spell Pacify, with the effect centered on your position. This can be powerful if you're surrounded by a mob of enemies, but it's less useful against smaller groups or ranged foes.

Imperial Luck adds a few extra coins to most of the chests you find. While this bonus is small (10 or less), it adds up over time. But there are plenty of other ways to make money in Skyrim.

Khajiit

Favored Skills: +10 Sneak, +5 Lockpicking, Pickpocket, Alchemy, One-Handed, Archery

Starting Spells: Flames, Healing

Racial Power—Night Eye: Improved night vision for 60 seconds

Racial Abilities: Claws (4x unarmed damage)

Ideal Play Style: Thief (Offensive)

A male Khajiit

A female Khajiit

Khajiit hail from the province of Elsweyr and can vary in appearance from nearly Elven to the Cathay-raht “jaguar men” to the great Senche-Tiger. The most common breed, the Suthay-raht, is intelligent, quick, and agile. Many Khajiit disdain weapons in favor of their claws. They make excellent thieves due to their natural agility and deft hands.

TIP Night Eye allows you to see clearly in dark environments without the need for a light source that might expose your presence. This is occasionally useful, but there's usually enough light in dungeons that you can get by without it. Unlike most powers, Night Eye can be used multiple times a day without restriction.

Claws give you an overwhelming advantage in unarmed combat and brawls. Coupled with the Heavy Armor perk Fists of Steel or appropriate gear, this ability can help unarmed combat remain viable longer. But remember that unarmed combat isn't a skill, it doesn't give you skill uses, and it won't help you level up. Usually it comes into play only in the occasional brawl. But if you're a dedicated role-player who really wants to box your way through Skyrim, well, this is the ability for you.

Nord

Favored Skills: +10 Two-Handed, +5 One-Handed, Block, Smithing, Speech, Light Armor

Starting Spells: Flames, Healing

Racial Power—Battle Cry: All nearby foes flee for 30 seconds

Racial Abilities: 50% Frost Resistance

Ideal Play Style: Warrior (Offensive)

A male Nord

A female Nord

The natives of Skyrim are a tall and fair-haired people, aggressive and fearless in war, industrious and enterprising in trade and exploration. Strong, willful, and hardy, Nords are famous for their resistance to cold, even magical frost. Violence is an accepted and time-honored part of Nordic culture. Nords face battle with an ecstatic ferocity that shocks and appalls their enemies.

TIP Battle Cry is a weaker version of the Master-level Illusion spell Hysteria. Good against a swarm of weak foes, it buys you a few seconds to recover, reposition, or run before the fight resumes. It is useful in the right situation, though it rarely helps you win a fight outright.

Frost Resistance is good against Frost Atronachs, frost-wielding wizards, and frost dragons. But it's at its best in Skyrim's many tombs and crypts, where the undead Draugr wield frost spells almost exclusively.

Orc

Favored Skills: +10 Heavy Armor, +5 Smithing, One-Handed, Two-Handed, Block, Enchanting

Starting Spells: Flames, Healing

Racial Power—Berserk: For 60 seconds, you take half damage and inflict double damage in melee combat

Racial Abilities: None

Ideal Play Style: Warrior (Defensive)

A male Orc

A female Orc

These sophisticated barbarians of the Wrothgarian and Dragontail Mountains are noted for their unshakeable courage in war and their unflinching endurance of hardships. In the past, Orcs have been widely feared and hated by the other nations and races of Tamriel, but they have slowly won acceptance in the empire. Orcish armorers are prized for their craftsmanship, and Orc warriors in heavy armor are among the finest front-line troops in the empire.

TIP Berserk is the Orcs' only racial ability, but it's worth it—for one minute, you become an unstoppable force of destruction. Great in any combat situation, from fending off a swarm of smaller enemies to taking on a powerful dragon, and strong at any level.

Redguard

Favored Skills: +10 One-Handed, +5 Archery, Block, Smithing, Destruction, Alteration

Starting Spells: Flames, Healing

Racial Power—Adrenaline Rush: You regenerate Stamina 10x faster for 60 seconds

Racial Abilities: 50% Poison Resistance

Ideal Play Style: Spellsworn (Warrior/Mage), Dual-Wielding

A male Redguard

A female Redguard

The most naturally talented warriors in Tamriel, the dark-skinned, wiry-haired Redguards of Hammerfell seem born to battle, though their pride and fierce independence of spirit makes them more suitable as scouts, skirmishers, or free-ranging heroes and adventurers than as rank-and-file soldiers. Redguards are uniquely versatile combatants, capable of switching between bow, sword, spell, or shield at will and adapting their tactics to the battle at hand.

TIP Adrenaline Rush is the Stamina version of Histskin or Highborn. Although less broadly useful than Health or Magicka regen, it will allow you to keep up your power attacks in a protracted battle—or sprint away if necessary.

Poison Resistance is helpful against the few enemies that use poison—Forsworn, Falmer, Chaurus, and spiders—and the rare poison gas trap. Not as broadly useful as most other abilities.

Wood Elf

Favored Skills: +10 Archery, +5 Sneak, Lockpicking, Pickpocket, Light Armor, Alchemy

Starting Spells: Flames, Healing

Racial Power—Command Animal: Target animal becomes your ally for 60 seconds

Racial Abilities: 50% Disease and Poison Resistance

Ideal Play Style: Thief (Archer)

A male Wood Elf

A female Wood Elf

The clanfolk of the Western Valenwood forests. In the empire, they are called “Wood Elves,” but they call themselves the Bosmer, or the “Tree-Sap” people. Wood Elves are nimble and quick in body and wit. Their curious natures and natural agility make them good scouts, agents, and thieves, and there are no finer archers in all of Tamriel.

TIP Command Animal is a powerful, single-target version of the Animal Allegiance Shout. Its main restriction is that it works only on animals. It is good outdoors or in animal dens and caves, but not in most dungeons.

Poison and Disease Resistance is a combined version of the Argonian's Disease Resistance and the Redguard's Poison Resistance abilities. Like them, it can be useful in some situations, but it just isn't a factor most of the time.

SKILLS AND PERKS

This section is arguably the most important in terms of character development. It details every skill and perk in the game and offers advice on what perks to take based on your play style. Remember: You are what you play. You can develop any skill you want, at any time. Don't ever feel locked in to a specific path just because you've focused on it in the past.

SKILLS OVERVIEW

Skill Effects

There are 18 skills in Skyrim, divided into three major sets: Combat, Magic, and Stealth. As each skill increases, its primary effect improves; you also gain access to perks in that skill that can grant you powerful new abilities or bonuses. What does each skill do? Their primary effects are listed below:

COMBAT SKILLS: THE PATH OF MIGHT

✓ SKILL NAME	PRIMARY EFFECT(S)
Smithing	Improves the value and properties of items you improve.
Heavy Armor	Reduces the damage you take while wearing heavy armor.
Block	Reduces the damage you take and the amount you stagger when blocking attacks.
Two-Handed	Increases the damage you inflict with two-handed weapons.
One-Handed	Increases the damage you inflict with one-handed weapons.
Archery	Increases the damage you inflict with bows.

STEALTH SKILLS: THE PATH OF SHADOW

✓ SKILL NAME	PRIMARY EFFECT(S)
Light Armor	Reduces the damage you take while wearing light armor.
Sneak	Improves your ability to avoid detection while sneaking.
Lockpicking	Increases your ability to pick a lock successfully. Specifically, this skill increases the arc at which the pick succeeds and reduces the chance that a pick will break.
Pickpocket	Increases the chance that you can successfully pickpocket an item.
Speech	Improves the prices you receive when buying or selling items, and improves your success at (Persuade), (Bribe), and (Intimidate) dialogue challenges.
Alchemy	Improves the potency of potions and poisons that you craft.

MAGIC SKILLS: THE PATH OF SORCERY

✓ SKILL NAME	PRIMARY EFFECT(S)
Illusion	Reduces the cost of Illusion spells.
Conjuration	Reduces the cost of Conjuration spells.
Destruction	Reduces the cost of Destruction spells.
Restoration	Reduces the cost of Restoration spells.
Alteration	Reduces the cost of Alteration spells.
Enchanting	Improves the potency of items you enchant.

Improving Skills: Skill Use

In The Elder Scrolls, you are what you play. In Skyrim, your skill growth and level progression are determined by Skill Uses, a system that tracks the actions you perform and increases your skills accordingly. You don't have to understand how this works—just play the way you want to play, and you'll get better at it. But if you're the kind of adventurer who wants to know everything you can to maximize your potential, read on.

What Are Skill Uses?

Each of the 18 skills is "watching" for particular events to occur in the game. When one of those events occurs, the skill gains points based on the event's magnitude. What magnitude actually means varies by event and is explained in more detail below.

When the number of points in a skill passes a threshold, the skill increases. These thresholds are ever-increasing, so raising a skill from 40 to 41 takes more uses and/or higher-magnitude uses than raising that same skill from 20 to 21.

Each time a skill increases, it also contributes points toward your character's next level. The number of points depends on the level of the skill that increased, so raising a skill from 40 to 41 will take you further toward your next level than raising a skill from 20 to 21. It's important to remember two key rules:

1. Your skills improve only if you use them effectively. For example:
 - ◇ Just swinging your sword around doesn't improve your One-Handed skill. However, hitting someone with it does.
 - ◇ Just summoning an Atronach over and over again doesn't improve your Conjuration skill. But using the Atronach in combat does.
 - ◇ Just talking to everyone you meet doesn't improve your Speech skill. You have to actually buy and sell items and pass dialogue challenges.
2. Your skills generally improve faster if you use them in more challenging situations. For example:
 - ◇ Your Archery skill improves faster if you use more powerful bows that do more damage.
 - ◇ Your Illusion skill improves faster if you cast more difficult spells.
 - ◇ Your Lockpicking skill improves faster if you unlock harder chests.

Improving Skills: Training

During your journey, you will occasionally meet someone who has dedicated their lives to mastering a particular skill. These are extremely talented individuals; speak to them to request training from them in their specialty skill. Most will be happy to oblige...for a price. Each Trainer has a degree of competence—Journeyman, Expert, or Master:

Journeyman Trainers can improve your skill to a maximum of 50.

Expert Trainers can improve your skill to a maximum of 75.

Master Trainers can improve your skill to a maximum of 90.

Even the most proficient Trainers in Skyrim cannot train you past 90. You'll have to earn your way to 100!

The cost to train in a skill is based on your current skill level—the Trainer's skill has no effect. However, the Expert and Master Trainers are often members of a faction and will train you only if you're a member in good standing. Joining a faction is usually easy, so if you want access to a particular Trainer (or set of Trainers), it's worth doing early even if you don't plan to pursue that faction's quests right away.

#SkyrimLegendaryGuide

Read more about our favorite skills and their bonuses at www.primagames.com/SkyrimLegendary

When working with a Trainer, you will receive one skill increase each time you train. You can repeat this up to five times with any combination of Trainers before you must level up. You can then return to any Trainer and pay for up to five more skill points. If you gain a level while training, go level up, then speak to the Trainer again if you want to train more.

An Example: Maximizing Your Training

Rutil is happy to teach you his knowledge of Conjuration. For a price.

You wish to improve your Conjuration skill (which is 20), so you visit Rutil—the Journeyman Trainer—at the graveyard in Falkreath. He offers to train you for 250 gold. Train with him, and you exchange the gold for one skill point. You can train with him four more times this level, at a slightly higher cost each time. When you're done, your skill is now 25 and you've spent a total of 1,350 gold. You must now level up before you can pay to train again. You could have received the same training from Phinis Gestor (College of Winterhold) or Falion (in Morthal) or any combination of these three, but you could never have trained your skill above 25.

If you're focused on increasing your favorite skills, be sure to visit their Trainers often, ideally just after you level up. For best results, train and then use the skill to help increase it as quickly as possible. Remember that you can visit a variety of Trainers to increase multiple skills!

Some Trainers can also be Followers, and a few of them are even candidates for marriage!

LEGENDARY DIFFICULTY AND SKILLS

Game Difficulty

Skyrim has six difficulty settings: Novice, Apprentice, Adept, Expert, Master, and Legendary. The default difficulty is Adept. The difficulty level modifies how damage is dealt in the game, as shown in the following table:

SKYRIM TABLE OF DIFFICULTY

✓ DIFFICULTY	DAMAGE RECEIVED BY THE PLAYER	DAMAGE RECEIVED BY OTHER CHARACTERS
<input type="checkbox"/> Novice	x0.5	x2
<input type="checkbox"/> Apprentice	x0.75	x1.5
<input type="checkbox"/> Adept	x1	x1
<input type="checkbox"/> Expert	x1.5	x0.75
<input type="checkbox"/> Master	x2	x0.5
<input type="checkbox"/> Legendary	x3	x0.25

What does this mean exactly? Well, think of the following example: While playing on Novice difficulty, you take only half damage from enemy attacks, and your attacks do double damage to your foes. This compares to Adept (the default difficulty).

The difficulty level affects only those two statistics. It doesn't affect the difficulty of any other challenges you may face (speech challenges, locks, etc.), and it doesn't affect the rewards you receive (such as perks or loot).

You can change the difficulty at any time in the Gameplay Settings menu (even during combat!). If you feel that the game is becoming too easy (or difficult) for you, don't hesitate to make the switch.

Are the monstrous denizens of Skyrim proving too difficult to defeat? Then reduce your difficulty for fewer fraught confrontations.

Legendary Survivor

Need a challenge? Then bump up your difficulty to Legendary and face down a formidable foe!

Here are some plans for surviving on Skyrim's hardest difficulty setting: Legendary. These strategies apply to Master and Expert difficulty as well, though they may be less critical there.

For about the first ten levels, many foes will be able to kill you in a single hit. Even getting near them is dangerous, since they may perform a kill move you can't dodge. Keep your distance and used ranged attacks to wear them down.

Followers are critical to your survival. Because your Followers are actually taking less damage than normal on Legendary, they can withstand a barrage of attacks that would easily fell you. During the initial events in Helgen, stay behind your ally (Hadvar or Ralof). After making your escape, recruit a defensive, melee-focused Follower, like Vorstag, Lydia, or Farkas, and let them hold the enemy's attention while you strike from range.

Seek out additional companions whenever the opportunity presents itself. Recruit a dog, like Vigilance in Markarth or one of the Dawnguard huskies. Pick up the Conjure Familiar or Conjure Flame Atronach spells for a summoned ally. Quests that give you short-term or long-term Followers, like the Dawnguard Main Quest (Serana) or Daedric Quest: A Daedra's Best Friend (Barbas), are also worth doing early.

Defense is the best offense. Decide which armor skill you plan to use and stick to it. Focus on raising that skill, taking perks in it as soon as they become available (especially perks that increase your Armor Rating) and augmenting it with enchantments and potions. Look for other opportunities to increase your defense as well. The Lord Stone's Damage Reduction and Magic Resistance bonuses are a great asset, as are potions or enchantments that increase your other resistances.

Crowd-control abilities are much more valuable in Legendary—you simply can't survive being attacked by multiple foes at once. The Nord racial power Battle Cry is ideal for this purpose, especially early in your adventure. Illusion spells like Fear and Calm can remove a single enemy from the fight, while Shouts like Animal Allegiance, Kyne's Peace, Dismaying Shout, and Slow Time will help fend off larger groups. In Beast Form, the werewolf's Fear Howl is also very effective.

Survey the battlefield and use the terrain to your advantage. Snipe your enemies from a distance or a different elevation and force them to come to you. Maintain that distance by backing away as you continue your assault.

Early on, you may be tempted to focus on noncombat or crafting skills in order to gain some quick levels. Resist that temptation. As your level increases, the foes you face become stronger as well. If you neglect your combat skills, you may fall even further behind.

That said, don't neglect your support skills forever. If you can survive the first few levels, gradually investing in skills like Smithing, Enchanting, and Alchemy can help you gain an edge later on.

Scour the Training section of this guide for tips and advice, and take it to heart. Many tips that are only useful on a lower difficulty level—like getting "free" healing by leveling up when your health is low—are absolutely essential to your survival.

Legendary Skills

Need to be written about in Nord sagas of yore? Then truly master a skill (such as Archery) by taking it to Legendary status...and beyond!

Once one of your skills reaches 100, it cannot increase any further. You can continue to use it, taking advantage of your mastery of the skill (and its high-level perks, if you choose to acquire them). However, because you gain levels based on skill increases, continuing to use this skill will not help you progress toward the next level. Eventually, once all of your skills reach 100, you will no longer be able to gain levels at all.

When one of your skills reaches 100, a new option will appear when you highlight its constellation on the Skills menu: Legendary. To make that skill Legendary, press the Legendary button and confirm your choice. Several things will then happen:

The skill will be marked as Legendary (an icon appears below the skill).

The skill will be reset from 100 to 15.

Any perks that you had in the skill will be refunded.

In effect, the Legendary skill system allows you to start over again with a skill. You can continue using it, work your way back up to 100, and gain levels as you do so (because the skill is increasing). If you reach 100, you can choose to roll it over again. This allows you to continue gaining levels and amassing perk points indefinitely!

If you reset a skill multiple times, a number will appear next to the Legendary icon below that skill, recording how many times you have reached 100 with it.

Each new level is increasingly difficult to attain, so even with multiple Legendary skills, you shouldn't expect to acquire every possible perk. Note that Legendary skills are not better than non-Legendary skills—the Legendary designation simply recognizes that you had mastered the skill and chose to start over with it again.

Legendary Skills: General Advice

Crafting the finest armor with the most impressive enchantments, and then reset your Smithing and Enchantment skills; you can still use the fruits of your labor.

Legendary skills are not for everyone. The Skill 100 perks are entertaining and powerful and reward you for the effort it took to master their skill in the first place. Try them out. Don't be too quick to throw away the chance to forge Dragonbone Armor, craft the perfect potion, or call upon a Blizzard to devastate your foes. Even without Legendary skills, you can still reach a very high level (80+), and you can always choose to make a skill Legendary later on.

While you can make a skill Legendary at any time, if you're sure you want to reset a particular skill, it's generally best to do so as soon as it reaches 100. Otherwise, you may be throwing away skill uses that could have counted toward your next level.

There is one exception to that rule: If a skill can provide you with an ongoing benefit even after you've reset it, make sure to take advantage of it. For example, use your Smithing skill to forge and improve a complete set (or two) of Dragonbone or Daedric weapons and armor. Once you reset your Smithing skill, you'll be back to working with iron weapons and armor again—but you can continue to use anything you previously crafted.

Similarly, use your Enchanting skill to enchant your best gear before you reset it, and use Alchemy to stockpile a collection of powerful potions or poisons. While you won't lose any enchantments or recipes you've learned when you reset a skill, it will be a while before you can make anything as powerful again.

The Master-level Conjuration spells allow you to permanently summon (or create) Thralls. These spells are powerful but are prohibitively costly without the Skill 100 Master Conjuration perk. Before you reset your Conjuration skill, make sure to summon a Thrall (or two, if you have the Twin Souls perk). They'll continue to follow you even after you've reset your Conjuration skill.

Some skills, especially crafting skills, can be relatively easy to build up again...if you're prepared. If your skill is approaching 100 and you plan to reset it, take some time to collect low-level raw materials like Iron Ore, Dwarven Scrap, Petty and Lesser Soul Gems, unenchanted weapons and armor, and loose ingredients you can craft with after the reset. If you plan to reset Speech, this is a great time to do it, since these crafting sessions will produce a large number of low-level items to sell.

Don't reset too many skills at once—make sure you still have enough high-level skills to be successful in combat. Otherwise, you may find yourself lowering the difficulty just to survive.

When you reset a skill, it helps to have a high-level skill of a similar type that you can fall back on while you work your old skill back up to 100. For example, before resetting an offensive skill (One Handed, Two Handed, Archery, Destruction, Conjuration), make sure you have another offensive skill at 50+ in case you find yourself in need of more attack power. Similarly, before resetting a defensive skill (Heavy Armor, Light Armor, Alteration, Restoration), make sure you have a second defensive skill ready to help you mitigate or recover from damage.

Save first. When you reset a skill, your character will suddenly become much less powerful. You may find it surprisingly difficult to cope with the loss of a combat, armor, or support skill you've come to rely on, especially if you don't have an appropriate backup skill. Since this is one choice you can't undo, make sure you have a save you can fall back on, just in case.

IMPROVING SKILLS: SKILL BOOKS

The Doors of Oblivion (Conjuration), one of five copies known to exist.

Scattered throughout Skyrim are several rare Skill Books, each associated with a particular skill. The first time you read each book, the associated skill increases by one. There are five different named books for each skill (90 different book titles), so a diligent collector can potentially increase each skill by 5 points.

There are multiple copies of each book in the world (usually three to five). However, you gain a skill point only the first time you read a book—rereading that book, or any of its copies, has no further effect. For example, those interested in the Sneak skill should look for the following books: Three Thieves (four copies), 2920, Last Seed, v8 (four copies), Sacred Witness (four copies), Legend of Krately House (three copies), and The Red Kitchen Reader (five copies). This means there is a total of 20 Sneak Skill Books, and 5 points you can add to your Sneak from reading the first copy you encounter of each tome.

Improving Skills: Scholars' Insight Power

Another way to increase your Skills is to complete Solstheim Side Quest: Black Book: The Winds of Change (page 612). Locate this Black Book inside Bloodskal Barrow (which is accessed via Raven Rock Mine). Once you find the Reward Book at the end of your expedition through Apocrypha, choose the Scholar's Insight Power; this grants you an extra skill point each time you read a Skill Book.

IMPROVING SKILLS: AUGMENTATIONS

An Amulet of Dibella, which adds +15 to your Speech.

There are a variety of other ways to temporarily boost your skills (or their primary effects):

Equip enchanted items that increase that skill.

Drink a potion that boosts the skill.

Acquire a Shrine Blessing or other temporary bonus to the skill.

For example: Say you have a Speech of 40 but want to get better prices for a collection of loot you're about to sell. You could look for ways to permanently increase your skill, like completing dialogue challenges, training, or reading Skill Books. You can also equip an Amulet of Dibella (+15 Speech), pray at a Shrine of Dibella (+10% Better Prices), give a beggar a gold piece to receive the Gift of Charity (+10 Speech), or quaff a Potion of Glibness (+20 Speech). Then head over to your merchant of choice and wring out every last gold coin you can.

General Advice on Improving Skills

When improving your skills, heed the following advice:

In general, it's better to increase your skills and level up naturally, rather than trying to find ways to exploit the game. In fact, it may make your adventure harder, since you'll lack the gear and tactics needed to survive higher-level combat.

There is no fixed "maximum level" (i.e., Level 50) for you to attain. However, if you were to raise all of your skills to 100, this would take you to around Level 80. As you're able to choose only one perk each time you level up, and there are well over 200 skill-based perks, don't fixate on obtaining every single one. Instead, focus on improving the skills you're most interested in, and ignore perks you won't take advantage of, even if they're in a skill you use constantly. For those adept adventurers who reach the higher level echelons, consult the section on Legendary Skills (page 13).

Statistically, it's better to save Skill Books for higher levels, when the amount of effort or the cost of training needed to increase a skill rises dramatically. However, this tends to be difficult to do in practice, since you automatically read a book when picking it up and won't know in advance that it's a Skill Book. Unless you're intent on raising every skill to 100, it's best not to worry about this.

If you're most of the way to your next level and just need one or two more skill increases, here are some options:

If you have the gold, training is always a good option. If you're short on gold, try training in a skill you haven't used as much, as it will be less expensive (although it also won't count as much toward your next level).

Do you have any Skill Books you haven't read?

Are there any ingredients you haven't sampled? Especially at low skill levels, your Alchemy skill rises quickly just by eating common ingredients and learning their first effect.

Do you have a lot of ingredients? You may be able to make some potions. Give Alchemy a try!

Do you have any ingots or smithing supplies? You might be able to forge or improve something. Try your hand at Smithing.

SKILL CONSTELLATIONS

This section explores the entirety of the Skill Constellations. These are color-coded for combat skills: the Path of Might (red), Stealth skills: the Path of Shadow (green); and Magic skills: the Path of Magic (blue).

Dawnguard introduces Skill Constellations for Vampire Lords: The Path of Undeath (purple) and Werewolves: The Path of the Lycanthrope (orange). Seek out these minor constellations starting on page 61.

Dawnguard allows you to create Dragonbone Weapons, as part of your Smithing skill.

Dragonborn allows you to create new types of armor and weapons (Bonemold, Chitin, Nordic, and Stalhrim) as part of your Smithing skill.

Dragonborn allows you to craft and enchant staffs.

As a reward for completing Dragonborn Main Quest: At the Summit of Apocrypha (see page 601), you are able to expend a Dragon Soul to reset all of the perks in one of the Skill Constellations. So, if you decide you don't like your previous perk selections or want to try something different, this is now possible.

There are three general categories of perks that deserve special mention:

Skill-improvement perks: Many constellations offer a perk that simply makes you better at that skill's primary effect (e.g., Agile Defender for Light Armor, Juggernaut for Heavy Armor, Stealth for Sneak). Choosing these perks is akin to receiving a huge number of skill increases for that skill all at once. These perks may not be as "flashy" or instantly gratifying as some of the other perks, but they are always a strong, effective choice.

Magic rank perks: The five schools of magic each have a series of "rank" perks (Novice, Apprentice, Adept, Expert, and Master) that dramatically decrease the cost of spells from that school. These perks are absolutely critical to your ability to use magic effectively and should be a top priority for any serious mage.

Tiered perks: Some perks can be selected multiple times for increased effect. These bonuses do not stack. For example, Heavy Armor's Juggernaut 1 perk increases your armor rating by 20%, while Juggernaut 2 increases your armor rating by 40%. After taking Juggernaut 2, you will have a bonus of 40%, not 60%.

COMBAT SKILLS: THE PATH OF MIGHT – SMITHING

Smithing is the art of creating and improving weapons and armor. Smithing workstations include the blacksmith forge, grindstone (for weapons), and workbench (for armor). Any improvements made at any of these stations count toward your Smithing skill; the amount of increase is based on the value of the item you craft or improve. To increase this skill as quickly as possible, forge your own items and then improve them. You can make hide and iron items without taking any perks. You can improve any item without taking any perks. However, you need perks to create any advanced items, such as dwarven or ebony weapons and armor.

Mining, smelting, and tanning provide raw materials for smithing, although they do not count toward this skill. Smithing synergizes well with Enchanting, since it guarantees you a ready supply of items to enchant. For more information on all of these activities, see the Crafting section on page 70.

The main choice presented by your Smithing perks is obvious: Are you interested in making and improving Light Armor, like Elven, Scale, Glass, and Dragonscale? Or Heavy Armor, like Steel, Dwarven, Orcish, Ebony, Daedric, and Dragonplate? Focus on the side of the constellation that appeals most to you.

Constellation: Path of Might

Available Perks: 10

Available Smithing Perks

1. STEEL SMITHING

You can create Steel and Bonemold armor and weapons at forges and improve them twice as much.

Requires: Smithing 20

2. ARCANE BLACKSMITH ★

You can improve magical weapons and armor.

Requires: Smithing 60

This is one of the most useful Smithing perks, especially if you plan to focus on Enchanting as well. If your Enchanting skill is low, you can improve a piece of gear that has a powerful enchantment but a weak armor rating to keep it viable for longer or you can make an already great item even better. If you're a master artisan, you can make your own gear from scratch, enchant it, temper it, and then either use it or sell it for a considerable profit.

3. ELVEN SMITHING

You can create Elven armor and weapons (as well as Chitin and Heavy Chitin Armor) at forges and improve them twice as much.

Requires: Smithing 40, Steel Smithing

4. ADVANCED ARMORS

You can create Scaled and Steel Plate armor (as well as Nordic carved armor and weapons) at forges and improve them twice as much.

Requires: Smithing 50, Elven Smithing

5. GLASS SMITHING

You can create glass armor and weapons at forges and improve them twice as much.

Requires: Smithing 70, Advanced Armors

6. DWARVEN SMITHING ★

You can create dwarven armor and weapons at forges and improve them twice as much.

Requires: Smithing 30, Steel Smithing

Once you begin exploring Dwarven Ruins, you'll discover tons of scrap metal that you can smelt down into ingots. This is a great source of free, convenient crafting materials for your smithing practice. Taking this perk allows you to make better (and thus more valuable) dwarven items from these ingots, which improves your Smithing skill even more quickly and allows you to turn a nice profit too.

7. ORCISH SMITHING

You can create Orcish armor and weapons at forges and improve them twice as much.

Requires: Smithing 50, Dwarven Smithing

8. EBONY SMITHING

You can create ebony armor and weapons (as well as Stalhrim Armor, Light Stalhrim Armor, and Stalhrim Weapons*) at forges, and improve them twice as much.

Requires: Smithing 80, Orcish Smithing

NOTE

* If you've completed Solstheim Side Quest: A New Source of Stalhrim.

9. DAEDRIC SMITHING

You can create Daedric armor and weapons at forges and improve them twice as much.

Requires: Smithing 90, Ebony Smithing

Daedric weapons and armor are not available in shops, so the only way to get them is to find or make them.

10. DRAGON ARMOR

You can create Dragon Armor and Dragonbone Weapons at forges and improve them twice as much.

Requires: Smithing 100, Glass Smithing, OR Daedric Smithing

Dragonplate and Dragonscale armors are not available in shops, so the only way to get them is to find or make them.

TRAINING PART 1: SKILL CONSTELLATIONS

PRIMA OFFICIAL GAME GUIDE

WWW.PRIMAGAMES.COM

Heavy Armor allows you to make more effective use of Iron, Steel, Dwarven, Orcish, Ebony, Dragonplate, Daedric, and related armors. It offers excellent protection, though its weight will slow you down and reduce the amount of gear you can carry. High-end sets of heavy armor are especially rare, so you may wish to consider Smithing so you can craft your own when the time comes.

Your Heavy Armor skill increases when you take damage while wearing heavy armor, based on the damage of the incoming blow. If you're wearing more than one kind of armor, the incoming damage is divided up among the pieces before being used to calculate skill uses. So, the more heavy armor you're wearing, the more damage will be assigned to it, and the faster this skill will increase.

The Heavy Armor constellation has two main themes: the left arc focuses on unusual perks or those useful in specific situations, while the right arc emphasizes statistically powerful perks for Heavy Armor purists.

Constellation: Path of Might
Available Perks: 12

Available Heavy Armor Perks

1–5. JUGGERNAUT (5 RANKS) ★

- Rank 1: Increases the armor rating of your heavy armor by 20%.
Requires: None
- Rank 2: Increases the armor rating of your heavy armor by 40%.
Requires: Heavy Armor 20, Juggernaut 1
- Rank 3: Increases the armor rating of your heavy armor by 60%.
Requires: Heavy Armor 40, Juggernaut 2
- Rank 4: Increases the armor rating of your heavy armor by 80%.
Requires: Heavy Armor 60, Juggernaut 3
- Rank 5: Increases the armor rating of your heavy armor by 100%.
Requires: Heavy Armor 80, Juggernaut 4

6. FISTS OF STEEL

Unarmed attacks with heavy armor gauntlets do their armor base rating in extra damage.

Requires: Heavy Armor 30, Juggernaut 1

Although unarmed combat doesn't increase any of your skills, it can still be a viable option, especially for Khajiits (whose Claws racial ability also improves unarmed attacks). This perk makes brawls dramatically easier.

7. WELL FITTED ★

Get a 25% Armor bonus if wearing all heavy armor: head, chest, hands, feet.

Requires: Heavy Armor 30, Juggernaut 1

This bonus stacks with Juggernaut and Matching Set—a must-have for anyone serious about using Heavy Armor.

8. CUSHIONED

Half-damage from falling if wearing all heavy armor: head, chest, hands, feet.

Requires: Heavy Armor 50, Fists of Steel

Worth considering if you enjoy climbing mountains and scampering up rocks and don't want to worry about fall damage.

9. TOWER OF STRENGTH

Get 50% less stagger when wearing only heavy armor.

Requires: Heavy Armor 50, Well Fitted

10. CONDITIONING

Heavy armor weighs nothing and doesn't slow you down.

Requires: Heavy Armor 70, Cushioned

Conditioning reduces the weight of heavy armor you're wearing (it doesn't affect the weight of armor in your inventory) and eliminates the speed penalty for wearing it. If that appeals to you but you aren't excited about having to take Fists of Steel and Cushioned to reach this perk, try out the Steed Stone ability (from one of the Standing Stones): it has almost the same effect and won't cost you any perks.

11. MATCHING SET

Additional 25% Armor bonus if wearing a matched set of heavy armor.

Requires: Heavy Armor 70, Tower of Strength

This bonus stacks with Juggernaut and Well Fitted. It's challenging to acquire a complete set of the high-end heavy armor (unless you're specializing in Smithing), so make sure you have a matching set before taking this perk.

12. REFLECT BLOWS

Gain a 10% chance to reflect melee damage back to the enemy while wearing all heavy armor: head, chest, hands, feet.

Requires: Heavy Armor 100, Matching Set

Racial Benefits

+10 Heavy Armor

○ Nord

+5 Heavy Armor

○ Imperial

Trainers

- Expert: Gharol, Dushnikh Yal, in The Reach.
- Master: Farkas, the Companions of Jorrvaskr, in Whiterun.
- Master: Isran, Fort Dawnguard, in The Rift.
- Master: Kuvar, Bujold's Retreat, then Thirsk Mead Hall, in Solstheim.

Other Resources

- For a list of Heavy Armor Skill Books, and where to look for them, consult page 1091.
- You can find a list of Heavy Armor items in the Inventory, beginning on page 140.
- The following quests can also increase this skill:
 - Other Factions Quest: Rjorn's Drum (page 416).
 - Daedric Quest: Discerning the Transmundane (page 384).
 - Favor: The Bandit Slayer* (page 500)
 - Solstheim Side Quest: Filial Bonds (page 621)

Block is the art of deflecting an enemy's blows with your shield or weapon. Your Block skill reduces the damage you take and the amount you stagger when you block an attack. Your skill increases when you successfully block damage (based on the damage of the blow before it was blocked) or when you successfully bash an enemy with a weapon or shield.

Parries with one- or two-handed weapons are also improved by your Block skill and by many Block perks—you don't have to use a shield to benefit from this skill. But remember that if you have a second weapon or spell equipped in your left hand, you can't block at all.

In the Block constellation, the left arc offers shield-specific damage-reduction perks, while the right arc focuses on Bash and Power Bash perks that work with both shield and weapon blocks.

Constellation: Path of Might
Available Perks: 13

Available Block Perks

1-5. SHIELD WALL (5 RANKS)

- Rank 1: Blocking is 20% more effective.
Requires: None
- Rank 2: Blocking is 25% more effective.
Requires: Block 20, Shield Wall 1
- Rank 3: Blocking is 30% more effective.
Requires: Block 40, Shield Wall 2
- Rank 4: Blocking is 35% more effective.
Requires: Block 60, Shield Wall 3
- Rank 5: Blocking is 40% more effective.
Requires: Block 80, Shield Wall 4

6. DEFLECT ARROWS

When you block with a shield, arrows that hit the shield do no damage.

Requires: Block 30, Shield Wall 1

This perk greatly reduces the damage you take while rushing archers, but it's much less effective once you've engaged the enemy, since your shield may not be in the right place at the right time.

7. POWER BASH

Able to do a Power Bash.

Requires: Block 30, Shield Wall 1

This perk unlocks a new Power Bash move that sends enemies flying. This is a great addition to your arsenal, especially if you're employing a weapon-and-shield combat style.

8. QUICK REFLEXES

Time slows down if you are blocking during an enemy's power attack.

Requires: Block 30, Shield Wall 1

Quick Reflexes gives you a chance to react and dodge or (better yet) respond with a bash to counter the attack.

9. DEADLY BASH

Bashing does five times more damage.

Requires: Block 50, Power Bash

While this sounds powerful, bashes don't do much damage to start with. The damage bonus certainly doesn't hurt, but it's still much faster to kill enemies with your weapon than with your shield.

10. ELEMENTAL PROTECTION ★

Blocking with a shield reduces incoming fire, frost, and shock damage by 50%.

Requires: Block 50, Deflect Arrows

This perk is especially powerful when fighting mages. Combine with the Breton's Magic Resistance or the Alteration Magic Resistance perks for almost impenetrable defense, allowing you to shrug off enemy spells with ease!

11. BLOCK RUNNER

Able to move faster with a shield raised.

Requires: Block 70, Elemental Protection

Block Runner helps you close the distance with a ranged mage or archer and allows you to cover more ground when making a Shield Charge.

12. DISARMING BASH ★

Chance to disarm when power bashing.

Requires: Block 70, Deadly Bash

Disarming Bash gives you a chance to knock away an enemy's equipped weapon if he is in the middle of executing a power attack. While many enemies have backup weapons (often daggers), they're significantly less powerful, so you can usually crush a disarmed foe with ease. This is a great perk, at least until you learn the Disarm Shout, which does this more reliably. Consult the Shouts section to find out how to acquire this; you may wish to ignore this perk if the Shout becomes more useful to you.

13. SHIELD CHARGE

Sprinting with a shield raised will knock down most targets.

Requires: Block 100, Block Runner OR Disarming Bash

Shield Charge is great for forcing your way out of a mob of enemies if you get surrounded or buying a few moments to recover in the middle of a difficult battle.

The Two-Handed skill governs the use of large weapons such as greatswords, battleaxes, and warhammers. Those trained in this skill deliver more lethal and powerful blows. To improve this skill, damage enemies with a Two-Handed weapon. The skill improves based on the amount of damage you do (minus any enchantments), not the number of swings you take, so you get the same increase regardless of how many hits it takes to fell your foe.

A number of perks in the Two-Handed constellation improve a specific type of Two-Handed weapon. If you generally use the best weapon you can find (no matter what type it is), it's wiser to invest your perks elsewhere: better to have a bonus you can rely on than one you see only occasionally.

Constellation: Path of Might
Available Perks: 19

Available Two-Handed Perks

1–5. BARBARIAN (5 RANKS) ★

- Rank 1: Two-Handed weapons do 20% more damage.

Requires: None

- Rank 2: Two-Handed weapons do 40% more damage.

Requires: Two-Handed 20, Barbarian 1

- Rank 3: Two-Handed weapons do 60% more damage.

Requires: Two-Handed 40, Barbarian 2

- Rank 4: Two-Handed weapons do 80% more damage.

Requires: Two-Handed 60, Barbarian 3

- Rank 5: Two-Handed weapons do twice as much damage.

Requires: Two-Handed 80, Barbarian 4

This perk provides a massive +20% bonus to your Two-Handed weapon damage with each rank. This is a huge boost; make this perk your top priority whenever your skill level permits.

6. CHAMPION'S STANCE ★

Power attacks with Two-Handed weapons cost 25% less stamina.

Requires: Two-Handed 20, Barbarian 1

In effect, this perk allows you to power attack more often. Two-Handed weapons excel at devastating power attacks, so this is a solid choice.

7–9. DEEP WOUNDS (3 RANKS)

- Rank 1: Attacks with greatswords have a 10% chance of doing critical damage.

Requires: Two-Handed 30, Barbarian 1

- Rank 2: Attacks with greatswords have a 15% chance of doing even more critical damage.

Requires: Two-Handed 60, Deep Wounds 1

- Rank 3: Attacks with greatswords have a 20% chance of doing even more critical damage.

Requires: Two-Handed 90, Deep Wounds 2

When a weapon scores a critical hit, it deals 50% more damage, more for Ranks 2 and 3. Statistically, this perk works out to a 5% boost in your average damage over time at Rank 1 and a 15% boost by Rank 3. That's not nothing, but Barbarian is still better.

10–12. LIMBSPLITTER (3 RANKS)

- Rank 1: Attacks with battleaxes cause extra bleeding damage.

Requires: Two-Handed 30

- Rank 2: Attacks with battleaxes cause more bleeding damage.

Requires: Two-Handed 60, Limbsplitter 1

- Rank 3: Attacks with battleaxes cause even more bleeding damage.

Requires: Two-Handed 90, Limbsplitter 2

The exact amount of bleeding damage depends on the axe, but in general, this perk causes each hit to do 1 to 3 points of damage each second for 3 to 6 seconds, with the higher ranks pushing higher into that range, making this roughly equivalent to a short-lived lingering poison.

13–15. SKULLCRUSHER (3 RANKS)

- Rank 1: Attacks with warhammers ignore 25% of armor.

Requires: Two-Handed 30

- Rank 2: Attacks with warhammers ignore 50% of armor.

Requires: Two-Handed 60, Skullcrusher 1

- Rank 3: Attacks with warhammers ignore 75% of armor.

Requires: Two-Handed 90, Skullcrusher 2

This perk has no effect against unarmored enemies, but it can make it significantly easier to take down a heavily armored foe, such as many bosses.

16. DEVASTATING BLOW

Standing power attacks do 25% bonus damage with a chance to decapitate your enemies.

Requires: Two-Handed 50, Champion's Stance

This is a strong, reliable damage bonus. The decapitation adds a grotesquely satisfying visual touch but applies only if your attack already killed the enemy (this perk doesn't give you a chance of an instant kill).

17. GREAT CRITICAL CHARGE

You can do a Two-Handed power attack while sprinting that does double critical damage.

Requires: Two-Handed 50, Champion's Stance

Less powerful than it might appear, the "double critical damage" bonus applies only if you land a critical hit in the first place. More importantly, you have to remember to use it for it to be effective. Take this if you find yourself making "berserker rushes" on your own.

18. SWEEP

Sideways power attacks with Two-Handed weapons hit all targets in front of you.

Requires: Two-Handed 70, Devastating Blow OR Great Critical Charge

Great at clearing out swaths of enemies in a single blow.

19. WARMASTER

Backward power attacks have a 25% chance to paralyze the target.

Requires: Two-Handed 100, Sweep

The One-Handed skill governs the use of weapons like the sword, war axe, mace, and dagger. Those trained in this skill deliver more deadly blows. To improve this skill, you must damage enemies with a One-Handed weapon. The skill improves based on the amount of damage you do (minus any enchantments), not the number of swings you take; therefore, while it might take 10 hits to kill a bandit with a dagger, you would get the same skill increase for killing him in three hits with a mace.

A number of perks in the One-Handed constellation improve a specific type of One-Handed weapon. If you generally use the best weapon you can find (no matter what type it is), it's wiser to invest your perks elsewhere: better to have a bonus you can rely on than one you see only occasionally.

Available Perks: 21

Available One-Handed Perks

1–5. ARMSMAN (5 RANKS) ★

Rank 1: One-Handed weapons do 20% more damage.

Requires: None

Rank 2: One-Handed weapons do 40% more damage.

Requires: One-Handed 20, Armsman 1

Rank 3: One-Handed weapons do 60% more damage.

Requires: One-Handed 40, Armsman 2

Rank 4: One-Handed weapons do 80% more damage.

Requires: One-Handed 60, Armsman 3

Rank 5: One-Handed weapons do twice as much damage.

Requires: One-Handed 80, Armsman 4

This perk provides a massive +20% bonus to your One-Handed weapon damage with each rank. This is a huge boost; make this perk your top priority whenever your skill level permits.

6. FIGHTING STANCE ★

Power attacks with One-Handed weapons cost 25% less stamina.

Requires: One-Handed 20, Armsman 1

By conserving your stamina, this perk allows you to power attack or bash more often. A solid choice, especially if you dual-wield One-Handed weapons, as this bonus works well with the Dual Flurry and Dual Savagery perks.

7–9. BLADESMAN (3 RANKS)

Rank 1: Attacks with swords have a 10% chance of doing critical damage.

Requires: One-Handed 30, Armsman 1

Rank 2: Attacks with swords have a 15% chance of doing more critical damage.

Requires: One-Handed 60, Bladesman 1

Rank 3: Attacks with swords have a 20% chance of doing even more critical damage.

Requires: One-Handed 90, Bladesman 2

When a weapon scores a critical hit, it deals 50% more damage—more for ranks 2 and 3. Statistically, this perk works out to a 5% boost in your average damage over time at Rank 1 and a 15% boost by Rank 3. That's not insignificant, but Armsman is still better.

10–12. BONE BREAKER (3 RANKS)

Rank 1: Attacks with maces ignore 25% of armor.

Requires: One-Handed 30, Armsman 1

Rank 2: Attacks with maces ignore 50% of armor.

Requires: One-Handed 60, Bone Breaker 1

Rank 3: Attacks with maces ignore 75% of armor.

Requires: One-Handed 90, Bone Breaker 2

This perk has no effect against unarmored enemies, but it can make it significantly easier to take down a heavily armored foe, such as many bosses.

13–15. HACK AND SLASH (3 RANKS)

Rank 1: Attacks with war axes cause extra bleeding damage.

Requires: One-Handed 30, Armsman 1

Rank 2: Attacks with war axes cause more bleeding damage.

Requires: One-Handed 60, Hack and Slash 1

Rank 3: Attacks with war axes cause even more bleeding damage.

Requires: One-Handed 90, Hack and Slash 2

The exact amount of bleeding damage depends on the axe, but in general, this perk causes each hit to do 1 to 3 points of damage each second for 3 to 6 seconds, with the higher ranks pushing farther into that range. This is roughly equivalent to a short-lived lingering poison.

16–17. DUAL FLURRY (2 RANKS)

Rank 1: Dual-wielding attacks are 20% faster.

Requires: One-Handed 30, Armsman 1

Rank 2: Dual-wielding attacks are 35% faster.

Requires: One-Handed 50, Dual Flurry 1

18. CRITICAL CHARGE

Can do a One-Handed power attack while sprinting that does double critical damage.

Requires: One-Handed 50, Fighting Stance

This perk still requires that you land a critical hit in the first place in order to receive the damage bonus. Worth taking if you find yourself making berserker rushes on your own, if you've taken the Bladesman perks, or if you're dual-wielding (since you've got a better chance of getting a critical hit with at least one weapon).

19. SAVAGE STRIKE

Standing power attacks do 25% bonus damage with a chance to decapitate your enemies.

Requires: One-Handed 50, Fighting Stance

This is a strong, reliable damage bonus, though the decapitation only applies if you've already killed the enemy. But standing over the headless corpse of your kill is a satisfying way to temper your bloodlust!

20. DUAL SAVAGERY ★

Dual-wielding power attacks do 50% more damage.

Requires: One-Handed 70, Dual Flurry 1

A great pick if you're focused on dual wielding; this is stronger than Savage Strike or Critical Charge and stacks with both of them, making your power attacks incredibly deadly.

21. PARALYZING STRIKE

Your backward power attack has a 25% chance to paralyze the target.

Requires: One-Handed 100, Savage Strike OR Critical Charge

Paralyzing Strike is a powerful ability...if you remember to use it. When it works, you can inflict massive damage and often kill your foes outright, before they can get back on their feet. But how often do you use backward power attacks?

PRIMA OFFICIAL GAME GUIDE

WWW.PRIMAGAMES.COM

COMBAT SKILLS: THE PATH OF MIGHT – ARCHERY

Archery represents the skill and training needed to wield a bow effectively in combat. The greater your skill, the more deadly your shots. Your Archery skill improves when you damage enemies with a bow and arrows. The amount of increase is based on the damage that you do (minus any enchantments). Of course, only shots that hit their mark will count.

Available Perks: 16

Available Archery Perks

1–5. OVERDRAW (5 RANKS) ★

- Rank 1: Bows do 20% more damage.
Requires: None
- Rank 2: Bows do 40% more damage.
Requires: Archery 20, Overdraw 1
- Rank 3: Bows do 60% more damage.
Requires: Archery 40, Overdraw 2
- Rank 4: Bows do 80% more damage.
Requires: Archery 60, Overdraw 3
- Rank 5: Bows do twice as much damage.
Requires: Archery 80, Overdraw 4

This perk provides a massive +20% bonus to your bow damage with each rank. This is a huge boost; make this perk your top priority whenever your skill level permits.

6–8. CRITICAL SHOT (3 RANKS)

- Rank 1: 10% chance of a critical hit that does extra damage.
Requires: Archery 30, Overdraw 1
- Rank 2: 15% chance of a critical hit that does 25% more critical damage.
Requires: Archery 60, Critical Shot 1
- Rank 3: 20% chance of a critical hit that does 50% more critical damage.
Requires: Archery 90, Critical Shot 2

When a weapon scores a critical hit, it deals 50% more damage. Statistically, this perk works out to a 5% boost in your average damage over time at Rank 1 and a 15% boost by Rank 3. That's not insignificant, but Overdraw is still better.

9. EAGLE EYE ★

Pressing Block while aiming will zoom in your view.

Requires: Archery 30, Overdraw 1

This perk allows you to snipe enemies more accurately from a greater distance. This is a great choice for stealth archers: Since you may get only one shot, make it count!

10–11. STEADY HAND (2 RANKS)

- Rank 1: Zooming in with a bow slows time by 25%.
Requires: Archery 40, Eagle Eye
- Rank 2: Zooming in with a bow slows time by 50%.
Requires: Archery 60, Steady Hand 1

This perk is useful for minimizing the chance that your target will move while you line up a stealth shot or for making sure an important shot hits its mark. It's especially effective against dragons in the air; you'll still have to lead your shot a little (i.e., aim at where you think the creature will be when the arrow arrives, not where it is when you fire), but this improves your odds of hitting them significantly.

12. HUNTER'S DISCIPLINE

Recover twice as many arrows from dead bodies.

Requires: Archery 50, Critical Shot 1

A fine choice if you find yourself running out of arrows frequently or use a lot of high-end arrows. If you mainly use basic iron or steel arrows, take something else; they're so cheap and so common that recovering more of them just isn't worth the perk.

13. POWER SHOT ★

Arrows stagger all but the largest opponents 50% of the time.

Requires: Archery 50, Eagle Eye

Power Shot is surprisingly strong: In the time it takes an enemy to stagger and recover, you may be able to fire off another shot or two. The stagger will also interrupt an enemy's charge or block, briefly giving you a clear opening. Or when all else fails, take that second or two to put some space between you and your opponent.

14. RANGER

Able to move faster with a drawn bow.

Requires: Archery 60, Hunter's Discipline

15. QUICK SHOT

Can draw a bow 30% faster.

Requires: Archery 70, Power Shot

16. BULLSEYE

You have a 15% chance of paralyzing the target for 10 seconds.

Requires: Archery 100, Quick Shot OR Ranger

Bullseye gives you a chance to paralyze opponents with each shot. This is fantastic at medium and short ranges, where it can take an enemy out of a fight and allows you to finish them off quickly. It's somewhat less effective at long range, since enemies fall over when paralyzed, making it more difficult (or impossible) to hit them again from that distance.

Light Armor allows you to make more effective use of hide, leather, Elven, glass, Dragonscale, and related armors. Light Armor offers a good balance between weight, protection, and mobility and is recommended for stealthy characters or those with other forms of protection (such as a good shield or the occasional ward) to supplement their defenses.

Your Light Armor skill increases when you take damage while wearing light armor, based on the damage of the incoming blow. If you're wearing more than one kind of armor, the incoming damage is divided up among the pieces before being used to calculate skill uses, so wearing more light armor will allow this skill to develop faster.

Constellation: Path of Shadow
Available Perks: 10

Available Light Armor Perks

1–5. AGILE DEFENDER (5 RANKS) ★

- Rank 1: Increase armor rating for Light Armor by 20%.
Requires: None
- Rank 2: Increases the armor rating of your light armor by 40%.
Requires: Light Armor 20, Agile Defender 1
- Rank 3: Increases the armor rating of your light armor by 60%.
Requires: Light Armor 40, Agile Defender 2
- Rank 4: Increases the armor rating of your light armor by 80%.
Requires: Light Armor 60, Agile Defender 3
- Rank 5: Increases the armor rating of your light armor by 100%.
Requires: Light Armor 80, Agile Defender 4

6. CUSTOM FIT ★

- You get a 25% armor bonus if wearing all light armor: head, chest, hands, feet.
- Requires: Light Armor 30, Agile Defender 1
- This bonus stacks with Agile Defender and Matching Set—a must-have for anyone serious about using light armor.
- ### 7. UNHINDERED
- Light armor weighs nothing and doesn't slow you down when worn.
- Requires: Light Armor 50, Custom Fit
- This perk reduces the weight of the light armor you're wearing (it doesn't affect the weight of armor in your inventory) and eliminates its movement penalty. If you're not sure whether this perk is for you, try out the Steed Stone ability (from one of the Standing Stones) first: it has almost the same effect and won't cost you a perk.

8. WIND WALKER

Stamina regenerates 50% faster in all light armor: head, chest, hands, feet.

Requires: Light Armor 60, Unhindered

9. MATCHING SET

Additional 25% armor bonus if wearing a matched set of light armor.

Requires: Light Armor 70, Custom Fit

This bonus stacks with Agile Defender and Custom Fit. Make sure you have a matching set before taking this perk, though.

10. DEFT MOVEMENT

You have a 10% chance of avoiding all damage from a melee attack while wearing all light armor: head, chest, hands, feet.

Requires: Light Armor 100, Wind Walker OR Matching Set

This perk gives you a 10% chance of avoiding all damage from a hit when wearing a full set of light armor. It's a noticeable but unreliable bonus: if you're lucky, it might spare you from a lethal blow.

STEALTH SKILLS: THE PATH OF SHADOW – SNEAK

Sneak is the art of moving unseen and unheard. This skill improves when you sneak past someone or perform a successful sneak attack. You don't get credit for sneaking in an empty hallway or for just standing around—you must be sneaking (crouched) near someone who can detect you. Avoiding detection is also critical: the moment you are spotted, your sneak attempt has failed and you can no longer perform a sneak attack (until you hide again).

Available Perks: 13

Available Sneak Perks

1–5. STEALTH (5 RANKS) ★

Rank 1: You are 20% harder to detect when sneaking.

Requires: None

Rank 2: You are 25% harder to detect when sneaking.

Requires: Sneak 20, Stealth 1

Rank 3: You are 30% harder to detect when sneaking.

Requires: Sneak 40, Stealth 2

Rank 4: You are 35% harder to detect when sneaking.

Requires: Sneak 60, Stealth 3

Rank 5: You are 40% harder to detect when sneaking.

Requires: Sneak 80, Stealth 4

This perk makes it dramatically easier to sneak past enemies unnoticed. The first rank in this skill (+20%) is absolutely critical to being able to sneak effectively. Subsequent ranks have diminishing returns but are still a good choice if you're focused on stealth and find yourself being detected too quickly. Even if Stealth isn't your focus, it's worth taking the basic Stealth perk just in case you someday need to sneak out of a dangerous situation.

6. BACKSTAB

Sneak attacks with one-handed weapons now do six times damage.

Requires: Sneak 30, Stealth 1

Backstab doubles your sneak attack damage (to 6x normal). If you're skilled enough to reliably sneak up behind enemies, this can make one-hit kills a real possibility, especially on weaker foes.

7. MUFFLED MOVEMENT

Noise from armor is reduced by 50%.

Requires: Sneak 30, Stealth 1

This perk is good at low levels but is much less useful later on, when it's eclipsed by Silence, Muffle-enchanted equipment, or the Muffle spell (Illusion skill), all of which silence your movement entirely.

8. DEADLY AIM ★

Sneak attacks with bows now do three times damage.

Requires: Sneak 40, Backstab

Deadly Aim increases the sneak attack damage done by bows (from 2x to 3x). The extra damage is noticeable, though not as dramatic as Backstab's bonus.

9. LIGHT FOOT

You won't trigger pressure plates.

Requires: Sneak 40, Muffled Movement

This perk presents an interesting dilemma. While you'll no longer have to worry about almost half the traps you encounter, your enemies and your Followers can still set them off, which generally gives you less warning than you might otherwise have had. Also, you can no longer deliberately use traps to kill enemies, which limits your options and takes some of the fun out of them. So think carefully before taking this perk, or just be cautious and avoid pressure plates in the first place.

10. ASSASSIN'S BLADE

Sneak attacks with daggers now do a total of 15 times normal damage.

Requires: Sneak 50, Deadly Aim

This perk affects only daggers, but it does make them significantly more effective at sneak attacks. With this perk, daggers do about twice the sneak attack damage of a full-sized weapon like a sword or a mace. That's a solid improvement and a good reason to choose daggers, at least for your first blow.

11. SILENT ROLL

Sprinting while sneaking executes a silent forward roll.

Requires: Sneak 50, Light Foot

Silent Roll allows you to quickly dodge behind cover while sneaking, although the drain on your Stamina prevents you from using it to roll long distances.

12. SILENCE

Walking and running does not affect detection.

Requires: Sneak 70, Silent Roll

This perk gives you a permanent Muffle effect. However, since you can receive the same effect from a spell or piece of enchanted armor, consider whether it's really worth spending one of your perk selections on.

13. SHADOW WARRIOR

Crouching stops combat for a moment and forces distant opponents to search for a target.

Requires: Sneak 100, Silence

Shadow Warrior can give you a chance to recover or make a hasty getaway if your stealth attempt goes terribly wrong. It's most effective if you can put some distance between yourself and your foes; if you use it right in front of an enemy, they'll spot you again almost immediately.

Lockpicking allows you to open locked doors and containers faster, more easily, and with fewer broken lockpicks. This skill increases when you pick the lock on a door, container, or trap trigger hinge, based on the lock's difficulty. It also increases slightly if you break a pick, so if you try picking a difficult lock and fail, it isn't a total loss.

The Novice, Apprentice, Adept, Expert, and Master Locks perks decrease the difficulty of picking locks of the corresponding level. This helps save on lockpicks (and frustration), but depending on your Lockpicking skill and your own personal prowess at lockpicking, you may not find them necessary.

Note that the fabled Skeleton Key gives you the high-end Unbreakable perk while you possess it, though you must surrender the Skeleton Key as a part of the Thieves Guild questline. While you have it, take the opportunity to unlock any Expert or Master locks you wish and quickly level your Lockpicking skill.

Constellation: Path of Shadow

Available Perks: 11

Available Lockpicking Perks

1. NOVICE LOCKS

Novice locks are much easier to pick.

Requires: None

2. APPRENTICE LOCKS

Apprentice locks are much easier to pick.

Requires: Lockpicking 25, Novice Locks

3. QUICK HANDS

Able to pick locks without being noticed.

Requires: Lockpicking 40, Apprentice Locks

Quick Hands allows you to pick locks without a crime being detected. This is sometimes useful for breaking into homes and containers without attracting too much attention, although trespass and theft will still be noticed.

4. WAX KEY

Automatically gives you a copy of a picked lock's key if it has one.

Requires: Lockpicking 50, Quick Hands

In essence, this perk allows you to automatically reopen most doors you've picked in the past. This may be useful if you find a couple of wealthy houses you can rob repeatedly (after their treasures have been replaced), or if you find yourself back in a dungeon you've been to before.

5. ADEPT LOCKS

Adept locks are much easier to pick.

Requires: Lockpicking 50, Apprentice Locks

6. GOLDEN TOUCH ★

Find more gold in chests.

Requires: Lockpicking 60, Adept Locks

Golden Touch adds a fair amount of gold to most chests (up to +100 gold pieces per chest). This stacks with the Imperial Luck racial ability, though it's significantly better.

7. TREASURE HUNTER ★

You have a 50% greater chance of finding special treasure.

Requires: Lockpicking 70, Golden Touch

This perk significantly increases your chance of finding special loot in some chests, especially large ones. What kind of loot? It could be anything, from an Iron Sword to a Dragonplate Cuirass. This is always a gamble, but it occasionally gives you something that's far better than anything you can get through any normal means. Are you feeling lucky?

8. EXPERT LOCKS

Expert locks are much easier to pick.

9. LOCKSMITH

Pick starts close to the lock opening position.

Requires: Lockpicking 80, Expert Locks

10. UNBREAKABLE

Requires: Lockpicking 100, Locksmith

With this perk and enough patience, you can eventually pick the lock on any chest with a single pick. Take this, and you won't need the Master Locks perk.

11. MASTER LOCKS

Master Locks are much easier to pick.

Requires: Lockpicking 100, Expert Locks

Pickpocket is the stealthy art of lifting gold and other valuables from an unsuspecting target. This skill increases whenever you successfully steal an item, based on the item's value. Fail to pickpocket something, and you don't receive credit for the attempt. Of course, that's probably the least of your worries at that point!

The highest-level Pickpocket perks, Misdirection and Perfect Touch, allow you to steal equipped weapons and armor off of a creature. This is an excellent trick for a stealthy assassin, as there are few more satisfying ways to take down a difficult foe than by stripping them down to their underwear before stabbing them in the back...

- Rank 4: Pickpocketing bonus of 80%. Item weight and value reduce pickpocketing odds.
Requires: Pickpocket 60, Light Fingers 3
- Rank 5: Pickpocketing bonus of 100%. Item weight and value reduce pickpocketing odds.
Requires: Pickpocket 80, Light Fingers 4

6. NIGHT THIEF

You have a +25% chance to pickpocket if the target is asleep.
Requires: Pickpocket 20

Night Thief makes pickpocketing a sleeping character much easier. Find out where your target sleeps, hide nearby, wait for nightfall, and then rob them at your leisure. Stacks with Light Fingers.

7. CUTPURSE

Pickpocketing gold is 50% easier.
Requires: Pickpocket 40, Night Thief

8. POISONED

Silently harm enemies by placing poison in their pockets.
Requires: Pickpocket 40, Night Thief

This is a good way to sap an enemy's strength and can kill many civilians outright. This is a great tactic for some Dark Brotherhood assassinations.

9. EXTRA POCKETS ★

Carrying capacity is increased by 100 points.
Requires: Pickpocket 50, Night Thief

Increases your Max Carry weight by 100. This great for any character, especially if you've been neglecting your stamina when leveling up.

10. KEYMASTER

Pickpocketing keys always works.
Requires: Pickpocket 60, Cutpurse

Gold and items are great, but keys can be even better once you have access to a good Fence. Go rob a well-to-do character's house while they're out, and the haul will often be worth far more than what they were carrying. If you need someone to fence your stolen goods, join the Thieves Guild or take the Speech skill's Fence perk.

11. MISDIRECTION

Can pickpocket equipped weapons.
Requires: Pickpocket 70, Cutpurse

12. PERFECT TOUCH

Can pickpocket equipped items.
Requires: Pickpocket 100, Misdirection

Speech allows you to haggle, bribe, persuade, and intimidate others to do as you ask. The higher your Speech skill, the better the prices you get when buying or selling items, and the greater your odds of success at dialogue challenges. Your Speech skill doesn't require any special effort to raise: It increases naturally when you sell items to a merchant (based on the item's value) or when you succeed at a Persuade or Intimidate challenge (based on its difficulty).

Available Perks: 13

Available Speech Perks

1–5. HAGGLING (5 RANKS) ★

Rank 1: Buying and selling prices are 10% better.

Requires: None

Rank 2: Buying and selling prices are 15% better.

Requires: Speech 20, Hagglng 1

Rank 3: Buying and selling prices are 20% better.

Requires: Speech 40, Hagglng 2

Rank 4: Buying and selling prices are 25% better.

Requires: Speech 60, Hagglng 3

Rank 5: Buying and selling prices are 30% better.

Requires: Speech 80, Hagglng 4

Hagglng significantly improves the prices you get in shops, though with diminishing returns after the first rank. Even if you don't plan to focus on Speech, it's worth picking up the first rank of this perk.

6. ALLURE

You have 10% better prices with the opposite sex.

Requires: Speech 30, Hagglng 1

Allure allows you to get slightly better prices from some merchants. While this can add up over time, make sure to take advantage of it by finding merchants of the correct gender. Stacks with Hagglng.

7. BRIBERY

Can bribe guards to ignore crimes.

Requires: Speech 30, Hagglng 1

This perk allows you to bribe guards to overlook nonviolent crimes. The crime doesn't go away; guards just don't arrest you right now. If you're already a member of the Thieves Guild, you can do this for free, so there's no need to spend a perk on it. This is also unimportant if you're a law-abiding citizen of Skyrim.

8. MERCHANT ★

Can sell any type of item to any kind of merchant.

Requires: Speech 50, Allure

The Merchant perk makes the process of selling your loot significantly faster, since you no longer need to visit multiple vendors to sell everything.

9. PERSUASION

Persuasion attempts are 30% easier.

Requires: Speech 50, Bribery

This perk increases your effective Speech score for the purpose of Persuade challenges. This is rarely necessary, although it can help if you find yourself struggling with them.

10. INTIMIDATION

Intimidation is twice as successful.

Requires: Speech 70, Persuasion

Like Persuasion, this perk increases your effective Speech score for the purpose of Intimidate challenges. Also like Persuasion, it's rarely necessary, and there's no real reason to take both this and Persuasion, unless you have a strong role-playing preference.

11. INVESTOR

Can invest 500 gold with a shopkeeper to increase his available gold permanently.

Requires: Speech 70, Merchant

Permanently increases the amount of gold that merchants have to trade with you. Coupled with the Merchant perk, this makes it even easier to sell your loot to just one convenient merchant, reducing your downtime between quests.

12. FENCE

Can barter stolen goods with any merchant in whom you have invested.

Requires: Speech 90, Investor

If you're already a member of the Thieves Guild, you may not need another Fence, although this will make it more convenient to sell stolen items, as it increases the number of Fences to which you have access.

13. MASTER TRADER

Every merchant in the world gains 1,000 gold for bartering.

Requires: Speech 100, Fence

PRIMA OFFICIAL GAME GUIDE

WWW.PRIMAGAMES.COM

Alchemy allows you to create potent potions and deadly poisons. Their effects are determined by the ingredients you use, but their potency is based on your Alchemy skill. Your skill increases when you discover a new ingredient effect or successfully craft a potion (based on the potion's value). It also increases slightly if you attempt to craft a potion but fail—while you may lose the ingredients, the experiment isn't a complete loss.

The Crafting section (page 70) has extensive details about the Alchemy system, including a full list of ingredients and their effects.

Constellation: Path of Shadow
Available Perks: 15

Available Alchemy Perks

1–5. ALCHEMIST (5 RANKS) ★

- Rank 1: Potions and poisons you make are 20% stronger.

Requires: None

- Rank 2: Potions and poisons you make are 40% stronger.

Requires: Alchemy 20, Alchemist 1

- Rank 3: Potions and poisons you make are 60% stronger.

Requires: Alchemy 40, Alchemist 2

- Rank 4: Potions and poisons you make are 80% stronger.

Requires: Alchemy 60, Alchemist 3

- Rank 5: Potions and poisons you make are twice as strong.

6. PHYSICIAN

Potions you mix that restore Health, Magicka, or Stamina are 25% more powerful.

Requires: Alchemy 20, Alchemist 1

Physician stacks with the Alchemist perks to make significantly more powerful restorative potions.

7. BENEFACTOR

Potions you mix with beneficial effects have an additional 25% greater magnitude.

Requires: Alchemy 30, Physician 1

Benefactor stacks with both the Alchemist and Physician perks but improves a broader range of potions than Physician.

8. POISONER

Poisons you mix are 25% more effective.

Requires: Alchemy 30, Physician 1

9–11. EXPERIMENTER (3 RANKS)

- Rank 1: Eating an ingredient reveals first two effects.

Requires: Alchemy 50, Benefactor

- Rank 2: Eating an ingredient reveals first three effects.

Requires: Alchemy 70, Experimenter 1

- Rank 3: Eating an ingredient reveals all its effects.

Requires: Alchemy 90, Experimenter 2

The Experimenter perks allow you to learn more effects just by eating ingredients. If mixing and matching ingredients isn't something you're interested in, this can help you learn effects faster. There's a complete table of Ingredient effects in the Inventory section, so you don't need to learn an Ingredient's effects (in the game) to use it in a potion or poison.

12. CONCENTRATED POISON

Poisons applied to weapons last for twice as many hits.

Requires: Alchemy 60, Poisoner

Since poisons normally last for only one hit, Concentrated Poison effectively doubles the strength of all your poisons. It's definitely worth taking if you use poisons frequently.

13. GREEN THUMB ★

Two ingredients are gathered from plants.

Requires: Alchemy 70, Concentrated Poison

This perk doubles the plant ingredients you have at your disposal. More ingredients means more opportunities to craft potions and poisons, which helps your Alchemy skill increase even faster. Unless you buy all your ingredients from shops, this is worth taking as soon as possible.

14. SNAKEBLOOD

You gain +50% Poison Resistance.

Requires: Alchemy 80, Experimenter 1 OR Concentrated Poison

Increases your resistance to poison, which is helpful when fighting Falmer, Chaurus, or Frostbite Spiders. This stacks with any racial abilities you may have.

15. PURITY

All negative effects are removed from created potions, and all positive effects are removed from created poisons.

Requires: Alchemy 100, Snakeblood

Purity "cleans up" your Alchemy results, if they need it. You may be better off just finding a better combination of ingredients to achieve the effect you want, though.

Illusion Magic manipulates the minds of those around you, sending them into a frenzy or compelling them to flee in terror. Illusion also offers several useful spells for a stealthy character, such as Invisibility and Muffle. Your Illusion skill increases when you cast a useful Illusion spell on a valid target. For example, you don't get credit for casting Fear on a character who's immune to the spell or for casting Invisibility when no one is around to see you.

Many Illusion perks are designed to help you overcome the major limitation of Illusion magic: the level restrictions on who your spells can affect. See the Spell List for the individual level restrictions on each spell, and see the Bestiary for a guide to identifying enemies by level.

Constellation: Path of Magic
Available Perks: 13

Available Illusion Perks

1. NOVICE ILLUSION ★

Cast Novice-level Illusion spells for half Magicka.

Requires: None

2. ANIMAGE

Illusion spells now work on higher-level animals.

Requires: Illusion 20, Novice Illusion

Illusion spells now affect animals up to 8 levels higher than the spell's usual limit. Stacks with all other perks.

3. ILLUSION DUAL CASTING ★

Dual casting an Illusion spell overcharges the effects into an even more powerful version.

Requires: Illusion 20, Novice Illusion

Dual Casting more than doubles the duration of your Illusion spells and allows them to affect targets twice as high as the spell's level cap would normally permit. This dramatically increases the effectiveness of all Illusion spells, especially until you begin taking other perks in this school to raise those level restrictions. It also works well for the stealth-focused spells (Invisibility, Muffle), which could give you away if they wear off too early.

4. APPRENTICE ILLUSION ★

Cast Apprentice-level Illusion spells for half Magicka.

Requires: Illusion 25, Novice Illusion

5. HYPNOTIC GAZE

Calm spells now work on higher-level opponents. Cumulative with Kindred Mage and Animage.

Requires: Illusion 30, Novice Illusion

Calm spells now affect enemies up to 8 levels higher than the spell's usual limit. Stacks with all other perks.

6. KINDRED MAGE

All Illusion spells work on higher-level people.

Requires: Illusion 40, Animage

Illusion spells now affect people up to 10 levels higher than the spell's usual limit. Stacks with all other perks.

7. ADEPT ILLUSION ★

Cast Adept-level Illusion spells for half Magicka.

Requires: Illusion 50, Apprentice Illusion

8. ASPECT OF TERROR

Fear spells work on higher-level opponents. Cumulative with Kindred Mage and Animage.

Requires: Illusion 50, Hypnotic Gaze

Fear spells now affect enemies up to 10 levels higher than the spell's usual limit. Stacks with all other perks.

9. QUIET CASTING

All spells you cast from any school of magic are silent to others.

Requires: Illusion 50, Kindred Mage

A great choice for any stealth-focused character dabbling in magic or any mage interested in stealth. With this perk, you can cast spells like Fear or Frenzy while remaining hidden, or you can recast Invisibility if it wears off unexpectedly.

10. RAGE

Frenzy spells work on higher-level opponents. Cumulative with Kindred Mage and Animage.

Requires: Illusion 70, Aspect of Terror

Frenzy spells now affect enemies up to 12 levels higher than the spell's usual limit. Stacks with all other perks.

11. EXPERT ILLUSION ★

Cast Expert-level Illusion spells for half Magicka.

Requires: Illusion 75, Adept Illusion

12. MASTER OF THE MIND ★

Illusion spells work on undead, Daedra, and automatons.

Requires: Illusion 90, Rage OR Quiet Casting

Conjuration spells allow you to raise the dead, summon creatures from Oblivion, draw powerful bound weapons from thin air, and trap the souls of your defeated foes. Your Conjuration skill increases when you cast a Conjuration spell and use it effectively, such as sending your summoned creature into battle, doing damage with a bound weapon, or successfully trapping a soul.

Available Perks: 16

Available Conjuration Perks

1. NOVICE CONJURATION ★

Cast Novice-level Conjuration spells for half Magicka.

Requires: None

2. MYSTIC BINDING

Bound weapons do more damage.

Requires: Conjuration 20, Novice Conjuration

Improves the damage of bound weapons by 50%. If you use them, that's a noticeable improvement.

3. CONJURATION DUAL CASTING

Dual casting a Conjuration spell overcharges the spell, allowing it to last longer.

Requires: Conjuration 20, Novice Conjuration

Dual Casting increases the duration of your Conjuration spells, not their strength. This is useful if you raise undead frequently—you'll get more use from your zombies before they turn to ash—but it's less effective if you primarily conjure creatures, since you can always conjure them again if the battle is taking a long time to conclude.

4. APPRENTICE CONJURATION ★

Cast Apprentice-level Conjuration spells for half Magicka.

Requires: Conjuration 25, Novice Conjuration

5–6. SUMMONER (2 RANKS)

- Rank 1: Can summon Atronachs or raise undead twice as far away.

Requires: Conjuration 30, Novice Conjuration

- Rank 2: Can summon Atronachs or raise undead three times as far away.

Requires: Conjuration 70, Summoner 1

This perk allows you to summon Atronachs or raise undead at a distance. This is less useful in the tight confines of many dungeons but works very well outdoors, where you can "throw" an

Atronach well out ahead of you and let it wreak havoc on your enemies before you even get close (or remain in cover and let your minion fight for you).

7. SOUL STEALER

Bound weapons cast Soul Trap on targets.

Requires: Conjuration 30, Mystic Binding

Casts Soul Trap on targets hit with your bound weapons. If you're interested in Enchanting and keep a ready supply of empty Soul Gems on hand, this is a great combination. But make sure you have a gem appropriate to the creature you're killing; don't trap that Skeever soul in your Grand Soul Gem. Check the Enchanting section for more information on Soul Gems.

8. ATROMANCY

Double duration for conjured Atronachs.

Requires: Conjuration 40, Summoner 1

Again, the duration of your conjured creatures is rarely an issue, since you can just resummon them if necessary.

9. NECROMANCY

Greater duration for reanimated undead.

Requires: Conjuration 40, Novice Conjuration

Since undead disintegrate when your spell wears off, Necromancy significantly increases the effectiveness of these spells. For best results, take Conjuration Dual Casting and dual cast your spell for an even longer duration!

10. ADEPT CONJURATION ★

Cast Adept-level Conjuration spells for half Magicka.

Requires: Conjuration 50, Apprentice Conjuration

11. OBLIVION BINDING

Bound weapons will banish summoned creatures and turn raised ones.

Requires: Conjuration 50, Soul Stealer

Oblivion Binding works like a powerful Turn Undead or Expel Daedra spell. It's a good alternative to the single-target versions of those spells, since it works repeatedly and without any Magicka cost.

12. DARK SOULS

Reanimated undead have 100 points more health.

Requires: Conjuration 70, Necromancy

Increases the health of your undead, allowing you to squeeze more "life" out of them before they collapse.

13. EXPERT CONJURATION ★

Cast Expert-level Conjuration spells for half Magicka.

Requires: Conjuration 75, Adept Conjuration

14. ELEMENTAL POTENCY ★

Conjured Atronachs are 50% more powerful.

Requires: Conjuration 80, Atromancy

Elemental Potency makes all Atronachs, including the top-tier Elemental Thralls, dramatically more powerful without increasing their casting cost.

15. MASTER CONJURATION ★

Cast Master-level Conjuration spells for half Magicka.

Requires: Conjuration 100, Expert Conjuration

16. TWIN SOULS ★

You can have two Atronachs or reanimated zombies.

Requires: Conjuration 100, Dark Souls OR Elemental Potency

Twin Souls allows you to have two summoned or reanimated creatures (or one of each) active at once. Add a Follower to your adventuring party, and few enemies will be able to get close to you!

MAGIC SKILLS: THE PATH OF MAGIC – DESTRUCTION

Destruction Magic harnesses the elemental forces of fire, frost, and shock to obliterate your foes. This skill improves when you damage enemies with Destruction spells, based on the amount of damage you do. You get the same increase for killing a Frost Troll with one Fire Storm as for killing it with ten Lightning Bolts, and no increase at all if the spell misses its target.

In addition to its listed damage, each element has its own innate effect: Flame spells set your enemies on fire (doing damage over time), Frost spells slow your foes and sap their stamina, and Shock spells drain their Magicka.

Available Perks: 17

Available Destruction Perks

1. NOVICE DESTRUCTION ★

Cast Novice-level Destruction spells for half Magicka.

Requires: None

2. DESTRUCTION DUAL CASTING ★

Dual casting a Destruction spell overcharges the effects into an even more powerful version.

Requires: Destruction 20, Novice Destruction

Dual Casting more than doubles the damage of your Destruction spells. This is a great choice, especially at early levels, where inflicting that extra damage with Flames or Frostbite often means the difference between life and death.

3. APPRENTICE DESTRUCTION ★

Cast Apprentice-level Destruction spells for half Magicka.

Requires: Destruction 25, Novice Destruction

4–5. AUGMENTED FLAMES (2 RANKS)

Rank 1: Fire spells do 25% more damage.

Requires: Destruction 30, Novice Destruction

Rank 2: Fire spells do 50% more damage.

Requires: Destruction 60, Augmented Flames 1

6–7. AUGMENTED FROST (2 RANKS)

Rank 1: Frost spells do 25% more damage.

Requires: Destruction 30, Novice Destruction

Rank 2: Frost spells do 50% more damage.

Requires: Destruction 60, Augmented Frost 1

8–9. AUGMENTED SHOCK (2 RANKS)

Rank 1: Shock spells do 25% more damage.

Requires: Destruction 30, Novice Destruction

Rank 2: Shock spells do 50% more damage.

10. IMPACT

Most destruction spells will stagger an opponent when dual cast.

Requires: Destruction 40, Destruction Dual Casting

Impact adds a stagger effect to most dual-cast spells. Flames, Frostbite, and Sparks are not included in this set, so you can't stagger enemies at will, but this can still be a powerful effect, allowing you to slow an enemy who's trying to close in on you or giving you a chance to run if you are overwhelmed.

11. RUNE MASTER

Can place runes five times farther away.

Requires: Destruction 40, Apprentice Destruction

Rune spells allow you to create traps that enemies can trigger. The Rune Master perk allows you to place them dramatically farther away, making it much easier to throw them into an enemy's path or place them near an existing trap (to create a "killing zone") without being detected.

12. ADEPT DESTRUCTION ★

Cast Adept-level Destruction spells for half Magicka.

Requires: Destruction 50, Apprentice Destruction

13. INTENSE FLAMES

Fire damage causes targets to flee if their health is below 20%.

Requires: Destruction 50, Augmented Flames 1

Sure, by the time this perk takes effect, your enemy was almost dead anyway, but watching a flaming foe run screaming off the edge of a cliff is just priceless.

14. DEEP FREEZE

Frost damage paralyzes targets if their health is below 20%.

Requires: Destruction 60, Augmented Frost 1

Deep Freeze paralyzes enemies near death, allowing you to kill them with impunity or turn your attention to more pressing threats. It often prevents a foe from completing their last attack (or two), which may be a lifesaver if your health is also low.

15. DISINTEGRATE

Shock damage disintegrates targets if their health is below 15%.

Requires: Destruction 70, Augmented Shock 1

Disintegrate effectively increases your damage output, instantly killing an enemy whenever your shock spells reduce their health below 15%. For pure efficiency, this is the best of the three low-health perks.

16. EXPERT DESTRUCTION ★

Cast Expert-level Destruction spells for half Magicka.

PRIMA OFFICIAL GAME GUIDE

MAGIC SKILLS: THE PATH OF MAGIC – RESTORATION

Restoration spells shape life energy, allowing you to heal yourself and your companions, drive back the undead, and create protective wards. Your Restoration skill increases when you use these spells effectively: to heal damage, turn undead, or shield yourself in combat. It does not increase if you heal someone who is already at full health or if you cast a Turn Undead spell when no undead are around.

Available Perks: 13

Available Restoration Perks

1. NOVICE RESTORATION ★

Cast Novice-level Restoration spells for half Magicka.

Requires: None

2. REGENERATION ★

Healing spells cure 50% more.

Requires: Restoration 20, Novice Restoration

Regeneration makes all healing spells more effective. It has a low skill requirement and is definitely worth taking early, when the concentration spell Healing may be your only restorative spell. Those few extra points of health a second can make all the difference during a particularly dangerous battle.

3. RESTORATION DUAL CASTING

Dual casting a Restoration spell overcharges the effects into an even more powerful version.

Requires: Restoration 20, Novice Restoration

Dual Casting doubles the effectiveness of some Restoration spells (Healing, Wards) and the duration of others (Turn Undead). But except in the most dire of circumstances, you're far more likely to want a weapon in your other hand than a second Restoration spell.

4. APPRENTICE RESTORATION ★

Cast Apprentice-level Restoration spells for half Magicka.

Requires: Restoration 25, Novice Restoration

5–6. RECOVERY (2 RANKS) ★

Rank 1: Magicka regenerates 25% faster.

Requires: Restoration 30, Novice Restoration

Rank 2: Magicka regenerates 50% faster.

Requires: Restoration 60, Recovery 1

A fantastic perk for any mage—after all, who can resist having more Magicka? It's also a fine choice for nonmages who still want to use magic occasionally, as it helps make up for the Magicka regeneration they miss out on by not wearing mage robes.

7. RESPITE ★

Healing spells also restore Stamina.

Requires: Restoration 40, Novice Restoration

Respite is ideal for warriors but is less effective for a pure mage, since you may not use Stamina except when sprinting away.

8. ADEPT RESTORATION ★

Cast Adept-level Restoration spells for half Magicka.

Requires: Restoration 50, Apprentice Restoration

9. WARD ABSORB

Wards recharge your Magicka when hit with spells.

Requires: Restoration 60, Novice Restoration

This perk allows your Wards to absorb 25% of the Magicka from incoming spells. This is handy if you use Wards extensively, as the additional Magicka helps to offset their cost and allows you to maintain them for longer.

10. NECROMAGE

All spells are more effective against undead.

Requires: Restoration 70, Regeneration

Necromage improves all of your spells, not just Turn Undead spells. Spells with a duration last 50% longer; spells with a magnitude are 25% stronger. So your Destruction spells now do 25% more damage to undead.

11. EXPERT RESTORATION ★

Cast Expert-level Restoration spells for half Magicka.

Requires: Restoration 75, Adept Restoration

12. AVOID DEATH

Once a day, heals 250 points automatically if you fall below 10% health.

Requires: Restoration 90

Effectively an "extra life," Avoid Death is a free, passive power that automatically activates to restore your health when you need it most. The Restoration skill requirement is steep, but if you can meet it, it's well worth your time.

Alteration spells manipulate the physical world and its natural properties. This school includes some of the best defensive spells available (the Flesh spells) and a wide range of utility spells like Waterbreathing, Telekinesis, and Paralysis. Your Alteration skill increases when you cast a useful Alteration spell on a valid target. For example, you don't get credit for casting Oakflesh but never entering combat, casting Waterbreathing but never entering the water, or casting Detect Life if no one is around.

Available Perks: 14

Available Alteration Perks

1. NOVICE ALTERATION ★

Cast Novice-level Alteration spells for half Magicka.

Requires: None

2. ALTERATION DUAL CASTING

Dual casting an Alteration spell overcharges the effects into an even more powerful version.

Requires: Alteration 20, Novice Alteration

Dual casting doubles the duration of most Alteration spells. Especially at early levels, this primarily affects the Flesh line of spells, so make sure you're using them frequently enough and really need that extra time before taking this perk.

3. APPRENTICE ALTERATION ★

Cast Apprentice-level Alteration spells for half Magicka.

Requires: Alteration 25, Novice Alteration

4-6. MAGE ARMOR (3 RANKS) ★

Rank 1: Protection spells like Stoneflesh are twice as strong if not wearing armor.

Requires: Alteration 30, Apprentice Alteration

Rank 2: Protection spells like Stoneflesh are two and a half times as strong if not wearing armor.

Requires: Alteration 50, Apprentice Alteration

Rank 3: Protection spells like Stoneflesh are three times as strong if not wearing armor.

Requires: Alteration 70, Apprentice Alteration

The Mage Armor perks significantly increase the effectiveness of the Flesh line of spells if you're not wearing any armor. If you're willing to commit to these spells as your primary means of defense, these perks are incredibly useful. But be sure you're willing to accept the "no armor" restriction before you invest in them.

7-9. MAGIC RESISTANCE (3 RANKS) ★

Rank 1: Blocks 10% of a spell's effects.

Requires: Alteration 30, Apprentice Alteration

Rank 2: Blocks 20% of a spell's effects.

Requires: Alteration 50, Apprentice Alteration

Rank 3: Blocks 30% of a spell's effects.

Requires: Alteration 70, Apprentice Alteration

These perks are a great way of boosting your defense against magic, instead of, or in addition to, the Restoration line of Ward spells. This is a solid choice for any caster and is especially good for Bretons, as it stacks with their racial magic resistance.

10. ADEPT ALTERATION ★

Cast Adept-level Alteration spells for half Magicka.

Requires: Alteration 50, Apprentice Alteration

11. STABILITY

Alteration spells have greater duration.

Requires: Alteration 70, Adept Alteration

Stability increases the duration of all Alteration spells by 50%. At this point in the Alteration tree, you may have begun to experiment with spells like Paralysis, where the longer duration can definitely make a difference. If you plan to use it extensively or need even longer-lasting Flesh spells, it's worth taking Stability (and possibly Alteration Dual Casting) to get the most from each cast.

12. EXPERT ALTERATION ★

Cast Expert-level Alteration spells for half Magicka.

Requires: Alteration 75, Adept Alteration

13. ATRONACH

Absorb 30% of the Magicka of any spells that hit you.

Requires: Alteration 100, Expert Alteration

This perk is worthwhile if you are running low on Magicka at high levels.

14. MASTER ALTERATION ★

Cast Master-level Alteration spells for half Magicka.

Requires: Alteration 100, Expert Alteration

SKYRIM

Enchanting allows you to enchant your own magic arms and armor. Your Enchanting skill increases whenever you enchant or disenchant an item (based on the value of the enchantment) and when you recharge an enchanted item.

While initially more difficult to level than Smithing or Alchemy, Enchanting is especially powerful in allowing you to maximize your potential with the right combination of enchantments. If you plan to explore Enchanting later in your adventure, it's worth disenchanting the magic items you find early on to build up your Enchanting skill and learn a wide variety of effects. You may also want to develop your Smithing skill to ensure you have a ready supply of weapons and armor to work with. See the Crafting section (page 70) for more details.

In addition, Neloth of Tel Mithryn (in Solstheim) has constructed a Staff Enchanter; augmenting staffs at this crafting station also increases your Enchanting skill.

Constellation: Path of Magic
Available Perks: 13

Available Enchanting Perks

1–5. ENCHANTER (5 RANKS) ★

- Rank 1: New enchantments are 20% stronger.
Requires: None
- Rank 2: New enchantments are 40% stronger.
Requires: Enchanting 20, Enchanter 1
- Rank 3: New enchantments are 60% stronger.
Requires: Enchanting 40, Enchanter 2
- Rank 4: New enchantments are 80% stronger.
Requires: Enchanting 60, Enchanter 3
- Rank 5: New enchantments are 100% stronger.
Requires: Enchanting 80, Enchanter 4

The Enchanter perks increase the strength of your Enchantments across the board, making weapons use fewer charges per hit and armor enchantments more powerful. At +20% per rank, it's almost as effective as the other Enchanting perks and much more broadly useful. Take ranks in this whenever your skill level permits.

6. SOUL SQUEEZER

Soul Gems provide 250 extra energy for recharging items.

Requires: Enchanting 20, Enchanter 1

7. FIRE ENCHANTER

Fire enchantments on weapons and armor are 25% stronger.

Requires: Enchanting 30, Enchanter 1

The Fire, Frost, and Storm Enchanter perks enhance enchantments of their element. While these effects appear on both weapons and armor, they're most important on weapons. Because you need only one weapon at a time, you may want to take the Fire Enchanter perk early and save the other two for later.

8. FROST ENCHANTER

Frost enchantments on weapons and armor are 25% stronger.

Requires: Enchanting 40, Fire Enchanter

9. SOUL SIPHON

Death blows to creatures but not people trap 5% of the victim's soul, recharging the weapon.

Requires: Enchanting 40, Soul Squeezer

10. INSIGHTFUL ENCHANTER

Skill enchantments on armor are 25% stronger.

Requires: Enchanting 50, Enchanter 1

11. STORM ENCHANTER

Shock enchantments on weapons and armor are 25% stronger.

Requires: Enchanting 50, Frost Enchanter

12. CORPUS ENCHANTER

Health, Magicka, and Stamina enchantments on armor are 25% stronger.

Requires: Enchanting 70, Insightful Enchanter

13. EXTRA EFFECT ★

Can put two enchantments on the same item.

Requires: Enchanting 100, Storm Enchanter OR Corpus Enchanter

Extra Effect allows you to apply two enchantments to any item. Double-enchant everything you have, and you'll notice a tremendous leap in your power level!

CHARACTER ARCHETYPES

OVERVIEW

The following sample characters are a rogues gallery of battle-hardened adventurers, with races, skills, perks, and equipment chosen to maximize their effectiveness. They have titles like "Battlemage," "Berserker," or "Assassin," but these labels only describe their specialties; they don't appear in game. This is because you can literally create any type of character you wish, focus on any combination of skills and perks, carry and wield any weapon or spell, and choose any type of reaction to enemies and citizens of this world. But if this infinite flexibility leaves you feeling a little overwhelmed, the following Archetypes are a good place to start.

While these Archetypes have been tuned to perform well at their specific style of play, you can adapt them to suit your particular skills or interests. They are here to aid you in understanding how the choices you make can affect your character and to guide you in developing an effective play style. Remember to cross-reference the following information with the section on skills, perks, items, and Followers for more information.

Character Archetype Legend

Title: The style of play the character primarily exhibits.

Race: The character's race; picked to accentuate the play style.

Gender: This has no effect on the character, aside from occasional citizen reactions.

Statistic Focus: How to distribute the Health, Magicka, and Stamina bonuses you receive when leveling up.

Primary Skills: Two key skills that govern the character's play style; raise these as quickly as possible.

Secondary Skills: Two other skills important to the character that you should develop heavily.

Stone Ability: Which of the Standing Stones you should visit to receive an ability.

Essential Perks: The perks most critical to the character's development; you should always purchase these as they become available. Once you buy Essential perks, consider buying other perks from your primary skills and then your secondary skills.

Weapons: The type of combat to which this character is best suited (e.g., melee, spells, bow and arrows).

Armor: The type of outfits and/or armor you should seek out or craft.

Followers: A Follower or Hireling that complements this play style.

Archetype Advice: Useful tips and plans for progression as you explore Skyrim.

PRIMA OFFICIAL GAME GUIDE

WWW.PRIMAGAMES.COM

The Warrior

Race: Nord

Gender: Male

Statistic Focus:
Health 60%,
Stamina 40%

Primary Skills:
One-Handed,
Block

Secondary Skills:
Light Armor,
Archery

Stone Ability: Warrior Stone

Essential Perks:

Armsman
Fighting Stance
Power Bash
Disarming Bash
Elemental Protection
Agile Defender

Weapons: One-handed weapon and shield; bow and arrows for backup

Armor: Light armor; with your shield for defense, heavy armor will just weigh you down.

Follower: You can command the attention of your foes in melee combat, so take a ranged Follower to maximize your damage potential. Marcurio and Jenassa are both good choices.

ARCHETYPE ADVICE:

- ◆ As a Nord, you start with bonuses to your most critical skills and racial abilities that help you thrive in combat.
- ◆ Before each combat, quickly take stock of the area and decide where you want the fight to take place; give yourself enough room to maneuver but don't let your enemies surround you. Your shield is useless against attacks from behind.
- ◆ Stand your ground and let the enemy come to you. Use your bow to fire off a few shots from range before switching back to a weapon and shield for melee combat (switch using Favorites).
- ◆ Hold the attention of your foes. If enemies begin to target your Follower, take them down quickly so your Follower can return to their own attacks.
- ◆ Don't hesitate to fall back if you feel like you're getting overwhelmed or if enemies begin to flank you. A doorway or narrow hall won't leave you much room to maneuver, but it will ensure you only have to address one enemy at a time.
- ◆ If you find yourself surrounded, invoke your Battle Cry to scatter your foes and give yourself a few seconds to recover and reposition.
- ◆ Master the rhythm of combat and learn how to use your attack, power attack, and shield bash for greatest effect.
- ◆ One-Handed perks like Armsman and Fighting Stance improve your damage output, but don't forget to take Block perks as well: Power Bash, Disarming Bash, and Elemental Protection are all critical to taking full advantage of your shield's potential.
- ◆ If you can block attacks effectively, you won't take much damage, making light armor an efficient choice that allows you to remain mobile in combat. If you are struggling, you can always switch to heavy armor instead.
- ◆ While you may not take many perks in Archery, it's always a good idea to keep a bow on hand for pulling enemies or taking out a lone sniper.
- ◆ The Warrior Stone is a solid choice, helping three of your four major skills increase more quickly.

The Mage

Race: High Elf

Gender: Female

Statistic Focus:
Magicka 80%,
Health 20%

Primary Skills:
Destruction,
Conjuration

Secondary Skills:
Illusion,
Restoration

Stone Ability: Mage Stone

Essential Perks:

Spellcasting Rank perks
Destruction Dual Casting
Augmented Flames, Frost, or Shock
Summoner
Elemental Potency
Illusion Dual Casting

Weapons: Spells

Armor: Mage robes. Always take the robe with the highest Magicka Regeneration rate you can find. Then look for more gear that increases your regeneration, adds to your total Magicka, or decreases the cost of your spells.

Follower: Keep a heavily armored warrior at your side to hold foes at bay. Vorstag and Lydia are both good choices, especially early on.

ARCHETYPE ADVICE:

- ◆ As a High Elf Wizard, you'll have the highest starting Magicka of any race and can maintain that advantage by focusing on Magicka bonuses as you level.
- ◆ When even that's not enough, call on your Highborn Racial power to sustain your casting in even the longest battles. Highborn is your lifeline; make sure it's your active power (and a Favorite) unless you need to use something else, and switch back to it when you're done.
- ◆ Prepare for each battle by summoning a creature, then start the fight with your best Destruction spell from range.
- ◆ In combat, expect to spend most of your time casting Destruction and Restoration spells.
- ◆ Learn what each type of Destruction spell is best at and how to use them effectively.
- ◆ Take advantage of the spells' secondary effects; spray a room with flames to set your foes on fire, or hit a foe with ice from a distance to slow them down, allowing you to keep casting as they struggle to advance.
- ◆ When not dual casting, keep a Ward on hand to deflect blows and shield yourself from enemy spells.
- ◆ This is a powerful but fragile character; while you have plenty of Magicka to cast devastating spells, your health is low and your defenses are weak, putting you in serious risk if attacked directly.
- ◆ Let your Follower and summoned creatures distract enemies and soak up damage while you focus on taking out each foe in turn. If your summoned creature is destroyed, resummon it immediately.
- ◆ Keep a close eye on your Health and cast Healing or Fast Healing when needed, or drink a potion (remember you can tag potions as Favorites).
- ◆ If an enemy closes to melee range, check their health and quickly decide whether to keep your Ward up and maintain your attack or escalate by dual casting Destruction (for a quick takedown), Fear (to send them running), or Calm (so you can escape).
- ◆ When in doubt, remember that your robes are lighter than your enemies' armor. Sprint to make a clean getaway, or tactically retreat to put some distance between yourself and your foes so you have time to finish one more spell.
- ◆ Because of your low health and ever-increasing need for Magicka, you'll use potions at a faster rate than most other characters. For this reason, consider taking up Alchemy to supplement what you find in dungeons and save your gold.
- ◆ As with all mages, buy Spell Tomes! This should always be your top shopping priority. Join the College of Winterhold early for convenient access to all the best spell vendors.
- ◆ The Mage Stone is a solid choice for this character, allowing you to quickly increase your skills and master a wide range of spells across all disciplines.

The Archer

Race: Wood Elf

Gender: Male

Statistic Focus:

Health 80%,

Stamina 20%

Primary Skills:

Archery, Sneak

Secondary Skills:

Light Armor,

Block

Stone Ability: Thief Stone

Essential Perks:

Overdraw

Eagle Eye

Power Shot

Quick Shot

Stealth

Deadly Aim

Weapons: Bow and arrows, the best you can afford. Ideally, find a bow with a fire, frost, or shock enchantment for even more damage. Keep a one-handed weapon for backup.

Armor: Light armor, for protection without sacrificing speed and stealth.

Follower: For an aggressive choice, take Jenassa or Faendal. For a sturdier companion, try a warrior like Vorstag or Argis.

ARCHETYPE ADVICE:

- ♦ As a Wood Elf, you excel at stealth archery, with bonuses in all your critical skills.
- ♦ If you spot an enemy, drop into a stealth crouch immediately, then creep closer and start the battle with a sneak attack for maximum damage.
- ♦ Use your bow exclusively to raise your Archery skill as quickly as possible. When rushed by an enemy, bash them with your bow, then back up and keep firing.
- ♦ Every Archery perk is worthwhile for the stealth archer; the real choice is not what perks to take but when to take them.
 - Always take Overdraw whenever your skill allows it. A 20% damage bonus per shot is just too good to pass up.
 - Want more help lining up your shots? Take Eagle Eye and Steady Hand.
 - Need to increase your damage output? Grab Deadly Aim and Power Shot.
- ♦ Don't neglect your Sneak skill, either. Practice sneaking up on even low-level enemies, or your skill may not be high enough to help you when it really matters.
- ♦ Take Light Armor to gain some protection without sacrificing your ability to Sneak effectively. It also won't hamper your mobility as much, allowing you to dodge or back away as you continue to fire at an especially persistent foe.
- ♦ Block is a good choice for another skill. While you can't take advantage of its shield-specific perks, Power Bash and Disarming Bash work just as well with a bow and give you an opening to make one last shot at point-blank range.
- ♦ Stat bonuses are less important for your character than most, since many of your foes will never make it to melee range. A high Health never hurts, but take a little Stamina as well to ensure you can bash when you really need to.
- ♦ When assaulting an outdoor camp or redoubt, find a nearby predator and use Command Animal on them. If your first shot isn't quite enough to take out the sentries, your new pet wolf or bear will probably do the job, or at least keep them at bay.
- ♦ The Thief Stone is a good match for the Archer, helping your Sneak and Light Armor skills keep pace with your Archery and ensuring they remain effective.

The Berserker

Race: Orc

Gender: Male

Statistic Focus:

Health 50%,

Stamina 50%

Primary Skills:

Two-Handed,

Heavy Armor

Secondary Skills:

Smithing, Block

Stone Ability: Lord Stone

Essential Perks:

Barbarian

Champion's Stance

Juggernaut

Well-Fitted

Tower of Strength

Power Bash

Weapons: Two-handed weapon, the strongest you can find

Armor: Heavy armor, for added defense

Follower: Find a melee Follower who can wade into combat at your side: Stenvar is an aggressive choice, while Belrand offers more versatility. When fighting in the wilderness, take along an animal companion as well; both Vigilance and Meeko will help distract your foes.

ARCHETYPE ADVICE:

- ♦ As an Orc, you have solid skill bonuses and use of the deadly Berserk power.
- ♦ Charge into combat and hit hard. Your attacks may be slow, but they connect with devastating force, staggering foes and dealing massive damage.
- ♦ Power Attacks are critical to using two-handed weapons effectively, so boost your Stamina and take perks that improve them, especially Champion's Stance.
- ♦ Your greatest risk is wading into the thick of combat and becoming surrounded. Keep a Follower and/or animal companion with you to divide your enemies' focus and keep their numbers manageable.
- ♦ If you do find yourself surrounded, invoke your Berserk power to increase your damage resistance and gain the damage bonus you need to carve a path through your foes.
- ♦ This is not a traditional berserker: Instead of hides and war paint, outfit your warrior in a full suit of heavy armor to offset the lack of a protective shield or spell. With the right Heavy Armor perks, you can shrug off even the most powerful blows.
- ♦ The Lord Stone improves your defenses even further, allowing you to endure whatever your adversaries can throw at you.
- ♦ Remember that parrying an attack with your weapon counts as a block. While the shield-based perks in the Block constellation won't be of use to you, you can still take advantage of perks like Power Bash or Disarming Bash.
- ♦ Since your combat style relies exclusively on your weapons and armor, Smithing makes a great supporting skill, allowing you to forge and improve your own gear.

TRAINING PART 1: CHARACTER ARCHETYPES

PRIMA OFFICIAL GAME GUIDE

WWW.PRIMAGAMES.COM

The Spellsword

Race: Dark Elf

Gender: Female

Statistic Focus:

Health 40%,

Magicka 30%,

Stamina 30%

Primary Skills:

One-Handed,

Destruction

Secondary Skills:

Light Armor, Illusion

Stone Ability: Lover Stone

Essential Perks:

Armsman

Fighting Stance

Destruction Rank perks

Augmented Flames, Frost, or Shock

Impact

Agile Defender

Weapons: One-handed weapon and spell

Armor: Light armor for speed and mobility. For best results, look for enchanted armor that increases your maximum Magicka or Magicka-regeneration rate.

Follower: If you want a friend to absorb damage, find a warrior like Lydia or Vorstag. For a more ranged support, take Jenassa or Marcurio.

ARCHETYPE ADVICE:

- ◊ As a Dark Elf, you may have to work a little harder to increase your One-Handed skill (which doesn't start with a bonus), but your other skills are an excellent fit.
- ◊ A Spellsword is all about flexibility, switching between weapons and spells as the situation demands, aggressively creating and exploiting enemy weaknesses.
- ◊ Use Destruction spells to soften up foes from a distance before they can close to melee range. Hit weaker enemies with fire spells to quickly cut down their health, use frost on stronger foes to slow their approach, and target mages with shock spells.
- ◊ In melee combat, your best defense is a good offense.
 - Early on, spray flames or sparks with one hand while you hack away with your weapon; you'll be surprised at how quickly your enemies fall.
 - As time goes on, staggering foes becomes increasingly important. Take Fighting Stance (which allows you to power attack more frequently) and Impact (to allow your spells to stagger enemies as well).
- ◊ Use your Ancestor's Wrath racial power to inflict even more damage in close combat. At later levels, Destruction's line of Cloak spells is more powerful, but Ancestor's Wrath may still be useful if you need to conserve Magicka.
- ◊ Although most of your attention will be on offense, learn a Ward spell for better protection when fighting mages or a Flesh spell (Oakflesh, Ironflesh, etc.) for an armor boost against hard-hitting warriors. Both will supplement your defenses without slowing you down.
- ◊ Try to balance your One-Handed and Destruction skills. If either falls too far behind, you may not be able to rely on it when you need it most.
- ◊ Don't neglect Light Armor perks, either. Without a shield or the ability to block, you're reliant on your armor and spells for protection.
- ◊ Illusion spells like Fear and Frenzy are helpful at disrupting large groups of foes, allowing you to concentrate on each enemy in turn without becoming overwhelmed.
- ◊ Since your skills are so wide-ranging, the Lovers Stone is a good choice to help all of them advance quickly. If you notice any of them starting to fall behind, switch to a more specific stone (Warrior, Mage, or Thief) to balance them out again.

The Necromancer

Race: Breton

Gender: Male

Statistic Focus:

Magicka 70%,

Health 30%

Primary Skills:

Conjuration,

Illusion

Secondary

Skills: Alteration,

Restoration

Stone Ability: Ritual Stone

Essential Perks:

Spellcasting Rank perks

Conjuration Dual Casting

Necromancy

Dark Souls

Mystic Binding

Mage Armor

Weapons: Spells, bound weapons

Armor: Mage robes. Always take the robe with the highest Magicka-regeneration rate you can find. Then look for more gear that increases your regeneration, adds to your total Magicka, or decreases the cost of your spells.

Follower: Bring a tough, high-damage Follower to create corpses you can resurrect. Stenvar or Ahtar are good choices.

ARCHETYPE ADVICE:

- ◊ As a Breton, you have strong skill bonuses and a fantastic resistance to magic.
- ◊ Prepare for each fight by casting your best Flesh spell (Oakflesh, Ironflesh, etc.). Early on, this is expensive—you may want to wait a few seconds to let your Magicka recover—but it becomes less of an issue as your Magicka improves.
- ◊ Necromancy has one major drawback: you need fresh corpses to resurrect. When you approach a fight, quickly size up your options and decide how to proceed:
 - If there are any dead bodies lying around, exploit them! Raise the corpse, and your new zombie will charge in ahead of you.
 - Against a group of foes, try an Illusion spell like Frenzy. One enemy may well kill another, giving you fresh zombie material.
 - Or conjure a bound weapon and attack. Work with your Follower to quickly take down the first enemy, resurrect them, and then confront the remaining foes with your new ally.
- ◊ With only your Flesh spells to protect you, you're susceptible to damage in melee combat. If an enemy rushes you, use Illusion spells like Fear or Calm to stop their attack and escape, or conjure a bound weapon to quickly cut them down.
- ◊ When confronting mages, call on your Dragonskin power to absorb their spells as Magicka, and use it to power your own spells. For even more resilience, cast a Ward; combined with your innate magic resistance, this can make you almost invulnerable.
- ◊ If a battle is taking a long time to conclude, rush into the center of the battlefield and invoke the Ritual Stone's power to raise all the surrounding dead at once, creating a zombie army to quickly overrun your opposition!
- ◊ When combat has ended, your work has not—resurrect one final zombie before moving on. You never know what lurks around the next corner.
- ◊ As with all mages, buy Spell Tomes! This should always be your top shopping priority. Join the College of Winterhold early for convenient access to all the finest spell vendors.

The Assassin

Race: Khajiit
Gender: Female
Statistic Focus:
 Health 60%,
 Magicka 20%,
 Stamina 20%

Primary Skills: Sneak,
 One-Handed

Secondary Skills:
 Alchemy, Pickpocket

Stone Ability: Shadow Stone

Essential Perks:

Stealth	Armsman
Backstab	Dual Flurry
Assassin's Blade	Dual Savagery

Weapons: Dual one-handed weapons (move to daggers once you take Assassin's Blade). Keep a bow on hand for situations where no good stealth route is available and for misdirecting foes.

Armor: Light armor, for protection without sacrificing speed and stealth

Follower: None, or take a warrior such as Iona or Vorstag, but have them wait at a distance in case you need the backup. Stealth is tricky enough without having to worry about a Follower.

ARCHETYPE ADVICE:

- ◊ As a Khajiit, you start with the Sneak and One-Handed skills needed to be an effective assassin and with bonuses to your Archery, Alchemy, and Lockpicking skills for support.
- ◊ For you, every encounter is a puzzle waiting to be solved. If you spot an enemy, drop into a stealthy crouch immediately, then look for a way to sneak up behind them for a lethal backstab.
- ◊ When assaulting an exterior camp or ruin, you may have better luck at night, when the cover of darkness provides better concealment. Weather matters, too: a stormy night offers better concealment than a clear one.
- ◊ In dungeons, look for alternate paths and ways to get the drop on your foes.
- ◊ In crypts and catacombs, your high Sneak skill may allow you to slip past the Draugr without disturbing their rest. But don't hesitate to lash out with a preemptive attack; few things are more satisfying than ambushing a foe before they can ambush you.
- ◊ Sneak is your most critical skill. At early levels, it may be difficult to sneak up on an enemy without being spotted, but keep practicing! You'll be amazed at how well you can avoid detection once your skill is high enough.
- ◊ As an Assassin, you need a fast, powerful offense to cut down your foes before they can retaliate. Take perks in One-Handed and Sneak to increase your damage output as much as possible.
- ◊ Alchemy is a great supporting skill; poisons make every strike count, while potions can restore your health and shore up your otherwise-fragile defenses. Don't forget to add both potions and poisons to your Favorites.
- ◊ Pickpocket is also worth exploring. With your high Sneak skill, you should have little trouble concealing yourself from townsfolk (which improves your odds of success). At low levels, you can pilfer items for a little extra gold or the occasional enchanted treasure. But the real reward comes at higher levels, where you can steal the weapons and armor off your foes before stabbing them in the back.
- ◊ Use your racial Night Eye power whenever you want better visibility. This is ideal for a stealthy character; it is free, unrestricted, and absolutely silent.
- ◊ The Shadow Stone's power gives you free use of Invisibility once per day. Even if you learn the Invisibility spell, this can still be useful, giving you a chance to disengage from foes and escape, or set up another sneak attack.

The Battlemage

Race: Imperial
Gender: Male
Statistic Focus:
 Magicka 60%,
 Health 40%

Primary Skills: Destruction,
 Restoration

Secondary Skills:
 Illusion, Heavy
 Armor

Stone Ability: Apprentice Stone

Essential Perks:

Spellcasting Rank Perks
 Illusion Dual Casting
 Destruction Dual Casting
 Augmented Flames, Frost, or Shock
 Recovery
 Juggernaut

Weapons: Spells, supplemented by staves or a one-handed weapon as needed

Armor: Heavy armor, ideally enchanted to increase your Magicka or Magicka regeneration Follower: As a spellcaster who can stand up to melee combat, almost any Follower can complement your skills. Belrand or Stenvar are both good choices for a more aggressive melee companion.

ARCHETYPE ADVICE:

- ◊ As an Imperial, you have the right mixture of magic and martial skills needed to succeed as a Battlemage.
- ◊ Long a respected profession in Tamriel, the Battlemage combines the mage's power and versatility with a warrior's durability. Though magic is your primary focus, you can endure the rigors of melee combat if needed.
- ◊ As a Battlemage, you can choose your own approach to any combat situation:
 - ◊ Use Destruction spells to blast foes from a distance, or pull them in, where you can switch to a Dual Cast spell to finish them off.
 - ◊ Use Restoration spells to sustain yourself or strengthen your allies.
 - ◊ Use Wards to protect yourself from mages, while countering their elemental magic with your own.
 - ◊ Use Illusion spells to weaken and disrupt groups of foes at range.
 - ◊ Dabble in Conjunction to summon allies or raise the dead, or try Alteration for an even stronger defense in melee.
- ◊ Without the benefit of enchanted robes, your Magicka will regenerate far more slowly than a pure mage's, severely restricting your spellcasting. You have options here, too:
 - ◊ Take more Magicka bonuses when leveling up to increase your maximum Magicka.
 - ◊ Invest in (or make) armor and items that fortify your Magicka or Magicka regeneration.
- ◊ Take Restoration's line of Recovery perks, which increase your regeneration rate.
- ◊ Draw on the Apprentice Stone's power to increase your Magicka-regeneration rate, and offset the lower magic resistance with other items or Wards.
- ◊ Keep staves, scrolls, or a melee weapon as backup, just in case.
- ◊ Destruction is your primary means of damaging your foes. Take new ranks in Destruction as they become available, as well as any other perks you can use to increase your damage output.
- ◊ Restoration provides you with magical Wards to supplement your armor and healing spells to sustain yourself and your allies.
- ◊ Illusion spells allow you to disrupt larger groups of foes and fortify your companions in battle.
- ◊ Heavy Armor is what sets a Battlemage apart from any other wizard. While the Juggernaut perks are important, you will probably need to put spellcasting rank perks ahead of the other Heavy Armor perks.
- ◊ If you find yourself surrounded, don't forget to use your Voice of the Emperor ability to pacify nearby foes, giving you time to make a tactical retreat.
- ◊ You might also consider a different race: A Breton Battlemage can take the Apprentice Stone with less of a penalty due to their innate magic resistance, while a High Elf Battlemage will have a higher starting Magicka and the benefit of their racial Highborn ability.

The Weaponmaster

Race: Redguard

Gender: Female

Statistic Focus:

Stamina 40%

Primary Skills:

One-Handed,

Heavy Armor

Secondary

Skills: Archery,

Enchanting

Stone Ability: Steed Stone

Essential Perks:

Armsman

Fighting Stance

Dual Flurry

Dual Savagery

Juggernaut

Well Fitted

Weapons: Two one-handed weapons (dual-wielding), bow and arrows for backup

Armor: Heavy armor for maximum defense

Follower: You can hold your own in melee combat, so bring a ranged Follower like Marcurio or Illia for ranged support.

ARCHETYPE ADVICE:

- ◊ As a Redguard, your One-Handed skill bonus is magnified by a dual-wielding combat style, making you a whirlwind of destruction in close combat.
- ◊ Choose how to address each battle.
 - In some cases, you may be better off rushing your foes to engage them as quickly as possible, before they can ready their defenses.
 - At other times, you may want to find a defensible position (such as a doorway or higher ground) and let your enemies come to you. Use a bow to draw your foes to you, then switch back to your weapons as your foes close in.
- ◊ Attack relentlessly. One-Handed perks like Dual Flurry allow you to strike more quickly, while Dual Savagery improves the strength of your Dual Power attack.
- ◊ Since you can't block while wielding two weapons, take heavy armor for the extra defense; you'll appreciate the additional resilience in combat.
- ◊ Enchanting is especially effective for a dual-wielding warrior, since you can apply a different enchantment to each weapon, or double up for a stronger effect. You may also want to consider Smithing to forge and improve your own weapons and armor.
- ◊ Early on, the Steed Stone is a great choice for offsetting the weight and movement penalties of Heavy Armor. If you decide to take Heavy Armor's Conditioning perk, switch to the Lord or Lady Stones for more active combat bonuses.
- ◊ Don't forget about your Adrenaline Rush power, which can rapidly refill your Stamina during an extended battle, allowing you to sustain a flurry of power attacks.

Overdraw

Armsman

Weapons: Spells, bow and arrows, one-handed weapon for backup

Armor: Light armor, ideally with enchantments to improve your Magicka or Magicka regeneration Follower: Seek out a stealthy archer like Jenassa or Faendal.

ARCHETYPE ADVICE:

- ◊ As an Argonian, your natural abilities skills provide a solid foundation for a stealthy character, though your magic skills will take a little more time to build up.
- ◊ The Rogue is a hybrid mage-thief. Less narrowly focused than most of the other archetypes, it offers a great deal of versatility and is a fun choice if you enjoy toying with your enemies instead of assaulting them directly.
- ◊ When you spot a foe, drop into a stealthy crouch and creep closer to assess the situation. You have a range of options at your disposal:
 - Cast Invisibility and Muffle and sneak past your foes undetected.
 - Cast Frenzy or Fear to disrupt and disorient them.
 - Fire a well-placed arrow to catch a foe's attention and lure them into a trap.
 - Snipe a foe from range, starting combat with a devastating sneak attack.
 - Creep closer and backstab for maximum damage.
- ◊ Once combat begins, don't hesitate to attack with bow or blade. If you want to take on a foe directly, draw a second weapon to deal even more damage.
- ◊ If you feel yourself getting overwhelmed, pull out an ace:
 - Cast Fear to send your enemies running, then pelt them with arrows as they flee.
 - Cast Calm to stop combat for a moment, giving yourself time to quaff a potion or make a tactical retreat.
 - Call on the Serpent Stone's power to paralyze a foe and take them out of the fight completely. This gives you time to heal, deal with other enemies, or slaughter the now-helpless foe at your leisure.
- ◊ Your Histskin power is an amazing racial ability, capable of pulling you back from the brink of death. Give it a few seconds to do its work, then wade back into the thick of combat.
- ◊ With such a wide array of tactics at your disposal, you can find a solution to any challenge. Focus on the core improvement perks for each skill (Stealth, Illusion Ranks, Armsman, and Overdraw) to make sure each tactic remains viable, then branch out depending on what seems most useful to you.
- ◊ If you have any perks left over, explore Lockpicking or Pickpocket to take advantage of your racial skill bonuses and complete your stealthy arsenal.

TRAINING PART 2: COMBAT, DEVELOPMENT, AND CRAFTING

This section explores the vast array of actions and activities you can perform in Skyrim. We provide advice on how to improve your character as you level up and give you crucial tactical details on all facets of combat and exploration (including Shouts). We also thoroughly explain Crafting systems.

Color-coding: In the tables in this chapter, elements from the original game are in white and gray. Elements from the Dawnguard, Hearthfire, and Dragonborn add-ons have been color-coded as follows:

CHARACTER ADVANCEMENT

Leveling Advice

Tactically level up during a particularly frightening combat, as shown.

As your skills increase, you gradually make progress toward gaining a level. There are several aspects of this process worth taking a closer look at:

Improve what you use: The skills you use will improve naturally as you use them. There is no need to go out of your way to improve a skill you never plan to use; this doesn't level your character any faster and won't make your character any stronger or more effective.

Use what you improve: When selecting perks, be sure you're ready to take full advantage of them. For example, don't purchase Adept-level Magic perks until you have Adept-level spells to cast. Don't take Enchanting perks unless you're planning on enchanting something in the immediate future.

Patience and perks: If you aren't sure which perk to choose when you level up or if find yourself a few skill points away from a perk you really want, it is usually better to save the choice for later. This gives you more flexibility and allows you to change your mind. Remember, once you select a perk, you can't take it back!

Tactical leveling: Leveling up fully restores your Health, Magicka, and Stamina. This can literally save your life if you find yourself bereft of potions during a difficult battle. For example, if you gain a level while exploring a dungeon, you may want to wait and level up during the final (or most difficult) fight. Conversely, there's no point in hoarding levels; once you begin leveling up, you must claim all of the levels you've earned.

COMBAT IMPROVEMENT

By now, you should have skills that aid you in dispatching enemies through melee, ranged, or magical attacks. This section offers advice on maximizing your combat potential no matter how you decide to fight your foes.

General Advice

Don't overlook your Shouts or powers; they can win the fight for you!

As you set off to explore the realm, you may be overwhelmed with the choices you can make. But remember this sage advice, and you'll thrive in the wilds of Skyrim:

Conserve your resources: Your three statistics—Health, Magicka, and Stamina—are all resources you need to conserve. If you sprint into battle (using Stamina), recast your spells right before heading into battle (Magicka), or push on after a difficult battle without pausing to recover your Health, you're at a disadvantage. Stop and wait for a moment (optionally swigging down a potion) to ensure all three stats have recovered fully before you continue.

Remember your Shouts and powers: While most of your attention will be on the weapons, spells, or shield in your hands, remember that you have a third option at your disposal. Shouts and powers are among your most devastating abilities: They don't cost anything to use, and they can dramatically turn the tide of battle in your favor. Make sure to Favorite them, and always know which one you have equipped. Then call on them whenever you need some additional offensive firepower.

Consumable consumption: Do you find yourself struggling against a particularly troublesome set of foes? Then stop, rummage around in your inventory, and see if you have an item that might help. This could be a healing or fortifying potion, a poison for your weapon, or a scroll with a powerful magic effect. Don't hoard scrolls; use them!

Active effects: It's easy to forget about the Brain Rot you contracted a few hours ago or not to notice when a blessing or buff has worn off. Check the Active Effects list in the Magic menu periodically to ensure you know what is ailing or enhancing you.

The Favorites menu: This menu allows you to quickly switch between weapons and spells, and it pauses time when you open it, without blocking your view. This gives you a moment to consider your next move.

Save early, save often! Although the game saves your progress automatically, it's always prudent to save before trying something dangerous, like running down a hallway lined with swinging blades or investigating that ominous-looking tomb.

Tuning in the difficulty: The System > Settings > Gameplay menu allows you to change the game's difficulty at any time—even during combat—which you should try if you're really struggling or if you're having too easy a time.

Melee Combat

To maximize your potential in melee combat, choose a weapon you like, learn its rhythm, improve the associated perks, and try to find (or forge) the most potent version of it that you can. If you have problems effectively bringing down foes, be sure you know how to respond to and counter their attacks.

Choose your weapon: Early in your adventure, try out a variety of weapons and combat styles and see what works best for you. Do you prefer one- or two-handed weapons? If you enjoy wielding a one-handed weapon, do you want a shield, spell, or another weapon in your free hand? Then figure out whether daggers (fast, lowest damage), swords, axes, or maces (slow, highest damage) are your favorite. By learning what you're most comfortable wielding, you can choose the perks that complement that style.

The rhythm of combat: Once you've settled on a weapon or combat style, practice your tactics. Remember that you and your opponent have a regular attack, a power attack (holding the Attack button down for a slower but more damaging strike), a block (raising your shield or weapon to deflect an enemy blow), and a bash (hitting your foe with a shield or the flat of a weapon). Try to get a feel for how long it takes you to perform these actions with your chosen weapon and how long it takes for your enemies to do the same. As your sense of timing improves, you can better decide whether to attack or defend during a fight, and choose your tactics more strategically.

Observe and counter: Combat involves more than just attacking. You can take down enemies faster and more effectively by observing their actions and choosing the appropriate counter.

◆ Block if your enemy uses a regular attack.

◆ Bash if your enemy uses a power attack to quickly interrupt and stagger them.

◆ Power attack if your enemy is blocking to break their block and stagger them.

◆ Attack swiftly if your enemy is staggered to cut them down.

Wearing a Cloak: The Destruction line of Cloak spells (Flame, Frost, and Lightning) are ideal if you plan to engage in close combat—even if you're primarily a warrior with little interest in magic. These spells allow you to damage enemies with both your weapons and the cloak's magical effects, without requiring much attention (or Magicka expenditure). Cloak spells also don't damage your Followers, so there's no need to worry in close quarters.

◆ Ranged Combat

A Dragon Attack: If you focus only on melee combat, your options against dragons are limited.

Whether you're an accomplished archer or learning how to fire an arrow for the first time, it's always worth keeping ranged combat in mind.

The backup bow: It always pays to keep a bow and some arrows on hand, even if you don't plan on specializing in it. You never know when you might encounter a dragon or need to soften up a particularly difficult foe from range.

Arrow gathering: Be sure to grab arrows at every opportunity. Since they have no weight, there's no reason not to take and keep every arrow you can find. There's nothing more frustrating than running out of arrows in the middle of a dungeon, especially if you're focused on archery.

Remember to bash: Don't forget that you can bash with your bow. This usually gives you enough time to fire off one more shot or to sprint away while your enemy recovers so you can line up and fire again.

Perks of power: Archery perks have a significant effect on your ranged combat repertoire, giving you the ability to zoom in, slow time, and stagger enemies after a successful hit. Just relying on archery can be a very satisfying way to play and can make hunting certain skittish animals, such as elk and deer, a lot easier.

Ranged combat only: Rarely, you may encounter a foe that can't be reached by melee weapons. On these occasions, a bow and arrow is imperative, unless you have a ranged spell.

◆ Combat Tactics

Get the gear: Be sure you're searching for the correct gear. If you plan to focus on archery, dual-wielding, or another aggressive combat style, then offense is your best defense: Look for enchanted weapons and armor that increase your damage-dealing potential. It is often worth wearing a "weaker" piece of armor if it carries an enchantment that helps your damage output.

Prepare poisons: Poisons are a great way of quickly increasing your damage potential. Keeping some poisons on hand (via Favorites) is an excellent way to deal with heavily armored warriors or mages using Wards. Even if your weapon doesn't strike for maximum damage, the poison will.

Speed and sidestepping: Use speed to your advantage. When wearing light armor or robes, you're more agile than most of your opponents. This allows you to sidestep their power attacks (and then counter) or to sprint away if you need some space to recover and regroup.

Staggering attempts: A staggered enemy is much easier to cut down with a flurry of attacks. Power attacks and bashes stagger most foes, but look for other effects that can achieve this, too, such as the Unrelenting Force Shout.

◆ Magic-Based Combat

The dead rise again: There's something satisfying about raising recently slain enemies to attack their own!

The five schools of magic offer a wide range of offensive and defensive spells to help crush your foes, shield yourself, or augment other combat styles.

The blended approach: In Skyrim, you don't have to be a "pure" mage to enjoy spellcasting. Any warrior can benefit from a conjured ally, healing spell, or elemental cloak, and thieves can especially appreciate the benefits of Invisibility. Even if you don't plan to focus on magic, look for spells that can enhance your combat style.

Spell-casting Rank perks: Each school of magic has a series of "Rank" perks (Novice, Apprentice, Adept, Expert, and Master) that dramatically decrease the cost of spells from that school. These perks are critical to your ability to effectively use spells from that school and should be a top priority for any serious mage.

Offensive Spells

Know your area of effect: Many spells damage anything in a wide area. While you can't be hurt by your own spells, your Followers can be, so use them with care to avoid any unintended consequences. On the other hand, if your only Follower is a summoned Atronach, use spells that match their element at will, since they're immune to them.

Set your own traps: Rune traps allow you to turn the environment to your advantage. Set one in a narrow space enemies will have to run through or drop one in a hall you can retreat past if combat goes poorly. In a pinch, you can also cast them directly at an enemy, although your other spells are much more cost-effective.

Raising the walls: Though initially somewhat weak, Wall spells become dramatically more powerful at higher levels. Cast them at the feet of a waking Draugr to kill it before it can finish standing up, or back down a hall as you cast a wall out in front of you. Any enemies that advance will blindly race through your death zone.

Conjuring up companions: Be sure to summon a creature or raise a zombie before heading into any major battle. When summoning a creature, pick the one that's best for your situation. Do you need the ranged offense of a Flame Atronach or the melee toughness of a Frost Atronach? When raising a zombie from those you've recently slain, pick someone you haven't looted already; even zombies are more powerful when well armed and armored.

Defensive Spells

Know your defenses: Both the Restoration line of Ward spells and the Alteration line of Flesh spells offer defensive options for spellcasters. Wards require concentration (tying up a hand) and have a per-second cost, but they are more effective against spells. Flesh spells have a higher initial cost but don't require concentration. Use Wards when fighting mages, Flesh spells against melee foes, or both in large or mixed combats where you need the extra protection.

Be ready with healing: There are a variety of healing spells to choose from; some heal a large amount of Health at once, while others heal over time at a reduced cost. Most heal only you, but some can heal your Followers as well. Learn a variety of these spells (and flag each of them as Favorites) to be prepared for any situation.

Learn spells for specific situations: Delving into a Draugr crypt? Then pick up a Turn Undead or Detect Dead spell. Exploring a shipwreck? Then grab Waterbreathing to make your diving stress-free. Whatever your need, you can probably find a spell to make your exploration easier or more entertaining.

Stealth-Based Combat

A stab in the dark (and the back): Stealthy adventurers seek to slay any foe with a swift attack their enemies never see coming.

Those who lurk in the shadows, hoping to sneak past enemies or a guard undetected, would do well to heed the following advice:

Gain the right perspective: It's dramatically easier to Sneak using third-person view, since you can see patrolling enemies more easily than in first-person.

Stay hidden: Line of sight is by far the biggest factor in determining whether an enemy can see you. Stay hidden behind walls or cover to remain out of sight. And it goes without saying that using Stealth mode (crouching) is imperative.

Seek magical aid: Invisibility and Muffle conceal you from your enemies' sight and hearing, making it much easier to sneak by unnoticed. Learn these spells, collect Invisibility potions, and look for Muffle-enchanted gear to improve your chances of a successful stealth experience. Then give the same augmentations to your Followers. Otherwise, lurk alone.

Draw out your foes: Enemies leave their posts to investigate sounds, such as an arrow impact. Place your shot carefully, and you can draw them out into the open, giving you a chance to perform a Sneak attack, fire a second arrow (this one into the enemy himself), or slip by undetected.

Lure foes into traps: For an even more devious twist, shoot an arrow near a trap, and the enemy that goes to investigate may blunder into it and set it off. Combine this with a well-placed Rune Trap spell to create your own kill zones!

NOTE Finishing Moves: Every melee weapon you carry has a finishing flourish you can inflict on an enemy at the end of a fight. Although there's no guarantee of executing one, your best bet for seeing one is to perform a power attack on the last enemy in a battle. Most importantly, there is no tactical advantage to performing one either (e.g., they don't inflict more damage). But they are viscerally more satisfying!

Choosing Favorites

The Favorites System means less time spent rummaging through your inventory and more time spent in battle. It allows you to rapidly swap between your preferred weapons, spells, and outfits more easily and to quickly ready a power, potion, or scroll when necessary. Because it takes the hassle out of managing your inventory, it also helps you fight more effectively: you won't hesitate to change your gear when you can do so in a matter of seconds.

TIP The Favorites menu also allows you to hotkey the items you use most frequently. Console players can press Left or Right to tag an item; PC players can press a number (1-8). Then press that button in game to use or switch to that item instantly!

Here is some additional advice on selecting the most effective Favorites:

Melee combat: Keep your weapon (or weapons) of choice in your Favorites menu. If you use a one-handed weapon, tag a shield as well. If you have enchanted weapons that you only use occasionally (such as weapons with Soul Trap or Paralyze enchantments), those are good choices as well.

Ranged combat: Always keep a bow in your Favorites list—even mages may need to fall back on it when battling dragons. If you're primarily focused on Archery, you may want to Favorite specific types of arrows as well—your weakest for dispatching standard enemies and your best for dragons or a particularly dangerous boss.

Spellcasting: Tag your favorite offensive and defensive spells, including your best Healing spell. Warriors should tag a Cloak spell to make sure they remember to cast it; Thieves should tag Invisibility and Muffle, and mages should tag all the key elements of their arsenal.

Shouts and powers: Don't forget to add Shouts and powers to your Favorites list! Your Racial power and Standing Stone power are both essential. Also tag the Shouts you use most frequently.

Armor and outfits: Depending on your play style, you may find it helpful to Favorite armor or sets of clothing as well. Thieves in particular may find it useful to Favorite a set of armor or clothing to use when sneaking and another to switch back to if you're discovered!

Items: Tag a set of healing potions as a Favorite so you can quickly swig them in combat without frantically fiddling with the inventory during a fraught battle. Warriors may want to do the same with stamina potions and mages with Magicka potions.

Activities: Don't forget to Favorite items depending on your current activity. If you're exploring a dungeon, you may want to Favorite a torch or staff for light. When hunting for a hidden treasure, Favorite the treasure map for quick reference.

The Nords have long practiced a unique, spiritual form of magic known as “the Way of the Voice.” Nords consider themselves to be the children of the sky, and their breath and voice are their vital essence. Through the use of the Voice, this power can be articulated into a Thu’um, or Shout. Use Shouts to sharpen blades, strike enemies at a distance, or command time to stand still. Masters of the Voice are known as Tongues, and their power is legendary. The most powerful Tongues cannot speak without causing destruction and must remain gagged at all times, communicating through sign language and the scribing of runes.

NOTE The Words of Power used in Shouts are actual words from the ancient language of the dragons; for example, the Kyne’s Peace Shout invokes the Words for “Kyne” “Peace” “Trust.” You will learn these Words in context from ancient inscriptions found on Word Walls throughout Skyrim. To learn more about the meaning behind these words and to read translated versions of the inscriptions, see “The Language of Dragons,” beginning on page 1096.

The Rule of Thu’um

A Shout is the utterance of one or more Words of Power in order to achieve a specific magical effect. Each Shout has a unique effect, such as summoning or commanding a creature, striking foes with a blast of force to stun or disarm them, or calling down a powerful lightning storm. You should frequently use these powerful special abilities; as the Dragonborn, you have an incredible gift that few heroes have ever possessed!

There are some important general points to remember regarding Shouts:

Each Shout consists of three Words of Power.

You will learn the vast majority of these Words by absorbing them, one at a time, from Word Walls found throughout Skyrim. A few Shouts are also taught to you during the Main Quest, mostly by the Greybeards of High Hrothgar. You always collect Words of Power in the order of the three-word final phrase, so it doesn’t matter which Word Wall you visit first.

After you learn a Word, you must unlock it, which requires a Dragon Soul. You can only obtain Dragon Souls by slaying dragons. Since the return of the dragons only begins in earnest after Main Quest: Dragon Rising, you must complete that quest in order to begin unlocking Words and using Shouts.

You need one Dragon Soul for each Word you want to unlock. You can begin using a Shout after learning and unlocking only its first Word, but each additional Word allows you to invoke a more powerful version of the Shout.

Do you know all three Words for five Shouts? Then you’ll need to slay and absorb the souls of 15 dragons to fully unlock them all. That’s a tall order, so consider carefully which Shouts you really need, and spend your Dragon Souls wisely. For example, the Aura Whisper Shout (which tracks a foe’s movement) is great for an assassin but is less useful for a berserker who simply charges into the fray.

Shouts can be added to your Favorites, making switching between them (and employing them for different situations) quick and easy.

Each Shout has up to three levels, corresponding to the Words of Power you’ve unlocked:

- ❖ Level 1: Tap the button. One word. Exhale. This is the weakest Shout but takes the shortest amount of time to recharge.
- ❖ Level 2: Briefly hold, then release the button. Two words. Inhale, then exhale. This is the midlevel Shout.
- ❖ Level 3: Hold the button. Three words. Inhale, inhale, then exhale. This is the highest level Shout and the most powerful, but it takes the longest to recharge.

The longer you hold the Shout button, the more powerful the shout. When you bellow a Shout, you drain your Thu’um (Shouting power), which slowly rebuilds across your compass. When the compass changes from a pulsing blue back to its regular gray, you can Shout again.

TIP If you don’t have (or haven’t unlocked) all three Words, holding the button uses the strongest Shout you’ve unlocked.

A Shout Example: Frost Breath

You begin by learning “Fo” (Frost), the first Word of this Shout, from a Word Wall. After scouring the lands for the second syllable “Krah” (Cold) and the third syllable “Diin” (Freeze), you spend three Dragon Souls to unlock all three Words. You can now use the weak, average, or strong version of this Shout.

Weak Shout: Bellow “Fo!” by tapping the Shout button.

Medium Shout: Bellow “Fo, Krah!” by briefly holding the Shout button, then releasing it.

Strong Shout: Bellow “Fo, Krah, Diin!” by holding the Shout button.

Words to Live By

Some Word Walls are set in Skyrim’s exterior, such as this Wall at Shearpoint.

But most Word Walls are hidden in long-forgotten dungeons, such as the Wall in Labyrinthian.

Dawnguard and Dragonborn Word Walls are sometimes new to Skyrim’s exterior, such as this Wall at Arcwind Point.

But most are learned during or after your time in other realms or during specific quests, such as this dragon summon in the Soul Cairn.

There are three additional Shouts to obtain during Dawnguard, and four additional Shouts to obtain during Dragonborn.

This section lists all of the available Shouts. Each Shout's name is followed by its three Words, the locations where you can learn them, any quests related to those locations, and some notes and tips on using each Shout. A complete table of Shouts with detailed statistics appears at the end of this section.

Animal Allegiance

Words of Power: Raan (Animal), Mir (Allegiance), Tah (Pack)

Word Wall Locations:

Angarvunde (the Rift): Dungeon Quest: Medresi Dran and the Wandering Dead

Ancient's Ascent (Falkreath Hold): This is a dragon lair.

Ysggramor's Tomb (Winterhold Hold): The Companions Quest: Glory of the Dead

Description: A Shout for help from the beasts of the wild, who come to fight in your defense.

Notes: This Shout "charms" all nearby animals, who fight for you for a short time. You can attack them without breaking this effect, so it's easy to kill them before the Shout wears off. Note that this Shout does not affect summoned creatures (like Familiars) or creatures already under the control of someone else (like animals controlled by Spriggans).

Aura Whisper

Words of Power: Laas (Life), Yah (Seek), Nir (Hunt)

Word Wall Locations:

Northwind Summit (the Rift): This is a dragon lair.

Valthume (the Reach): Dungeon Quest: Evil in Waiting. This is a dragon priest's lair.

Volunruud (the Pile): Dark Brotherhood Quest: The Silence Has Been Broken; Dungeon Quest: Silenced Tongues

Description: Your Voice is not a Shout but a whisper, revealing the life forces of any and all.

Notes: For a short time, this Shout allows you to see an aura around all living or undead creatures, even through walls. The Shout is silent, so it won't create a sound that would cause enemies to detect you. Great for thieves, archers, and assassins!

Battle Fury

Words of Power: Mid (Loyal), Vur (Valor), Shaan (Inspire)

Word Wall locations: Vahlok's Tomb (Solstheim): Only accessible during Solstheim Side Quest: Lost Legacy.

Description: Your Thu'um enchants your nearby allies' weapons, allowing them to attack faster.

Notes: This Shout increases the attack speed of your allies, including followers and summoned creatures. The second and third words increase its potency, allowing your companions to attack up to 70% faster—and thus do up to 70% more damage for its duration. A great choice if you find yourself with several followers, or ally with a high-damage melee follower.

Become Ethereal

Words of Power: Feim (Fade), Zii (Spirit), Gron (Bind)

Word Wall Locations:

Ironbind Barrow (Winterhold Hold)

Lost Valley Redoubt (the Reach)

Ustengrav (Hjaalmarch): Main Quest: The Horn of Jurgen Windcaller

Description: The Thu'um reaches out to the Void, changing your form to one that cannot harm or be harmed.

Notes: While Ethereal, you are invulnerable, you can't attack or cast spells, and you recover Magicka and Stamina. This Shout gives you a few seconds to safely retreat or reposition yourself during a difficult battle. You can also use it to bypass most traps without fear of taking damage.

Bend Will

Words of Power: Gol (Stone/Earth), Hah (Mind), Dov (Dragon)

Word Wall locations:

Saering's Watch (Solstheim): The first Word of this Shout is always learned here.

Hermaeus Mora (Apocrypha): The second and third Words of this Shout are always learned from this Daedric Prince, during Dragonborn Main Quest: The Gardener of Men.

Description: Your voice bends the very stones to your will. As it gains power, animals, people, and even dragons must do your bidding.

Notes: The first Word of this Shout is used during Dragonborn Main Quest: Cleansing the Stones to remove the traces of Miraak's construction around the ancient All-Makers Stones of Solstheim. The second Word forces those around you (neutral characters and creatures) to ally themselves against an enemy you're fighting for 30 seconds. But the third Word of this Shout is the most precious, enabling you to tame and ride dragons! Consult page 108 for more information.

Call Dragon

Words of Power: Od (Snow), Ah (Hunter), Viing (Wing)

Word Wall Locations:

None. You learn this Shout during Main Quest: The Fallen.

Description: Odahviing! Hear my Voice and come forth. I summon you in my time of need.

Notes: This Shout summons the dragon Odahviing to battle during Main Quest: The Fallen. After you complete the main quest, you can summon Odahviing to aid you (in most exterior areas). Note that this Shout has no effect unless all three words are used.

Call of Valor

Words of Power: Hun (Hero), Kaal (Champion), Zoor (Legend)

Word Wall Locations:

None. You learn this Shout at the end of the main quest.

Description: The valiant of Sovngarde hear your Voice, and journey beyond space and time to lend their aid.

Notes: Each level of this Shout summons a different hero from Sovngarde, each with unique equipment and abilities. Choose the one that best meets your needs for the current battle.

"Hun" summons Gormlaith Golden-Hilt, who wields a bow, sword, shield, and a few Shouts.

"Hun, Kaal" summons Felldir the Old, who wields a greatsword and has a number of damaging Shouts.

"Hun, Kaal, Zoor" summons Hakon One-Eye, who wields a battleaxe and uses melee Shouts.

Clear Skies

Words of Power: Lok (Sky), Vah (Spring), Koor (Summer)

Word Wall Locations:

None. You learn this Shout from the Greybeards during Main Quest: The Throat of the World.

Description: Skyrim itself yields before the Thu'um, as you clear away fog and inclement weather.

Notes: This clears the weather and disperses fog, and it dispels poison gas traps.

The Elder Scrolls V

SKYRIM

TRAINING PART 2: COMBAT, DEVELOPMENT, AND CRAFTING

PRIMA OFFICIAL GAME GUIDE

WWW.PRIMAGAMES.COM

Cyclone

Words of Power: Ven (Wind), Gaar (Unleash/Release), Nos (Strike)

Word Wall locations:

- Benkongerike (Solstheim)
- White Ridge Barrow (Solstheim)
- Kolbjorn Barrow (Solstheim): During Solstheim Side Quest: Unearthed

Description: Your Thu'um creates a whirling cyclone that sows chaos among your enemies.

Notes: This Shout conjures up a maelstrom of wind that departs your presence, striking enemies and throwing them up into the skies, where they're inflicted with blasts of wind and damage as they land. The pain caused and range increases as you learn the Words. This is helpful when facing foes you wish to keep from close combat (like Giants) or multiple foes bunched together.

Disarm

Words of Power: Zun (Weapon), Haal (Hand), Viik (Defeat)

Word Wall Locations:

- Eldersblood Peak (Hjaalmarch): This is a dragon lair.
- Silverdrift Lair (the Pale)
- Snow Veil Sanctum (Winterhold Hold): Thieves Guild Quest: Speaking with Silence

Description: Shout defies steel as you rip the weapon from an opponent's grasp.

Notes: This Shout only affects enemies up to a specific level, with higher levels of the Shout allowing you to disarm higher-level foes. Refer to the chart at the end of this section for details. Note that some enemies cannot be disarmed.

Dismaying Shout

Words of Power: Faas (Fear), Ru (Run), Maar (Terror)

Word Wall Locations:

- Dead Crone Rock (the Reach): Daedric Quest: Pieces of the Past
- Labyrinthian (Hjaalmarch): In Shalidor's Maze
- Lost Tongue Overlook (the Rift): This is a dragon lair.

Description: And the weak shall fear the Thu'um, and flee in terror.

Notes: This Shout only affects enemies up to a specific level, with higher levels of the Shout allowing you to affect higher-level foes. See the chart at the end of this section for details.

Dragonrend

Words of Power: Joor (Mortal), Zah (Finite), Frul (Temporary)

Word Wall Locations:

- None. You learn this shout during Main Quest: Alduin's Bane.

Description: Your Voice lashes out at a dragon's very soul, forcing the beast to land.

Notes: This Shout is extremely useful for fighting Alduin or other dragons if you prefer to face them in melee combat.

Drain Vitality

Words of Power: Gaan (Stamina), Lah (Magicka), Haas (Health)

Word Wall locations:

- Arcwind Point (the Rift)
- Dimhollow Crypt (the Pale)
- The Frozen lake (Forgotten vale): This is a large rock, rather than a Word Wall.

Description: Coax both magical and mortal energies from your hapless opponent.

Notes: This Shout absorbs Stamina, then Magicka and Stamina, then finally Health, Magicka, and Stamina from a foe or character you hit with it (5 points per second, for 30 seconds). You learn this Shout one word at a time via Word Walls, in the usual manner. It allows you to claw back energies from foes to endure a long combat and lessen your dependency on healing magic and potions, while at the same hindering your foe considerably.

Dragon Aspect

Words of Power: Mul (Strength), Qah (Armor), Diiv (Wyrn)

Word Wall locations:

- Raven Rock Mine (Solstheim): During Solstheim Side Quest: The Final Descent
- Temple of Miraak (Solstheim): During Dragonborn Main Quest: The Temple of Miraak
- Waking Dreams of a Starless Sky (Apocrypha): During Dragonborn Main Quest: At the Summit of Apocrypha

Description: Once a day, take on the mighty aspect of a dragon, delivering colossal blows and possessing an armored hide and more powerful Shouts.

Notes: You are bound in ethereal armor for 300 seconds, and once you learn two or three Words, an Ancient Dragonborn appears by you when your Health is reduced to half or lower. Your Armor Rating (+25) and Power Attacks are increased (+25%), and at two Words, +25% Fire and Frost Resistance is available, as well as an increased Armor Rating (+100). The third Word reduces your Shout regeneration time by 20%. You may use this powerful Thu'um only once per day.

Elemental Fury

Words of Power: Su (Air), Grah (Battle), Dun (Grace)

Word Wall Locations:

- Dragontooth Crater (the Reach): This is a dragon lair.
- Kilcreath Ruins (Haafingar): Daedric Quest: The Break of Dawn
- Shriekwind Bastion (Falkreath Hold)

Description: The Thu'um imbues your arms with the speed of wind, allowing for faster weapon strikes.

Notes: This Shout lasts only a short time, but increases your damage output by 30-70%. Time it well, and you can do some serious damage.

Fire Breath

Words of Power: Yol (Fire), Toor (Inferno), Shul (Sun)

Word Wall Locations:

- Dustman's Cairn (Whiterun Hold): The Companions Quest: Proving Honor
- Sunderstone Gorge (Falkreath Hold)
- Throat of the World (Whiterun Hold): Main Quest: The Throat of the World.

Description: Inhale air, exhale flame, and behold the Thu'um as inferno.

Notes: Fire Breath does high damage in a quick burst and sets enemies on fire. Great against foes already susceptible to fire damage (such as Vampires or Frost Atronachs).

Frost Breath

Words of Power: Fo (Frost), Krah (Cold), Diin (Freeze)

Word Wall Locations:

- Bonestrewn Crest (Eastmarch): This is a dragon lair.
- Folgunthur (Hjaalmarch): Side Quest: Forbidden Legend
- Skyborn Altar (Hjaalmarch): This is a dragon lair.

Description: Your breath is winter, you Thu'um a blizzard.

Notes: Frost Breath does about the same damage over time as Fire Breath but slows your enemies instead of setting them on fire. If your foes are more susceptible to frost than flame (such as Fire Atronachs), or if you can take advantage of the slowing effect, this is a good choice.

Ice Form

Words of Power: liz (Ice), Slen (Flesh), Nus (Statue)

Word Wall Locations:

- Frostmere Crypt (the Pale): Dungeon Quest: The Pale Lady
- Mount Anoth (Winterhold Hold): This is a dragon lair.
- Saarthal (Winterhold Hold): College of Winterhold Quest: Under Saarthal; Side Quest: Forbidden Legend

Description: Your Thu'um freezes an opponent solid.

Notes: This Shout takes the form of a wave of frost that freezes your enemies solid. Foes struck by this Shout are encased in ice and effectively paralyzed, and they take frost damage over time. If an enemy encased in ice is struck by an attack, the ice shatters, allowing them to recover. Use this Shout to take one or more foes out of the fight temporarily or to buy yourself a few free attacks before they can recover.

Kyne's Peace

Words of Power: Kaan (Kyne), Drem (Peace), Ov (Trust)

Word Wall Locations:

Ragnvald (the Reach): This is a dragon priest's lair.

Rannveig's Fast (Whiterun Hold)

Shroud Hearth Barrow (The Rift): Dungeon Quest: Wilhelm's Scream

Description: The Voice soothes wild beasts, who lose their desire to fight or flee.

Notes: This Shout only affects wild animals, with the radius and duration of the Shout increasing at higher levels. This allows you to navigate animal dens without fighting or pacify a pack of animals before picking them off one by one.

Marked for Death

Words of Power: Krii (Kill), Lun (Leech), Aus (Suffer)

Word Wall Locations:

Autumnwatch Tower (the Rift): This is a dragon lair.

Dark Brotherhood Sanctuary (Falkreath Hold)

Forsaken Cave (the Pale): Side Quest: The White Phial

Description: Speak, and let your Voice herald doom, as an opponent's armor and life force are weakened.

Notes: This Shout saps your foes' armor and causes damage over time, allowing you to kill them more quickly. Good to use on bosses.

Slow Time

Words of Power: Tiid (Time), Klo (Sand), Ul (Eternity)

Word Wall Locations:

Hag's End (the Reach): Dark Brotherhood Radiant Quest: The Feeble Fortune

Korvanjund (The Pale): Civil War Quest: The Jagged Crown

Labyrinthian (Hjaalmarch): College of Winterhold Quest: The Staff of Magnus; this is a Dragon Priest's lair.

Description: Shout at time, and command it to obey, as the world around you stands still.

Notes: This Shout buys you extra time, which you can use for any purpose: to rush in and assault a helpless enemy, to line up a perfect sniper shot, or to easily outrun any foe. Incredibly useful!

Soul Tear

Words of Power: Rii (Essence), Vaaz (Tear), Zol (Zombie)

Word Wall Locations: None, the Soul Tear is learned one

Word at a time, every time you succeed in summoning Durnehviir to Tamriel using the Summon Durnehviir Shout (below). Summon this dragon three times to learn all three words, expend three Dragon Souls, and claim this Shout as your own. Consult Side Quest: Durnehviir (page 564) for more information.

Description: Your Thu'um cuts through flesh and shatters souls, commanding the will of the fallen.

Notes: Does 300 damage, soul-traps your target, and reanimates slain foes for 60 seconds. A truly devastating Shout, and one that can critically wound even the hardest of foes. Slain foes are resurrected within the Shout's blast radius and can augment your fighting prowess considerably. However, this Shout has no effect until you learn all three words. Simply yelling "Rii vaaz!" may get you funny looks but no devastating combat victories.

Storm Call

Words of Power: Strun (Storm), Bah (Wrath), Qo (Lightning)

Word Wall Locations:

Forelhost (the Rift): This is a Dragon Priest's lair.

High Gate Ruins (the Pale): This is a Dragon Priest's lair.

Skuldafn (Other Realm): Main Quest: The World-Eater's Eyrie. This is a Dragon Priest's lair.

Description: A Shout to the skies, a cry to the clouds, that awakens the destructive force of Skyrim's lightning.

Notes: Summons a thunderstorm with powerful lightning that lashes out at anything and anyone. Only works outdoors. It's fantastic against dragons, but be careful—the lightning can and will kill civilians and your Followers.

Summon Durnehviir

Words of Power: Dur (Curse), Neh (Never), Viir (Dying)

Word Wall Locations: None. You must enter the Soul Cairn, defeat Durnehviir in combat, meet this undead dragon as you depart the Boneyard, and learn all three Words from him so you can summon him in Tamriel. See Side Quest: Durnehviir (page 564) for more information.

Description: Durnehviir! Hear my voice and come forth from the Soul Cairn. I summon you in my time of need.

Notes: Remember to expend three Dragon Souls to learn all parts of the Word and summon the dragon. Simply yelling "Dur neh!" won't break the bonds holding the dragon in the Soul Cairn. In addition to summoning a powerful dragon to fight for you, this Shout also advances your pact with Durnehviir: each time you summon him, he teaches you the next Word of the Soul Tear Shout (above).

Throw Voice

Words of Power: Zul (Voice), Mey (Fool), Gut (Far)

Word Wall Locations:

Shearpoint (the Pale): This is a dragon lair and a Dragon Priest's lair.

Description: The Thu'um is heard, but its source unknown, fooling those into seeking it out.

Notes: This Shout produces no sound at your location, instead throwing your voice to the target. Enemies will detect the sound and investigate, allowing you to lure them away from their posts or into traps or other hazards. This is immensely useful when sneaking. Throw Voice is unique in that its Word Wall teaches you all three Words of the Shout.

Unrelenting Force

Words of Power: Fus (Force), Ro (Balance), Dah (Push)

Word Wall Locations:

Bleak Falls Barrow (Falkreath Hold): Main Quest: Bleak Falls Barrow; Side Quest: The Golden Claw

High Hrothgar (Whiterun Hold): Main Quest: The Way of the Voice. You learn both the second and third Words from the Greybeards.

Description: Your Voice is raw power, pushing aside anything—or anyone—who stands in your path.

Notes: This Shout staggers enemies or sends them flying, and does some light damage. Aim carefully to push your foes into traps, or follow up with a swift melee or ranged attack to take advantage of the stagger.

Whirlwind Sprint

Words of Power: Wuld (Whirlwind), Nah (Fury), Kest (Tempest)

Word Wall Locations:

Dead Men's Respite (Hjaalmarch): The Bards College Quest: Tending the Flames

High Hrothgar (Whiterun Hold): Main Quest: The Way of the Voice. Learned from the Greybeards.

Volskygge (Haafingar): This is a Dragon Priest's lair.

Description: The Thu'um rushes forward, carrying you in its wake with the speed of a tempest.

Notes: This surge forward is useful for reaching otherwise-inaccessible ledges or platforms.

Other Powers and Abilities

Powers

As Dragonborn, Shouts are your most numerous type of power, but there are many other powers and abilities that you can acquire during your time in Skyrim. These are listed in the following table, and include:

Racial powers, also described in this chapter (page 7).

Standing Stone powers, also described in this chapter (page 93).

Vampire powers, also described in this chapter (page 56).

Werewolf powers, also described in this chapter (page 62).

Sacred Stone powers, also described in this chapter (page 94).

Apocrypha powers, also described in this chapter (page 96).

Nightingale powers, also described at the end of the Thieves Guild questline, on page 300.

A Dark Brotherhood power, your reward for Dark Brotherhood Quest: Bound Until Death, as described on page 324.

All Powers are found in the Magic > Powers part of your Inventory Menu. Equip a power by assigning it to the button or key you use for your Dragon Shout.

Catching a Disease: Dirty Vermin!

Clawed by a Hagraven? Then you may have Brain Rot!

Adventuring is dangerous, especially when battling diseased foes. Every time one of these enemies strikes you, there is a chance that you may contract the disease they carry. If you have a resistance to disease (thanks to your race or equipment), this chance is lessened, but under most circumstances, the chance of catching something is around 5% to 10% per wound you suffer. The following table lists the possible diseases, their effects, and how you can contract them.

✓	NAME	EFFECT	CONTRACTED FROM
<input type="checkbox"/>	Ataxia	Lockpicking & Pickpocket 25% harder	Traps, Skeevers

Curing a Disease: By Potion

Drinking a Cure Disease potion is the fastest and easiest way to rid yourself of pox. You can buy these potions in many shops, find them in the wild, or make them yourself.

Curing Disease: The Shrines of Skyrim

The Temple of the Eight Divines in Solitude. Only Talos—outlawed by the Thalmor—is not worshiped here.

Most people in Skyrim follow the religion of the Divines. Shrines to the Divines can be found throughout the land:

in cities, in settlements, and in the wilderness. Their locations are detailed throughout the Atlas. Praying at a Shrine cures any diseases you may have and confers a unique blessing that lasts eight hours. Only one blessing can be active at a time; praying at a different Shrine will remove any prior blessings.

The worship of Talos is a major factor in the civil war that currently rages across Skyrim. His worship has been outlawed in areas controlled by the empire, though Shrines to Talos may still appear in Stormcloak strongholds. If the Stormcloaks are victorious, Shrines to Talos will return to the cities of Skyrim.

CAUTION

Akatosh: Cure all diseases, +10% Magicka Regeneration Rate

Arkay: Cure all diseases, +25 Health

Auriel: Cure all diseases, +10 Archery

Azura: Cure all diseases, +10 Magic Resistance

Boethiah: Cure all diseases, +10 One-Handed damage

Dibella: Cure all diseases, +10 Speechcraft

Julianos: Cure all diseases, +25 Magicka

Kynareth: Cure all diseases, +25 Stamina

Mara: Cure all diseases, +10% healing effects

Mephala: Cure all diseases, +10 Better Prices (Bartering)

Nocturnal: Cure all diseases, +10 Sneak

Stendarr: Cure all diseases, +10% blocking effectiveness

Talos: Cure all diseases, +20% Shout recovery

Zenithar: Cure all diseases, 10% better prices (bartering)

Curing Disease: Additional Shrines of Skyrim

You can also receive blessings at two rare shrines if you know where to look:

Shrine to Auriel: There are only two of these shrines believed to exist in the whole of Skyrim. One is found at the great Chantry of Auri-el, a Snow Elf Sanctuary within Darkfall Cave. The other is in the Inner Sanctum, at the pinnacle of the Forgotten Vale. Check the Atlas for exact location information.

Shrine to Nocturnal: This is an effigy of Nocturnal herself, found in the Ragged Flagon Cistern area once you complete Thieves Guild Quest: Darkness Returns. See page 300 for details on that quest.

NOTE The process of transforming into a vampire or werewolf will also cure any diseases you might have... though those diseases are probably the least of your concerns!

Curing Disease: Shrines of Solstheim

If you visit the dusty realm of southern Solstheim and dock at Raven Rock, you can inspect and enter the town's temple. Inside are shrines to Daedric entities worshipped by the Dunmer: Azura, Boethiah, and Mephala. Check the Atlas for exact location information.

Curing Disease: Other Means

The Vigilants of Stendarr are a relatively new religious order. Zealous followers of the god of justice and mercy, they seek to wipe out abominations like vampires and werewolves and to purge the land of Daedra worship. If you encounter them in one of their strongholds (like the Hall of the Vigilant [3.09] or Stendarr's Beacon [9.46]), or elsewhere in the wilderness, you can ask them to cure your diseases.

VAMPIRISM

NOTE This section includes changes to Vampirism from the Dawnguard add-on. If you do not have Dawnguard, note that your resistances and powers will be slightly different, and appearing in public as a Stage 4 Vampire is considered a crime.

Contracting Vampirism

A Vampire, attacking with Drain Life. Note the distinct complexion and garb.

Facing those who feed on the blood of the living presents several perils. In addition to their terrifying visage, zombified thralls, and skill at both melee and magical combat, vampires have a unique Drain Life ability. This can rapidly sap your health while restoring theirs each time it strikes you, and it gives you a 10 percent chance of contracting Sanguinare Vampiris, a disease that will eventually cause you to join their ranks.

After any battle with vampires, check your Active Effects list. If you see Sanguinare Vampiris, quickly drink a Cure Disease potion or make haste to a shrine for healing. As the disease runs its course, you'll receive a message at twilight that reads, "You feel a strange thirst as the sun sets," and you'll receive a second notification the following dawn that says, "You feel weaker as the sun rises." After three days of this, the disease takes over completely, and you transform into a vampire!

Remember that being infected by a "regular" vampire leads only to normal Vampirism. To become a Vampire Lord, you must be bitten by Lord Harkon or a member of his bloodline (see below).

Wanting to give yourself over to this disease? Then seek out a Vampire habitat, such as Movarth's Lair, in Hjaalmarch Hold.

Stages of Vampirism

Becoming a vampire (before and after) changes your appearance dramatically.

As a vampire, you must feed on human blood! Vampirism has four distinct stages, based on how long it has been since you last fed. The more time has elapsed, the more severe the advantages and disadvantages of this condition become. To survive as a vampire, you should know exactly what these benefits and drawbacks are.

Advantages

Immune to disease: You are completely immune to disease. Any diseases you had upon becoming a vampire are instantly cured.

Immune to poison: You are completely immune to all forms of poison.

Champion of the Night: Illusion spells that you cast are 25 percent more powerful.

Nightstalker's Footsteps: You are 25 percent harder to detect while Sneaking.

Resist Frost: The stage of your vampirism adds to your Frost Resistance:

Stage 1 vampirism: Resist Frost 20%

Stage 2 vampirism: Resist Frost 30%

Stage 3 vampirism: Resist Frost 40%

Stage 4 vampirism: Resist Frost 50%

Disadvantages

Hatred: Citizens of Skyrim and guards will not recognize you as a vampire but may (25 percent of the time) remark that you're looking distinctly "pale" or "hungry." However, even when vampirism has fully consumed you, they will not attack you on sight.

Weakness to Sunlight: When outdoors between the hours of 5:00 a.m. and 7:00 p.m., your Health, Magicka, and Stamina will not regenerate. Their maximum values are also reduced:

Stage 1 vampirism: Health, Magicka, and Stamina are reduced by 15 points.

Stage 2 vampirism: Health, Magicka, and Stamina are reduced by 30 points.

Stage 3 vampirism: Health, Magicka, and Stamina are reduced by 45 points.

Stage 4 vampirism: Health, Magicka, and Stamina are reduced by 60 points.

The Elder Scrolls V

SKYRIM

TRAINING PART 2: COMBAT, DEVELOPMENT, AND CRAFTING

PRIMA OFFICIAL GAME GUIDE

WWW.PRIMAGAMES.COM

Weakness to Fire: The stage of your vampirism also gives you a Weakness to Fire:

Stage 1 vampirism: Weakness to Fire 20%

Stage 2 vampirism: Weakness to Fire 30%

Stage 3 vampirism: Weakness to Fire 40%

Stage 4 vampirism: Weakness to Fire 50%

Powers

As your vampirism progresses, you gain an increasingly powerful set of additional abilities.

Stage 1 Vampirism

Vampire's Sight: For one minute, you can see better in dark environments. Use this power as often as you like. It has no cost.

Vampiric Drain: A special Destruction spell, Vampiric Drain absorbs 2 Health per second from your target.

Vampire's Servant: Once per day, you can reanimate a dead creature to fight for you for 60 seconds. Only works on creatures of Level 6 or less.

Stage 2 Vampirism

All powers from Stage 1, plus:

Vampire's Seduction: Creatures and people up to Level 10 won't fight or flee for 30 seconds.

Vampiric Drain: Increases to 3 Health drained per second.

Vampire's Servant: Now affects creatures of Level 13 or lower.

Stage 3 Vampirism

All powers from Stages 1 and 2, plus:

Vampiric Drain: Increases to 4 Health drained per second.

Vampire's Servant: Now affects creatures of Level 21 or lower.

Stage 4 Vampirism

All powers from Stages 1, 2, and 3, plus:

Embrace of Shadows: Once per day, you can invoke this power to gain Vampire's Sight and Invisibility for 3 minutes.

Vampiric Drain: Increases to 5 Health drained per second.

Vampire's Servant: Now affects creatures of Level 30 or lower.

Un-Living as a Vampire

Maintaining Vampirism: Resting

Tomb, sweet tomb: Gain an additional benefit from sleeping in a coffin.

All vampires may use coffins to sleep in. There are benefits for sealing yourself away in a wooden tomb:

Sleeping in a coffin grants you all your usual resting bonuses.

You receive the Vampiric Blood bonus: This grants you 10 percent Magic Resistance for 12 hours.

Vampires can also sleep in a bed as most humans do, and they receive the usual resting bonuses. However, the Vampiric Blood bonus will not be given. If you aren't a vampire but want to see what the inside of a coffin looks like, you can sleep in one but you only receive the usual resting bonuses.

Maintaining Vampirism: Feeding

Feed your insatiable appetite using Vampire's Seduction.

Locate these ornate potions of blood as a bottled alternative to fresh blood.

The Vampire's "Cattle" of Castle Volkihar are here to serve you and your thirst.

As a vampire, you can stave off the disadvantages of your new form by feeding. Feasting on the blood of the living can be tricky. There are four basic approaches:

Sleeping Victims: Find a sleeping human (citizens and guards tend to be the easiest, though a sleeping soldier, bandit, or warlock will work as well); then activate them to feed on their blood. Doing so reverts your disease back to Stage 1.

Vampire's Seduction: If you succeed in using this power on a person, you can feed on them even if they're awake. This tactic works well on civilians, as all but the weakest foes are too high a level for Vampire's Seduction to affect them.

Blood Potion: As an alternative to feeding, you can also drink a Blood Potion, which has the same effect. Alas, these are rare; only a handful can be found in Castle Volkihar, although you may receive a few more as rewards for the Vampire Radiant Quests. They can't be Crafted.

Vampire Cattle: If you join with the vampires of Castle Volkihar, one of the benefits is a supply of "cattle," thralls kept in squalid conditions and brought out during feasting sessions. You can sate your hunger on them whenever you wish, without fear or shunning.

Feeding Is Frowned Upon: Criminality

It is important to know how the guards of each Hold are likely to treat you if you're caught feeding. In general, the following applies:

If you feed on a citizen or guard and the victim detects you, this is seen as a Crime (Bounty +40).

If you feed on a citizen or guard and someone else (who isn't a friend or ally) detects you, the same Bounty accrues.

There are some exceptions, however:

If your Sneak skill is high enough, you may not be detected.

If your victim is under the influence of Vampire's Seduction, they won't consider your teeth and slobbering a crime. However, if someone else (not a friend or ally) sees you, the Bounty increase occurs.

If you're feeding on the Vampire Cattle in Castle Volkihar, they won't object to your bloodthirsty appetite.

Life as a Vampire

The life of a vampire is far less arduous if the lands are plunged into permanent darkness....

Aside from the panic and hostility you may create during bouts of bloodletting hunger, the main problems you encounter are your weaknesses to sunlight and fire. Minimize these risks by exploring subterranean catacombs and dungeons during the daytime, and prowl the countryside at night. You may also want to draw on the power of the Lady Stone (see Standing Stones, page 93), which helps to offset the lack of normal Health or Stamina regeneration during daylight.

However, once you've completed the Dawnguard Main Quest and are able to notch a Bloodcursed Arrow to Auriel's Bow and fire it into the sun, you can create a perpetual darkness across Skyrim, effectively negating the ill effects of daylight entirely! Find out more on page 549.

As a vampire, you receive several bonuses that improve your stealth abilities, making vampirism a blessing for Thieves, Archers, and Assassins. You will also find it significantly easier to explore Falmer Hives (since you're immune to the poisons that they, their Chaurus, and their spiders use), Nordic Ruins (since the Draugr use Frost Magic almost exclusively), and Vampire Lairs (since you no longer need fear contracting the disease). You also have a dramatic advantage when fighting frost-breathing dragons, though you have a corresponding weakness to fire-breathing dragons. Keep some potions of Fire Resistance on hand, just in case!

PRINCES AMONG THE UNDEAD: VOLKIHAR VAMPIRES

A Volkihar Vampire Lord, in all his powerful glory.

Lord Harkon is the progenitor of the Volkihar Vampire bloodline. If, during the course of the Dawnguard Main Quest, you agree to accept his "gift," his bite imbues you with an incredible and terrifying new aspect: In addition to all the standard effects of vampirism, Volkihar Vampires can assume the powerful Vampire Lord Form.

Becoming a Volkihar Vampire

During Dawnguard Main Quest: Bloodline, you'll enter Castle Volkihar for the first time and gain an audience with Lord Harkon. A conversation with the vampire king ends with Harkon offering you the power of vampirism. Accept, and you ally yourself with the vampires and become a Volkihar Vampire. This is the usual way to achieve this transformation for the first time.

If you were already a werewolf, Harkon's gift purges you of Lycanthropy. If you desire to become a werewolf again, speak with Aela the Huntress of the Companions, and consult the Werewolf section later in this chapter.

Lord Harkon's daughter, Serana, can also turn you into a Volkihar Vampire under certain conditions. This is helpful if you side with the Dawnguard but later want to rule the night as a Volkihar nightstalker!

During Dawnguard Main Quest: Chasing Echoes, if you aren't a vampire, Serana offers to turn you into a Volkihar Vampire so you're able to enter the Soul Cairn without suffering any ill effects. This is one more way to transform.

After you complete Dawnguard Main Quest: Kindred Judgment, Serana will turn you into a Volkihar Vampire if you request it, provided you haven't ordered Serana to cure herself of vampirism.

You can be cured of this strain of vampirism, too. If you crave it again, speak to Harkon or Serana to restore your Volkihar Vampire powers.

Vampire Lord Form

Overview

Fear strikes Falkreath Hold as a Vampire Lord flits silently across the still water of Lake Ilinalta....

Becoming a floating, eight-foot demonic vampire with incredible powers is certainly helpful when dealing with enemies, but it has its drawbacks—for example, you won't be bartering at shops. But there are some important elements to this form you must be aware of:

Remember that "base" vampires don't have the correct bloodline to call upon the power of the Vampire Lord Form, so don't expect to become a Lord if you've been infected by them. You must become a Volkihar Vampire in order to use this ability.

The Vampire Lord Form is a transformation state, much like the Beast Form for Werewolves. You access it in the Magic menu by selecting Magic > Powers > Vampire Lord. It's a good idea to make this a Favorite so you can quickly call upon it in the midst of combat. You continue to exist in your Vampire Lord form for as long as you wish (unlike Beast Form). To transform back, access your Favorites menu, select "Revert Form," and invoke it.

You are fortunate that, upon returning to your regular form, all the weapons, armor, spells, and powers you've equipped are automatically reinstated.

Vampire Lord: Advantages

Your imposing posture and terrifying form are the least of your advantages as a Volkihar Vampire. When in Vampire Lord Form:

You retain all of the advantages associated with being a vampire (including the immunity to poison and disease and a resistance to frost).

You gain a Water Walking ability, enabling you to walk (or float) across the surface of any body of water. You're unable to swim while in this form.

Vampire Lord: Disadvantages

Your gangly frame and penchant for striking fear into the hearts of citizens across Skyrim can also be a hindrance. Here are the key problems associated with this form:

You retain all of the disadvantages of being a “base” vampire (including weaknesses to fire and sunlight).

You can't loot any corpses you slay.

You can't pick up or use any items you find. Since this includes keys, you may find your progress blocked in some dungeons.

You can't equip or use any of your normal weapons, spells, items, equipment, Shouts, or powers.

Your towering frame may have trouble fitting through some narrow passages and doors.

You can't speak with anyone, even your own vampire brethren.

Citizens of Skyrim are terrified of you; some of them flee, while the battle-hardened, brave, or foolish may stand their ground and attack you.

If anyone sees you transform to or from a Volkihar Vampire, the transformation is considered a Major Crime. Consult the Crime and Punishment section on page 64.

Vampire Lord: Powers

While in Vampire Lord Form, you have a variety of powers at your disposal. Most give you an advantage in combat and are divided into the following categories:

Abilities

These are general or basic movement options and strikes:

Revert Form: This allows you to change back to your human form.

Ascend and Descend: Press Sneak to switch between ground and hovering states. While on the ground, you can attack with powerful claws and bite attacks. When hovering, you can invoke Blood Magic spells (such as Drain Life). You can use Night Powers in either form.

Melee Attacks: When standing on the ground, you can rend the flesh of your foes with powerful claw attacks. Inflict a killing blow on your enemy with a power attack, and you perform a bite that devours them, snuffing out their life and draining their lifeblood.

◇ Drain Life is always equipped in your right hand and doesn't change. You can, however, choose any Blood Magic Spell to equip in your left hand (via the Favorites menu).

Night Powers: These special states are available no matter your combat state:

◇ You have innate knowledge of two Night Powers: Bats and Vampire's Sight.

◇ You can change the Night Power you are using through the Favorites menu.

NOTE Remember that you can practice some of these powers and learn about the benefits of vampirism by training under Lord Harkon as part of Dawnguard Main Quest: Power of the Blood.

Blood Magic: Drain Life

Suck the very life force from your foes to replenish your own.

Volkihar Vampires are particularly adept at draining the life essence from their foes; their Drain Life is significantly more powerful than the spell a “base” vampire uses. It has additional benefits too:

It automatically increases in strength based on your level.

Instead of a close-range concentration spell, it is now a long-range projectile spell that affects all targets near the point of impact.

It now affects undead. Only Daedra and Dwarven Automaton are immune to it.

You can empower it even further by drinking from the Bloodstone Chalice, an artifact you fill during the Dawnguard Main Quest of the same name. This effect, Blood of the Ancients, wears off after a few days. The following table details how powerful Drain Life can become:

✓	DRAIN LIFE PROGRESSION	DRAIN LIFE	DRAIN LIFE W/ BLOOD OF THE ANCIENTS	MAGICKA COST
	Level 10 or below	Inflicts 50 Damage and absorbs 15 Health from all targets in range.	Also absorbs 15 Magicka and Stamina.	18
	Levels 11–20	Inflicts 70 Damage and absorbs 17.5 Health from all targets in range.	Also absorbs 17.5 Magicka and Stamina.	18
	Levels 21–30	Inflicts 90 Damage and absorbs 20 Health from all targets in range.	Also absorbs 20 Magicka and Stamina.	18
	Levels 31–40	Inflicts 120 Damage and absorbs 22.5 Health from all targets in range.	Also absorbs 22.5 Magicka and Stamina.	18
	Level 41 and up	Inflicts 150 Damage and absorbs 25 Health from all targets in range.	Also absorbs 25 Magicka and Stamina.	18

TIP The Blood of the Ancients causes your Drain Life to also absorb Magicka and Stamina. The duration of this ability grows each time you complete Vampire Faction Quest: Ancient Power.

Blood Magic: Raise Dead

The recently slain rise again to serve you!

Reanimating the corpses of the recently slain to act as your guard is a powerful spell, one you should employ to turn the tide of combat in your favor. Unlike a base vampire, the power of your Raise Dead spell depends on your level, not how recently you have fed or how powerful the spell is in your regular form. The following table details how powerful Raise Dead can become:

✓	RAISE DEAD PROGRESSION	RAISE DEAD	MAGICKA COST
□	Level 10 or below	Reanimates a dead body to fight for you. Works on targets up to Level 8.	50
□	Levels 11–20	Reanimates a dead body to fight for you. Works on targets up to Level 16.	50
□	Levels 21–30	Reanimates a dead body to fight for you. Works on targets up to Level 24.	50
□	Levels 31–40	Reanimates a dead body to fight for you. Works on targets up to Level 30.	50
□	Level 41 and up	Reanimates a dead body to fight for you. Works on targets up to Level 36.	50

Blood Magic: Other Spells

Summon gargoyles to tear foes asunder with terrible punishment.

If giving the dead life to do your bidding isn't your main method of foe disposal, you can also learn the following Blood Magic spells by obtaining perks (see below). These take the place of the Raise Dead spell in your left hand, although you can switch between them at any time. The following table lists all of the Blood Magic spells you can learn:

✓	BLOOD MAGIC SPELL	PREREQUISITES	DESCRIPTION	MAGICKA COST
□	Vampiric Grip	Vampiric Grip Perk	Pulls a living creature toward you, then chokes them, absorbing 5 Health/second. Once released, your target is sent flying.	65 per second
□	Summon Gargoyle	Summon Gargoyle Perk	Summons a gargoyle for 60 seconds.	50

✓	BLOOD MAGIC SPELL	PREREQUISITES	DESCRIPTION	MAGICKA COST
□	Improved Summon Gargoyle	Summon Gargoyle Perk, Amulet of the Gargoyle Item	Summons two gargoyles. One lasts for 60 seconds, the other for 30 seconds.	50
□	Corpse Curse	Corpse Curse Perk	Paralyzes a living creature.	100

Night Powers

Night Powers such as Bats are helpful when the tide of combat turns against you.

As if your astonishing array of abilities wasn't enough, you also have a number of Night Powers you can use in a more defensive posture during combat and switch between at any time. You begin with the Bats and Vampire's Sight Powers and can learn the rest as perks. The following table reveals all of the Night Powers you can acquire.

✓	NIGHT POWER	PREREQUISITES	USE LIMIT	DESCRIPTION
□	Bats	None	Up to twice per 30 seconds.	You transform into a swarm of bats that surges forward, then re-forms at your destination.
□	Improved Bats	Amulet of Bats Item	Up to twice per 30 seconds.	Your swarm of bats absorbs 15 Health/second from nearby enemies.
□	Vampire's Sight	None	None	Nighteye for 60 seconds.
□	Detect All Creatures	Detect All Creatures Perk	None	Sends out a brief pulse that reveals all creatures for two seconds. This affects all creatures, including the living, undead, Daedra, and automatons.
□	Mist Form	Mist Form Perk	60-second cooldown	You transform into a cloud of mist. For 15 seconds, you are invulnerable and unable to attack or be attacked. During this time, your Health, Magicka, and Stamina regenerate rapidly.
□	Supernatural Reflexes	Supernatural Reflexes Perk	60-second cooldown	Slows time for 10 seconds.
□	Night Cloak	Night Cloak Perk	Continuous	While in Vampire Lord Form, you are surrounded by a cloud of bats that absorb 4 Health/second from all nearby enemies. This power is always active.

Vampire Lord Perks: The Path of Undeath

When Lord Harkon instructs you in the use of your new Vampire Lord Form, he mentions that as you drain the lifeblood from your foes, your power as a Vampire Lord will grow. He is correct in this assessment: While in Vampire Lord Form, press your Character Menu button to access the Vampire Lord Perk Constellation (shown above).

TIP You can't view this constellation in your normal form—remember to turn into a Vampire Lord first! "Base" vampires cannot transform into Vampire Lord Form and thus do not have access to these perks.

Acquiring Vampire Lord Perks

Unlike the Skill Perks you normally gain through leveling up, Vampire Lord Perks are awarded based on draining the life from your foes: Every time you slay an enemy with your Drain Life spell or Bite power attack, you progress one step toward your next perk point. There are 11 Vampire Lord Perks you can obtain, and each requires progressively more kills:

✓	PERK	LIVES DRAINED	✓	PERK	LIVES DRAINED
	1	5		7	17
	2	7		8	19
	3	9		9	21
	4	11		10	23
	5	13		11	25
	6	15

So, in order to acquire all of the Vampire Lord Perks, you must defeat 165 foes in the manner previously described. Most Vampire Lord Perks give you new Blood Magic or Night Power abilities, increasing the power and versatility of your Vampire Lord Form. The following sections detail all of the perks.

1. POWER OF THE GRAVE

50 point bonus to Health, Magicka, and Stamina as a Vampire Lord.

You must select this perk to unlock any of the others, so it is a given that you receive this. It makes you much more hardy in combat, as you're able to last longer and absorb more punishment before fleeing or calling upon your Night Powers.

2. DETECT ALL CREATURES

Night Power: Detect all creatures, even Dwarven Automatons

Requires: Power of the Grave

As adventuring in enclosed spaces can sometimes be tricky, this forewarns you of foes. Note that you can quickly change into this form, detect foes, and switch back to a regular shape and deal with enemies in a more stealthy manner if you wish.

3. MIST FORM ★

Night Power: Transform into an invulnerable mist, while Health, Magicka and Stamina regenerate.

Requires: Detect All Creatures

Mist Form gives you a way out of almost any dangerous situation. You can use this power at any time, even (and especially) if you find yourself out of Magicka. This effectively gives you double the amount of time to thwart your foes, with an invulnerable period of regeneration in the middle!

4. SUPERNATURAL REFLEXES

Night Power: Everything slows down while you move faster.

Requires: Mist Form

This is useful if you wish to quickly move away from a battle or slow time while you bombard an enemy with Drain Life, or if you need to (for example) catch a dragon on the ground and bombard it with attacks before it takes off again. Beware the one-minute cooldown afterward, though.

5. BLOOD HEALING

Killing a person with a power attack bite restores all your health.

Requires: Power of the Grave

Aside from being delicious, this perk enables you to effectively use enemies as health potions while increasing the usefulness of your bite attack. Be sure you time your bite attack to finish off a foe, so judge their health accordingly before you drop in for a bite.

6. UNEARTHLY WILL

Night Powers and Blood Magic cost 33 percent less

Requires: Power of the Grave

With Magicka costing one-third less than previously, you can combine this with other bonuses (such as the Blood of the Ancients) to really elongate the time you can cast any of your spells. This is especially beneficial to spells that are used continuously, such as Vampiric Grip.

7. POISON TALONS

Melee attacks do 20 points of poison damage

Requires: Blood Healing or Unearthly Will

NOTE ★ = This highlights some of the best or most interesting perks in a particular Skill Constellation.

Constellation: Path of the Volkihar

Available Perks: 11

Initially, you might have refrained from melee attacks, as they lack the potency of your spells. Not so anymore; now your claw attacks are more impressive (and their damage cumulative). Judge when enemies are low on health before dashing in for a claw and a bite to finish.

8. NIGHT CLOAK ★

In combat you are surrounded by a cloud of bats that feed on enemies within melee range.

Requires: Poison Talons

Night Cloak slowly but steadily drains health from your foes and transfers it to you. While this will rarely kill enemies outright, it does make a difference, and over time, the constant health absorption makes you significantly more resilient.

9. VAMPIRIC GRIP ★

Blood Magic: Can pull a creature to you from a distance and do choking damage once it's close.

Requires: Power of the Grave

Vampiric Grip is a versatile spell with several powerful uses. The enemy you grab with it is effectively paralyzed, taking them out of the fight for the duration of combat. You can sustain the Grip to choke your foe to death or release it to send them flying; this is perfect for quickly flinging away a pesky melee enemy or for "clustering" your foes into groups that you can hit with a Drain Life spell. For even more carnage, throw your enemies off cliffs or into traps!

10. SUMMON GARGOYLE ★

Blood Magic: Can conjure a gargoyle to fight for you

Requires: Vampiric Grip

Summon Gargoyle conjures a tough, powerful ally. In addition to dealing and taking damage for you, gargoyles are also important for crowd control, since you can become overwhelmed if surrounded by too many foes. The Amulet of the Gargoyle, which causes this spell to summon a second gargoyle, is well worth the effort to acquire. Consult Vampire Faction Quest: Amulets of Night Power (page 559) for more details.

11. CORPSE CURSE

Blood Magic: Target is paralyzed

Requires: Power of the Grave

Handy if you have an extremely powerful foe without ranged attacks (such as a giant), but even an enemy with magic or breath attacks can be stuck while you drain the life from them. More useful against single foes than groups.

Curing Vampirism

Regardless of whether you're a "base" or Volkihar Vampire, there are but two ways to cure yourself of this affliction:

You can contract Lycanthropy. The blood ritual that transforms you into a werewolf will cure any diseases you have, even full-blown Vampirism. Of course, you now have other, more hairy problems to contend with....

Or, you can visit a mage named Falion in Morthal, the Hold Capital of Hjaalmarch, and complete Side Quest: Rising at Dawn. Consult page 463 for more information.

NOTE

Vampirism can be caught more than once. Volkihar Vampirism can also be contracted more than once, but you must actively seek out Lord Harkon or Serana and ask them to restore your power.

LYCANTHROPY

NOTE

This section includes changes to Lycanthropy from the Dawnguard add-on. If you do not have Dawnguard, note that your statistics will be slightly different, and you will not be able to acquire Werewolf Perks.

Lycanthropy

Contracting Lycanthropy

A ferocious werewolf, a powerful and sinewy predator.

Werewolves are lycanthropes: men and women who can transform into powerful, wolflike creatures. Some see this as a blessing, a way of drawing on the strength and ferocity of their inner beast. Some see it as a curse, a twisting of their wills and nature. And for some, it is simply a way of life.

Lycanthropy can only be contracted as part of the blood ritual that occurs during the Companions Quest: The Silver Hand. Your first transformation is particularly violent, causing you to prowl the streets of Whiterun as the inhabitants of the city flee for their lives. Soon you black out, and from this point on, you are more fully able to control your animal nature.

Beast Form

When you become a werewolf, you acquire a new power known as Beast Form. This allows you to transform into a werewolf once per day. Once transformed, you remain a werewolf for 2.5 minutes of real time. You can extend this time by approaching a corpse and activating it to feed on it. This restores 50 points of Health and gives you another 30 seconds of time as a werewolf.

The Werewolf Form is a transformation state. You access it in the Magic > Powers > Beast Form Menu. It's a good idea to make this a Favorite ability you can quickly call upon.

Advantages of Beast Form include:

Your maximum Health increases by 50 points (previously 100) but does not regenerate.

Your maximum stamina increases by 100.

You have a faster sprint speed.

Wolves will treat you as an ally and won't attack you.

Any crimes you commit as a werewolf don't count against your "normal" self, with one caveat (below).

But there are some disadvantages as well:

You can't loot any corpses you slay.

You can't pick up or use any items you find. Since this includes keys, your progress may be blocked in some dungeons.

You can't equip or use any of your normal weapons, spells, items, equipment, Shouts, or powers.

Your large, hulking form may have trouble fitting through some narrow passages.

You can't speak with anyone, even your own Companions brethren.

Citizens of Skyrim are terrified of you; some of them flee, while the battle-hardened, brave, or foolish stand their ground and attack you.

If anyone sees you transform to or from a beast, the transformation is considered a major Crime. Consult the Crime and Punishment section on page 64.

TIP

If you want to return to human form at any time, simply wait (or use the Wait system), and you'll transform back automatically. When you return to human form, your former weapons, armor, spells, and powers will automatically be re-equipped.

Powers

Your focus is to kill, feed, kill again, and prolong your bloodlust.

As a werewolf, you gain an impressive array of combat-related bonuses.

Improved Combat Skills: While in Beast Form, your powerful claw attacks deal massive damage, and your toughened hide resists blows. Your damage and armor bonuses increase based on your level:

✓	LEVEL	ATTACK DAMAGE	ARMOR	✓	LEVEL	ATTACK DAMAGE	ARMOR
	Base	20	0		Levels 31–35	55	250
	Levels 11–15	25	50		Levels 36–40	60	300
	Levels 16–20	35	100		Levels 41–45	70	350
	Levels 21–25	45	150		Level 45 and over	80	400
	Levels 26–30	50	200

Immunity to Disease: You are completely immune to all diseases in both normal and Beast Form. Among other things, this protects you from Sanguinare Vampiris (the Vampire Disease), allowing you to fight Vampires without having to worry about contracting the condition yourself.

As an additional bonus, when you first become a werewolf, any diseases you had at the time will be cured. This includes both Sanguinare Vampiris and full-blown Vampirism. You can't be both a werewolf and a vampire at the same time.

Increased Dexterity: In Beast Form, you can sprint on all-fours at an impressively fast pace, and jump much farther than normal.

Restless Blood: As a Werewolf, you can never receive a bonus for being Rested.

Werewolf Powers: While in Beast Form, you can call upon a special set of Werewolf-exclusive Powers, called Howls. You can use these as often as you like while your transformation lasts. Your default howl strikes fear (literally) into the hearts of men. However, by completing The Companions Radiant Quest: Totems of Hircine, you can acquire Totems that allow you to exchange this Howl for a different Power. You can change Howls as often as you like, though only one can be active at a time.

Many of your Werewolf Perks improve the potency and effects of your howls. Here are all of the howls you can attempt:

✓	HOWL	REQUIRES TOTEM	REQUIRES PERK	EFFECT
	Howl of Terror	None (Default)	None	Creatures and people up to Level 20 flee for 30 seconds.
	Improved Howl of Terror	None (Default)	Totem of Terror	Creatures and people up to Level 30 flee for 30 seconds.
	Howl of the Hunt	Totem of the Hunt	None	Detect Life in a moderate range for 60 seconds.
	Howl of the Predator	Totem of the Hunt	Totem of the Predator	Detect Life in a large range for 60 seconds; indicates enemy awareness.
	Howl of Brotherhood	Totem of Brotherhood	None	Summons two wolves for 60 seconds.
	Howl of the Ice Brothers	Totem of Brotherhood	Totem of Ice Brothers	Summons two Ice Wolves for 60 seconds.
	Howl of the Moon	Totem of Brotherhood	Totem of the Moon	Summons two Werewolves for 60 seconds.

Ring of Hircine: During Daedric Quest: Ill Met By Moonlight (page 387), you are given the cursed Ring of Hircine. While the curse has no effect on most humans, if worn by a Lycanthrope, it can cause you to randomly shift into your Beast Form! It is wise to complete this Quest or risk revealing your beast form at an inopportune moment! The curse is lifted at the end of the Quest.

The Ring of Hircine (whether cursed or not) allows you to assume Beast Form one additional time per day.

Living as a Werewolf

You are fortunate that your Shield-Brothers and Sisters in the Companions are there to help you come to terms with your new Beast Form and that this strain of Lycanthropy is not affected by the waxing and waning of the moons. Therefore, it is quite possible to take full advantage of the powers of the wolf for the remainder of your adventure. Call upon your Beast Form when the speed and strength of the wolf are to your benefit or when facing a multitude of weaker foes.

Werewolf Perks: The Path of the Lycanthrope

Constellation: Path of the Moon
Available Perks: 11

When you speak with Aela the Huntress for the first time after completing the Companions Quest: Blood's Honor (with the Dawnguard add-on installed), she mentions that the more you feed, the more your power as a werewolf will grow. She is correct in this advice: While in Werewolf Form, press your Character Menu button to access the Werewolf Perk Constellation (shown above).

TIP You can't view this constellation in your normal form. Remember to turn into a werewolf first!

Acquiring Werewolf Perks

Unlike the Skill Perks you normally gain through leveling up, Werewolf Perks are awarded after feeding on your foes: Every time you feed on a corpse while in Beast Form, you make progress toward your next perk. There are 11 Werewolf Perks to obtain, and each requires progressively more feedings:

✓	PERK	FEEDINGS
	4	11

✓	LEVEL	ATTACK DAMAGE
	5	13
	6	15
	7	17
	8	19

	9	21
	11	25

So, in order to acquire all of the Werewolf Perks, you must defeat 165 foes in the manner previously described. About half of these perks improve your Howls; see the Werewolf Powers table (above) for details. The complete list of perks is as follows:

1-4: BESTIAL STRENGTH (4 RANKS) ★

- Rank 1: Do 25% more damage as a werewolf
- Rank 2: Do 25% more damage as a werewolf (+50% total)
- Rank 3: Do 25% more damage as a werewolf (+75% total)
- Rank 4: Do 25% more damage as a werewolf (+100% total)

This significantly increases your attack damage, doubling it at the perk's highest rank (25/50/75/100%). This perk is essential to using Beast Form effectively against higher-level foes, as you're able to tear through them, feed, maintain your bloodlust, and regain your health, without fear of being overwhelmed.

5: TOTEM OF ICE BROTHERS

Werewolf Totem of Brotherhood howl calls Ice Wolves.

Consult the Bestiary on page 168 for the specific differences between wolves and Ice Wolves. This perk is useful only if you have the Totem of Brotherhood. The more entities on your side, the better, and toughened Ice Wolves are excellent at helping you polish off your meals.

6: TOTEM OF THE MOON

Werewolf Totem of Brotherhood howl calls Werewolves.

This perk is useful only if you have the Totem of Brotherhood. With two additional werewolves by your side for a minute of obscene bloodletting, your pack can really tackle a large group of foes or a few extremely troublesome enemies.

7: TOTEM OF THE PREDATOR

Werewolf Totem of the Hunt howl has extended range and shows whether the targets are not in combat, out searching, or actively in combat.

This perk is only useful if you have the Totem of the Predator. If you'd like to extend your feeding frenzy without reverting back, and no enemies are presenting themselves, this is helpful in getting your bearings, especially as you have no map as a werewolf. Of course, you could always plan your assault by remembering where a populated area is or reconnoitering it first and figuring out where to find "snacks" along the route!

8: TOTEM OF TERROR

Werewolf Howl of Terror affects even higher level creatures.

This allows your default Howl of Terror to affect creatures of up to Level 30, rather than 20. Make sure you can easily follow the foe you're frightening, as a fleeing foe who doesn't end up as dinner is almost worse than one who betters you in combat! Use this when you need to scatter your foes so you can concentrate on one at a time and not be overwhelmed.

9: ANIMAL VIGOR

100 point bonus to Health and Stamina in Beast Form.

This obviously makes you much tougher in combat, allowing you to do more damage and absorb significantly more punishment before succumbing to your wounds.

10: GORGING ★

Feeding heals twice as much Health.

This is a critical perk for high-level werewolves. Since feeding is the only way you can replenish your health, being able to draw double the health you recover from a single corpse may mean the difference between life and death.

11: SAVAGE FEEDING ★

Able to feed off most dead creatures. Feeding off creatures instead of people only provides half the extended time.

This enables you to feed on nonhuman creatures like gargoyles and spiders. This makes Beast Form significantly more viable in creature- and undead-heavy dungeons, like Draugr crypts, vampire lairs, and the ruined sections of Castle Volkihar. Note that you still can't feed on small creatures, like hares or foxes, or on highly magical ones like Dwarven Automaton or Atronachs.

◇ Curing Lycanthropy

The Tomb of Ysgramor, where you can free yourself from the beast within.

After completing the Companions Quest: The Silver Hand, if you decide that a hairy alter ego with razor-sharp claws isn't how you want to spend your nights, you can rid yourself of this burden in one of two ways:

Finish the Companions Radiant Quest: Purity. You can complete this only once, so if you contract Lycanthropy a second time (see below), you can't use this method to cure yourself again. As a part of that quest, you must cut off the head of a Glenmoril Witch, bring it into the depths of the Tomb of Ysgramor, draw the spirit of the wolf from your body, and defeat it. Once the ritual is complete, your cure is permanent, and you cannot contract Lycanthropy again.

Or, you can agree to allow Lord Harkon or Serana to transform you into a Volkihar Vampire. Unlike standard vampirism (which is contracted through Sanguinare Vampiris, a disease werewolves are immune to), their transformation will work on you and has the side effect of removing your Lycanthropy as well.

After being cured of Lycanthropy, if you later change your mind, you can speak to Aela the Huntress and ask her to restore your beast blood. You can do this only once. This transformation will, again, cure you of vampirism in the process.

◀ CRIME AND PUNISHMENT ▶

While exploring the nine Holds of Skyrim, there are bound to be points in your adventure where you commit a crime and have a bounty placed on your head. Whether this is a petty theft from a citizen of Markarth or an all-out assault on the city guard of Ríftin, it is prudent to learn the laws that govern crime and punishment...and how you can bend them to your advantage!

◇ Criminal Activities and Holds

Perhaps the most important lesson to learn is that each of the nine Holds keeps their own record of crimes and bounties. You may be wanted in Haafingar Hold, but your bounty doesn't transfer to neighboring Hjaalmarch, where you may still be considered a model citizen.

Your actions are only considered criminal if they affect a nonhostile character or their property. Defending yourself is never a crime. So feel free to fight back if:

- You were attacked first and the attack was unprovoked.
- You have agreed to a duel or brawl during a conversation.
- You're attacking an enemy, regardless of who attacked first.

The more violent your crime, the less inclined the city guard is to solve the situation peaceably.

Usual Crimes

The following evidence indicates the usual categories of crimes that you're likely to commit and what bounty this places on your head:

✓ CRIME	BOUNTY
Trespassing; entering an area that is off-limits. Depending on the level of security, you will often be warned and given a chance to leave peacefully before the crime is triggered.	5 gold
Pickpocketing a guard or civilian and being spotted. Just looking at their inventory is not a crime; you have to actually take something.	25 gold
Theft; swiping an item marked "Steal."	Half the item's value
Theft; stealing a horse. You acquire this bounty each time you mount the stolen horse.	50 (each time)
Assault; attacking a guard or civilian with your fists, weapons, or spells.	40
Murder; killing a guard or civilian.	1,000
Escaping from jail after being imprisoned.	100

Unusual Crimes

The following list includes the more unspeakable ways you can incur a bounty:

✓ CRIME	BOUNTY
(Vampirism): Feeding on the blood of a guard or civilian and being spotted.	40
(Vampirism): Once you reach Stage 4 and become a full-fledged vampire, all guards and civilians will be hostile to you. Fighting back against them is considered a crime, and bounty accumulates as normal.  With Dawnguard, Stage 4 Vampirism is no longer a crime, but transforming into a Vampire Lord is.
(Lycanthropy): Transforming to or from Beast Form in sight of a guard or civilian.	1,000
(Lycanthropy): While in werewolf form, all guards and civilians will be hostile. However, fighting back against them is not considered a crime (since they don't recognize you), and bounty will not accumulate.
(Cannibalism): Eating a corpse while wearing the Ring of Namira is considered assault.	40

The bounty from any crime committed by a Follower is automatically assigned to you, so getting someone else to do your dirty work isn't going to help your reputation!

CAUTION

Witnesses and Retaliation

Crimes are only a problem if you're seen committing them. The bounties you receive are noticed by witnesses, and depending upon the situation, you may wish to "silence" anyone who sees your less-than lawful activities. For example, if you assault a citizen of Riften (+40 Bounty) and then kill them before they can report the assault (+1,000 Bounty), as long as nobody is around to witness the murder, your bounty will be cleared. Naturally, attempts to increase and then remove your bounty can fail spectacularly; if you're spotted attempting to kill a guard by three other guards, expect them to respond with lethal force!

If you allow too much time to pass, the witnesses will report the crime, and killing them will no longer reduce your bounty. So act quickly if you plan to take out the witnesses.

With this in mind, retaliating for a crime is worth doing only when as few people as possible are watching you (and ideally, none). It is easier to try this within buildings where you can easily see onlookers. If your crime is nonviolent (e.g., stealing), try entering without being noticed or at night, when people are likely to be sleeping.

Guard Actions and Reactions

Reactions: When a guard sees you commit a crime or hears a call for help from a witness, they attempt the following:

- ◇ For minor crimes, such as pickpocketing, theft, or trespassing, they attempt to arrest you.
- ◇ For major crimes, such as assault or murder, they attack you. If you yield (sheathe your weapon), they will attempt to arrest you.
- ◇ For severe crimes, such as escaping from jail, vampirism, or Lycanthropy, they simply attack.

Your actions: If a guard attempts to arrest you, and you successfully avoid the initial arrest (e.g., by springing to an exit gate or hiding in a building), you can attempt the following:

- ◇ With a low bounty (less than 3,000 gold), you can wait a day or so for the situation to calm down, then return to the scene of the crime and turn yourself in. You're then arrested.
- ◇ With a high bounty (more than 3,000 gold), you should avoid civilization altogether. Wander in the wilderness for a few days, and a bounty collector will eventually approach you and offer to pay off your debt to society. Don't wait for him, just keep moving.

Preventing Prison Time

The way you interact with guards greatly affects the price you have to pay for your crimes. Once in dialogue, your options are as follows. You can:

1. Pay a fine equal to your bounty, if you have the gold. Any stolen items are confiscated, and you are moved to the jail exit.
2. Agree to go to jail, where you can serve your time or attempt to escape. See below for more details on your options once in jail.
3. Resist arrest, if you wish to battle your way out of the location. This is also what happens if you try to back out of dialogue with any guard.
4. Bribe the guard. This option is only available if you aren't currently trespassing and one of the following conditions holds:
 - ◇ You have committed only minor crimes and have the Speech skill's Bribery perk.
 - ◇ You are a member of the Thieves Guild.
 - ◇ You haven't bribed or persuaded another guard in the past 24 hours.

If you pay the bribe, it stops the current pursuit, and you're able to keep any stolen items. However, your bounty is still in effect, and if you speak to any guard again, you'll turn yourself in, and the guard will attempt to arrest you.

5. Persuade the guard. If you have a Speech skill of 75 or higher, you're not currently trespassing, you've committed only minor crimes, and you haven't bribed or persuaded another guard in the past 24 hours, you can convince the guard to overlook your crimes. The option only appears once all of these conditions have been met.

Persuasion works just like a bribe: It stops the current pursuit, and you're able to keep any stolen items. However, your bounty is still in effect, and if you speak to the same (or any other) guard again, you'll turn yourself in, and the guard will attempt to arrest you.

However, you don't have to pay for a persuasion, making it a cheaper option if you can meet the skill requirement.

6. Pay off the guard, if you're a member of the Thieves Guild and you've completed the City Influence Quest for the Hold that you've committed the crime in.

There are four City Influence Quests (detailed on page 307), for Solitude (Haafingar), Markarth (the Reach), Whiterun (Whiterun Hold), and Windhelm (Eastmarch).

The Thieves Guild is based in Riften (the Rift), so you only need to be inducted into the guild (during Thieves Guild Quest: Loud and Clear) in order to pay off the guards there.

The other four Holds do not have City Influence Quests, so this option is not available in Morthal (Hjaalmarch), Dawnstar (the Pale), Winterhold (Winterhold Hold), or Falkreath (Falkreath Hold).

The price to pay off the guard is always half your current bounty. This removes the entire bounty and allows you to keep any stolen items in your possession, so it's always the best option if you can afford it.

7. Invoke Thane's Privilege. This is only available if you're the Thane of a particular Hold.

You can be a Thane of any or all of the Holds provided you've completed the appropriate Thane task, detailed on page 502.

If your bounty is less than 2,000, you can remind the guards of your social standing to convince them to overlook your deeds. This only works once per Hold, so save it for some pretty devious activities!

8. Civil War: As the civil war rages on, Holds will fall to either the Imperial or Stormcloak factions.

If your faction takes control of a Hold, any bounty you may have accrued in that Hold is wiped out due to the change in government. Time this correctly, and you can get up to all kinds of mayhem, flee a Hold just before your side takes control of its capital, and then return after your misdemeanors are forgotten! Information on the civil war begins on page 345.

Incidentally, you can also become a Thane of the newly installed Jarl, giving you an additional use of the Thane's Privilege claim, if you're so inclined.

If any of these cunning plans fail and you don't yield to the guard, expect reinforcements and an increasingly desperate fight that you're increasingly likely to die from. Flee, or yield, or fight on.

CAUTION

Serving Prison Time

A loose wall results in a lucky escape from certain prisons.

But for those caught in Markarth, no one escapes Cidhna Mine....

If you choose (willingly or otherwise) to be taken to jail, your entire inventory and stolen items are confiscated and moved to the jail's belongings chest and evidence chest, respectively. You are then placed in a cell with a single lockpick in your inventory. At this point, you can:

1. Serve out your sentence:

Interact with the bed in your cell and serve your time.

In Markarth's Cidhna Mine, you must interact with the pickaxe instead to serve your time.

Serving your sentence wipes out any progress toward your next skill increase in several randomly chosen skills. The number of skills that are penalized is determined by your bounty. For example, a petty crime like stealing a single potion might reset only one skill, while a murder or two will likely reset all of them!

Note that you only lose progress toward your next skill increase—your skills don't actually decline, and you don't lose any progress toward the next level from skills that have already increased. So this sentence is relatively light, especially at low levels.

After serving your sentence, you are moved to the jail's entrance, and your inventory is returned. Any items you've stolen remain inside the jail's evidence chest. Naturally, you can reenter the jail and steal them back if you want (and you're competent enough).

2. Or, you can try to escape.

Your prospects vary depending on where you're imprisoned:

Solitude (Haafingar), Whiterun (Whiterun Hold), and Riften (the Rift) have large jails with several guards. While you can always pick the lock on your cell door and sneak out if you're up to the challenge, the cells in each of these cities also have secret escape routes that you can use to sneak out undetected, as long as you're careful. This only works once for each jail (the next time you're imprisoned in that Hold, the guards have sealed the escape route). Don't forget to grab your items from the jail's belongings chest on your way out, which you can usually reach via a convenient hole in the wall from the escape passage.

Raven Rock (Solstheim): The Bulwark Jail has an interesting fireplace grating that leads to an ash and cobweb-lined passage that will take you to a second grate (under the belongings chest, allowing you to snag your stuff). This drops you down to a stone tunnel dug by Draugr that ends at a door to Coldcinder Cave.

Morthal (Hjaalmarch), Dawnstar (the Pale), and Falkreath (Falkreath Hold) have rudimentary jails. Pick the lock and fend off a single jailer to make your escape. But do this quickly before reinforcements arrive, and don't forget to reclaim your items on your way out!

Winterhold (Winterhold Hold) has a jail known as the Chill, which is well away from the settlement, among the icebergs of the Sea of Ghosts. As befits the city home to the College of Winterhold, the Chill features Frost Atronach "jailors." Force your way past them, then swim across the freezing waters and ice floes to reach dry land and complete your escape. Your inventory is not confiscated in this jail, so don't worry about looking for a belongings chest.

Windhelm's jail is rather basic, but it has two attentive jailors, and the belongings and evidence chests are upstairs in one corner of the city guard barracks. Try to escape here, and expect to have a real fight on your hands.

Markarth's jail is Cidhna Mine. No one escapes Cidhna Mine....

Crime and the Guilds

All of the above rules apply to every Hold in Skyrim, with the exception of locations owned and operated by the major guilds. The Companions of Whiterun, the mages of the College of Winterhold, the Thieves Guild of Riften, and the Dark Brotherhood have all developed very particular ways of dealing with crime among their own members. For example, the Dark Brotherhood only cares about assaults you inflict upon other members and imposes a fixed fine for such actions. Consult their appropriate quests later in this book for all the information.

During the course of your adventure, you may find that your guild actually encourages (if not downright orders) you to commit crimes. Therefore, it's worth remembering the tactics above before trying such antisocial activities.

PRIMA OFFICIAL GAME GUIDE

WWW.PRIMAGAMES.COM

For adventurers with a Kinect, there are several unique actions and commands you can employ without normal controller use. These are designed to help you more thoroughly immerse yourself in the action. The following section details all the different commands, along with tips on using Shouts, managing your inventory, and so on:

CONTROLS

When Kinect is disabled:

Right Bumper Button: Shout/Powers

When Kinect is enabled:

Right Bumper Button: Enable Dragon Language Shouts

Left Bumper Button and Right Bumper Button: Shout/Powers

Dual-Wield Right	Frenzy Spell
Soul Trap	Healing Spell
Greatsword	Light

Hot Key Equipping

This is usable only during gameplay and equips a [hot key command] (such as Summon Spell or Health Potion) that you have previously assigned in the Favorites menu:

Equip [hot key command]: Equips item in the default hand

Equip Left [hot key command]: Equips item in the left hand, if possible.

Equip Right [hot key command]: Equips item in the right hand, if possible.

Equip Dual [hot key command]: Equips the item in both hands, if possible.

Equip Sword and Shield: Equips the item with the Sword hot key in the right hand and the item with the Shield hot key in the left hand.

Also: Equip Mace and Shield, Equip Axe and Shield, Equip Dagger and Shield.

Equip Dual Weapons: Equips the item with the DualWieldLeft hot key in the left hand and the item with the DualWieldRight hot key in the right hand.

TIP

Use Voice hot keys efficiently: Voice hot key names cover a wide range of uses, but they don't restrict what you can assign to them. For example, you don't have to assign a fire spell to "Fire Spell"; you can assign a Health Potion to it if you wanted to. If you never, say, use a Warhammer, don't hesitate to assign "Warhammer" to something you will use, like a staff or custom potion.

Follower Commands

There are usable only during gameplay and are valid only if you have a Follower.

Ally Follow: Your ally follows you as if you told them, "Follow me."

Ally Follow Me does the same thing.

Ally Wait: Your ally stays where they are.

Ally Wait Here does the same thing.

Ally Trade: Opens your ally's inventory.

Ally Items does the same thing.

Ally Open: Commands your ally to open the container/door you're looking at.

Ally Stand: Commands your ally to stand at the spot you're looking at.

Ally Retrieve: Commands your ally to pick up the item you're looking at.

Ally Attack: Commands your ally to attack the character or enemy you're looking at.

Ally Interact: Does a generic Interact command with the ally. This is the same as if you entered Command mode and pressed the A Button. What the ally does depends on what you're looking at.

Ally Interact and Ally Use do the same thing.

Using Shouts

You are now able to use Shouts in three different ways during gameplay:

Shout Names (or English Names): Without pressing any buttons, you can just say the name of the Shout. For example, if you say "Unrelenting Force," that Shout is used. This uses the highest level of the Shout you have unlocked.

Dragon Language Shouts: By holding down the Right Bumper Button, you unlock Dragon Language mode. While holding the button, you can say one, two, or three Words of a Shout to trigger that shout. "Fus," "Fus Ro," and "Fus Ro Dah" will all trigger their corresponding power levels (but remember, you can only use the Words you've unlocked).

Button Pressing: While Kinect is enabled, the Left and Right Buttons together can be used to trigger Shouts or Powers without the use of voice commands, if you prefer.

Unrelenting Force: "Fus Ro Dah"	Animal Allegiance: "Raan Mir Tah"	 Drain Vitality: "Gaan Lah Haas"
Dismaying Shout: "Faas Ru Maar"	Aura Whisper: "Laas Yah Nir"	 Soul Tear: "Rii Vaaz Zol"
Become Ethereal: "Feim Zii Gron"	Disarm: "Zun Haal Viik"	 Summon Durnehviir: "Dur Neh Viir"
Whirlwind Sprint: "Wuld Nah Kest"	Marked for Death: "Krii Lun Aus"	 Battle Fury: "Mid Vur Shaan"
Elemental Fury: "Su Grah Dun"	Frost Breath: "Fo Krah Diin"	 Bend Will: "Gol Hah Dov"

Managing Your Loot Limit

When looking at a chest, corpse, or other container, use the command "Loot Items" to take all of the items with a value-to-weight ratio greater than or equal to your Loot Limit. This is less complicated than it sounds, as it's mimicking what you do naturally when trying to decide whether it's really worth lugging that heavy armor or iron sword back to a settlement to sell or craft. Plus, you can set a limit depending on how much you want to carry by saying the following:

"Set Loot Limit 0" (default): The most restrictive setting. You'll take only weightless items (gold, arrows, keys, notes, some quest items).

"Set Loot Limit 5": The most permissive setting. You take virtually all items, including some steel weapons (and up), steel armor (and up), and pretty much everything else.

"Set Loot Limit 10": At a 10:1 ratio, you'll start to leave more items. This is the highest limit at which you can still expect to get most Alchemy ingredients.

"Set Loot Limit 25": At a 25:1 ratio, you begin to exclude midlevel items like Elven weapons and steel plate armor.

"Set Loot Limit 50": At a 50:1 ratio, you take very little, leaving behind even glass weapons and ebony armor. This is the highest limit at which you'll take Skill Books.

"Set Loot Limit 100": At 100:1 ratio, even some Daedric and Dragonplate items will be passed over.

CRAFTING

When not delving into crumbling ruins in search of treasure, there are several other skills any would-be adventurer should explore. This section reveals just how rewarding the skills of alchemy, enchanting, smithing, and the lesser crafting activities can be.

The Dragonborn expansion adds the ability to create a variety of spiders, which you can "cast" (i.e., throw them) and are treated a little like scrolls in your inventory. Like the Atronach Forge in the College of Winterhold (see page 270), all the information regarding this crafting activity is detailed in the specific quest, on page 666.

ALCHEMY

NOTE For advice on which Alchemy perks to take, and general information on improving your Alchemy skill, consult the Skills and Perks section, back on page 12.

Alchemic Experimentation: An Overview

With an Alchemy Lab, combinations of ingredients become great elixirs or potent poisons.

Alchemy is the craft of combining ingredients to create beneficial potions or debilitating poisons. The key to mastering this art is experimentation:

When you smith or enchant an item, you already know what the end result of what the crafting process is going to be; the recipes or combinations of materials are clearly laid out in advance. Not so with alchemy; you often have no idea what you're making, and discovering a powerful new potion or effect is a thrill unto itself.

In short: The process of alchemy involves foraging for ingredients, learning their effects, and then experimenting by combining them with other ingredients to make potions and poisons.

Foraging for Ingredients

The Foraging Process

Living off the land is more than just farming crops: Scour Skyrim for ingredients.

The realm of Skyrim is filled with dozens of unique ingredients, which can be categorized into three major groups: those that are grown (such as flowers, mushrooms, and crops), those that are alive (such as dragonflies or butterflies), and those taken from an enemy's corpse (such as Falmer Ears, Hagraven Feathers, or Troll Fat). All of these are stored in the Ingredients menu in your inventory.

#SkyrimLegendaryGuide

Learn more about the best craftable items at www.primagames.com/SkyrimLegendary

TIP If you plan to focus on your Alchemy skill, scour the world collecting everything you see: Pick flowers, catch insects, hunt, and fish (i.e., grab fish while swimming, rather than casting a line). Steal any ingredients you see lying around in buildings, if you can get away with it—potions made with stolen ingredients are not treated as stolen. The more (and wider variety) of ingredients you have, the quicker your skills will advance.

If foraging isn't something you want to do, you can always purchase your ingredients from merchants. The best selections can be found in Alchemist shops, located in all the major cities. However, this makes alchemy a much more expensive prospect.

Learning Ingredient Effects

Once you've collected one or more ingredients, you can study it in your inventory. Notice that under its weight and value, there are four effects—the ingredient's alchemic properties—which are all initially "unknown." Your ongoing task is to learn what all four of these effects are. Until you do, your initial attempts at crafting potions can be a little hit or miss.

Ingredient digestion: The easiest way to learn the properties of an ingredient is to eat it! This always reveals the first effect, and depending on your Alchemy perks, it may reveal more. The advantage of eating ingredients is that you always receive the first property; it always works. The downside is that for rare items, you'll have to consume the item for no directly beneficial effect.

Experimental potions: Or you can learn an ingredient's properties by attempting to craft a potion with the ingredient. Constant use of a particular ingredient will gradually allow you to learn its effects and discover good combinations with other ingredients.

Crib sheets: Or you can consult this guide, which helpfully lists the four alchemic properties for every ingredient in Skyrim.

AN EXAMPLE: GIANT'S TOE

After wiping out a camp of giants, you salvage three Giant Toes from their corpses. You eat one and learn that its first effect is "Damage Stamina." Easy!

A little later, you return to an Alchemy Lab and try combining it with Bone Meal, another ingredient that has the "Damage Stamina" effect. It works, creating a Damage Stamina Poison, but since you already knew both ingredients had that effect, you don't learn anything new.

You then decide to be a little more adventurous and try combining it with Wheat, an ingredient you know nothing about. Success! Both the Giant Toe and Wheat have two effects in common: "Fortify Health" (the second effect on both ingredients) and "Damage Stamina Regen" (the third effect on Wheat and the fourth on Giant Toe). You learn the four new effects and acquire an interesting potion that fortifies your health at the cost of reducing your stamina regen.

TRAINING PART 2: CRAFTING

PRIMA OFFICIAL GAME GUIDE

Crafting Potions

In order to craft potions, you must use an Alchemy Lab. If you plan to focus on alchemy, you'll want to find an Alchemy Lab that you can access quickly and return to it frequently. Near the start of your adventure, one good location is the Alchemy Lab inside the Sleeping Giant Inn in Riverwood. Later on, you may want to purchase a house (see page 98) for convenient access to your own Alchemy Lab and plenty of storage space for ingredients.

Selecting ingredients: Step up to the Alchemy Lab, pick two distinct ingredients (you cannot combine two identical ingredients), and mix them together. You can optionally add a third ingredient if you wish (and want to further experiment).

Experimental potions: If you don't know what effects the ingredients share, the Alchemy Lab will caution you that the result is a "Potion of Unknown Effect," but you can still try it.

When you combine ingredients, the Alchemy Lab checks the complete list of the two (or three) ingredients' effects. If none of those effects match, the crafting fails. If there is one or more match, it succeeds.

Failure: If there were no matches, you receive nothing and use up the ingredients, but still receive a small Alchemy skill improvement. The Alchemy Lab remembers that the combination failed and grays it out, indicating you don't need to try it again.

Success: If there was a match, the resulting potion or poison has all of the effects that matched, in a much more potent form than simply eating one of the ingredients would have given you. Most of the time, you receive an item with only one effect, but you may end up with two, three, or even four matches.

Potion or poison? The resulting mixture is classified as a potion if its primary effect is beneficial; it's a poison if its primary effect is harmful. You can have potions with lesser negative effects and poisons with lesser positive effects, although these aren't usually worth making more than once during experimentation. The Purity perk allows you to remove these side effects from your mixtures, creating wholly positive potions and negative poisons.

Effect reference: The Alchemy Lab menu handles all the bookkeeping for you—it knows which ingredients you have, which effects you've learned, and which combinations you've tried before without success. Based on this information, it even recommends ingredients that you know you can combine to produce a specific result, like "Restore Health." While these recommendations are great for quickly creating just the potion you need, don't forget to experiment to continue learning new effects.

AN EXAMPLE: POTION OF FORTIFY HEALTH

After collecting a Blue Mountain Flower (Restore Health, Fortify Conjuration, Fortify Health, Damage Magicka Regen), and a Glowing Mushroom (Damage Stamina, Fortify Health, Fortify Carry Weight, Damage Stamina Regen), you can combine them to create a Fortify Health potion.

Advanced Alchemy

Alchemy Skill and Potion Creation

Your Alchemy skill improves the effectiveness of the potions and poisons you craft:

- ◆ If an effect has only a magnitude (e.g., Restore 50 Health), your skill increases it.
- ◆ If an effect has only a duration (e.g., Invisibility for 30 seconds), your skill extends it.
- ◆ If an effect has both a magnitude and a duration, only one of the two values will increase, never both. For potions and poisons that affect regeneration rate, the duration increases; for everything else, the magnitude increases.

In addition to your raw skill, the perks in the Alchemy tree dramatically increase the effectiveness of potions you craft. Because of the number of factors that can affect the potency of these potions, exact statistics are not listed in this guide. Consult the exact values in the Alchemy Lab to see what you can create given your current skill and perks. Your Alchemy skill increases when:

- ◆ You learn a new effect for an ingredient.
- ◆ You successfully craft a potion.
- ◆ You attempt to craft a potion but fail (a very small increase).

Three-Ingredient Potions

Potions with three ingredients are more likely to succeed (with 12 effects between them, there's a greater chance of at least one match). However, they are also more likely to produce results with multiple effects...which may or may not be a good thing. You might end up with an excellent potion that has three or even four positive effects—or one that has a bizarre mix of positive and negative properties. These can still be helpful when trying to learn ingredient effects as quickly as possible, but you may not be able to get much use out of the resulting potion.

AN EXAMPLE: POTION OF FORTIFY HEALTH, FORTIFY ONE-HANDED, AND DAMAGE STAMINA

After collecting a Giant's Toe (Damage Stamina, Fortify Health, Fortify Carry Weight, Damage Stamina Regen), some Hanging Moss (Damage Magicka, Fortify Health, Damage Magicka Regen, Fortify One-handed), and a Rock Warbler Egg (Restore Health, Fortify One-Handed, Damage Stamina, Weakness to Magic), you combine these together to create a potion. The resulting potion has all three effects that matched: it will Fortify Health, Fortify One-Handed, and Damage Stamina.

<input type="checkbox"/> Invisibility, Regen Health, Fortify Light Armor, Cure Disease	Hawk Feathers	Luna Moth Wing	Vampire Dust

NOTE † The order in which you mix the ingredients doesn't matter.

Please see the Inventory chapter for tables listing all of the available ingredients and their properties (weight, value, effects). In addition, three sample locations are given where each ingredient can be found (usually in abundance). There is also an Alchemy Effects list, which reveals every effect of an ingredient and which ingredients have these effects.

 Dragonborn adds almost a dozen new ingredients, from Ash Hopper Jelly to Trama Roots. The Inventory chapter of this book details them all (page 146).

ENCHANTING

NOTE For advice on which Enchanting perks to take and general information on improving your Enchanting skill, consult the "Skills and Perks" section, back on page 12.

Arcane Enchanting: An Overview

With an Arcane Enchanter, items are both ruined and reborn as new and more powerful objects.

Enchanting requires you to make short-term sacrifices for long-term rewards. The important (and sometimes difficult) choices you make throughout this process determine what items you can create and how powerful they will be. In short, enchanting is the art of imbuing an item with magical enchantments powered by soul energy. However, this is done at the expense of other enchanted items. To enchant an item, you need:

- ♦ An enchantment. Before you can imbue an item with an enchantment, you must first learn that enchantment by disenchanting an item with the same base effect.
- ♦ A filled Soul Gem. While you can find filled Soul Gems in the world, you can also create them by using an empty Soul Gem and the Soul Trap spell (Conjuration) or a weapon enchanted with the Soul Trap enchantment.
- ♦ An unenchanted item. These are easy to find, though you may wish to smith your own in order to have a ready supply of items to enchant.
- ♦ The Arcane Enchanter: To enchant an item, you will also need to use an Arcane Enchanter. If you plan to focus on enchanting, locate an Arcane Enchanter you can return to quickly and easily and make a point of visiting it often. Two locations close to your starting point of Helgen are Anise's Cabin, across the river from Riverwood, and Farengar's study in Whiterun's palace of Dragonsreach. Later on, you may want to purchase a house with an Arcane Enchanter (see page 98).

Disenchanting Items

The only way to learn new enchantments is to disenchant an existing enchanted item. The disenchanting process destroys the original item and teaches you the item's base enchantment—that is, its fundamental ability (e.g., Fortify Health), not its specific value (e.g., Fortify Health 50). Once you learn an enchantment, you can apply it to as many other items as you wish.

Early on, disenchanting may be a difficult, even painful decision. Enchanted items are both useful and extremely valuable, while the enchantment you learn does nothing in and of itself. You should definitely use enchanted items you find, rather than rush to disenchant them all. But when you outgrow an item or find something you aren't interested in, consider disenchanting it instead of selling it—you're making an investment in your future.

It is important to remember that you learn only the base (or general) enchantment and not the specific enchantment that appears on the item. Because of this, disenchanting a more valuable item doesn't give you a better enchantment, as these examples show:

AN ITEM EXAMPLE: BOOTS WITH FORTIFY SNEAK

Dragonscale Boots of Peerless Sneaking (Value: 2,614).

Hide Boots of Minor Sneaking (Value: 797).

Both of these items, when disenchanting (and destroyed) teach you the Fortify Sneak base enchantment.

The Elder Scrolls V

SKYRIM

TRAINING PART 2: CRAFTING

PRIMA OFFICIAL GAME GUIDE

WWW.PRIMAGAMES.COM

A WEAPON EXAMPLE: WEAPONS WITH ABSORB HEALTH

Daedric Warhammer of the Vampire (Value: 5,236).

Dwarven Dagger of Absorption (Value: 324).

Both of these weapons, when disenchanted, grant you the Absorb Health base enchantment.

The conclusion? That to start with, at least, it is better to destroy a low-value item rather than a high-value one, especially if you want to use or sell the higher-value item.

However, there is one advantage to disenchanting more expensive items: disenchanting helps increase your Enchanting skill, and your skill will increase faster when you disenchant a high-value item than when you disenchant a lower-value one.

If you plan to focus on enchanting, disenchant enchanted items early and often, as soon as they're no longer of use to you, to quickly build your repertoire of effects. If you're coming to enchanting at a later level (20+), you may want to disenchant higher-valued items to help your skill advance more quickly. You can only learn each base enchantment once, so don't expect to disenchant your way to 100.

NOTE Don't worry about disenchanting quest or unique items; they don't even show up in the Enchanting menu!

Soul Gems

Acquiring Soul Gems

A collection of Soul Gems, just ready to be gathered up and filled.

You can acquire Soul Gems in a number of ways:

Purchasing filled Soul

Gems: You can buy filled Soul Gems from merchants. However, this is an extremely expensive proposition, as a filled gem is three to four times more expensive than a comparable empty one.

Purchasing empty Soul Gems: If you need to buy a Soul Gem, you're better off purchasing an empty one and filling it yourself. Although this takes a little more work, the savings can help you break even (or even turn a profit) on the item you enchant.

Finding Soul Gems: An even better option is to find (or steal) the Soul Gems you need:

Any Dwarven city, warlock den, vampire lair, or Nordic ruin will usually have Soul Gems lying around. Enemies in these areas (especially Dwarven Automatons) often carry Soul Gems as well.

There are several areas in the College of Winterhold where you can simply take Soul Gems for free.

Or you can steal them from other mages, such as the Court Wizards or the mages of the College.

Filling Soul Gems

A successful Soul Trap captures a wild animal's essence for your arcane antics.

In order to trap a creature's soul in an empty Soul Gem, you will need either:

The Soul Trap Spell: Cast this spell on a creature and kill it before the spell wears off to snare its soul. If you plan to focus on enchanting, purchase this spell from Farengar, the Court Wizard of Whiterun, as soon as possible.

A Soul Trap Enchantment: If casting Soul Trap becomes a nuisance, look for a weapon with the Soul Trap enchantment imbued in it. Then all you need to do is slay the creature using the weapon to capture its soul. You can obviously enchant a weapon for this purpose, as well as find one.

TIP When filling a Soul Gem, there are some key points to remember:

- ❖ Most Soul Gems only hold the souls of creatures, not humans (or humanoid races).
- ❖ They only hold souls up to a specific level. To Soul Trap a stronger creature, you need a larger Soul Gem.
- ❖ After slaying a Soul Trapped creature, their soul is automatically absorbed by the smallest possible empty Soul Gem in your inventory (so you don't need to pick or equip one).
- ❖ Warning! If you don't have a Soul Gem of the correct size, the soul is captured by the next largest Soul Gem. Although this works, you lose some of that Soul Gem's potential value.
- ❖ Warning! If you don't have any empty Soul Gems, or Soul Gems large enough to hold the creature's soul, the soul is lost.
- ❖ Conclusion: Heed these warnings and carry multiple Soul Gems of each size, and check frequently to make sure you know what you're carrying, or you risk wasting a valuable or rare Soul Gem!
- ❖ Black Soul Gems are rare. These can hold any human soul, regardless of level.
- ❖ Undead (Draugr, Skeletons), Daedra, and Dwarven Automatons (Dwarven Spheres, Centurions) don't have souls and can't be Soul Trapped.
- ❖ Conjured Atronachs, raised zombies, and Dwarven Automatons (Dwarven Spheres, Centurions) don't have souls and can't be Soul Trapped.

Petty Soul Gems are almost worthless for enchanting — CAUTION you'll rarely receive bonuses of more than a point or two. Save them for recharging your weapons, and plan to use at least a Lesser Soul Gem.

NOTE Need to know exactly what Soul Gem to use on a particular creature? Then cross-reference the level of creature the Soul Gem can hold (in the Soul Gems chart of the Inventory chapter, on page 151), with the level of the creature in this guide's Bestiary (page 168). Then you'll know which type of Soul Gem is correct for your purposes.

Unenchanted Items

This selection of weaponry looks good enough to try your enchanting on.

Unenchanted weapons and armor can be obtained in one of three ways:

By purchasing them:

This is obviously the fastest and most straightforward option, as most merchants have a wide variety of unenchanted items for sale. However, if you hope to turn a profit with your enchanting, you'll need a high Speech skill (in order to barter the prices down), or the merchant's cut (both when you buy the original item and then sell the enchanted version of it back to them) will leave you with a loss, not a profit.

By finding them: This is a much better plan. Simply grab them while on your travels.

By smithing them: True artisans should consider smithing their own weapons and armor (on a forge), enchanting them, improving them (on a grindstone or workbench), and then selling them for incredible profits. If you're not motivated by money, smithing also allows you to create and enchant exactly the item you want.

Enchanting

Enchanting a Weapon

The tell-tale glow of an enchanted weapon, made stronger by a professional imbuer!

Now that your preparations are complete, journey to any Arcane Enchanter with the items you wish to enchant in your inventory. Select the weapon and the Soul Gem first, and then pick the enchantment. This is important, because the type of Soul Gem you use has a huge impact on the next decision you must make: how strong to make the enchantment. Remember, enchanting is all about choices!

Enchanted Weapons and Charges

All enchanted weapons have charges. These represent the amount of soul energy that remains within the weapon. When all of an item's charges are expended, the weapon's enchantment ceases to function (and it essentially becomes a "normal" or unenchanted weapon) until you recharge it.

Think of this as a formula: Charge Capacity ÷ Enchantment Cost = Charges.

Charge Capacity: The item's capacity is determined by the strength of the soul used during the enchanting process. For example, a Grand Soul Gem containing a Grand Soul has a greater capacity than a Petty Soul Gem containing a Petty Soul. Note that capacity is determined by the soul, not the gem—a Grand Soul Gem containing a Petty Soul is no better than a Petty Soul Gem with that soul.

Enchantment Cost: The item's Enchantment Cost depends on three factors:

Inherent strength. Some enchantments are simply more powerful (and thus more expensive) than others.

Selected strength. When you select a weapon enchantment, you can use the slider to choose how powerful to make the enchantment. The stronger you make it, the higher the cost and the fewer total uses you can get from the item.

Your Enchanting skill. The higher your skill, the lower the cost and the more total uses you can get from the item.

The soul and your Enchanting skill also determine the maximum strength of the enchantment you can apply to the item.

The right balance: This choice is entirely up to you—experiment and see what works best for your play style. If you keep a large supply of Soul Gems on hand, recharging a weapon frequently may not be much of an issue. If you don't, or keep forgetting to recharge your weapon, a weaker but longer-lasting enchantment may work out better.

Recharging Weapons

To recharge an enchanted weapon, you need a partially or completely depleted weapon and a filled Soul Gem. Select the weapon in your inventory, pick Recharge, and then select the Soul Gem you want to use.

TIP Recharging an enchanted weapon gives you a small boost to your Enchanting skill and is a great way to use up those Petty Soul Gems.

NOTE A weapon's maximum charge is fixed when it is created. You can't use the recharging process to give it more charges than it originally had; any excess charges (from a Soul Gem with more charges than the one you used during the initial Enchantment, for example) are lost.

A WEAPON EXAMPLE: ENCHANTED EBONY GREATSWORD:

"THE SLUMBERING VOID"

After constructing an Ebony Greatsword on the Forge (Damage 22, Weight 22, Value 1,440), you take it to an Arcane Enchanter. You pick a Grand Soul Gem and the Absorb Health Enchantment. With an Enchanting skill of 55 and several perks in enchanting, you have a range of strengths from which to choose, from [Absorb Health 1, 800 Charges] to [Absorb Health 13, 47 Charges]. You select the strongest version of the effect, rename the item, and craft it. You now possess "the Slumbering Void" (Damage 22, Weight 22, Value 2,304, Absorb 13 points of health).

NOTE Remember, your version of "the Slumbering Void" may have different statistics, as it changes depending on your skills.

Enchanting Armor

Crafting a set of armor and enchanting it gives you the very best in outfits.

To enchant a piece of armor, visit an Arcane Enchanter with the items in your inventory. Always choose the armor piece first, then the enchantment, and then the soul gem.

Enchantment Restrictions: Not all armor enchantments can be applied to all pieces of armor. Sometimes, these restrictions are logical. Muffle (quiet movement) can only be placed on boots. Waterbreathing can be placed on helmets but never boots. But other restrictions are more complex and less obvious. Fortunately, the armor enchantment chart in the Inventory chapter has all the details.

Enchanted Armor Strength: Once you've selected a piece of armor and an enchantment you want to apply to it, you still need to choose a Soul Gem. Unlike enchanted weapons, enchanted armor does not have charges: The armor grants you a constant bonus as long as you wear it. Instead, the soul's capacity, in combination with your Enchanting skill, determines the strength of the enchantment you can create. In effect, your skill allows you to squeeze more power from a given Soul Gem.

TIP Remember, all numeric bonuses from enchantments "stack," meaning you can increase any stat you wish by, for example, enchanting a helmet and armor with the same enchantment. This only applies to enchantments with numeric values; you can't, say, have a Waterbreathing enchantment on two pieces of equipment and expect any additional benefit.

AN ARMOR EXAMPLE: ENCHANTED DAEDRIC ARMOR: "AZURA'S WALL"

After constructing a suit of Daedric armor on the forge (Armor 49, Weight 50, Value 3200), you take it across to an Arcane Enchanter and pick the Fortify Healing Rate enchantment. You then need to select a Soul Gem. With an Enchanting skill of 55 and several perks in Enchanting, a Common Soul Gem will give you [+5% Healing Rate], a Greater Soul Gem [+11%], and a Grand Soul Gem [+17%]. You select the Grand Soul Gem, rename the item, and craft it. You now possess "Azura's Wall" (Armor 49, Weight 50, Value 3842, Health regenerates 17% faster.)

General Advice

If you want to make money with enchanting, find or make most of the components yourself. Otherwise, the merchant's markup on the item and Soul Gem will wipe out the additional value you create by adding the enchantment.

Your character level and the item you are enchanting have no effect on the strength of the enchantment. You can infuse the same enchantment into an Iron Helm as into a Daedric Helm.

All armor enchantments stack, so a cuirass and gauntlets that both increase your Heavy Armor skill by +10% will together give you a bonus of +20%. Stacking is especially powerful with Elemental Resistance enchantments (to Fire, Frost, or Shock): keep a few items on hand and equip them as appropriate if a dragon attacks. Note that there is a limit to this—at most, you can have an 85% Resistance to Magic, Fire, Frost, or Shock damage. Beyond that point, any further bonuses are wasted.

If you wield two weapons, don't forget to enchant them with complementary enchantments! Two Fire, Frost, or Shock damage enchantments are great for causing maximum damage, or combine Absorb Health and Absorb Stamina enchantments to sustain you in a long battle.

Disenchant junk. If you don't need the gold, it pays to disenchant any cheap enchanted items you find so you can take advantage of their effects later on. If an enchanted item has outlived its usefulness and been drained of charges, instead of recharging it, you may want to disenchant it, learn its effect, and apply that effect to another item instead.

Get Soul Trap. The Soul Trap spell is critical to enchanting and worth picking up as soon as possible if you plan to focus on this skill. Provided you have the Soul Gems, Soul Trap everything you can so you have filled gems to power and recharge your items.

Combine both smithing and enchanting to get the maximum benefit from both skills; craft and enchant incredibly powerful weapons and armor to enhance your style of play.

NOTE The Inventory chapter has tables listing the base enchantments for weapons and armor you disenchant, enchantment modifiers (the enchantments that appear on items you find in the world), all the different kinds of Soul Gems, and the levels of the creature they can hold.

Chaos Enchantments

There is a new weapon enchantment available in Dragonborn: the Chaos enchantment. When a weapon is imbued with such an enchantment, it inflicts a random mixture of Fire or Frost or Shock damage. Each element has a 50% chance of happening on each hit. So it's possible to get no extra damage, only one element, two elements, or even all three elements adding to damage. Regardless of which elements are generated, the enchantment power goes down by the same amount.

Staff Enchanting

Dragonborn adds the ability to enchant (create) your own staves. You can only attempt staff enchanting at the Staff Enchanting workbench in Tel Mithryn (shown in the previous picture). This workbench is located in a locked room that becomes accessible after you complete Solstheim Side Quest: Reluctant Steward (see page 637). The key that accesses the room with the Staff Enchanter is part of your reward for the quest.

In order to create a staff, you will need:

An unenchanted staff of the correct type. You must purchase this from Neloath. Unenchanted staves cannot be crafted or found as treasure.

One or more Heart Stones. You must mine or find these yourself—you can't buy them. They are found in deposits across the ash-filled parts of Solstheim.

To know the spell you want to place into the staff. For example, you can only create a Staff of Thunderbolts if you already know the Thunderbolt spell.

Creating a staff works like forging an item—you just select the item you want to create and select "Craft." Your Enchanting skill has no effect on the result. However, creating staves will increase your Enchanting skill based on the value of the staff you create.

TIP For a complete list of Staves you can enchant, consult the table on page 155.

NOTE For advice on which Smithing perks to take, and general information on improving your Smithing skill, consult the "Skills and Perks" section, back on page 12.

Forging Ahead: An Overview

A noble Nord profession, a trade of gruff artisans occurring across the realm.

Smithing is the art of creating and improving weapons and armor, accomplished through a series of progressive improvements. Smithing is straightforward, fast, and reliable. Unlike alchemy and enchanting, there are no complicated choices or arcane experiments to perform: You know precisely what is needed to construct or improve an item, and what the end result of your sweat and toil will be. In short, smithing involves forging and progressively improving items.

TIP There are several secondary crafting activities that you may want explore if you plan to focus on smithing, as they produce many of the raw materials required for this craft. These activities are not required (you can buy everything you need from other smiths) and do not improve your Smithing skill, but they are the cheapest way to obtain raw materials (outside of stealing them). For more information on mining, smelting, and tanning, see page 84.

Forging

The Forging Process

The Blacksmith's Forge: Mold raw materials into fabled weapons and armor.

The first step in smithing is to locate a Blacksmith's Forge or Anvil, where the process of making new weapons and armor first begins. When you interact with a forge, a complete list of the items you can create, and the components you need to make them is shown. This list expands dramatically as you take perks in your Smithing skill. If you have the necessary materials, simply choose the item you wish to craft, and it is hammered out on the forge. Simple!

NOTE Your Smithing skill improves each time you craft an item using the forge (although it may not increase by a full point). However, remember that your skill has no direct effect on the items you create: an iron sword is an iron sword, whether it was made by a novice Blacksmith in Riften or Eorlund Gray-Mane on the Skyforge itself!

As your adventure begins, your Smithing skill is low, meaning you can only work with a few kinds of basic materials, such as iron, hide, and leather. However, as your Smithing skill increases and you begin to choose perks in the Smithing constellation, you gradually unlock the ability to forge more and more varieties of materials into weapons and armor. At the highest levels, this includes the fabled Daedric, Dragonplate, and Dragonscale gear!

A NOVICE EXAMPLE: IRON WARHAMMER

An Iron Warhammer

Approach the Blacksmith's Forge with four Iron Ingots and three Leather Strips in your inventory. Activate the forge, select the Iron Warhammer from the Iron category, and craft it. Your materials are consumed by the forging process, and you receive a shiny new Iron Warhammer.

A MASTER EXAMPLE: DAEDRIC WARHAMMER

A Daedric Warhammer

Once your Smithing skill reaches 90, and you've taken the Daedric Smithing perk, approach the Blacksmith's Forge with five Ebony Ingots, three Leather Strips, and a Daedra Heart in your inventory. Activate the forge, select the Daedric Warhammer from the Daedric category, and craft it. Your materials are consumed, and you receive this wicked-looking warhammer.

Forging Materials

Forging usually requires components like metal ingots, leather, and leather strips. However, the highest-quality items may also require more or expensive materials, such as quicksilver, dragon scales, or Daedra hearts. Knowing what is needed to forge your next level of gear is imperative so you can keep an eye out for it on your travels.

Purchasing materials: The easiest way to acquire materials is simply to purchase them. In towns (such as Riverwood), you'll almost always find a Blacksmith working the forge. These craftsmen and women typically have ingots, ore, leather, and leather strips for sale. As your level increases, smiths begin to carry higher-level materials too. However, you will always have to search for the rarest of components.

The purist smithy: The purist won't settle for purchasing materials when they're free for the taking in the wild! Instead, they seek out mines (or ore veins dotted throughout the wilderness) to mine your own ore with a trusty pickaxe and use the smelter to smelt your own ingots. Hunt wild animals, gather their pelts, and use Tanning Racks to turn their hides into the leather and leather strips you require. You're free to live off the land, not fill some Blacksmith's sweaty pockets!

In short, purchasing materials is far faster and easier. Finding your own materials takes time but allows you to turn a better profit.

The Economics of Forging

Unless you're aggressively focusing your Smithing skill, you can often find or purchase gear of a particular type before you're able to forge it yourself. Forging is still great for completing a set of armor (e.g., hammering out a Dwarven Helmet to go with your Dwarven Armor), so you can qualify for the Matching Set (Heavy Armor Perk) or Custom Fit (Light Armor Perk) bonuses.

The very best weapons and armor (Ebony, Daedric, Dragonscale, and Dragonplate) can never be bought in shops, so you must either find them in dungeons or forge them yourself. Smithing really pays off here. While it's still challenging to forge a complete set of Daedric or Dragonplate gear, it's far easier than scrounging through dungeon after dungeon in the hope of finding just the right piece to complete a set. Smithing is also excellent for creating nonenchanted items you're planning to enchant later using your Enchanting skill.

While you can make money by forging your own items and then selling them, you need to be careful in how you go about it. Purchasing materials from a merchant, taking them to a forge to create an item, and then returning to sell the item back to the merchant may help you improve your Smithing skill, but financially, it's always a losing proposition. If you want to use Smithing to make money, it's always better to gather materials from the wild, although that can be time-consuming.

If you decide to focus on smithing, you'll occasionally find you require certain materials before they're commonly available from merchants. Once again, this is when foraging in the wilderness or swinging a pickaxe at an ore vein is your best option. Check the "Mining" section on page 84 for locations where you can find rare ore.

NOTE For the most part, all Blacksmith forges allow you to forge the same weapons and armor. There are a handful of exceptions:

1. After completing The Companions Quest: Glory of the Dead, you can craft Ancient Nord Armor and Nord Hero Weapons at Eorlund Gray-Mane's Skyforge in Whiterun.
2. After completing Dawnguard Main Quest: A New Order, you can forge crossbows and advanced bolts at Gunmar's Forge in Fort Dawnguard.
3. After completing Side Quest: Lost to the Ages, you can forge an Aetherium Item at the Aetherium Forge.

Improving Items

The Grindstone: Sharpen a blade to improve its damage and value.

The Workbench: Temper armor into defensive and wearable works of art.

Contrary to what you might believe, the heart of smithing lies not in crafting items but in improving them. As with forging, these improvements are simple and result in equally straightforward bonuses to your attack (weapons) and defense (armor) that can significantly improve your combat effectiveness. As you might expect, arms and armor improved in this way also command a premium when sold to merchants.

TIP A Master Blacksmith can improve plain steel armor to make it almost as strong as Dragonplate. And if he's improving Dragonplate? The results are even more spectacular!

The grindstone: You improve weapons by sharpening them at a grindstone.

The workbench: You improve armor by tempering it at a workbench.

When interacting with either of these crafting stations, you are given a complete list of the items you have (whether they were found, bought, stolen, or made by you) that can be improved, along with the materials you need to improve each of them. Improving a weapon or piece of armor always requires one piece of that item's primary material, so sharpening an iron sword requires one Iron Ingot, while tempering a Dragonscale Cuirass requires one Dragon Scale. The clue is in the name!

In exchange for using this material, you receive a bonus to your weapon's damage or armor's defense rating based on your Smithing skill and perks. As your Smithing skill improves, you're able to return to a grindstone or workbench and improve the same item again (at the cost of one material each time), to increase that bonus still further, if you wish.

Rules to Remember

Bonuses are not cumulative: Having sharpened an iron sword with a Smithing skill of 25 (using an Iron Ingot), you return to the grindstone with a Smithing skill of 50 (and expend another Iron Ingot) to receive a better bonus. However, if you'd waited and brought the sword to the grindstone for the first time at Skill 50, the bonus would be the same.

Bonuses stack with enchantments: However, if you're a skilled craftsman in the arts of smithing and enchanting, you can forge an item, then both improve and enchant it for maximum damage. Note that you need the Arcane Blacksmith perk in order to improve enchanted weapons and armor, so if you don't have it, make sure to sharpen or temper the item before you enchant it! Otherwise, the order doesn't matter.

Nomenclature: When you improve an item, it receives a modifier that indicates the amount of improvement you've made to the weapon. This modifier is based on your Smithing skill and perks. After you've improved an item, you can only improve it again once your Smithing skill and perks will allow you to raise it to the next modifier rank. For example:

If you have a Smithing skill of 39 and the Steel Smithing perk, and you improve a steel sword at a grindstone, the sword will receive the "Superior" modifier and a [+3] damage bonus.

Return with a Smithing skill of 40, and your skill has reached the next threshold, allowing you to improve the sword again. This gives it the "Exquisite" modifier and a better bonus, [+5].

If you come back with a Smithing skill of 55, your skill has not yet reached the next threshold, so you can't improve that sword again. If you have a different steel sword you want to improve, it will also receive the "Exquisite" modifier and a [+5] bonus.

There are no perks that improve iron weapons—only weapons of other metal types.

CAUTION

A NOVICE EXAMPLE: IMPROVING THE IRON WARHAMMER

The Iron Warhammer (Superior)

Approach a grindstone with an Iron Warhammer and an Iron Ingot in your inventory. Interact with the grindstone, select the Iron Warhammer, and hit Craft. With a Smithing skill of 42, the Iron Warhammer (Superior) receives +3 Damage and its value increases by +20 (25%).

A MASTER EXAMPLE: IMPROVING A DAEDRIC WARHAMMER

The Daedric Warhammer (Legendary)

Bring a Daedric Warhammer and an Ebony Ingot to the grindstone and improve it. With a Smithing skill of 100 and the Daedric Smithing perk, the Daedric Warhammer (Legendary) receives +11 Damage and its value doubles, increasing by 4,000. Given that the ingot costs a mere 150 gold, that's a 3,850 gold profit!

The Economics of Improvements

Improving the items you find (and those you forge) is simple, quick, and relatively inexpensive, making this an excellent way to both increase your Smithing skill and earn some extra gold. Simply collect weapons and armor throughout your travels, then improve them before selling them for a profit.

At lower levels, this yields dividends, as you're constantly using your skill and may even make your money back (especially if you mine, smelt, or tan your own materials). At higher levels, with good smithing (and Speech skills for bartering), you can easily rake in hundreds or even thousands of additional gold for each haul of loot.

General Advice

Improve and sharpen everything. As discussed above, this is one of the fastest and easiest ways to make money, especially later in the game, with high Smithing and Speech skills.

Stop overpaying for materials. Smithing can be an expensive hobby if you have to buy all your components from local merchants. If you're tired of paying a premium on leather or ingots, and you have some time to spare, make them yourself!

Delve into Dwarven Ruins. One of the easiest ways to level your Smithing skill is to clear out a Dwarven Ruin, then go back and make a second trip to haul out all of the scrap metal you can carry. Smelt it down into Dwarven Metal Ingots, and you'll have more materials than you know what to do with.

Save those Daedra Hearts. These are among the rarest ingredients, but they're essential for forging Daedric weapons and armor. If you find any early in your adventure, save them until you're ready for them. Otherwise, you'll have to make them yourself with an equally rare ingredient (in College of Winterhold Radiant Quest: The Atronach Forge) or track down the one merchant who sells them (Enthir, also at the College of Winterhold) and pay an outrageous premium.

Dawnguard: Smithing

Arrow Crafting

You can now construct arrows at any forge, meaning you no longer have to search for or buy them if you don't wish to. However, for arrows of a particular type (such as Orcish or Glass Arrows, as shown), you need to have the appropriate Smithing Perk (such as Orcish Smithing or Glass Smithing).

Dragonbone Weapons

You are now able to construct Dragonbone weapons at any forge, as long as you have the Dragon Armor Perk. Dragonbone weapons (such as the one shown above) inflict more damage than Daedric weapons, although they are (very slightly) heavier. Dragonbone weapons are extremely rare; they are almost never found as loot, so smithing them is by far the easiest and most reliable method for master Blacksmiths to acquire them.

Crossbows and Crossbow Bolts

Provided you meet several requirements, you are now able to construct Crossbows and Crossbow Bolts. For this to occur, you must first complete Dawnguard Main Quest: A New Order. As only adventurers allied with the Dawnguard can finish this quest, only Dawnguard-allied players can forge these weapons. However, anyone can loot them from Dawnguard agents or occasionally purchase bolts from some vendors.

Once you complete this quest, speak to Sorine Jurard in Fort Dawnguard about making a Crossbow; this unlocks the ability to forge the basic Crossbow and Steel Bolts. Then, through repeated completion of Dawnguard Faction Quest: Ancient Technology, you and Sorine can unlock "recipes" (schematics) for a variety of improved weapons and bolts, including Dwarven Crossbows, Dwarven Bolts, Enhanced Crossbows, and Exploding Bolts (inflicting Fire, Frost, or Shock damage).

You still need to have the correct tools for making these weapons and bolts: Although you can forge basic Steel Bolts and (once learned) Dwarven Bolts at any forge, you can construct only Crossbows and the explosive advanced bolts at Gunmar's Forge inside Fort Dawnguard. In addition, you need the Steel Smithing Perk to fashion basic Crossbow and Steel Bolts (they are found in the "Steel" Smithing Menu). Similarly, you need the Dwarven Smithing Perk to make the Dwarven Crossbow and Dwarven Bolts (they are found in the "Dwarven" Smithing menu).

Miscellaneous and Jewelry Recipes

There are also two Miscellaneous Recipes that you can craft—the Shellbug Helmet (shown) and Bone Hawk Amulet—which are listed on page 81.

Aetherium Items

At the end of Side Quest: Lost to the Ages, your reward is the crafting of one of three unique Aetherium items at the Aetherium Forge, located deep below the Ruins of Bthalft in the Rift. Aetherium is an incredibly rare material, so much so that only one item—the Aetherial Crown, Shield, or Staff—can be made. A Smithing skill isn't necessary for this creation.

Hearthfire: Smithing

Building Materials

Hearthfire adds Building Materials to your Smithing menu list. These are small items needed in the construction of a house, such as nails, fittings, hinges, and locks. Most require Iron Ingots to make (and locks require Corundum). None of these items require any Smithing Perk prerequisites, so you can forge them even without a prior knowledge of Smithing.

Dragonborn: Smithing

Dragonborn adds four new sets of recipes: Bonemold, Chitin, Nordic, and Stalhrim.

Bonemold Smithing

Bonemold items require the Steel Smithing perk to create. Basic Bonemold items have no special prerequisites, but improved Bonemold items, a variant with better statistics, can be crafted only after you complete both Thieves Guild Quest: Meet the Family (see page 287) and Solstheim Regional Activity: Thievery and the Karstaag Connection* (see page 669). The ability to craft these items is part of your reward for the quest. The armor has a rating similar to Steel armor but is lighter.

Chitin Smithing

Chitin items require the Elven Smithing perk to create. They have no special prerequisites. The armor has a rating similar to Steel armor but it weighs less. There is also a rare variant—Morag Tong Armor—worn by the infamous clan of Dunmeri assassins.

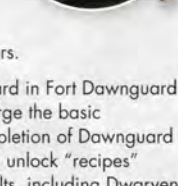

Nordic Smithing

Nordic Carved items require the Advanced Armors perk to create. They have no special prerequisites. Note that these items are distinct from Ancient Nord (Draugr) items, which can't be crafted, and from Nord Hero items, which are a reward for completing the Companions Quest: Glory of the Dead (see page 245). It has a similar rating to Ebony and Orcish armor but is lighter.

Stalhrim Smithing

Stalhrim items require the Ebony Smithing perk to create. You must also complete Solstheim Side Quest: A New Source of Stalhrim (see page 633) to unlock the ability to craft them. Stalhrim items require Stalhrim Ore, a rare material found only on Solstheim. Think of Stalhrim armor as being like Dragonplate Armor but lighter.

Note that these recipes require ore, not ingots. Stalhrim, a type of elemental ice, can't be smelted into ingots. You can buy Stalhrim from Halbar (the blacksmith in Skaal village) or mine it yourself (see below). All Stalhrim items have an innate property: any Frost enchantments placed on them (e.g., frost damage for weapons, frost resistance for armor) are 10% stronger than normal.

Smithing Recipes

NOTE The following table lists the recipes for forging each weapon and piece of armor. Since the Tempering recipes are straightforward (always one item of the primary material), they aren't necessary to show. After this, there are additional recipe tables for Dawnguard, Hearthfire, and Dragonborn smithing.

PRIMA OFFICIAL GAME GUIDE

Cooking

NOTE Cooking meats, soups, and stews does not increase any skill.

Throw the meat, plants, and other ingredients (often mead-related) into a pot. Stir and stove off the hunger pangs.

Cooking allows you to transform meat, vegetables, and other ingredients into better-tasting, higher-quality food. Cooking is a rudimentary method of living off the land and is far surpassed by alchemy (which is a skill and creates potions that are much more potent).

Cooking requires a cooking pot or cooking spit, which can easily be found in every town and village across Skyrim—almost every house has one by the fireplace. You can also find them in other inhabited locations like forts or bandit camps.

Interact with a cooking pot (or cooking spit) to bring up the Cooking menu, which lists the food you can cook. All of the cooking recipes are readily available at any cooking pot or spit, as long as you have the ingredients for them. If you're missing ingredients, the recipe is still shown but grayed out.

Most of the food you can cook isn't all that helpful, typically restoring 5 to 10 points of Health or Stamina—less than you'd receive from even the cheapest of potions. Moreover, the ingredients are often the same price or more expensive than the resulting food and can often be put to better use in alchemy instead.

However, for a new adventurer embarking on their travels across the realm and scrabbling to get by, cooked food is a way to recover a little health in a pinch. For those who wish to live as the Nords do, killing their own meats, harvesting their own vegetables, and cooking the resulting ingredients into a somewhat murky-looking stew, this is an authentic way to satiate hunger and fatigue. But for everyone else, alchemy is a better bet, as it helps to advance your level and makes significantly better restorative items...with one delicious exception: the Elsweyr Fondue is excellent.

A COOKING EXAMPLE: THE ELSWEYR FONDUE

Approach a cooking pot to learn the recipe for Elsweyr Fondue. It requires:

Moon Sugar, an extremely rare ingredient. Your best bet is to buy this from one of the traveling Khajiit caravans.

An Eider Cheese Wheel. This is the full wheel of moldy white cheese—the sliced and wedge versions of the cheese won't do. You can't buy a full wheel in any shop, so keep an eye out for it when exploring towns, settlements, and other inhabited locations.

Ale, found in most inhabited locations and sold in almost any inn or tavern.

After gathering all three components, return to a cooking pot, activate it, and create the amazing Elsweyr Fondue (Fortify Magicka 100, +25% Magicka Regeneration, lasts 12 minutes). This is by far the best nonalchemic consumable you can craft.

Hearthfire and Dragonborn: Cooking

Recipes

Hearthfire adds the following additions to your cooking:

Cooking Recipes: There are two new recipes (Steamed Mudcrab Legs and Clam Chowder) that can be made at any cookpot.

Baking Recipes: When you build your own house, you can construct a kitchen in the east wing addition. One of its unique furnishings is an oven. This allows you to bake any of these recipes (including the delicious apple pie and the ubiquitous sweetroll). The oven is the only place you can bake. The only way you can gain access to one is to build it.

Milling Recipes: If you purchase land in the Pale and build Heljarchen Hall, you can construct the unique mill outbuilding. The mill allows you to convert wheat into a sack of flour. Flour is required for most baking recipes, so you might want to add a kitchen (and oven) to Heljarchen Hall and make it the epicenter of your pastry-based antics.

NOTE Dawnguard adds no additional cooking recipes. Dragonborn adds two new cooking recipes. These have no special requirements.

Cooking Recipes

The following tables show every recipe you can make, including the ingredients and the effects of the food once mixed together. After that is a table of baking recipes (requiring the Hearthfire Oven) and the single milling recipe (requiring the Hearthfire Flour Mill).

Mining

NOTE Mining minerals and gems does not increase any skill.

Assaulting an ore vein with dual-wielded pickaxes is the quickest (and craziest) way to mine.

Throughout Skyrim, there are a variety of natural mineral deposits, concentrated in ore veins. Extracting minerals and gems from these veins can make you a small amount of gold, but more importantly, it helps you gather raw materials for smithing (which can save you a huge amount of money if you aim to craft your own items). To extract the ore, you first need a pickaxe. You can purchase one from almost any Blacksmith or general store merchant, or find them (for free) in any mine.

To mine ore, approach an ore vein with a pickaxe in your inventory and interact with it. Typically, a vein produces around three pieces of ore before becoming depleted. Along with each piece of ore, you also have a 10% chance of extracting a (random) gemstone.

TIP Ore attack! Instead of activating an ore vein and waiting for your character to mine the ore, you can also attack the ore with a pickaxe instead, which mines it at a slightly faster rate. Dual-wield pickaxes for even faster ore removal, if you really must.

Once mined, ore can be sold for a (generally small) amount of gold, or smelted down to make ingots (a slightly better way to earn money from your digging).

TIP Have you exhausted all the veins in a mine? Then wait about a month, and the veins will reset and can be mined again.

A MINING EXAMPLE: ORICHALCUM AT MOR KHAZGUR

After becoming blood-kin with the Orcs of Mor Khazgur, enter the mine above their longhouse and grab a pickaxe from the table. Approach an Orichalcum ore vein and activate it. After a few seconds, you'll mine three pieces of Orichalcum Ore (each Weight 1, Value 20). Then use the smelter just outside the mine to smelt two pieces of ore into an Orichalcum Ingot (Weight 1, Value 45).

Where to Mine?

You can look for minerals in the wilderness of Skyrim's windswept Holds, though the best and most reliable sources can be found inside the realm's many mines. A few general tips if you plan to delve into mining:

- ♦ Keep a pickaxe handy. You never know where you might run into some valuable ore, whether out in the wilds or in the depths of a dungeon.
- ♦ Look for mines. Many settlements have mines, which give you easy access to a specific type of ore. When you befriend the Orc strongholds, you also get access to their rich Orichalcum and Ebony mines.
- ♦ Plan your return trip. Every in-game month or so, ore veins that have been depleted will replenish. Check back occasionally to strip them of their new ore.

The Holds of Skyrim and Beyond

If you're scouring the landscape, here are some general tips for finding ore deposits:

Falkreath Hold (near Helgen and Riverwood) has a slightly higher concentration of iron ore veins than usual.

The central tundra of Whiterun Hold is a good place to look for Corundum ore.

More valuable ores (Gold, Silver, Moonstone, Oricalchum, and Quicksilver) are most often found in more extreme environments, such as deep in the mountains or along the northern coast.

The Forgotten Vale has deposits of rarer minerals (such as Gold and Quicksilver), as well as Shellbugs (Falmer beasts bred for their hard coatings). Check the Atlas (page 995) for further information.

Dragonborn: Mining

Dragonborn adds several new types of materials to mine:

Geodes are a special type of ore vein that produces gems of a particular type. You can find Amethyst, Emerald, Ruby, and Sapphire Geodes on Solstheim.

Heart Stone is a rare material used in Staff Enchanting (see above) and as a reagent for the Ash Guardian spell.

Stalhrim is a type of elemental ice found in the tombs of the ancient Nords buried on Solstheim. The Skaal of northern Solstheim use it in crafting weapons and armor.

In order to mine it, you need an Ancient Nord Pickaxe—normal pickaxes won't work. These can be found randomly in chests or obtained as part of Solstheim Regional Activity: Take Your Pick* (which sends you to fetch one; see page 669) or Solstheim Side Quest: Unearthed (Ralis's unique pickaxe, Hoarfrost, is one; see page 645).

The Minerals of Skyrim and Solstheim

The following tables reveal locations where minerals can be mined from veins, as well as where ore appears (having already been mined). Only the major locations, usually with two or more deposits, are shown. Note that some veins may be in the immediate vicinity of the location, and may require you to search for them.

Smelting

NOTE Smelting ore and scrap metal into ingots does not increase a skill.

Approach the domed smelter, withstand the great heat, and transform your ore into ingots.

You can purchase ore from most Blacksmiths, or mine it yourself if money is a concern. But what do you do with the ore?

Raw ore isn't useful on its own and doesn't sell for many gold pieces. However, if you bring your ore to a smelter, you can smelt it into metal ingots, which you can then sell for more gold pieces or use it to smith your own weapons and armor.

An Ebony Ingot, smelted from two clumps of Ebony Ore.

TIP Make sure you mine and smelt the minerals you're proficient in making items with!

Also, scour Dwarven Ruins in search of scrap metal. You can find a lot of loose metal lying around, and even more in the remains of Dwarven Automatons (such as Dwarven Spheres) once you've reduced them to scrap. Dwarven scrap can be smelted down into Dwarven Metal Ingots. This may cause Calcelmo, the Dwarven researcher in Markarth, a slight case of conniptions, but it increases their value significantly. Pick up everything you can carry and haul it back to town. You can forge weapons and armor with the ingots to rapidly improve your Smithing skill, or sell it to recoup the cost of other materials.

NOTE Ingots can be found in your Misc Inventory menu.

Smelting Recipes

The following table lists all of the available smelting recipes and the type of ingots produced by each. All of these recipes are available to you immediately; you just need the ore or scrap metal required for them.

Tanning

NOTE Tanning animal hides into leather and leather strips does not increase any skill.

Approach a tanning rack and transform a wild animal hide into leather or leather strips.

Tanning is a simple process; it allows you to transform animal hides into leather or leather strips. These can then be sold or used in your own smithing. Larger pelts produce more leather...but are often more valuable as pelts, rather than broken down into their leather components. Therefore, it is wise to think twice before tanning everything you've skinned!

TIP Keep an eye on value. Depending on your Speech skill, you may be better off selling a valuable pelt and then buying leather from a merchant, rather than tanning that same pelt into leather.

Tanning Recipes

The following table lists all of the available tanning recipes. All of these recipes are available to you immediately; you just need the hides for them.

Wood Chopping

NOTE This manual labor does not increase any skill.

Swing a woodcutter's axe, cleaving a small log in twain. Now repeat until you've had enough.

There are several wood-chopping blocks throughout Skyrim, which allow you to execute this most simple of all crafting exercises: chopping wood. For this, you need a woodcutter's axe, which you can purchase from almost any general store merchant or find (for free) at any lumber mill. Simply approach the wood-chopping block, interact with it, and you begin chopping. For each chop, two pieces of firewood are added to your Misc Inventory. When you're finished, sell the firewood to any lumber foreman for 5 gold per piece of wood. You won't get a better deal from any merchant.

NOTE Chopping firewood is a slow and methodical way to earn a tiny amount of gold. While it is something you can do to eke out the last few coins you need for a piece of armor, it's mostly just a small way of interacting with the world. You can also load lumber logs onto the wooden conveyor belt at lumber mills and watch as they're sliced with a vertical saw. This manual labor is free, just something to pass the time.

Lumber Mill Locations

If you're determined to sell your firewood for the best possible prices, do so at the following locations, where you can speak to (and obtain payment from) the lumber mill owner or operator. Note that not all of these lumber mills have a wood-chopping block.

TRAINING PART 3: ADVENTURING ACROSS SKYRIM

This section looks at the broader aspects of adventuring in Skyrim. There's information on how Skyrim is segmented so you can grasp how where you are within this giant realm. We explain the different types of map locations and the kinds of enemies and challenges that await you. Finally, we provide a range of tips on mapping, what to expect when exploring dungeons, who to speak to in Skyrim and why, and what services, areas of interest, and collectibles you should look for.

THE HOLDS OF SKYRIM

Skyrim is divided into nine separate Holds: Haafingar, Hjaalmarch, the Pale, Winterhold Hold, the Reach, Whiterun Hold, Eastmarch, Falkreath Hold, and the Rift. Each of these Holds has a distinct atmosphere to it, from the Autumnal Forest of the Rift, to the Tundra Plains of Whiterun Hold, to the ragged and rugged Northern Coast of the Pale. You can't see the borders of these Holds on your world map, but we show them in this guide's maps. Wherever possible, cartographers have used rivers, roads, and treacherous mountains to separate Holds so it's easier to find a location in this guide.

Each Hold has a capital city: Solitude, Morthal, Dawnstar, Winterhold, Markarth, Whiterun, Windhelm, Falkreath, and Riften. These are the nine shields (crests) that you can see on your world map. While most Holds contain smaller towns and settlements as well, the capital is always the most important and highly populated location within the Hold and is among the safest places to be (unless it's under siege during the Civil War, of course).

Habitations

A city, town, or dwelling populated with citizens who are almost always neutral, if not civil and friendly, toward you.

Windhelm, capital of Eastmarch

Habitations range in size from a small group of Khajiit Caravaneers to the rugged majesty of Solitude, the sprawling capital of Haafingar Hold. Here, you're likely to find citizens in need of help (or at least a Favor or two) or who have rumors to share, tasks to accomplish, quests to start, and interactions that test your social skills more than your skill at arms. The major types of habitations are listed in this guide's Atlas.

Dungeons

A location populated with hostile people or creatures that typically attack you on sight.

High Gate Ruins, in the Pale

A "dungeon" is a place where you will find exploration and combat. It is an all-encompassing term for a location with usually no friendly faces, a place where you encounter wild animals, brigands, or worse. When you fully explore a dungeon, you typically leave with a reward that makes the harrowing trek worth your time and sanity. Dungeons vary widely in size, from small caves to massive, multistoried ruins. Most have a high-level foe you must defeat (a "boss"), and some even have their own small quests. Others are woven into the larger quests that dominate your adventure.

When you clear a dungeon—that is, explore it and defeat all of the major foes within—your map typically marks it as "cleared." Some locations cannot be cleared, and others can be cleared only under special circumstances.

Most dungeons will repopulate over time. This can happen in as little as a week for a location you left midway through and may not happen for a month or more (if ever) for a dungeon you have cleared. Note that your map will not indicate when a location has repopulated (once cleared, always cleared), so be careful—you may find enemies where you least expect them.

Other Locations

There are also many minor locations and encounters not flagged on your in-game world map, but all of them are listed on this guide's map. These are Secondary Locations, usually small shrines, lost treasure chests, tiny campsites, dragon burial mounds, or other odd occurrences that you can stumble upon. There are also World Encounters, small events that occur randomly. This could be anything from a fox chasing some chickens, to a challenge from an Orc, to a Khajiit with a penchant for being economical with the truth....

NOTE All of these locations are noted on this guide's maps and are detailed in the Atlas. Although this guide's map is exhaustive, there are several scattered cases, satchels, and other loot hidden throughout this realm that are not shown, as there are much easier places to find identical items.

Mapping and Movement

The realm of Skyrim is vast and foreboding and at times almost overwhelming—there are over 350 Primary Locations to discover! Although you can go where you want, do what you want, and see what you want, it is worth considering the following plans to explore a location more logically:

Plan 1—The Base Camp: Use a location you've cleared out or a location you know is safe (such as Riverwood) as a base camp until you're familiar with your surroundings. Learn how far a new location is from this safe place.

Plan 2—The Landmarks: Look for landmarks when you travel. No matter where you are in Skyrim, you should be able to spin around slowly and spot two familiar landmarks to get your bearings. This is easier in some Holds (such as Whiterun, with its capital and the towering Throat of the World mountain) and more difficult in others (such as the craggy Reach). However, once you know the locations around a big landmark, you can investigate other locations close to it without becoming lost. Also use smaller landmarks such as roadside shrines, bridges, or signposts to remember where you've been.

Plan 3—Roads and Paths: You may be tempted to charge off into the wilderness, and this is perfectly fine. But to efficiently discover everything in the area of a Hold, it is worth using the network of roads (cobblestones, with signposts) and pathways (tracks, goat trails, and even foot-tracked snow). These almost always lead you close or directly to a Primary Location. Follow the roads to make a circular trek around a Hold, then return and methodically search areas off this beaten track.

Plan 4—Your Destination Marker: If you select an empty spot on the world map, you can place your own destination marker there. This is extremely useful when used in conjunction with this guide's Atlas, as there are close to 200 Secondary Locations, which don't show up on your world map! Simply gauge where a Secondary Location is by comparing the world map to the guide map, place the marker, and head there.

Plan 5—Use the Atlas: This guide has a sizable section revealing every location in Skyrim. Reference the locations and maps in that giant chapter to help you on your way.

DUNGEON EXPLORATION

Finding Your Way

Whether you're assaulting a ruined fortress filled with bandits or stealthily creeping through some long-forgotten crypt, dungeons are at the heart of your adventuring experience. Although they may appear confusing at first, the winding tunnels and twisting corridors generally lead to a final chamber, where you must defeat a powerful foe to claim your reward. In Skyrim, many dungeons also have a secret exit or shortcut—a hidden passage, barred door, elevated tunnel, or dwarven elevator that leads back to the entrance. This allows you to exit a dungeon without having to backtrack.

Lighting Your Way

Carrying a torch or employing a staff or spell to light your way makes the frightening darkness of dungeons a little less intimidating. Be sure to have a light source tagged as a Favorite so you can quickly switch between it and your combat weapons as needed.

Khajiit and vampires can call on their Nighteye power to see in the dark, allowing them to more easily slip through the darkness undetected.

Also note the positions of lanterns, torches, and braziers inside dungeons, as they are almost always visual cues that point you in the correct direction. If you're lost, look for these light sources to guide you.

Dungeon Puzzles

Many dungeons were sealed for a reason—they contain the dormant (and often undead) remains of a once-powerful entity. To protect these tombs from grave robbers and brigands, the ancient Nords concocted many puzzles to flummox and foil the unwary. The same is true inside Dwarven Ruins, but on a far grander scale. Here is what you can expect:

Switches, Levers, Chains, and Handles

If you're stuck in a chamber, look for any of these devices to open the doors, gates, and portcullises that prevent your progress. Chains are usually the most difficult to spot, hanging on a gloomy wall. Sometimes, these must be triggered in a specific order to open the path forward.

Nordic Puzzle Door

A series of concentric metal rings are embedded in an impenetrable door, each embossed with three animal glyphs. Explore the dungeon to find the Dragon Claw associated with the door—a precious artifact that holds the key to this puzzle. In your inventory, inspect the palm of the claw to find the solution to the door. Line up the three animal glyphs in the correct order, then activate the central "keyhole" with the Dragon Claw to unlock the door.

Nordic Puzzle Pillars and Petroglyphs

Many chambers require you to rotate two or more stone pillars to face the correct direction in order to open a path forward. These pillars have been inscribed with a set of animal petroglyphs, which correspond to another set of glyphs somewhere in the surrounding chamber. Match the two sets of animal carvings to solve the puzzle.

Rotating Walls

Stone walls controlled by a hidden mechanism can rotate to open or close paths in a dungeon. When you encounter them, look for a set of Nordic Puzzle Pillars or a lever, chain, or switch you can use to open the way forward.

Dwarven Puzzles

Long ago, the ancient dwarves constructed immense clockwork mechanisms and complex steamworks. The ruins of this long-lost race still yield a variety of intricate and unique puzzles, from trying to stop the flow of poisonous gas into a chamber, to carefully aligning a system of mirrors in an Oculory, to inserting an otherworldly key into a strange slot. In some cases, you may need to find the "key" object beforehand, or your progress will be limited at best.

Other Puzzles

There are occasionally other puzzles that are more complicated, requiring a Shout or other technique to solve. These are duly noted.

TIP

Every puzzle has a solution; for more details, check the Atlas location of the dungeon in question or the quest you've embarked on.

Traps and Triggers

The infamous oil lamp trap: Turn the burn on your enemies, if you're quick and clever!

The unpleasant Poison Bloom Trap: What pretty lattice-like petals. What a heady aroma...Gak!!

Dungeon exploration would be nowhere near as terrifying without the uncertainty of possibly stumbling over a tripwire and being pincushioned by a dozen rusty darts! Throughout your adventure, expect to run into, step on, or trigger any of 30 different traps. The following chart lists every major type of trap and trigger, along with advice on how best to avoid them.

Note that most traps have a small chance of infecting you with a random disease. It might be worth keeping around a Cure Disease potion just in case...

TRAP	DAMAGE	THREAT LEVEL	MOST COMMON IN...	TIPS
Apocrypha Tentacles	Average	Average	Apocrypha	Yet another reason to avoid the water. As you explore Apocrypha, tentacles will frequently rise up from the inky depths to lash out at you, doing damage and possibly afflicting you with disease. You can often avoid them entirely by hugging the walls and keeping well away from the edge of the platforms.
Apocrypha Water	Low	Average	Apocrypha	The roiling black waters of Apocrypha are lethal to mortals, although "dying" will merely return your spirit to Tamriel. Avoid the water at all costs, and be careful that your foes don't knock you into it.
Bear Trap	Average	Nuisance	Bandit Camps, Outdoors	Watch where you step! Bear Traps are often hidden in the bushes or under low grass, ready to snap if you aren't careful. You can often lure enemies into stepping on them. Interacting with the trap will also allow you to close or open them.
Battering Ram Trap	High	High	Nordic Ruins	Talk about a headache! Battering Ram traps cover a long arc, and at higher levels, can kill you or your foes in a single hit. Look out for the triggers that set them off, and keep an eye on the ceiling for them. Lure enemies into them to take them out in one shot.
Bone Alarm Trap	None	Nuisance	Bandit Camps, Forsworn Redoubts	Bone Alarm traps don't do any damage, but alert enemies to your presence. If you aren't sneaking anyway, they won't make much difference. If you are, watch your step and try to avoid them if you can. Shooting them with a bow will draw unaware enemies to them, allowing you to set up an ambush.
Crossbow Trap	Average	Average	Dawnguard/Vigilant Bases	Crossbow Traps fire fast and hit hard, like any other crossbow. However, they fire only a single shot and are relatively easy to disarm. Avoid their trigger mechanisms, approach the crossbow, and activate it to pick it up. You can also place a standard crossbow and steel bolt into the mechanism if you want to use it against your foes.
Dart Trap	Average	Average	Nordic Ruins, Dwarven Ruins	The most common kind of trap, dart traps are also among the most avoidable. Even if you trigger them by accident, you can often just jump out of the way to minimize the damage you take. They deal a small amount of poison damage.
Dwarven Ballista Trap	High	Low	Dwarven Ruins	Dwarven Ballistas shoot a large bolt that explodes on impact, doing massive damage to anything in the blast radius. Functional ballistas are extremely rare, and often something you can turn to your advantage—look for a valve or lever you can use to turn the trap on your enemies.
Dwarven Fire Pillar Trap	Average	Average	Dwarven Ruins	Initially resembling a pressure plate, Dwarven Fire Pillars rise from the ground and rotate, spewing gouts of flame. Spotting these traps in advance is key to avoiding them.
Dwarven Piston Trap	None	Nuisance	Dwarven Ruins	Dwarven Pistons shove anything in front of them away. They don't do any damage, but they hit hard, and have a habit of pushing you (or your enemies) into something nasty.
Dwarven Thresher	Average	High	Dwarven Ruins	Dwarven Threshers are a pair of whirling blades that rise from the floor, sometimes remaining in place and sometimes moving along a track built into the ground. Often appearing in narrow corridors, they are highly dangerous, capable of killing you, your followers, or your enemies with a few solid hits. If you see one, get out of the way!
Explosive Gas Trap	Average	Low	Nordic Ruins, Caves	See that ripple in the air? It might be a cloud of flammable, explosive gas. Put away your torch, keep your Flames spell in check, and you shouldn't have any problems with them. Explosive Gas is extremely rare.
Flail Trap	High	Average	Bandit Camps	Also fairly rare, Flail traps tend to be located on the ceiling, ready to drop a large, spiked sphere into your head. If you see it coming, back away—once the trap has come to a full and complete stop, it's harmless.
Flamethrower Trap	Average	Average	Any Dungeon	Often built into the mouths of Nordic dragon statues or set into pressure plates, flamethrower traps are a threat most adventurers will see from time to time. Because their flame travels in a narrow, focused beam, your best bet is to quickly step out of the way and let the trap subside.
Infected Spike Trap	Average	Nuisance	Vampire Lairs	These hanging ropes are strung with bloody catpaws that pierce the skin and inflict you with disease. If you're careful, you can usually avoid them entirely or even lure enemies through them.
Magic Caster Trap	Varies	Varies	Any Dungeon	Magic Casters consist of a ruined pedestal powered by a Soul Gem. When triggered, the Soul Gem casts a preset spell, which could be anything from Flames to Ice Storm. If you can't avoid the trap altogether, you can disarm it by removing the Soul Gem—taking it directly works, but you can also hit it with an arrow from a safe distance, or grab it with Telekinesis.
Mammoth Skull Trap	High	Low	Any Dungeon	When triggered, this huge mammoth skull swings forward on its support ropes, slamming into anything in front of it with lethal force. This trap tends to be easy to spot—you can't exactly overlook a giant mammoth skull—so it's rarely much of a threat to you, though you can lure your enemies into it.
Oil Lamp Trap	Low	Low	Nordic Ruins	The oil lamp itself isn't usually a problem. It's the pool of oil that often sits under the lamp that you should keep an eye on, and lure your enemies into if possible. Then hit or shoot down the lamp to set the oil ablaze. They are often triggered by tripwires, but shooting or attacking them will also cause the lamp to drop.
Oil Pool Trap	Average	Low	Any Dungeon	Oil Pools are easily turned against your foes—just lure them into the oil and light it with any fire source. Oil Lamp traps are often conveniently nearby, but lacking one of those a Flames Spell, or Fire Atronach will work just as well.
Poison Blooms	None	Varies	Falmer Hives	Poison Blooms are easy to identify by their large, white, lattice-like petals. When you approach them, they begin to shudder. Quickly activate them to pluck the bloom, or they will open, spewing a cloud of poison gas.
Poison Gas Trap	Average	Average	Dwarven Ruins	Poison Gas does steady damage over time if you stand in it. When you find a patch of poison gas, look around for a way to turn it off. Failing that, make a run for it, using a Healing spell or potions to keep your health up. The Clear Skies Shout can also be used to disperse the gas.
Rockfall Trap	Average	Average	Bandit Camps, Nordic Ruins, Mines, Caves	Rockfall traps are fairly rare, but the sheer number of rocks they contain can make them a threat if you're standing in the wrong place. If you see one, your best bet is to get out of the way.
Runes Trap	Average	High	Any Dungeon	Rune Traps look much like the Fire, Frost, and Shock Runes that you can place with the Destruction spells of the same name. And like those spells, these traps pack a quite a punch, exploding automatically if you get close enough. Your best bet is to lure an enemy to run across them and set them off. Failing that, you can shoot them with a spell to set them off, but keep your distance.
Spear Trap	Average	High	Any Dungeon	A single spear trap is no threat... but spear traps tend to come in groups of five or more, lashing out unexpectedly from the floor or walls. Your best bet is to look for the ports from which they emerge and try to avoid setting them off in the first place.
Swinging Blade Trap	Average	Average	Nordic Ruins	Blade traps often appear in sets in long, narrow hallways. They're usually easy enough for you to dodge, although enemies (and your followers) have a harder time, making them a great kill zone. When you're ready to go through, tell your follower to stay behind, time your run carefully, and look for a lever on the far side to disable them.
Swinging Wall Trap	High	High	Any Dungeon	Swinging wall traps come in a variety of shapes and sizes, from the heavy spiked-iron walls in forts to the netting and tusk traps of Riekling dens. But all are fast, lethal, and difficult to distinguish from other wood or metal beams in a dungeon. If you notice a freestanding beam that doesn't quite reach the ceiling, be careful. Try to snare an enemy with it if possible—few things are as satisfying as watching a foe get hurled into the wall by this trap.
Hinge Trigger	None	Varies	Any Dungeon	Find a suspicious-looking chest or door? Then look for this little metal hinge and wire on the side. Carefully activate it, and you can pick its lock to safely disable it before opening the object it was attached to. You can also hit it with an attack from a distance to break it and set off the trap in (relative) safety.
Pressure Pedestal	None	Varies	Nordic Ruins	If you see a flat-topped pedestal with a tantalizing item on it, be careful—it could be a pressure pedestal trap. If the pedestal isn't weighted down, a trap will be set off. Grab the item from a distance (Telekinesis is great for this), or drop something else on the pedestal to keep it weighed down. Or just grab the item and run for it.

TRAP	DAMAGE	THREAT LEVEL	MOST COMMON IN...	TIPS
Pressure Plate	None	Varies	Any Dungeon	By far the most common trap-triggering mechanism, Pressure Plates can be found in almost any dungeon—just look for suspicious raised stones and avoid them. Or take the Sneak Skill's Light Foot Perk to avoid setting these off altogether.
Tripwire	None	Varies	Any Dungeon	See a low-lying white wire? That's a tripwire. Leap over it or skirt around it to avoid setting it off. Or edge forward very carefully to see what happens when it breaks. You can also interact with the tripwire to disarm it. Tripwire-triggered traps only fire once.

NOTE Throughout the Quest and Atlas chapters, traps are mentioned when they are a major obstacle or block your path to finishing an objective or location walkthrough. However, due to their sheer number, traps are not tracked in this guide.

OTHER SITES OF INTEREST

Dragon Mounds

Dotted across the fells and forests and the plains and snowlines of Skyrim are strange circular mounds, surrounded by a scattering of standing stones. These are ancient dragon burial mounds, the final resting places of these creatures when they were slain centuries ago. But now the dragons are back! Alduin the World-Eater, a terror out of the most ancient legends, has returned to Skyrim, and over the course of the Main Quest, he opens these mounds and resurrects the dragons within, calling them forth to wreak havoc once more!

How Dragon Mounds Open

There are 22 Dragon Mounds scattered throughout the Nine Holds of Skyrim, and two more on the isle of Solstheim. When you encounter one (all are listed in the Atlas and marked on the Hold maps), it will be in one of four states. Over the course of the Main Quest, these mounds gradually open, releasing the dragons trapped within.

State I: Dormant

Each Dragon Mound opens in response to a specific objective in the Main Quest. Before that point, the Dragon Mound is dormant. The ground is covered, and the site could easily be mistaken for an ancient Nordic burial mound, as the two are quite similar.

State II: Deserted

As the Main Quest develops, you may find some mounds that have been opened but have no dragon nearby. This means Alduin has visited this site, resurrected a dragon from the mound, and both creatures have flown away. There is little for you to do here. But look around carefully—you may well spot the dragon at a nearby Dragon Lair!

State III: Awakened

As the Main Quest goes on, you will find more and more mounds in this state. Alduin has visited the site, resurrected the dragon from the mound, and flown away. Meanwhile, the reborn dragon remains here, gathering its strength and waiting for a chance to strike. Slay the beast and claim its soul to unlock your power as Dragonborn!

State IV: Resurrection

And in a few cases, if you stumble across just the right mound at just the right time, you may encounter Alduin himself! If you watch, Alduin will resurrect the dragon before your eyes, then fly off to his next destination. Attack, and Alduin roars into the skies, mocking you, before making his escape (he cannot be harmed). Meanwhile, the resurrected dragon will turn and attack! If you miss this opportunity, the mound will change to State III, with the newly resurrected dragon remaining near its mound until you arrive to challenge it.

Dragon Mound Stages Chart

The following chart lists (by Hold) all of the Dragon Mounds, when they are opened, and what state the mound will be in when it opens.

TIP Want to face a dragon or see Alduin before he flies away? Then simply complete your current Main Quest, consult this chart, and head off to find any mounds that have triggered.

Standing Stones

Throughout the wilderness of Skyrim, you can find 13 of these ancient and powerful standing stones. Etched into each is the sign of one of the major constellations known throughout Tamriel. Touch the stone, and you can choose to receive its blessing. You'll focus the stone, and a bolt of pure magic arcs to the heavens. This blessing is now permanent, until you visit a different stone and receive its blessing, which supersedes the previous one. You may have only one blessing at a time. Standing stones can be divided into two major sets: 4 Skill Improvement stones, and 9 other stones.

Skill Improvement Stones

The Warrior Stone: Located at the Guardian Stones (Falkreath Hold). Combat skills increase 20% faster.

The Mage Stone: Located at the Guardian Stones (Falkreath Hold). Magic skills improve 20% faster.

The Thief Stone: Located at the Guardian Stones (Falkreath Hold). Stealth skills increase 20% faster.

The Lover Stone: Located in the Reach. All skills improve 15% faster.

Four standing stones—Warrior, Thief, Mage, and Lover—increase the rate at which your skills improve. The choice to use or not to use these stones is more important than you may think.

Accept one of these stones' blessings if:

You crave high-level spells and perks and want access to them as quickly as possible.

You want to trek through high-level dungeons (such as Dwarven Ruins and Dragon Priest crypts) as soon as you can.

You're trying to maintain a second set of skills that you don't use as often: For example, your primary focus might be as a warrior, with a secondary interest in stealth. You may want to take the Thief Stone just to help your stealth-based skills keep pace.

You want to quickly increase a skill or set of skills that you haven't used before or that you've neglected: For example, if you decide to add Restoration spells to your Warrior's repertoire or if you want to pick up some Illusion Magic to complement your Thief's skills, the Mage Stone will help you master them more quickly.

Resist these stones' blessings (and choose one of the other stones) if:

You want to make your adventure as long and rewarding as possible and want to see and do everything you possibly can in Skyrim. Your adventure is most entertaining when you're below Level 50. Impatience isn't rewarded....

You're more interested in experimenting with the dramatic and varied effects that the other stones can have on your style of play, rather than accepting these "hidden" bonuses.

NOTE A few points to remember:

The Warrior, Mage, and Thief Stones provide bonuses to skill growth in their respective skills, while the Lover's Stone provides a slightly smaller bonus to skill growth in all skills. This is great if you like to try a little of everything or have a character that draws heavily on skills across multiple disciplines.

Don't expect to crush your foes just because your skills increase more quickly. In fact, these Stones may make your adventure slightly more difficult, since you'll have less time per level to find and upgrade your equipment and master advanced combat tactics.

Don't feel "locked in" to any particular stone blessing. If you want to try out one of the others, you can always change back later—just Fast-Travel back to your stone of choice and touch it again. It's that simple.

Other Stones

The Apprentice Stone, located in Hjaalmarch Hold: Recover Magicka twice as fast; twice as vulnerable to magic.

This stone offers a slightly risky option for Mages who find themselves running out of Magicka too frequently or for Battlemages who don't want to sacrifice the protection of their armor for the Magicka Regeneration bonuses of mage robes. The weakness to Magicka is a real liability—especially in warlock or vampire dungeons, where almost all of your foes cast spells—but it can be offset by having a summoned creature or Follower to help soak up the damage. For Bretons, this weakness is also offset by your racial Magic Resistance, making it much more palatable.

The Atronach Stone, located in Eastmarch Hold: 50 extra points of Magicka, 50% absorb spells, -50% Magicka Regen.

This gives you the benefits of two of the best racial abilities—the High Elves' Highborn Magicka and the Breton's Dragonskin (as a constant effect)—with the huge drawback of halved Magicka Regen. You can easily offset or overcome this drawback by equipping mage robes or other items that increase your Magicka regeneration rate.

The Lady Stone, located in Falkreath Hold: Regenerate Health and Stamina 25% faster.

This is a solid, effective choice for offensive warriors. The bonus isn't spectacular, but it will give you more staying power in combat. It's also an excellent choice for vampires, as it can offset your Health and Stamina regeneration penalties while in sunlight.

The Lord Stone, located in the Pale: 50 points of damage resistance, 25% magic resistance.

This grants you two excellent resistance bonuses in one! The damage resistance bonus is the equivalent to 50 points of armor, which is like giving your robed mage a Daedric Cuirass (and makes an already well-armored warrior even more resilient)! The magic resistance bonus is also solid, cutting spell damage by a quarter. Overall, this is a good choice for any character who wants to shore up their defenses.

The Ritual Stone, located in Whiterun Hold. Raises all dead around you to fight for you.

Arguably the most entertaining, and one of the most useful blessings, the Ritual Stone grants you a power that raises all the dead around you—from the mightiest Draugr Deathlord to the lowliest chicken—and causes them to fight for you. Useful in a wide range of situations, this power really shines in the large-scale battles at the end of many dungeons, where you can find yourself quickly raising 5 to 10 corpses to take on their former allies!

The Serpent Stone, located in Winterhold Hold: Paralyze the target for 5 seconds and do 25 points of damage.

Paralyze is a useful ability to have on hand, allowing you to quickly score multiple hits on a foe before they can recover, take one enemy out of the fight so you can deal with others, or simply buy yourself a few seconds to retreat and regroup. It's especially useful when fighting individual, high-level foes. However, you can achieve the same effect with a spell or poison, so this power may be less useful at higher levels once you have other options at your disposal.

The Shadow Stone, located in the Rift: Invisibility for 60 seconds.

This power is exceptionally useful for a stealthy character. It can be invoked instantly, silently, with no Illusion skill or casting time required. You can achieve the same effect with a spell—and you definitely want that spell—but even after obtaining it, the Shadow Stone's power can still be useful to keep around as a backup.

The Steed Stone, located in Haafingar Hold: Carry weight +100, no movement penalty from armor.

Although this blessing doesn't bring you the instant gratification or protection of those that help you in combat, it is worth considering the Steed Stone's ability if you rely on heavy armor: You'll appreciate the extra mobility and Carry Weight it affords you. It's also worth trying this ability before taking the Conditioned (Heavy Armor) or Unhindered (Light Armor) perks; you may even want to take it instead of those perks and select another perk.

The Tower Stone, located in Winterhold Hold. Unlock any Expert-level lock (or lower) once per day.

If you constantly find yourself out of lockpicks or simply don't enjoy lockpicking, the Tower Stone's power will help you open one locked door or treasure chest per day. For everyone else, there are more useful abilities to choose from.

Interacting with any Sacred Stone before cleansing it puts you under Miraak's influence. You actually help with the construction!

CAUTION

In order to draw upon their magic, you must first cleanse them of Miraak's influence by using the Bend Will Shout on them. Doing so destroys the shrine, frees the people enslaved by Miraak's power, and releases a powerful Lurker that attacks you.

NOTE There is one exception: The Tree Stone, located in the heart of Miraak's Temple, cannot be cleansed in this way. The only way to free it is to defeat Miraak in Dragonborn Main Quest: At the Summit of Apocrypha.

Blessings of the Sacred Stones

Thereafter, you can interact with each Sacred Stone once per day to receive its blessing: it fully heals you and grants you a potent single-use power. Once you expend it, you must return to the Sacred Stone to acquire this power again.

Beast Stone: Grants you the Conjure Wearbear power, which summons a werebear for 60 seconds wherever the caster is pointing.

Earth Stone: Grants you the Bones of the Earth power, which protects you from 80% of all physical damage for 30 seconds.

Sun Stone: Grants you the Sun Flare power, a 100-point fiery explosion centered on the caster. Does more damage to closer targets.

Tree Stone: Grants you the Root of Power, which causes all spells to cost 75% less for 60 seconds.

Water Stone: Grants you the Waters of Life power, which heals everyone close to you for 200 points.

Wind Stone: Grants you the North Wind power, which does 20 points of frost damage to all enemies within range for 10 seconds.

NOTE Standing Stones are all Primary Locations, and their locations are shown throughout the Atlas. For a table showing the effects of all Standing Stones, consult the Shouts and Other Powers section (page 54), earlier in Training.

Sacred Stones (All-Maker Stones)

The Skaal of Solstheim revere six Sacred Stones, symbols of their bond with nature and the All-Maker. These places of power are being corrupted by Miraak, who is compelling the people of Solstheim to rebuild them to strengthen his own power.

A strange rune on a building in Solitude. It has a meaning to those in the know.

Eagle-eyed adventurers may notice that some locations across Skyrim are marked with strange glyphs. Unbeknownst to most, these runes are actually symbols used by the Thieves Guild to indicate locations that members feel are particularly wealthy targets, safe, dangerous, or have inhabitants that may be helpful or problematic. These symbols are known as Shadowmarks. To learn more about Shadowmarks, search the Thieves Guild for a book written by Delvin Mallory called Shadowmarks, which lists all of the markings that the Thieves Guild uses. For more information on Shadowmarks, see page 304.

BOOKS

Voracious readers will be pleased to learn that a wealth of knowledge is located in dozens of different books. These fall into one of six general categories: Skill Books, Spell Tomes, functional books, common books, notes and journals, and Black Books of Hermaeus Mora.

Skill Books

The Doors of Oblivion (Conjuration), one of only five copies of this rare book.

When read, these books increase one of your skills by a single point. There are five different Skill Books associated with each skill (meaning 90 different book titles), but there are multiple copies of each book (usually 3 to 5 each), bringing the total number of Skill Books to well over 400. However, you only receive a skill increase the first time you read any particular title; rereading that book or any of its copies has no further effect. This means you can only use Skill Books to increase each skill by a maximum of five points.

For example: Those interested in the Sneak skill should look for Three Thieves (four copies), 2920, Last Seed, v8 (four copies), Sacred Witness (four copies), Legend of Krately House (three copies), and The Red Kitchen Reader (five copies). This means there are 20 Sneak Skill Books and five points you can add to your Sneak from reading the first copy you encounter of each tome.

Spell Tomes

Spell Tome: Ice Storm (Destruction), which is located in the world or purchased from select vendors.

Spell Tomes are books of magic with the sigil of their school embossed on the front cover. When you read them, the book is consumed and you instantly learn the spell it contained. If you later find another copy of the same Spell Tome, sell it, as it isn't of any use to you anymore. You can purchase Spell Tomes from a few select vendors, the Court Wizards in each of the major Hold capitals, and the mages of the College of Winterhold. You can also find Spell Tomes randomly in dungeons.

Functional Books

Last Legends of Skyrim hints at an ancient mystery.

Functional books describe actual locations, legends, or mysteries to be discovered in the wilds of Skyrim. When read, they add locations to your world map and might trigger a quest or objective related to the contents of the book. There are seven of these types of books, each with several copies. Once you've read one copy, you never need to read another copy of the same book, as the information is identical.

Common Books

The Lusty Argonian Maid, v2, one of only three copies of this scandalous work.

There are a wide variety of other books in Skyrim. They provide stories, histories, advice on battle, fiction, and many other types of reading material to add a little flavor to your adventure. Many of these books provide interesting asides to locations you visit. However, none of these books grant you any kind of bonus; they are simply there to be read. Across Skyrim and Solstheim, there are 263 different books to read (or collect, if you like). Some are quite common, while others are rare and valuable.

Notes and Journals

A Note from Falk Firebeard of Solitude, delivered by courier during Side Quest: The Wolf Queen Awakened.

In addition to books, there are a wide variety of notes and journals used throughout your adventure to convey shorter or more personal messages, from the important to the trivial. Some are given or found during quests, while others can be picked up in houses and dungeons. Quest notes are listed in the appropriate quests, while most other notes simply aren't important enough to be tracked in this guide. But they're all worth a read, if you have the time.

NOTE Sample locations of every functional and common book are shown in the Inventory chapter (page 157). The two easiest locations to find every type of the Skill Book are also presented in the Appendices and across the Atlas.

Black Books and Apocrypha Powers

One of seven known Black Books, with the power to transport you into a realm of Oblivion.

On the isle of Solstheim, you may come across one of seven Black Books—tomes of forbidden knowledge that transport you into the realm of Oblivion controlled by the Daedric Prince Hermaeus Mora. This realm is known as Apocrypha. Two of these are found and used as part of the Dragonborn Main Quest.

The other five are located in specific dungeons across the island and can be found through normal exploration (even before the Dragonborn Main Quest). For example, the Black Book: Filament and Filigree can be found in Kolbjorn Barrow.

If you are on Solstheim (and not Skyrim), and you aren't engaged in combat, reading a Black Book will transport you to the book's corresponding Apocrypha realm. If you are not on Solstheim or are in combat, the book doesn't work.

Each book takes you to a specific Apocrypha realm (a dungeon you can explore). While all seven of these dungeons are known as "Apocrypha," they are all distinct areas. For clarity, this guide has subtitled each distinct area with the name of the book that sends you there. For example, when you read Black Book: Filament and Filigree, you are transported to a specific part of Apocrypha. You cannot move into areas served by other Black Books.

Your arrival into the churning, burning skies of Apocrypha, where all forbidden knowledge is learned...

Upon arriving in Apocrypha, you receive a quest to finish the Black Book you've just read. Exactly what happens next varies depending on the book you opened (which you can open as many times as you like by accessing it in your inventory). The variations are as follows:

For the Main Quest book Waking Dreams..., you read the book as part of Dragonborn Main Quest: The Temple of Miraak, but you don't obtain a quest because Miraak confronts you and throws you out of the realm. You can't complete this book until you do so as a part of Dragonborn Main Quest: At the Summit of Apocrypha.

For the Main Quest book Epistolary Acumen, you read the book as part of Dragonborn Main Quest: The Gardener of Men. Completing it is required by that quest.

For the other five books, you receive the corresponding Solstheim Side Quest (named the same as the book) as a reminder that you need to complete it.

When you appear in Apocrypha for the first time, you are confronted by an apparition of Hermaeus Mora, who beckons you into the realm, explaining it a little more clearly. This occurs only once.

As you progress through each Apocrypha realm, specific checkpoints are invisibly set as you complete certain actions or events. If you leave the realm and return, you will arrive at the last checkpoint—you don't have to start all over again. These checkpoints are never seen or known, but you're likely to appear just after the chapter you've reached in a previous exploration.

To leave Apocrypha and return to Solstheim, you can:

Die. Dying in Apocrypha simply transports you out; it doesn't actually kill you.

Read any Black Book in your inventory.

Complete the Apocrypha realm, reach the Reward Book, claim your reward, and then interact with the Reward Book again to leave.

When you leave Apocrypha, you return to Solstheim exactly where you were when you read the Black Book.

At the end of each Apocrypha realm, you will find a Reward Book. There are large tomes matching the name of the book you read to enter the realm. Interacting with the book opens it, causing three orbs to emerge, each representing a power or ability that the book can bestow.

Each book has a specific and distinct set of rewards (see page 53 for the powers and the following table for a complete list). Some are passive abilities that are always "on" while you have them. Some are powers, which you can use only once a day. Some are lesser powers, which you can use as often as you like.

Once you select a reward, interacting with the Reward Book again will return you to Solstheim. However, since you can always read the Black Book in your inventory to return to Apocrypha, you can return here and choose a different power whenever you want. You can have only one power from each book at a time.

NOTE Note that the Waking Dreams Reward Book (found at the end of Dragonborn Main Quest: At the Summit of Apocrypha) works differently: It displays images of the 18 Constellations. You can interact with these images to reset your perks in that constellation, allowing you to retool your skills.

Dragonborn Black Books and Apocrypha Powers List

The following table shows the rewards for each of the seven Black Books available in Apocrypha.

BLACK BOOK: WAKING DREAMS

BLACK BOOK LOCATED IN	BLACK BOOK DUNGEON	ASSOCIATED QUEST(S)
<input type="checkbox"/> [S.N24] Temple of Miraak	[S.A07] Apocrypha: Waking Dreams of a Starless Sky	Dragonborn Main Quest: The Temple of Miraak , At the Summit of Apocrypha
POWER NAME	DESCRIPTION	NOTES AND TIPS
<input type="checkbox"/> Shadow Constellations	Activated Object. You may spend a Dragon Soul to reset all of the Perks in a skill constellation.	You can spend as many Dragon Souls in this way as you like, allowing you to completely retool your character's perks whenever you want. This is great for experimenting with different combinations of perks, or for changing the feel of the game when you want a new challenge.

BLACK BOOK: EPISTOLARY ACUMEN

BLACK BOOK LOCATED IN	BLACK BOOK DUNGEON	ASSOCIATED QUEST(S)
<input type="checkbox"/> [S.S14] Nchardak	[S.A01] Apocrypha: Epistolary Acumen	Dragonborn Main Quest: The Gardener of Men
<input type="checkbox"/> Dragonborn Force	Passive Ability. Your Unrelenting Force Shout does more damage, and using all three words may disintegrate enemies.	Increases the damage of Unrelenting Force to 10/25/50. Enemies will only be disintegrated if you use the complete shout (all three words), and only if the damage would have killed them anyway.
<input type="checkbox"/> Dragonborn Flame	Passive Ability. When your Fire Breath Shout kills an enemy, a fire wurm emerges from their corpse to fight for you for 60s.	Fire Wyrms fight in melee, doing modest damage and setting foes on fire; see the Bestiary for complete details. They do not count as or replace any summoned creatures you may have. They remain at the spot where they were created (instead of following you), making this much more useful early in a battle.
<input type="checkbox"/> Dragonborn Frost	Passive Ability. Your Frost Breath Shout encases foes in ice for 15s.	Foes encased in ice are paralyzed and unable to attack (just as with the Ice Form Shout), although it's worth noting that, unlike Ice Form, they do not take additional damage over time. Enemies immune to paralysis are immune to this effect as well.

BLACK BOOK: FILAMENT AND FILIGREE

✓ BLACK BOOK LOCATED IN	BLACK BOOK DUNGEON	ASSOCIATED QUEST(S)
<input type="checkbox"/> [S.004] Kolbjorn Barrow	[S.A02] Apocrypha: Filament and Filigree	Solstheim Side Quest: Black Book: Filament and Filigree, Solstheim Side Quest: Unearthed
<input type="checkbox"/> Secret of Strength	Power. Power attacks cost no Stamina for 30s.	Combined with a good weapon and the Elemental Fury Shout, this power allows you to inflict incredible amounts of damage.
<input type="checkbox"/> Secret of Arcana	Power. Spells cost no Magicka for 30s.	This power actually reduces the cost of all of your spells to 0, potentially allowing you to cast high-cost Ritual spells you normally couldn't afford at all. Care to summon a Storm Thrall? Or maybe blast your enemy with Lightning Storm for 30 seconds straight?
<input type="checkbox"/> Secret of Protection	Power. You take half damage for 30s from all physical and most magical attacks.	If you prefer defense to offense, Secret of Protection can make a huge difference against enemies with a high damage output (such as dragons or Karstaag), halving all incoming damage for its duration.

BLACK BOOK: THE HIDDEN TWILIGHT

✓ BLACK BOOK LOCATED IN	BLACK BOOK DUNGEON	ASSOCIATED QUEST(S)
<input type="checkbox"/> [S.000] Tel Mithryn	[S.A03] Apocrypha: The Hidden Twilight	Solstheim Side Quest: Black Book: The Hidden Twilight, Solstheim Side Quest: The Reluctant Steward
✓ POWER NAME	DESCRIPTION	NOTES AND TIPS
<input type="checkbox"/> Mora's Agony	Power. Summons a field of writhing tentacles that lasts 30 seconds and poisons foes who enter it.	In addition to poisoning foes (5dmg/s for 3s), the tentacles also stagger enemies, who may stumble into them repeatedly and suffer the poison effect multiple times. This makes Mora's Agony an effective way of stopping humanoid pursuers in their tracks (though don't expect it to stop a Dragon or a Mammoth). Consult the Bestiary to make sure your foes are not immune to poison.
<input type="checkbox"/> Mora's Grasp	Power. Target is frozen between Oblivion and Tamriel for 30 seconds, and immune to all damage.	Mora's Grasp affects a much wider range of targets than most paralysis-type spells: only Dragons and some boss enemies are unaffected by it. Just be careful not to miss—you only get one shot per day.
<input type="checkbox"/> Mora's Boon	Power. Fully restores your Health, Magicka, and Stamina.	It may not be flashy, but having a full heal on hand can make all the difference if you find yourself in a close battle and run out of potions.

BLACK BOOK: THE SALLOW REGENT

✓ BLACK BOOK LOCATED IN	BLACK BOOK DUNGEON	ASSOCIATED QUEST(S)
<input type="checkbox"/> [S.N17] White Ridge Barrow	[S.A04] Apocrypha: The Sallow Regent	Solstheim Side Quest: Black Book: The Sallow Regent
<input type="checkbox"/> Seeker of Might	Passive Ability. Improves all of your combat skills by 10%.	This ability increases the damage you do with all weapons by 10%, increases the amount of damage blocking will prevent by 10%, increases the armor rating of your Heavy Armor by 10%, and increases the bonuses you get from tempering items by 10%.
<input type="checkbox"/> Seeker of Sorcery	Passive Ability. Improves all of your magic skills by 10%.	This ability reduces the cost of all spells by 10%, and increases the strength of your enchantments by 10%.
<input type="checkbox"/> Seeker of Shadows	Passive Ability. Improves all of your stealth skills by 10%.	This ability increases the armor rating of your Light Armor by 10%, makes it 10% easier to sneak, pick locks, or pick pockets, and improves the prices you get from buying or selling items by 10%.

BLACK BOOK: UNTOLD LEGENDS

<input type="checkbox"/> [S.N16] Benkongerike	[S.A05] Apocrypha: Untold Legends	Solstheim Side Quest: Black Book: Untold Legends
✓ POWER NAME	DESCRIPTION	NOTES AND TIPS
<input type="checkbox"/> Black Market	Lesser Power. Summons a Dremora merchant for 15s.	Black Market allows you to summon a merchant anytime, anywhere. The Dremora Merchant has 2000 gold and a small selection of rare and enchanted items to sell. However, he drives a hard bargain—expect to pay more, and get less, than you would from any other merchant.
<input type="checkbox"/> Secret Servant	Lesser Power. Summons a Dremora butler for 15s.	If you'd prefer to save your loot and sort it out when you get back to town, Secret Servant summons a dremora butler who can carry up to 150-weight of items for you.
<input type="checkbox"/> Bardic Knowledge	Lesser Power. Summons a spectral drum to play for you, increasing Stamina regeneration for you and nearby allies for 240s.	More of a fun choice, the drum summoned by Bardic Knowledge just follows you around and plays instrumental music. It does provide a significant (50%) boost to your Stamina regeneration, and doesn't count as or replace any summoned creatures you may have.

BLACK BOOK: THE WINDS OF CHANGE

✓ BLACK BOOK LOCATED IN	BLACK BOOK DUNGEON	ASSOCIATED QUEST(S)
<input type="checkbox"/> [S.000] Raven Rock (Mine)	[S.A06] Apocrypha: The Winds of Change	Solstheim Side Quest: Black Book: The Winds of Change
✓ POWER NAME	DESCRIPTION	NOTES AND TIPS
<input type="checkbox"/> Scholar's Insight	Passive Ability. Reading Skill Books gives you an extra Skill Point.	Scholar's Insight is great for getting maximum value out of the Skill Books you find. For best results, avoid reading skill books until you hit 90 in a skill, then read all five for a quick boost to 100.
<input type="checkbox"/> Companion's Insight	Passive Ability. Your attacks, shouts, and destruction spells do no damage to your followers in combat.	If you prefer ranged combat or (especially) spells with large areas of effect, you may have accidentally killed your own followers on occasion. Take this ability, and you'll never have to worry about that again.
<input type="checkbox"/> Lover's Insight	Passive Ability. Do 10% more damage and get 10% better prices from people of the opposite sex.	This is a more subtle bonus, but its effects do add up over time. Consult the Traders list in the appendix to identify vendors of the opposite sex.

Apocrypha Fonts

In Apocrypha, you can find sculptures with blue and green orbs set into them. Interacting with them will fully restore your Magicka or Stamina, respectively. You can use each font only once per visit to Apocrypha.

Quests

Quests are a series of related objectives that make up a single mission or story. These range from the simple to the epic, and a large amount of this guide is spent detailing every one of them! In game, the Quest Journal tracks all of your current and former quests, while the General Stats page keeps track of how many quests you've completed. Remember that there are dozens of Miscellaneous Objectives, Favor Quests, and World Encounters and Interactions to discover as well. Every quest is documented later in this guide.

TIP The Quest Target Marker is exceptionally useful, and you should always keep the target for your current quest(s) turned on. Remember to set your quest or objective as "Active" first, then highlight the quest and press "Show on Map" to display the world map centered on the location you need to reach. The marker will also appear on your compass to guide you.

Favors and Friendship

Ingratiate yourself with important folks, such as Jarl Laila Law-Giver of Riften, to gain social standing and power.

When visiting a city, town, or settlement, take a moment to speak with everyone you meet. In addition to learning more about the area, they often have a Favor or other task they could use your help with. Complete it, and they react to you much more favorably. Keep this up among folks in the same settlement, and you'll soon hear the guards mention your pleasant reputation. Consult the Miscellaneous Objectives and Favor Quest chapters, beginning on page 489, for a list of the huge number of favors you can perform.

Making friends has several useful benefits:

- Your friends will often be willing to help you in return.

- They will occasionally give you gifts.

- They may allow you to take items from their house, shop, or market stall without paying for them (you'll notice that many items are no longer marked "steal," so help yourself!).

- They're willing to put you up for the night. When in their home, you are no longer trespassing, and you can sleep in any bed they own. An unscrupulous "friend" could take advantage of this hospitality to rob them blind...

- Some may even be willing to join you on your adventure if you ask! Consult the Followers list later in this section for details.

NOTE Completing Favors for a Hold's inhabitants also wins you the Jarl's attention. Complete the Jarl's quest or Favors, and you will be given the title of Thane. Thanes are granted the services of a housecarl (see Followers, page 100) and receive more lenient treatment for crimes they commit (see Crime, page 64). You can become the Thane of any or all of the nine Holds.

Houses

Buying a House

When the time comes to establish yourself as more than just a wandering dragon-slayer, you can put down roots in any (or all) of Skyrim's major capitals by purchasing a House. You can't just saunter into town with a hefty bag of gold and demand a dwelling, though: You must first win the Jarl's trust. Speak to them and complete the quests or Favors they assign until you earn their friendship and permission to buy a house in the city. For more details on what you need to do, see the appropriate Thane task in the Favors section (see page 502).

TIP Remember, the Civil War affects who controls each of the five major cities. If your faction takes control of a city, you can be sure the newly installed Jarl will reward your efforts and may give you permission to purchase a house immediately!

With the Jarl's approval, you can now approach the steward (who is usually nearby) and ask about purchasing a home. The price is displayed and is not negotiable. Pay the steward, and you receive the key to the dwelling.

Decorating Your Property

Furnish your house with a variety of accoutrements, ideally keeping your areas tidy.

Once you've purchased a house, you can leave it in its current (usually sparse and cobwebbed) state or speak to the steward again to begin decorating it. Each house comes with a Home Decorating Guide that describes the options available to you, so you can make an informed decision about which furnishings to purchase. In addition to purely cosmetic items like chairs or cupboards, decorations also include such useful things as crafting stations, weapon racks, mannequins, and bookshelves. Simply return to the steward and buy the decorations you want; when you return to your house, they have been installed.

Benefits of Home Ownership

Owning a house gives you a variety of useful benefits:

- You have a convenient base of operations in the city, with several easily accessible crafting stations and a bed you own (for the Well Rested or Lover's Comfort bonuses, see page 54).

- You can store any weapons, armor, crafting materials, or other items you have in your house, knowing they will always be there when you return.

- You can prominently display the weapons, artifacts, and items that you've collected on a variety of weapon racks, weapon plaques, mannequins, and bookshelves.

- If you've been named Thane of the Hold, you can find your housecarl in your house, ready to join you at a moment's notice.

- If you're married (see Side Quest: The Bonds of Matrimony, page 423), you can also ask your spouse to move in with you, instead of meeting them in the inn or bedding down in their (often rudimentary) place!

MINOR SPOILERS

Throughout the realm, there are those who stand ready to join you in your adventure and are prepared to lay down their lives in your service. These selfless companions are broadly known as Followers. Followers may join you for any number of reasons, whether because you've hired their services, helped them in the past, or are simply taking on a charge that they have an interest in. Some join you only for the duration of a specific quest, while others will follow you indefinitely. This section explores these and other details about your Followers.

NOTE Typically, you can have only one human Follower and one animal (dog) Follower at a time, although additional Followers may join you temporarily for a quest that they have an interest in.

General Traits

Your Follower normally acts as a shadow, bodyguard, item repository, and friend.

When a Follower has agreed to join you on your adventure, there are several advantages they bring and help you can expect from them:

Equipment: Your Followers will always equip the best weapons, armor, and items they have available and will try to use staves and other items effectively. They take their own skills and proficiencies into account when making these decisions, so all else being equal, expect Jenassa (an archer) to prefer a bow to a two-handed sword and light armor to heavy plate.

Skills: All Followers have a specific set of favored skills (listed below), which improve as their level increases. Unlike your character, Followers do not become better at the skills they use—for example, no matter how hard you try to force Marcurio (a mage) to be a greatsword-wielding warrior, he'll always be better with magic. Make sure to select a Follower whose skill set meets your needs.

Levels: Most Followers automatically level up when you do, so there's no need to worry about a Follower "falling behind" if you go off and adventure on your own or want to work with someone else for a while.

Tactics: Followers will try to follow your lead whenever possible:

When you sneak, they will sneak as well and will stop when you do. Don't expect them to take cover on their own, though—if you want them to hide in a particular location, order them to move to it.

When you draw or sheathe your weapons, so will they.

When attacked, they will use their best weapons, spells, and tactics to defend both themselves and you.

Catching Up: If you travel on horseback (or with the great loping strides of a werewolf), you may find that your Followers fall behind. Don't worry about losing them; there are several ways you can help them catch up:

Just Wait (using the Wait System), and they'll use the time to catch up.

Load into any new space, and they'll be right behind you.

Fast-Travel anywhere, and they'll arrive next to you.

Heading Home: If you dismiss a Follower, they will return home and take up their original routine. Most Followers will rejoin you if you ask, though you may need to pay for the services of hirelings again if too much time has passed.

Death and Dying: When a Follower's health is exhausted, they will collapse. Heal them or finish the combat and wait for their health to regenerate, and they will recover, none the worse for wear.

CAUTION Be careful, though—if you inflict lethal damage on a Follower, either directly (e.g., by hitting them with an errant attack) or indirectly (e.g., from the blast of a fireball), they will die. Permanently.

At Your Command

You can also issue orders to your Followers. To do this, either speak to them or enter Command mode (target them, then press and hold the Activate button until the cursor changes). The available orders are:

Wait/Follow: If you want to explore an area on your own or try a stealthy approach, use the Wait command to tell your Follower to stop shadowing you. Once you're done, return to your Follower and tell them to accompany you again. Note there are some situations and locations where Followers can't accompany you (such as to jail, if you're arrested). If you leave a Follower at a location and don't return, they eventually return home.

Do Something: You can order your Follower to do something specific, which can be helpful in all kinds of situations. Move your target crosshairs onto something you want your Follower to use, take, steal, or attack, then press Activate to give the order.

Trade Items: This allows you to exchange items between your inventory and your Follower's. Some notes:

All Followers start with some basic equipment. You can't take these items from them. You can, however, give your Followers better gear, such as items that you've improved, enchanted, or think your Follower might be more adept at using. If they judge the item is better than what they currently have, they'll equip it immediately.

You can have your Follower carry their share of the treasure, effectively turning them into a pack mule. This roughly doubles the amount of loot you can carry, which is handy if you're trying to gather as much as you can from a dungeon before returning to town and selling it off. Note that your Followers do have a maximum carry weight (not shown), so there is a limit to what they can carry as well.

Part Ways: If this relationship just isn't working out, you can tell your Follower that you no longer need their services. They'll head home, and you can then acquire a different Follower or set off on your own.

Other Notes and Tips

When choosing a Follower, pick one that complements your play style. If you're adept at sneaking and silent ranged takedowns with a bow, find someone with similar prowess. If you're a robed mage, seek the company of a powerful warrior to hold your foes at bay. Experiment around with the available Followers until you find one you enjoy adventuring with. Then add a dog!

It's almost always a good idea to bring a Follower along; they can distract foes, soak up damage on your behalf, and help you to take down enemies more quickly. However, there are two cases to be wary of:

If you plan to take a stealthy approach to your next mission, Followers can be more of a hindrance than a help. Even with a well-outfitted stealthy Follower, they can't use cover and concealment as effectively as you can. When stealth is essential, you may want to go it alone.

If you're a Mage with a lot of area-of-effect spells, the collateral damage can be lethal to your Followers. Control your casting carefully, or leave your Follower at home and take up Conjurium instead—Atronachs are immune to spells of their element, and Zombies are, well, dead anyway.

NOTE Many Followers are also Trainers. Bring them with you, and you will be able to train whenever you like, so long as you have the funds.

You can also be romantically tied to many Followers. Consult Side Quest: The Bonds of Matrimony (page 423) for more details.

Types of Followers

This section identifies all of the characters who can become your Followers. We detail each Follower's primary combat style (e.g., Warrior) and their favored skills. We also note any prerequisites for obtaining them.

In general, Followers can be classified into these major categories:

Hirelings: Mercenaries who will accompany you if you hire them.

Housecarls: If you are named Thane of a Hold, the Jarl will appoint a Housecarl as your bodyguard.

Guildmates: If you join one of the major guilds, you may be able to ask your fellow guild members to follow you.

Quest or Dungeon Followers: These characters will follow you once you complete their quest or dungeon.

Favor Followers: Friends you have completed Favors for may join you if you ask.

Animal Companions: Loyal dogs who will fight at your side in combat. The following are also available:

Armored Trolls, Armored Frost Trolls, Death Hounds, and Huskies

A Steadfast Dwarven Spider and a Steadfast Dwarven Sphere

TIP To find the exact location of every Follower, simply look up the settlement mentioned in their description in the Atlas.

Hirelings

The following are mercenaries for hire, each with their own unique combat style. To purchase their services, you must pay a flat fee of 500 gold pieces. If you dismiss them, they may charge you that fee again.

HORSES

Shadowmere: The ultimate steed of Skyrim?

Horses can be purchased and used by adventurers to quickly travel between far-flung destinations. There are several ways in which you can acquire a horse:

Buying a Horse

You can purchase a horse at the stables adjacent to each of the five major Hold capitals; the four minor Hold capitals (Morthal, Dawnstar, Winterhold, and Falkreath) do not have stables.

Each stable sells a particular type of horse. The price of each horse, regardless of its type, is 1,000 gold pieces. This price is fixed and isn't affected by your Speech skill, Speech perks, or other effects (such as a Potion of Hagglng). Horses are all identical in terms of speed, health, and performance; the only difference is their color.

AVAILABLE HORSES

Owning a Horse

Horses you own are always saddled and have your name added to their title (e.g., "Prisoner's Horse"). This helps you differentiate between your horse and any others that may be around—just look for the name and saddle.

You can own all five types of horses, providing you have the gold to pay for each of them. If you own more than one horse, the horse you've most recently ridden travels with you if you decide to Fast-Travel to a location. All of your other horses return to the stables where you purchased them and wait for you there (you can return and use them whenever you wish).

Borrowing or Stealing a Horse

You can steal horses from several different locations. The best places to look are the stables where you can purchase a steed, any military camp or military fort, and in World Encounters. To steal a horse, simply walk up to it and mount it. Stealing a horse adds 50 to your bounty for that Hold. Dismounting from a stolen steed and then mounting it again counts as a separate theft, adding 50 more gold to your bounty. Horse rustling can get expensive fast.

Occasionally, you can "borrow" an unowned horse (one not marked "Steal") from a location, World Encounter, or military fort. Unowned horses behave in the same manner as stolen horses, except that riding them isn't a crime and your bounty won't increase.

Using a Horse

It is important to learn what you and your steed are capable of. Horses can move at a canter (run) and gallop (sprint) speed equal to your very best run and sprint speeds while on foot. However, horses aren't weighed down by your armor, and they likely have more stamina than you do, making them a faster way to travel overall. Plus, you get to conserve your stamina so you won't be worn out if you find yourself ambushed by brigands on the road.

Horses can charge through or leap over low or small obstacles (essentially anything you could jump across when on foot). Larger obstacles can't be jumped, so avoid them or move around them.

By nature, horses are not aggressive, and although able to attack, they generally flee from combat once you dismount.

Your Followers can't ride horses. If you ride off on horseback, your Follower will run after you but is likely to fall behind. When you approach your destination, you may want to stop and use the Wait command, which will give them a chance to catch up.

▶ Controlling a Horse

When riding a horse, it's important to note the following controls:

The camera is locked into a third-person view, and the View-Switch button centers the camera behind you.

The Activate button allows you to dismount. You must dismount in order to activate objects or speak to others.

The Jump button causes your horse to rear dramatically. You can jump while riding a horse if you're running at a moderate pace.

The Sprint button allows you to gallop.

▶ Fast-Traveling and Horses

If you own one or more horses, the horse you most recently rode will Fast-Travel with you. This is handy if you've lost your horse after a fight or emerged from a dungeon in a different location. Simply Fast-Travel somewhere nearby, and your horse will be standing next to you.

If you're riding a stolen or borrowed horse, your horse will only Fast-Travel with you if you're riding it when you trigger the Fast-Travel. Otherwise, you'll leave it behind.

Horses won't accompany you into cities, dungeons, or other interiors. If you Fast-Travel to a city, your horse will be left at the stables just outside.

▶ The Death of a Horse

While riding a horse, most of the damage from falls and enemy attacks will be absorbed by your horse. When a horse is reduced to 10% of its health or less, it drops you and tries to flee. If your horse takes lethal damage, it will die.

If you own a horse and it expires, a new horse of the same type will become available for purchase at the same stables as previously indicated. The same cannot be said for Frost or Shadowmere; when they expire, it is usually permanent.

▶ Mounted Combat

This information is designed to be read after you've familiarized yourself with the section on Horses (see above).

The ultimate steed and rider of Skyrim: Arvak attacks!

For the warrior, charging a group of bandits on the Whiterun tundra has never been so epic, especially if you're riding a steed and bloodying your blade while on horseback!

The Basics of Mounted Combat

Before you ride off with bludgeoning from horseback on your mind, it's worth having a small amount of practice first and learning the rudimentary rules for fighting from a horse:

You're able to use one-handed weapons, two-handed weapons, or archery (bows/crossbows) in mounted combat. You can't use staves, torches, shields, or spells of any kind.

Only the weapon equipped in your right hand is used for mounted combat. If you equip a weapon in your left hand, it can't be used.

In mounted combat, you wield two-handed weapons with one hand, but they swing much more slowly than one-handed weapons do. You still can't equip anything in your left hand while using them.

Weapon Attacks

The Left Hand button will use your equipped weapon to attack to the left of the horse. The Right Hand button will use your equipped weapon to attack to the right of the horse. If you hold either the Left or Right Hand buttons, you will draw back and hold your attack until you release the button. This makes it easier to time a "ride-by" attack. This strike is also a power attack (which costs Stamina, hits harder, and does more damage). If you don't have enough Stamina to perform the power attack, you'll just perform a regular attack instead, as you would if fighting on foot.

Bow Attacks

Bow attacks work as usual, although you cannot aim behind you. Archery Perks like Eagle Eye (zoom) and Steady Hand (slow time while aiming) will still work, although Ranger (faster movement speed) will not increase your speed while riding a horse.

The Subtleties of Mounted Combat

Once you're able to maneuver around a group of foes and rip them apart from your steed, consider the following advanced tactics:

If you're wielding a one-handed weapon, equip a shield. Even though you can't actively block with it, the shield still increases your armor rating.

If you're a dual-wielding specialist, don't despair! You may not be able to use your left-hand weapon in mounted combat, but just having it equipped will still allow you to take advantage of the Dual Flurry (faster attack speed) and Dual Savagery (higher power attack damage) Perks, if you have them.

More generally, any One-Handed, Two-Handed, or Archery Perks you have will still apply during mounted combat, although you may not be able to perform certain attacks (such as directional power attacks) while mounted.

You can sprint on the horse while attacking. This doesn't affect your attack in any way (damage, stagger chance, etc.), but it will make it a little easier for you to flee.

During mounted combat, virtually all incoming damage will be absorbed by your horse. While horses have a fair amount of Health (around 300 points), this damage adds up quickly, and you have no way to heal your horse while mounted. If you aren't careful, your horse will die, and replacing horses can get expensive fast. If you plan to use mounted combat extensively, you may wish to consider a more sturdy beast (Shadowmere) or one you can recall if he should die (Arvak).

Mounted combat keeps you and your horse together. Particularly when riding Shadowmere, you may want to consider whether you could be more effective fighting separately.

Advantages of Mounted Combat

Your horse acts as a damage shield, taking almost all of the damage that you would otherwise suffer.

Remaining on horseback allows you to move quickly and make a getaway if the combat turns against you.

Disadvantages of Mounted Combat

Your combat options are much more limited, since you can't block or cast spells. You may find it more difficult to time and aim your attacks.

Once you dismount, most horses will usually flee, although this does distract enemies and absorbs damage from anyone who attacks them.

However, once you dismount, if you're riding Shadowmere (the Dark Brotherhood's special horse), he is free to attack, giving you an extra ally in your fight.

Unique Horses: Arvak, Frost, and Shadowmere

There are three unique horses you may wish to seek out:

Frost: As part of Side Quest: Promises to Keep (page 459), you're tasked with stealing Frost from the Black-Briar Lodge in the Rift. At the end of this quest, you have the option to betray the man who sent you on that mission, Louis Letrush, and keep Frost for yourself. If you do, you gain legal ownership of Frost. Aside from the fact this didn't cost you any gold, Frost is a normal horse in every other respect.

Shadowmere: At the start of Dark Brotherhood Quest: The Cure for Madness (page 327), Astrid—the leader of the Dark Brotherhood—summons Shadowmere, a powerful steed. From this point forward, you have ownership of Shadowmere. In addition to this not costing you any gold, Shadowmere has other advantages:

He has twice the stamina and almost five times the health of a normal horse.

When injured, his health regenerates rapidly, making him extremely difficult for foes to kill.

He is much more aggressive than a normal horse, fighting with you instead of fleeing from danger.

With glowing eyes, a unique saddle, and a jet-black mane, Shadowmere is one of the ultimate steeds of Skyrim!

Arvak: Complete Regional Activities: Soul Cairn: Arvak the Spectral Steed* (see page 573), and find Arvak's Skull within this realm. Return it to the lost soul in the cairn. In gratitude, the soul teaches you a spell that causes Arvak to appear before you.

Summon Arvak to aid you on your travels. Select Magic > Conjunction > Summon Arvak, and with enough Magicka, you can conjure the spectral horse in the Skyrim Exterior, Blackreach, Forgotten Vale Exterior, Soul Cairn, Dayspring Canyon, and Solstheim Exterior.

CARRIAGES AND FERRIES

Carriages: Hold Capital Travel

Travel between Hold capitals in some style and comfort.

If you can't afford a horse, carriages are another good way to quickly travel around Skyrim. Outside each of the five major Hold capitals (generally near the stables), you can find a horse cart hitched up and ready to go. Speak to the driver to learn that he offers a carriage service and will gladly ferry you to any of Skyrim's capitals for a nominal fee:

20 gold for a ride to the major Hold capitals: Solitude, Markarth, Whiterun, Windhelm, or Riften.

50 gold for a ride to the minor Hold capitals: Morthal, Dawnstar, Winterhold, or Falkreath.

If you've constructed Windstad Manor, Heljarchen Hall, or Lakeview Manor, and hired a carriage driver, you can travel between your properties and the Hold capitals free of charge. These carriage drivers can also take you to the smaller settlements (any village, town, or Hold capital).

Pay the fee, then head around back and activate the carriage to climb aboard. The driver will mention a piece of lore as you set off. A moment later, you'll find yourself at your destination.

TIP Is this a good deal? It depends on your play style. If you'd rather walk or ride from one location to another, you may find the journey as rewarding as the destination, with dozens of locations to explore and challenges to face along the way. If you simply want to reach your goal as quickly as possible, a carriage ride will take you to the nearest city in record time. Spend 300 gold, and you can quickly unlock all of the capital cities, allowing you to Fast-Travel to them whenever you wish.

Ferries: Setting Sail

Gort waits patiently on the icy docks of Windhelm for a paying customer.

Are the carriage drivers of Skyrim giving you a bit of backchat? Fed up of buying a horse and having it die in the wilderness? Then why not travel through Skyrim by sea (and specifically, the Sea of Ghosts), courtesy of Skyrim's fledgling Ferry system? Recently launched, there are now ferry boats moored at the docks in Solitude, Dawnstar, and Windhelm:

Jolf is tending to his boat on the edge of the docks at the East Empire Company Warehouse, just south of Solitude.

Harlaug has moored his vessel on the shallow beach close to Silus Vesuius's House in Dawnstar.

Gort is waiting for a paying customer outside Windhelm's gates, down in the dock area, just outside the Clan Shatter-Shield Office.

Speak to the ferryman by each boat, and you're offered a ride to either of the other two cities. The cost is 50 gold. Agree, climb into the boat and sit down, and you appear at the docks (described above) at the city you chose.

In addition, once you complete Dawnguard Main Quest: Awakening, you can ask any ferryman to bring you to Castle Volkihar (Serana's home), although it's described as "an island near the border of High Rock." This startles the ferryman, as they believe the place is cursed and won't take you all the way there; they take you only to Icwaters Jetty. The fee for this dangerous journey is 500 gold!

If you haven't already visited Northwatch Keep (for Side Quest: Missing in Action) and can't Fast-Travel anywhere close to Icwaters Jetty, the cost may be worth it. Otherwise, you can trek there on foot (although this takes time). From Icwaters Jetty, you can take the rowboat out to Castle Volkihar.

The Northern Maiden

Launching from Windhelm Docks, the Northern Maiden makes Raven Rock on the isle of Solstheim its port, transporting people and cargo to and from the mainland. This is the only method of entering the island, and safe passage must be obtained by speaking with the ship's captain, Gjalund Salt-Sage.

Dragon Taming

Once the Bend Will Shout is learned, you may summon a Dragon instead of battling it. This occurs throughout Skyrim or Solstheim

In order to tame and ride a dragon, you must learn all three words of the Bend Will Shout by completing Dragonborn Main Quest: The Gardener of Men; then unlock them with Dragon Souls in the usual manner. After that, you need to find a dragon:

If you have completed the Main Quest, you can call upon Odahviig, using the Call Dragon Shout.

You can also tame almost any dragon you find in the wild. Dragon lairs or dragon mounds are often the best places to look for them.

The following dragons cannot be tamed or ridden:

Alduin
Paarthurnax
Durnehviir

Use the complete Bend Will Shout on the dragon to tame it. You must use the full Shout (all three words), or it will have no effect.

Dragon Riding

Dragons offer great protection, swift travel, and the ability to Fast-Travel, even during combat!

After you successfully tame a dragon, it will land nearby. Press your Activate button or key to mount up and begin riding. While riding a dragon, you can:

Orbit: By default, the dragon will simply begin flying around the immediate area. Enjoy the view—it's often spectacular.

Lock Targets: You can press the Jump button or key to enter or exit target-lock mode. While you are in target lock mode:

The name of your current target will be displayed below the compass. Your camera will remain focused on this target as the dragon flies around.

You can cycle between targets with the left and right arrows on your D-pad.

You can order your dragon to attack by pressing the Sneak button or key.

You can equip and use most spells and Shouts (those that can't be used will be grayed out). Given the dragon's high rate of speed, only projectile spells and Shouts tend to be effective, though.

Fly to a Destination: While your dragon is flying, you can call up the map to Fast-Travel to almost any location you have discovered. You will arrive still mounted and ready to engage in combat.

While riding a dragon, you can Fast-Travel even while in combat. This makes it easy to escape if the battle is going badly for you. However, you cannot Fast-Travel to some destinations, such as Dragonsreach, in this way and that location will be hidden on your map.

Dismount: When you're ready to move on, press the Activate button or key button to order the dragon to land. If you change your mind, you can press the Activate button or key again to cancel the landing.

Death from Above: Advice for Proficient Dragon Combat

The might of the Dragonborn wins over this most terrifying of beasts: Sky-bound to victory!

If you use Bend Will on a dragon but decide not to ride it or are at a location where the dragon can't find room to land (such as Deepwood Vale), the dragon will just orbit your position and engage your foes in combat. This is often as (or more) useful than actually riding it—you can't ask for a better ally than a dragon.

If you decide not to ride your dragon, then change your mind, just aim Bend Will at it to get it to land again and allow you to climb on. However, this does not extend the duration of the Bend Will effect.

If you choose not to enter Target Lock mode, your dragon can still fight on its own. It will initiate combat if attacked, pick its own targets, and continue fighting until they are defeated. Leaving Target Lock mode does not cause your dragon to break off combat.

When you first enter Target Lock mode, your initial target is either your dragon's current combat target or the nearest available target (if your dragon isn't in combat). The list of available targets does not update, so if more foes join the fray, exit and reenter Target Lock mode to acquire them.

When you use projectile spells or Shouts while in Target Lock mode, you automatically lead your target (aim your shot based on their current movement). Your shots are most accurate when both your target and your dragon are flying in a straight line (or your target is standing still). If you have trouble connecting, choose a spell with an explosive impact, like Fireball.

If your dragon loses too much health, it will land and remain on the ground until it dies or its health recovers enough for it to fly again. If you have the Restoration spell Grand Healing, you can use it to heal both the dragon and yourself.

If you are not riding your dragon, it will fight for you until the Bend Will Shout expires; then it will fly away. If you are riding it, the dragon will never become "untamed," even if the Bend Will effect expires—it will wait until the next time you land, at which point it will immediately fly away.

Once your dragon departs, if you wait around long enough, it may return to its original location (e.g., to its lair), although it will no longer be friendly with you.

MINOR SPOILERS

In this section of the Training chapter, we briefly highlight the services, merchants, collectibles, and objects of interest that you can discover on your adventure. Those marked with an asterisk (*) are tracked in the Atlas. Those marked with a dagger (†) have a table in the Appendix that shows every location or instance of them in the game, or in the case of Skill Books, the two easiest locations to find in the game. Those marked with a double dagger (‡) have a chart or table elsewhere in this guide that shows all of their locations or instances.

If there's something that you're looking for that isn't listed here or in a specific location in this guide's Inventory, Bestiary, Atlas, or Appendices, it probably occurs randomly in the world and is thus impossible to track.

Achievements/Trophies

If you want to obtain all the different Achievements (PC and Xbox 360) or Trophies (PlayStation 3) that Skyrim has to offer, consult the Appendices. It lists all of them and provides advice on how to obtain each. You are wise to consult this chart now so you know how to unlock each of these rewards ahead of time.

Services and Traders

Apothecary*†

Number Available: 17

This is a shop where alchemy ingredients and potions are sold. Apothecaries can be found in most towns and cities and typically display a sign such as the one shown here.

Innkeeper/Bartender*†

Number Available: 21

The proprietors of inns and taverns sell food and drink and rent rooms where weary travelers can sleep for the night. They are also a great source of local rumors, which often lead to quests and objectives.

Blacksmith/Fletcher*†

Number Available: 41

In medium or large settlements, you can often find a smith, which typically includes several smithing and crafting stations, often manned by a smith who sells weapons and armor. Most display a sign like the one shown here.

Caravan*‡

Number Available: 3

Three Khajiit Caravans travel the roads of Skyrim, selling their wares and trading with anyone they meet. The routes they take are listed in the Atlas.

Follower/Hireling*‡

Number Available: 70

A person who may be willing to join you on your adventure, lending sword or spell to your cause. Hirelings charge a fee for their services. Consult the information earlier in the Training, on page 101.

Stables/Carriage Drivers *

Number Available: 8
Ferryman: 4

A location, always close to a Hold capital, where you can purchase or steal horses. You can usually find a carriage nearby as well; pay the carriage driver a nominal fee for a ride to any of Skyrim's other major cities. These are Primary Locations in the Atlas.

Trader (Vendor)*†

Number Available: 73

These merchants sell a variety of general goods, pawned items, and the like. Fences for stolen items are also included in this category, although not all vendors are fences (and none will serve as fences right away).

Fence: 10
Food Vendor: 10
General Goods Vendor: 25
Lumberjack: 9
"Special" Vendor: 5
Spell Vendor: 14

Trainer*‡

Number Available: 61

A skilled individual (who may also be a Follower or Trader) who can help you improve a particular skill. Consult the information earlier in the Training, on page 15.

Crafting Stations

Alchemy Lab*

A table-sized laboratory where you can mix ingredients into potions and poisons by using your Alchemy skill.

Arcane Enchanter*

A table-sized piece of furniture where you can enchant or disenchant magical items using your Enchanting skill.

Anvil or Blacksmith Forge*

The tools of a blacksmith, a forge, or an anvil allow you to forge metal, leather, and more esoteric materials into weapons, armor, and jewelry by using your Smithing skill.

Cooking Pot and Spit

A spit, stew pot, or other implement where meats and ingredients can be cooked. There are a huge number of these—one in almost every house.

Grindstone*

A foot-driven stone wheel that allows you to sharpen and improve weapons by using your Smithing skill.

Smelter*

A furnace that allows you to smelt ore (and some Dwarven materials) into ingots for smithing or selling.

Staff Enchanter*

A table-sized piece of furniture located in Tel Mithryn that allows you to enchant staffs using your Enchanting skill.

Tanning Rack*

A wooden rack that allows you to dry pelts and tan them into leather (or leather strips) for smithing or selling.

Wood Chopping Block

An old tree stump where you can split logs into firewood. They can be found in almost any lumber camp or settlement.

Workbench*

A sturdy bench that allows you to temper and improve armor by using your Smithing skill.

Collectibles

Captured Critter*†

Number Available: 5

An insect caught in a glass jar. Find these as part of Side Quest: Captured Critters*.

Crimson Nirnroot*†

Number Available: 30+

Related Character: Avrusa Sarethi (Sarenthi Farm in the Rift)

A special red variant of the odd, chiming plant, found only in the underground realm of Blackreach. Collect these as part of Side Quest: A Return to your Roots.

Dragon Priest Mask*†

Number Available: 10

An ancient ceremonial mask, infused with great power and borne by a formidable Dragon Priest. Find these as part of Side Quest: Masks of the Dragon Priests.

Dragon Acolyte Mask*†

Number Available: 4

An ancient ceremonial mask, infused with great power and worn by a frightening servant of Miraak the Dragonborn. Find these as part of Solstheim Side Quest: Masks of the Acolyte Priests.

Books†

A wide range of Spell Tomes, functional books, and common books can be found throughout the world. Consult earlier sections of this chapter and the Inventory for more information.

Black Book*†

One of seven fabled tomes of forbidden knowledge that transport the reader to Apocrypha, the realm of Oblivion where Hermaeus Mora resides. See more information on page 95.

Skill Book*††

Each of these books increases a specific skill by one point when first read. There are five distinct books for each skill, for a total of 90 titles and 90 skill increases that you can earn (though there are multiple copies of each book). Two copies (the easiest to find) of each book are listed in the Appendices, although each Atlas location with a Skill Book is also flagged.

Treasure Map*†

Number Available: 13

These pieces of parchment have a visual map drawn on them, revealing the location of a hidden treasure. Consult Side Quest: The Great Skyrim Treasure Hunt and Solstheim Side Quest: Deathbrand for details.

Unique Weapon*††

Number Available: 98

These items are separated into unique weapons found in dungeons, those found or given to you as part of a quest, and Daedric artifacts. Details about all of these weapons can be found in the Inventory chapter on page 138.

Unique Armor or Item*††

Number Available: 160

These items are separated into unique armor and outfits found in dungeons, those found or given to you as part of a quest, and Daedric artifacts. Details about all of these items can be found in the Inventory chapter on page 142.

Unusual Gem*†

Number Available: 24 (plus Crown)

Related Character: Vex (Thieves Guild in Riften)

Occasionally you may stumble across one of these Unusual Gems, which are actually stones from the legendary Crown of Barenziah. Consult Thieves Guild Radiant Quest: No Stone Unturned.

TRAINING PART 4: HEARTHFIRE

OVERVIEW: A PLACE TO CALL HOME

Meet Jarl Siddgeir of Falkreath, one of three Jarls with whom to curry favor.

Becoming a powerful and noble member of Skyrim's society has its privileges; the title of "Thane" and a Housecarl and a home of your own are the main perks. But those seeking the approval from the Jarls of the smaller Holds—Jarl Igrud Ravenclaw of Hjaalmarch, Jarl Skald the Elder of the Pale, or Jarl Siddgeir of Falkreath (or their Civil War replacements)—may be crestfallen at the lack of a property to purchase. Fortunately, this is about to change.

This chapter explains how to purchase land, improve it, construct a property you can be suitably proud of, and then stock it with as many household (and esoteric) items, ingredients, and added benefits as you wish.

CRAFTING: BUILD YOUR OWN HOUSE

Part 1: Land Grab

Learning about land for sale and purchasing it.

Hjaalmarch Hold: A rather pleasing view across the salt marshes toward Solitude. Expect amazing sunsets.

The Pale: A swath of Tundra with exceptional views of the Loreius Farm, Dragonsreach, and the Throat of the World in the distance.

Falkreath Hold: The body of water is Lake Ilinalta. The view is fabulous, perched between the Shriekwind Hills.

In order to construct a dwelling fit for an adventurer of your stature, you must begin by purchasing a plot of land in your chosen Hold.

Learning About the Land

You can purchase land in one of two ways:

If you're Level 9, you eventually receive a letter (via a courier, when you enter a settlement) requesting you meet with the Jarl of Falkreath (provided you don't have a Bounty in that Hold). The letter mentions the possibility of land being purchased once you complete a few Favors. From this point, you must complete Thane Task: Thane of Falkreath.

If you've already attempted some Thane Tasks by working for any or all of the Jarls of Morthal, Dawnstar, or Falkreath, continue these Favors. Once you receive the title of Thane, you also receive news (delivered via courier) that land has become available. Simply return to the Steward (or Jarl) and purchase the land.

TIP What exactly must you do to become a Thane of Hjaalmarch, the Pale, or Falkreath? Various tasks demanded by the Jarl and his or her citizens. Refer to the Thane Task section of this book (page 502) for all the answers.

Purchasing the Land

Once you've befriended the Jarl, they will acknowledge your service to the Hold and inform you that a piece of property is for sale. Talk to the Jarl's Steward (or, for the Pale, Jarl Skald) and tell them "I'd like to purchase a house." There isn't one available, but there is a plot of land. Agree to pay for it. Each plot is 5,000 gold. There is one plot per Hold, so your house is always in the same place. Pay the gold and you receive a charter for the land in question. Your world map updates to show the location of your plot.

◆ MISCELLANEOUS OBJECTIVE: Visit your new property in [the Hold in question]

- Windstad Manor Charter (Hjaalmarch Hold)
- Heljarchen Hall Charter (the Pale)
- Lakeview Manor Charter (Falkreath Hold)

#SkyrimLegendaryGuide

View a showcase of sample homes and upgrades. Go to www.primagames.com/SkyrimLegendary

NOTE If you visit the proposed site of your home prior to purchasing the land, it is “unimproved,” with no evidence that it’s available to buy. You can purchase all three plots of land and build one house on each plot. If you also purchase the houses in the remaining Holds, you can have a total of eight properties across Skyrim.

Only Jarl Korir of Winterhold lacks a house or a plot of land to grant you; he’s still recovering from the decimation of his capital.

Part 2: Outstanding in Your Field

Commencing construction on your manor house.

The remaining information applies to each of the three building plots available.

◆ MISCELLANEOUS OBJECTIVE: Use the drafting table to begin building your house

The tools of the home builder: the drafting table, carpenter's workbench, storage chest, and anvil.

The Right Tools for the Job

Now that you have a deeded property, construction can begin. When you reach the cleared area of land, you come across four important workstations to aid you in this task: the drafting table, carpenter's workbench, storage chest, and anvil.

The Drafting Table

Approach this first, as it allows you to create the plans for a basic small house layout. After that, you can return to the drafting table and add additional structures to this first one. For now, create the small house layout.

◆ MISCELLANEOUS OBJECTIVE: Use the carpenter's workbench to build the foundation of your house

The small house layout, in mid construction.

The final exterior construction is finished.

Carpenter's Workbench

This allows you to take the drafted plans and realize them. The various elements of the structure are broken down into separate pieces so you know what components they require, much in the same way as smithing or alchemy. For now, build the “house, foundation” and “house, wall framing.”

Then stop, turn around, and watch the skeletal form of your house take shape.

Return to the carpenter's workbench and construct the “house, walls.” Then add the “house, floor” and “house, roof framing.” Then finally, add the “house, roof” and “house, door.” Congratulations! You've just built yourself a home!

At this point, you can add a variety of outbuildings (from the carpenter's workbench), and your drafting table updates with another plan. This continues until you've finished a house with a main hall; a cellar; and east, west, and north wings.

The Beginner's Guide to Homesteading

A riveting read, this book provides information and advice on building your home, as well as who can live in it and the types of structures you can create. Refer to it (or this book) if you get stuck.

Chest and Anvil

Inspect the chest. It is filled with components for creating the house. As you gather additional raw materials, you can store them here without fear of them being stolen. In fact, it's an excellent plan to leave all the components you're going to need in this chest so you aren't encumbered, and you'll know where all your building materials are. To help you get started, the Jarl has filled this chest with a supply of raw materials, so take the clay, Corundum Ingots, Iron Ingots, and Quarried Stone that you want from here.

Inspect the anvil (or indeed, any anvil you find in Skyrim), and you'll see an additional menu: Building Materials. This is where you can mold your raw materials into components, if required. As each component is made up of two or more materials, you're going to run out and will need to buy or forage for more. But return here and create all the hinges, iron fittings, locks, and nails you need (and many more components as your house becomes more grand).

Part 3: Measure Twice, Cut Once

Gathering supplies to turn into building components.

Taking a pickaxe to a clay deposit yields malleable building blocks.

Raw materials are the vital and literal building blocks for your homestead. So it is important to source them. The four main types are quarried stone, clay, sawn logs, and Iron and Corundum Ingots.

Quarried Stone: Fortunately, your house is located near an inexhaustible supply of stone. Of course, you're the one who has to chip away at the stone quarry with a pickaxe to gather the stone you need. Quickly place the stone into your chest so you aren't encumbered.

Clay: The grounds of your dwelling are nestled on clay soil. This is fortunate, as you also need to unearth clay in large quantities for much of your house's structure. This is also quarried using the pickaxe. Quickly place the clay into your chest so you aren't encumbered.

Sawn Logs: You aren't equipped to fell trees, so you must source your supply of logs from a lumber mill. This can be done when prompted or at any time. Any settlement with a lumber mill has logs for your needs, but actual mills are perfect:

Windstad Manor is reasonably close to Solitude Sawmill.

Heljarchen Hall is in the middle of nowhere! The nearest mill is Anga's Mill in Eastmarch, though it's quite a distance up the road.

Lakeview Manor is close to Half-Moon Mill (especially handy if you're a vampire!).

Visit the proprietor of the lumber mill, and request they provide you with logs. Twenty sawn logs cost 200 gold, so carry your coin purse with you. These are automatically added to the log pile at your dwelling.

Iron and Corundum Ingots: All of your basic hinges, fittings, locks, and nails require Iron Ingots, while a lock also needs a lesser metal called corundum. Just like before, these are sources from ore deposits scattered throughout the realm. Fortunately, there are a couple of iron ore veins around Lakeview Manor (Falkreath), while Heljarchen Hall has a corundum deposit nearby. When those run out, locate what you need from vendors or mines.

TIP If you have iron or corundum ore but don't want to traipse to a smelter elsewhere in Skyrim to turn it into ingots, why not build one yourself?

There are many other necessary components as well, but those are mainly used for furnishing or augmenting your abode. All are listed below.

Don't fancy lugging rocks or mining for clay? Then have your own Steward do the dirty work for you (see below). You can hand over your mining, collecting, and locating of components, although this costs you additional funds.

In a hurry to quarry stone or dig up some clay? By far the fastest way to amass a rock collection is to equip pickaxes in both hands, use your Elemental Fury Shout, and then attack the rock with a vengeance.

Part 4: Architectural Improvements (Advice)

The additional structures you can add to your abode.

Extending Your Abode: Outbuildings

Animal Pen

A small enclosure is built against the wall of your home. Initially empty, you can ask your Steward to populate it with a cow or up to three chickens (see below).

Apiary

(Lakeview Manor only) For those wishing to harvest bees and honeycomb, build this beehive, which is much more flame-resistant than the ones in the Goldenglow Estate.

Armorer Workbench

If you want to hone your smithing, you can construct a workbench where you can improve any type of armor, provided you have the necessary Smithing Perks.

Fish Hatchery

(Windstad Manor only) A small hatchery is constructed in the marshy lake just below Windstad Manor. Initially empty, you can add fish or fish eggs to it, which will hatch into fish of the same type after a day or so.

Fish Hatchery Ingredients

Silverside Perch	Cyrodilic Spadetail	Slaughterfish Egg
Abecean Longfin	Histcarp	Clam Meat
River Betty	Salmon Roe

Garden

A large section of earth is tilled near the side of your house, and 11 patches of fertile soil are ready to receive food or ingredients that you've collected on your travels. Once planted, wait a day, and these sprout and can be harvested for several items of the same type. This is particularly handy if you use an ingredient in your potions that is usually difficult to obtain. Note that ingredients that don't grow in regular weather conditions (such as Crimson Nirnroot) or that aren't plants (such as Giant Toes) can't be grown. For more planting spots, build a greenhouse addition.

TRAINING PART 4: HEARTHFIRE

PRIMA OFFICIAL GAME GUIDE

WWW.PRIMAGAMES.COM

Grindstone

A grinding wheel with a place to sit and sharpen your blades is positioned close to the other crafting stations a Blacksmith uses (such as the workbench or smelter). As with any other grindstone, you can improve your weapons here.

Mill

(Heljarchen Hall only)

A small milling stone is sunk into the earth close to your dwelling. With three sheaves of wheat, you can create a bag of flour, which you use in many of your kitchen's baking recipes. For this reason, you may wish Heljarchen Hall to be primarily a place where you grow crops in your garden and greenhouse, and you may want to install a kitchen addition.

Smelter

As with all smelters, you can reduce ore and raw materials (such as Dwarven scrap) into metal ingots, which are required to create and improve weapons and armor. Only now, you have a smelter in your backyard.

Stable

Do you want your Steward to purchase a horse of your own? Then construct a stable where your equine chums can whinny to their hearts' content.

Extending Your Abode: Winging It

Choose your additions carefully; your properties can have aesthetic and functional differences, as shown in three finished home examples:

The Enchanter's Tower, alchemy laboratory, and library create an imposing wizard's domain.

The bedrooms, storage room, and armory create a linked upper porch for panoramic views.

The greenhouse, trophy room, and kitchen create a hunter and collector's paradise.

Once you've finished constructing a small house on your plot of land, your drafting table and carpenter's workbench both have additional structures for you to build:

The Drafting Table: This allows you to begin work on a main hall (a substantial, two-story extension), after which you can add a cellar and north, east, and west wings. You can also remodel your initial small house into an entryway (which opens up the far end of the original structure). As soon as you choose a plan, a series of perimeter markings appear on the ground where the section will be built.

The Carpenter's Workbench: This has a "Misc" menu to check out, which lists a number of outbuildings you can build (some of which are unique to that particular Hold, see above) and all the parts for the house structure you have selected in the drafting table.

Simply continue to collect the necessary components to build the structure you want. Your house can be as large or small as you wish. Once the main hall has been added and your building starts to look more like a manor and less like a hovel, inspect the various options available when constructing new "wing" additions.

When it comes to building a wing, you can build out in three directions (to the north, east, and west). For each wing, you must choose between three mutually exclusive options. For example, your west wing could house bedrooms, a greenhouse, or an Enchanter's Tower, but only one of those. Look to the Beginner's Guide to Homesteading (or the pictures below) for more information about what each wing adds to your home.

You can't demolish an addition once it is built, so plan out what you want your finished manor to look like. Here are some design decisions to think about:

Aesthetics: You may not think you need west wing bedrooms until you realize it comes with a large exterior porch. This offers elevated views of the scenery around your abode, so if your home is Heljarchen Hall (with arguably the best view), you might want this addition to show off the environment. Similarly, you might want a north, east, and west tower on each part of your domain so it looks imposing or symmetrical. But these decisions come down to your personal preferences.

Functionality: The skills you've perfected and the items you enjoy collecting should dictate the manor you construct. Consult the lists that follow to find out what interior benefits you the most. For example, the Enchanter's Tower allows you to construct an Arcane Enchanter. Is that crafting station important to you? Then favor the tower over an alternate west wing addition. Also consider how the additions relate to one another. For example, the storage room (north wing) has a porch you can connect to the east and west wings, provided you also build the bedrooms and armory additions.

Maximizing: If you want to fully appreciate all three of the different options for each wing of the house, then you'll need to build homes in all three Holds that offer them, and make sure you choose a different wing addition each time. This way, you can see and use every extension to your property that is available. Just don't duplicate an Enchanter's Tower if you don't need two of them!

Buyer's Remorse: Don't worry if you accidentally construct a bedroom when you really wanted a greenhouse! There's no "wrong" addition, as you can always construct a different combination of rooms at a different manor.

The following sections cover all the different structures you can build together to create your main house.

Small House

This tiny cottage may be all you require, and you don't need to add to it if you aren't interested in a sprawling mansion. However, if you do want to add to it, be sure to remodel this into an entryway (as it is more aesthetically pleasing and allows for more interior furnishings).

Main Hall

This expansion substantially improves the footprint of your house and adds a main hall with a dining area, an upstairs landing, two bedrooms, and a back room. When further additions are made, they all connect to your main hall. Note that an Arcane Enchanter, alchemy lab, and anvil can all be placed in this area.

Addition: Cellar

Don't overlook the musty basement you can dig out underneath the main hall (this is the last part of the main hall to be built).

With more furnishings than any other addition, the cellar gives you numerous storage and forging options. Best of all, you can create a shrine to rival the Temple of the Divines in Solitude, with nine divinities to receive blessings from!

Addition: West Wing — Bedrooms

If you plan on adopting a child or just want more space to stretch out, choose this addition.

There's a master bedroom, two children's beds, and several wardrobes and display cases with which to furnish the interior. The spacious exterior porch allows access on two floors and gives an excellent view of the wilderness around your house. It can be attached to the storage room for an even bigger platform.

Addition: West Wing — Greenhouse

For the horticulturist, the greenhouse has planters you can furnish the room with, allowing you to take the plants that you have and grow them in more clement conditions (see the Plantable Ingredients list on page 114). When used in conjunction with the garden outside, you may never again run out of ingredients for your potions.

Addition: West Wing — Enchanter's Tower

An imposing tower designed with the magician in mind, this addition allows you to furnish the area with an Arcane Enchanter, and there are numerous racks and a mannequin for your staffs and robes. The tower features an exterior viewing platform, which allows for roof access and a vista.

Addition: North Wing — Storage Room

If you have an overabundance of items and need additional places to keep them, construct the storage room. The multitude of chests and cases gives you plenty of places to store and organize your items; you no longer need shove everything in one place. Think about the bedrooms (west) and armory (east), as the upper porch can be extended if you pick those two additions as well.

Addition: North Wing — Trophy Room

After a titanic struggle with a particularly fearsome foe, you may want to display your conquest as a trophy. If so, this room is for you (consult the Trophies section below for all the different, life-sized effigies you can create). Choose this extension if simple "wolf heads on a wall" aren't showcasing your true hunting prowess.

Addition: North Wing — Alchemy Laboratory

Featuring the same imposing elements as the Enchanter's Tower, this addition provides a three-floor chamber of solace for an Alchemist, including an alchemy lab and storage for your potions and ingredients. The tower features an exterior viewing platform, too, which allows for roof access and a vista.

Addition: East Wing — Armory

Perfect for adventurers with a penchant for weapon and apparel collecting. Use the anvil or the forge in the cellar, then hang your martial collections throughout the mounts, cases, and mannequins in this chamber. Think about the bedrooms (west) and storage room (north), as the upper porch can be extended if you pick those two additions as well.

Addition: East Wing — Kitchen

Chefs who crave the latest in technology should consider this kitchen, which allows you to prepare food in a brand-new device called an "oven"!

Apparently, these are all the rage in Solitude and allow you to use baking recipes (see page 84). For those who cook their own meals, this is the pinnacle of Nordic cuisine preparation.

Addition: East Wing — Library

Have you run out of space for your rare Lusty Argonian Maid first editions? Then create this imposing tower, which has more bookcases than you can hope to fill and a certain ambience those scholars familiar with the great book repositories of Skyrim will crave. Can you gather and display every book in Skyrim? Alphabetically?

NOTE What's this "remove workbench" option on the drafting table? Well, once a structure has been finished externally, it can be furnished (see below) using the interior workbench inside each of the structure sections. When you're happy with how the interior looks, you can remove the workbench if you aren't making any more improvements to that section. Don't worry; if you decide to change the decor, just reinstate the workbench at the drafting table.

Part 5: Architectural Improvements (Tables)

The following tables provide an exhaustive list of the items needed to create the structural elements of your home.

Part 6: Home Is Where the Hearth Is (Advice)

Furnish your grand manor with fine furniture or complete clutter.

Turn a bare floor and walls (1) into an inviting interior for yourself and your family (2).

Now that the outside of your manor has been covered, it's time to head inside. Poke around inside your dwelling, and you'll notice it's rather sparse, with only a chest and workbench to be found in the small house and another workbench in each addition. The moment you complete the small house, you can furnish it with objects. This involves the use of the small interior workbench. Step over to it and inspect the menu. You have a variety of objects (such as containers, furniture, shelves, and the like) that you can construct in the same way as the structure you're standing in—by collecting components.

The Elder Scrolls V

SKYRIM

TRAINING PART 4: HEARTHFIRE

PRIMA OFFICIAL GAME GUIDE

WWW.PRIMAGAMES.COM

The tables that follow reveal every interior object you can create for each room. If you don't see them in your Workbench menu, it usually means you need to create other objects first. Continue to choose and create objects until the room you're in is staged to your satisfaction or you've constructed every furnishing available (remember that your main hall has more than one workbench). The actual components needed vary wildly: While locks and fittings can be easily crafted at any forge, you may need to scour Skyrim for other items.

Some of the more unhinged Skyrim adventurers decorate their rooms entirely in refuse, scavenged bric-a-brac, and even gore and body parts. These people aren't well.

Some of the objects you make have particular properties; for example, some rooms include crafting stations such as cooking pots or alchemy labs. Mounted heads require the pelt of a slain animal. You can sit on chairs and sleep in beds. Wardrobes, chests, bookcases, and safes can be stuffed with items you've collected. Mannequins and racks hold your apparel and weapons. Lighting is important to the ambience of your room. Trophies are displays even more impressive than mounted heads. Cellar shrines can be built and blessings received from them.

TIP Remember that you can pick up, place, and display objects on the top of tables, on shelves, or even scattered in a pattern on the floor. Need somewhere to show off your ingot collection? Then find a flat surface and place whatever you wish.

Don't want to spend the time building a collection of objet d'art when your trusted Steward can furnish each room for a piffling 1,500 coins? Then spend your funds finishing a room instead of doing it yourself! See the Steward section below.

Part 7: Home Is Where the Hearth Is (Tables)

The following tables list the items needed to create different furnishings in your home.

Part 8: Home Security Part 1 — Hiring a Steward

How to keep your properties properly manned by hiring help.

A Steward (in this case, Lydia) is an invaluable servant and helper.

Are the rigors of adventuring and running one or more houses making you weary? Then it might be time to hire a Steward to manage one of your properties (if you have multiple manors, be sure to pick the one most in need of help). Almost any Follower you can take on your adventures can fill this role. Complete any task or quest they require you to, and then agree to bring them on your travels. Head back to your home and (provided you've built the main hall) mention that you'd like them to be your Steward. They agree, and start right away (without payment!). The benefits of having a Steward are as follows:

House Improvements

When speaking with your Steward, you can request that they make the following improvements to your house (which are here the next time you return):

Carriage (500 gold): A horse and carriage are parked at your house. The driver is an amiable fellow and offers to drive you to any settlement in Skyrim, just like a carriage driver in any of the major cities. However, he doesn't charge you and can trundle to any settlement (village, town, or Hold capital).

Bard (1,500 gold): A musician well versed in singing and playing the drums, lute, and flute can be found inside your home. Ask him or her to play a variety of tunes on any of those instruments, or sing ditties at your pleasure.

Horse (1,000 gold): Provided you've built the stables, a horse is waiting for you on your return. This horse belongs to you and will return to your house if you decide to leave it for another steed.

Cow (200 gold) and Chicken (25 gold): Provided you built an animal pen, a cow and (up to) three chickens are waiting on your return. Keep them or slaughter them for food.

Building Materials

You can make a request for building materials. Your Steward then goes off to gather the following based on your choices:

Lumber (Sawn Wood): 20 for 200 gold

Stone (Quarried Stone): 20 for 100 gold

Clay: 20 for 20 gold

These are added to the chest next to the carpenter's workbench when you return.

House Furnishings

You can also ask your Steward to furnish each room of your abode, instead of you collecting the components and crafting the objects yourself. The rooms are furnished progressively over time, so when you return on subsequent occasions, you'll witness more trinkets, tables, and other bric-a-brac added. Be patient! The costs are listed below:

✓ AREA OF HOUSE TO FURNISH	COST (GOLD)	NUMBER
<input type="checkbox"/> Small House	1,000
<input type="checkbox"/> Entryway	1,000
<input type="checkbox"/> Main Hall*	3,500
<input type="checkbox"/> West Wing Addition: Bedrooms	2,000
<input type="checkbox"/> West Wing Addition: Greenhouse	1,500
<input type="checkbox"/> West Wing Addition: Enchanter's Tower	2,500
<input type="checkbox"/> North Wing Addition: Storage Room	1,000
<input type="checkbox"/> North Wing Addition: Trophy Room	1,500
<input type="checkbox"/> North Wing Addition: Alchemy Laboratory	2,500
<input type="checkbox"/> East Wing Addition: Armory	2,000
<input type="checkbox"/> East Wing Addition: Kitchen	1,500
<input type="checkbox"/> East Wing Addition: Library	1,500

NOTE * The cellar cannot be furnished by the Steward; that's up to you.

Other Antics

After appointing a Follower as your Steward, you can still ask them to follow you whenever you need their services. Your Steward also has a good idea where to purchase straw and glass (two compounds you need for home improvements that aren't available through foraging). Listen to the location and head to that vendor, remembering to return later should you run out.

Part 9: Home Security Part 2—Having a Housecarl

How to keep your properties properly manned by receiving a guard.

A Housecarl (in this case, the fearsome Valdimar) is an invaluable guardian.

Are the roving bands of bandits and other wilderness creatures taking a toll on your compound? Then it's wise to receive a Housecarl who can help repel them and provide peace of mind as you leave on your adventures. In order to obtain a Housecarl, you need to complete the following:

Return to the Jarl of the Hold you have a property in and speak to them. Agree to complete any of the series of tasks the Jarl requires you to (these are part of the Thane Tasks on page 502 or Jobs for the Jarls on page 500).

When you return from successfully finishing these jobs, head into the Jarl's Longhouse and the Housecarl will be waiting to greet you. Is the Housecarl not there? Then continue finishing more jobs for the Jarl until one appears.

Once you've built the main hall of your dwelling, the Housecarl automatically travels to your abode and lives at your house.

Housecarls can also be hired as your Stewards, too.

Finally, your Housecarl is protective over any family members: Should bandits attack your dwelling while your spouse is inside, your Housecarl guards the door and prevents the foes from kidnapping him or her. For these reasons, it is well worth having a Housecarl at each of your three construction projects.

Available Housecarls

The following Housecarls are available, depending on your home's location:

Hjaalmarch Hold:
Valdimar

A Nord male adept in mace and spell combat.

The Pale: Gregor

A Nord male adept in two-handed combat.

Falkreath Hold:
Rayya

A Redguard female adept in dual-wielding combat.

Part 10: Happy Families—Spouse and Children

Complete your bliss with a doting spouse and adopted child.

The sprawling Lakeview Manor, with residents, including wife and children.

There's no point in crafting a rambling mansion without someone to share it with! Aside from your Steward, Housecarl, bard, carriage driver, and livestock, you can further improve your life by getting married, adopting a child, and asking your family to move in alongside you.

Spouse: Complete Temple Quest: The Bonds of Matrimony. Once married, be sure your house has a bed in it (a small house is fine, but a main hall or furnished bedroom also works). Then tell your wife or husband to join you at your house, and they move there. Switch to a different abode as you wish.

Adopted Children: Complete Hearthfire Quest: Adoption. Once you wish to have a child in your care, be sure your house has a main hall or bedroom addition furnished with two single beds and a dresser. This satisfies the requirements for adoption. Then you (or your spouse) can tell the child to move to the house. How the little tyke behaves in your abode relates to the Adoption Quest. Consult page 127 for more details.

Part 11: Radiant Quests—Get Off My Land!

Combating undesirables who dare trespass on your property.

Life should be a breeze with a compound in the marsh, woods, or tundra and with an item collection to rival any Khajiit Caravan. But you must still be on your guard, as unwanted visitors sometimes make their presence felt.

NOTE * Quest names marked with this symbol do not appear in your Quest menu, although their objectives may.

The Cow Clobbering Giant*

If you've bought yourself a shaggy cow for your compound, prepare to intercept a wandering giant who is on course for clobbering (and possibly eating) your prized heifer. Defeat the giant, or face losing your farm animal.

Wolves at Your Door*

If you've purchased chickens for your homestead, prepare to defend them viciously from a pack of hungry wolves. Expect up to three wolves to be skulking around your property when you return from your travels. Deal with them, or face a chickenless future!

Skeever Infestation*

Once you've dug down and built a cellar under your main hall, there's a [random] chance that when you head down to inspect it next, you'll find between one and four Skeevers living there. Your Steward, spouse, and child all comment on the vermin, saying they've heard noises from the cellar: The source of those sounds should be eradicated forthwith.

However, be judicious in your Skeever removal, as one of them is actually quite tame and isn't hostile to you at all. If you keep the tame Skeever, it scurries around the cellar without causing you consternation (and you won't need to worry about this problem reoccurring). However, if you slay it and all the other Skeevers, expect the infestation to return at a random point in the future.

Bandit Attack: Trespassers*

If you leave your premises, you may return to find three bandits (including a chief) mooching around your house. If you have a Housecarl, they are already engaged in combat against these foes. The bandits appear only if your structure has three or more rooms (so an entryway, main hall, and one or more additions). Simply slay these trespassers.

Bandit Attack: Kidnappers*

Bandits are becoming much more troublesome in your area, and your spouse is in danger of being kidnapped by them! Like the other bandit attack, this also occurs if you have a home with three or more rooms, but you also need a spouse living with you and no Housecarl (as your Housecarl guards the front door of the home and prevents this from happening). Either way, this [randomly occurring] quest will happen only once. When you return to your home, a bandit is waiting close to the front door. They stop and hand over a ransom letter. If you attack the bandit on sight, the note is on the corpse. Read it for the second objective.

◇ OBJECTIVE: Read the bandit's ransom note for [your spouse]

◇ OBJECTIVE: Rescue [your spouse] from [a random bandit dungeon]

Rescue your betrothed by applying one of the following plans:

Storm the bandit dungeon, and slay everyone and everything you aren't married to. This is your only option if you slew the bandit at your house. In fact, kill any bandit and all will turn on you.

Enter into negotiations with Rochelle the Red, the Bandit Chief who waits for you at the dungeon's entrance (provided you took the ransom letter from the bandit's hand, not their corpse). She has several options to ponder. You can:

Pay the ransom (the amount varies). Your spouse is then released to you (or travels back to the house). The bandits remain peaceful unless you enter the dungeon.

(Persuade) Use your charm and guile to insist that your spouse be freed. If successful, your spouse is then released to you (or travels back to the house). The bandits remain peaceful unless you enter the dungeon.

(Intimidate) Use your brawn to insist that your spouse be returned. If successful, your spouse is then released to you (or travels back to the house). The bandits remain peaceful unless you enter the dungeon.

Tell the chief you haven't the money to pay them. This doesn't sit well with the kidnappers, and all of them become hostile.

Just wandering off without choosing a plan causes the bandits to become hostile. Whatever you choose, find your spouse, release them, exit the dungeon, and return to your previously tranquil existence.

TRAINING PART 5:

HEARTHFIRE: ADOPTION

Skyrim's Civil War, the advent of dragons' return, and the constant threat of attack has wrecked untold havoc on the citizens of Skyrim. Perhaps the most innocent and vulnerable are the children forced into orphanages or to beg on the streets. Have you the heart to help a child and bring them into the warmth of your family?

Part 1: Readyng Your Home

The prerequisites leading to an adoption are discussed here.

Your newly constructed dwelling has numerous beds. This one is perfect for a child.

In order to house your rambunctious child, you'll need to provide lodgings for them to sleep in and store their possessions. The amount of room needed depends on the type of house that you own:

City Dweller or Country Compound: The Property Owner's Dilemma

Are you part of the landed gentry of Skyrim? Do you have an abode in the cities of Solitude, Markarth, Whiterun, Windhelm, or Riften? Then you receive a courier's letter the next time you visit a settlement. The courier hands you a note written by the Steward of the Hold you have property in, advising you that you can purchase a children's bedroom for each of the homes you own.

When you return to your dwelling, your House Decorating Guide has been updated and now lists the children's bedroom as an option. The homes in Markarth, Whiterun, and Riften have the children's bedroom as an alternative to an existing room. You can choose either room for the house but not both. You should clear out your old room before asking the Steward to convert it into a children's bedroom. Items you leave in the room may be transferred over (typically to a chest), but some, particularly those on mannequins and wall plaques, may not be. You can swap back to your original room (by purchasing it again) if you don't want to house a child in that home.

Please make sure you fully understand the previous warning: Items you leave in a room you're converting to a child's bedroom are likely, but not guaranteed, to be transferred over. If you've items on mannequins and wall plaques, your Steward can forget about these. To avoid disappointment, manually clear the room yourself.

CAUTION

TIP Once you've adopted a child, you must always have a bedroom for them in one of your houses. If you don't want your "original" homes to have a child in them, move the child to one of the newly available Hearthfire homes that you build yourself.

NOTE Do you want more information on how the new rooms fit into the five original houses of Skyrim (such as Proudspire Manor or Breezehome)? Then consult the Hearthfire Buildings throughout the Atlas on pages 743, 772 and 927.

Hearthfire Homes: The Builder's Choice

Are you designing and building your own manor in Skyrim? Then you can easily house a child in your new home, as long as you have the proper furnishings. Simply add a main hall and furnish the bedroom upstairs with two child-sized beds and a dresser. Optionally add the bedroom addition if you want more room.

Part 2: Choosing an Orphan

Which poor child in Skyrim is deserving of your success?

There are three types of children in Skyrim who make good candidates for adoption:

Orphanage Orphans: These children are living in Riften's Honorhall Orphanage under the draconian rule of Grelod the Kind.

Orphaned Children: These children's parents have been killed during the course of your adventure.

Street Urchins: These are children you may not have encountered before; they eke out a living on the streets of a city.

In total, there are 23 children who are potential candidates for adoption. You can adopt only one or two of them, no matter how many properties you own.

Orphanage Orphans

Francois Beaufort

Hroar

Runa

Samuel

Initially, there are four orphans you can adopt from the Honorhall Orphanage in Riften. In order to adopt one of them, you must:

Own a home with a children's bedroom or a Hearthfire home with suitable furnishings (see Part 1).

Complete Dark Brotherhood Quest: Innocence Lost (see page 318), in which you slay Grelod the Kind. After killing Grelod, return to Aventus and claim your reward; this gives the situation in Riften some time to settle down.

Wait 24 hours or so (and make sure your Bounty in the Rift is at zero), and then return and speak to Constance Michel.

Complete Constance's verbal questionnaire. While there are some wrong (and humorous) answers, you can always try again if need be. Convince her you can support a child and tell her where you want your child to live, and she eventually gives you her blessing. If you don't meet the requirements, Constance will let you know what you still need to do.

Speak to the child you want to adopt and agree to adopt them. They automatically travel to your abode.

Aventus Aretino, a former resident of the orphanage now living in his house in Windhelm, is not available for adoption. If Constance Michel "accidentally" died along with Grelod, don't despair. Come back in another day or two, and you can speak to the orphans to adopt them directly.

Orphaned Children

Braith (Amren, Saffir), living in Whiterun.

Britte (Lemkil), living in Rorikstead.

Clinton Lylvieve (Michel Lylvieve, Azzada Lylvieve, Julianne Lylvieve), living in Dragon Bridge.

Dorthe (Alvor, Sigrid), living in Riverwood.

Eirid (Dagur, Haran), living in Winterhold.

Erith (Daighre), living in Left Hand Mine, near Markarth.

Frodnar (Hod, Gerdur), living in Riverwood.

Gralnach (Grosta), living in Heartwood Mill.

Hrefna (Tormir, Sondas Drenim), living in Darkwater Crossing.

Knud (Katla, Snilling), living on Katla's Farm.

Minette Vinius (Corpulus Vinius), living in Solitude.

Sissel (Lemkil), living in Rorikstead.

Skuli (Eydis, Leontius), living in the Old Hroldan Inn.

Svati (Addvar, Greta), living in Solitude.

Aeta (Finna, Oslaf), living in Skaal Village, Solstheim.

There are 15 children living in Skyrim who can be orphaned. In order to adopt them, you must:

Own a home with a children's bedroom or a Hearthfire home with suitable furnishings (see Part 1).

Make sure the parents or guardians associated with the child (listed after their name) are dead. This may happen in the ordinary course of your adventure—they may be killed during a dragon attack; in a Forsworn Raid, Vampire attack, or other random act; or as collateral damage from your Storm Call Shout. Or you can slay the parents yourself!

Wait 24 hours or so (and make sure your Bounty in the Hold in question is at zero).

Locate the child. Once you complete Dark Brotherhood Quest: Innocence Lost, if Constance Michel is still alive, newly orphaned children are usually sent to Honorhall Orphanage in Riften. Otherwise, you can find them wandering the streets of their city or living in their old house.

If the child has been sent to the orphanage, you can adopt them by speaking to Constance Michel and completing her questionnaire, just as with any of the orphanage orphans. Otherwise, speak to the child directly and agree to adopt them, and they automatically travel to your abode.

NOTE Again, if Constance Michel dies, you can simply wait 24 hours, then speak to any adoptable child and adopt them.

Street Urchins

Alesan: An errand boy in Dawnstar.

Blaise: A stable boy at Katla's Farm.

Lucia: A girl begging in Whiterun's plaza.

Sofie: A girl selling flowers on the streets of Windhelm.

There are four other orphans you can find living on the rough streets of a city in Skyrim. In order to adopt them, all you need to do is own a home with a children's bedroom or a Hearthfire home with suitable furnishings (see Part 1). Approach the child you want to adopt, bring the discussion around to adoption, and agree to adopt them. They will automatically travel to your abode.

Other Notes

A few days after completing Dark Brotherhood Quest: With Friends Like These..., if you have not adopted a child, expect to receive a note entitled "Consider Adoption" from Constance Michel, suggesting you visit Honorhall Orphanage.

Other children living in Skyrim (such as Agni, Kayd, or Virkmund) cannot be adopted, as their parents are integral to your adventure. They can never be orphaned in the first place.

If you decide to move to another house you own, you can speak to your spouse (who tells the child), or if you are unmarried, you can tell your children yourself. Assuming your next dwelling has the correct setup for a child (a children's bedroom or a main hall or bedrooms addition with beds in it), your children will appear at your new home the next time you visit.

If you're building a Hearthfire home, your child always moves into the west wing bedrooms addition if it is built and furnished properly. If only your main hall is fully furnished, your children will sleep there instead. And if you build the bedrooms addition after the child is there, you need to move away, then return for the child to move into the bedrooms addition.

Part 3: You've Got to Be Kidding

The hard work of caring for a child is soon learned and cherished.

Samuel may stomp his feet and hate sweeping, but he's a kind child at heart.

Now that you have one or two children in your home, a number of additional benefits and tasks present themselves. Here's what to look for:

Resting Bonus: A Parent's Love

Assuming you're not a vampire or werewolf (who crave sustenance via other means), sleep in the house where your children live to receive the Father's Love (male adventurers) and Mother's Love (female adventurers). This is in addition to any other "Rested" bonuses you may also receive.

NOTE Father's/Mother's Love: Healing spells and potions restore 25 percent more health for 8 hours.

PRIMA OFFICIAL GAME GUIDE

WWW.PRIMAGAMES.COM

The Gift of Charity

If you give your child an allowance or gift (see below), you receive the Gift of Charity blessing, just as if you had given a coin to a beggar. This is in addition to any other effects the gift may have.

Your Child's Basic Behaviors

Unless you choose to give your child some orders, which supersede these antics, your child makes him or herself at home in your dwelling in a variety of ways: They spend their mornings around the house, sweeping, reading, practicing their instruments, and exploring their new home. After lunch, they go outside and play until dinnertime. In the evenings, if you've given your child a weapon and your house has a practice dummy, they often spar with it. If your child has a doll, they may play with it, too.

Giving Orders: Basic Discipline

When you begin a conversation with your child, you can "request" that he or she follow one particular order. When that order is given, the child obeys it for three hours or until you give them another one. Sometimes, if the order isn't something your child wants to do (such as "chores"), expect a small tantrum or whine. You can relent or insist they complete the task you've given them.

NOTE Orders have a priority: If you give the child a low-priority order ("Go outside"), giving them a higher-priority order ("Go to bed") overrides the lower one. If you give the child a high-priority order, you won't be able to give them a lower-priority order until the higher-priority one expires.

The orders you have available and how they are carried out (along with their priorities) are as follows:

- 1. Go Outside: Available from 6:00 a.m. to 9:00 p.m., if the child is in the house. The child leaves the house and plays outside.
- 2. Go Inside: Available whenever the child is not in the house. The child heads back inside and mopes around.
- 3. Do Your Chores: Available from 6:00 a.m. to 9:00 p.m. The child begins a sweeping regimen throughout the house.
- 4. Go to Bed: Available from 6:00 p.m. to 8:00 a.m., if the child is not already asleep. The child goes to sleep in their bed.

Giving Orders: Games

All work and no play may make your child more prone to tantrums, so it's important to play games with them. This is one of the conversation options and works as follows:

Ask them if they want to play a game. If this occurs at night, your child asks if this is really okay.

Then you can choose either a game of tag or hide-and-seek.

Follow the Miscellaneous Objective prompts and watch out; if other children are present, they can get roped into the game, too!

Asking your child to play a game cancels anything else they are doing; this order has the highest priority. However, once the game is under way, giving your child another order ends the game.

Giving Gifts

Samuel looks smart in his new tunic, but he'd rather be wielding a wooden sword.

Children are happiest when they're preoccupied, ideally with a gift you've picked up on your travels. Such items include:

- Children's weapons (daggers or the wooden sword)
- Children's clothes (these are gender-specific miscellaneous items)
- Children's books (yellow book of riddles, etc.)

Children's toys (a doll)

Sweets (such as a sweetroll or taffy)

Such items are mostly found in shops, though you may find them in cupboard or other containers on your travels. If you're searching for a gift you want to give your child with some urgency, try the following:

Most general goods vendors and miscellaneous containers (such as cupboards) have a chance of having a wooden sword, doll, or children's clothes.

If you visit Radiant Raiment in Solitude, Endarie always has a complete set of children's clothes in stock.

Visit any of the three Khajit Caravans if you want to buy a wooden sword, doll, or children's clothes.

When you return and give the gift to your child (through conversation), he or she reacts differently depending on the type of gift:

Weapons: They take it immediately (any previously equipped weapon is placed in their bedroom chest). If you have a practice dummy in your house, they run off to spar with it immediately and practice for about an hour. This sparring practice becomes a part of their evening routine.

Clothing: They wear it immediately, and their former clothing is placed in their bedroom chest.

Dolls (girls only): Boys aren't interested in this gift. Your girl plays with the doll for about an hour. It reappears from time to time as a basic behavior as your girl plays with it.

Books: The book is placed in their bedroom chest.

Food: If you hand over some food, they eat it immediately.

NOTE Every gift has an intrinsic value to it. Sometimes your child wants to give you a gift, and the more gifts you give, the better the likelihood of receiving a more impressive gift in return.

Regardless of the gift you hand over, you're rewarded the Gift of Charity blessing: +10 to Speech for one hour.

Your Child's Bedroom Chest

Your child keeps their belongings in a bedroom chest or dresser, which over time fills with items they've collected or that you've given them. You can take whatever you wish from this chest. The child's own items tend to be rudimentary (but sometimes rare) ingredients, small trinkets, and occasionally a valuable [random] item. The quality of their trinkets and the chance of finding a valuable item increases based on the value of the gifts you've given them.

Check this chest once every five days so it keeps refilling. If you move to a different home, your child will start a new collection there (any items in the chest in your old home remain there).

Returning Home and Other Antics

After a particularly arduous quest, returning home to your child (and perhaps your spouse) should be a joy. Or at least a passable way to continue your existence before you're inevitably slain by bandits. Upon your return, expect your child to be eager to interact with you in one of the following (usually randomly determined) ways:

Thanks for Adopting Me! Your child rushes in to say hello and thanks you for adopting him or her.

Thanks for Adopting Me, Look What I Found! Your child rushes in to greet you, thanks you for adopting them, and then tells you there's a few items they've collected in their bedroom chest. You can take one or all of them if you'd like.

Look What I Found! Your child rushes in to tell you he or she has been collecting items and has placed them in their bedroom chest. You can take any of them if you want.

Can We Keep Him?: If your family doesn't already have an animal companion, and you haven't previously banned them and you bring home an animal companion, your child may ask if they can keep the animal when you don't need it. Consult the Hearthfire Pets section below for more details.

It Followed Me Home! If your family doesn't already have a pet and you haven't previously banned them, there's a chance that your child is waiting for you with a small animal. Your child asks if they can keep it. Consult the Hearthfire Pets section below for more details.

Mudcrabs are smarter than you! If you have two children, when you arrive home, your children may be calling each other names. If you don't intervene, the argument ends with both children beginning a game of tag. Speak to either child to:

- Break up the argument.
- Order the child you're speaking with to their room.
- Or back off and let the argument continue. The more aggressive child always wins the argument, just like Braith does when she harangues Lars in Whiterun.

You Smell Like a Hagraven! If you have two children, when you arrive home, they may be calling each other names. If you don't intervene, the argument ends with one of the children running off and crying. They head to their room for an hour. You can:

- Break up the argument.
- Order the child you're speaking with to their room.
- Or back off and let the argument continue.

Can I Have My Allowance?: Your child may run up to you and ask for money. Respond to this mini-shakedown by handing over some of your current gold, which can range from nothing all the way up to 1,000 coins. Any gold is added to your child's personal collection and will raise the value of any items they subsequently find and gift to you.

If you give your child one or more gold, you receive the Gift of Charity blessing. If you fail to give your child any money on three consecutive occasions, the next present they get you may be especially disappointing. They've come to the conclusion that your family is poor, and hand over some beggar's clothing. The cheek of it!

I Got You a Present! Your child may dash up to you and hand over a gift they've found or bought for you. There's a small [10 percent] chance you'll receive two of the same item. The value of the item depends on the child's personal funds: The larger their allowance, the better the items they get for you. The value of these gifts is also deducted from their savings, so don't expect a one-time allowance to support pricey gifts for long. Over time, this always works out in your favor, so giving your child 30 gold always results in them giving you items worth more than 30 gold.

I Want a Present! Your child may dash up to you and ask if you've brought them a present. You can:

- Ask what they want, and they point you in the direction of a vendor with the item (usually Radiant Raiment or one of the Khajit Caravans).
- You can give them a gift, and your child takes it with a gleeful exclamation.
- Or you can refuse to give them a gift, and your child leaves you feeling a little insulted.

Can We Play a Game?: Your child may dash up to you ask if you want to play a game with them. You can answer yes and begin a game of either tag or hide-and-seek. Or, you can answer no (mentioning the hour if it's between 10:00 p.m. and 6:00 a.m.) and your child leaves you feeling a little put out.

Hearthfire Animal Adoption

An added benefit of adoption is that your children can take care of your animals. There are two types of animals they can "adopt": animal companions and pets.

Animal Companions

Bring home a four-legged friend and your child will love him and hug him and squeeze him....

If you bring home an animal companion (such as a dog), your children may ask if they can keep it. You have three options at this point:

If you agree, then later dismiss your animal companion, they will return to the house your children are living in and wait for you there. You can ask them to rejoin you at any time.

If you decline, your children won't ask again for at least 15 days.

If you put your foot down and say no pets, your children will never ask again and will never try to adopt a house pet, either.

You can adopt only one animal companion at a time. If your adopted animal companion is killed, you can adopt a replacement.

TIP If you're trying to get your children to adopt your animal companion but they are engaged in another activity instead, try leaving town and coming back in another day or two. You can't force this.

NOTE Note that some animal companions, such as Armored Trolls and Death Hounds, don't make good pets for children. Your children may react, but they won't ask to keep them.

The following animal companions are available for adoption by your children:

Common dogs: Vigilance, Meeko, Stray Dog.

Dawnguard Huskies: Bran or Sceolang.

Pets

Meet Samuel's pet mudcrab, Mr. Snapper. He was recently saved from the cooking pot.

You're not the only one with a plan to bring home an animal; your children may also be spotted playing with a stray and (as mentioned previous) may ask you whether they can keep them. Your decisions are as follows:

You can agree, and the animal lives in your house, following your child around.

You can refuse, and your child sends the animal away. They won't try to adopt another pet for at least 15 days.

You can refuse with vigor, saying "no pets" firmly. Your child never asks again and won't show interest in adopting an animal companion either! Fine, be like that!

NOTE You can adopt only one pet at a time. If your current pet is killed, you can adopt a replacement. This event has a random chance of occurring, so you can't force it.

The following pets are available for adoption if your children brings one home:

- | | |
|------------------------|--------------------------|
| Hares (girls only) | Skeever (boys only) |
| Mudcrabs (boys only) | White foxes (girls only) |
| Red foxes (girls only) | |

Don't kill your pets. If you do, your children will "Never speak to you again." Well, for a day or two.

THE INVENTORY

INVENTORY OVERVIEW

Behold the charts and tables of Skyrim! The following pages deluge you with information on the thousands of spells, weapons, armor sets, and items that you can acquire during your adventure. If you're interested in the properties of an item you haven't found yet, want to compare it to another item, or simply want to see everything that is possible to find, you'll find the information here.

There are a few general rules you should be aware of before digging in:

As described in the skills section of Training (see page 12), many skills, perks, and enchantments affect the damage you do with weapons, the protection you receive from armor, and the cost of your spells. To account for this, the game automatically calculates those effects and applies them to the spells and items you see in game. The values listed below are the base values for the item in question: you will rarely, if ever, see these exact numbers because of the impact of your skills. But this list is still an effective way of comparing two items to gauge the relative differences between them.

Some items, especially unique weapons and armor, are marked as being Leveled. This means that the actual item you receive in game will be dependent on your level, and may have better statistics and stronger versions of the enchantments listed here.

Some enchantments and effects are said to Stack with others. This means that the benefits of those effects are cumulative; they combine to give you a stronger result.

Color-coding: In the following tables, elements from the original game are in white and gray. Elements from the Dawnguard, Hearthfire, and Dragonborn add-ons have been color-coded as follows:

☐ Wooden Sword Dawnguard/Hearthfire ☐ Ash Shell Dragonborn

SPELLS

Table I: Spells

Spells are an essential tool for many characters, from Arch-mages who have mastered the intricacies of all five Schools of Magic to those that merely dabble in sorcery to suit their needs, such as a Thief who relies on Invisibility, or a Warrior who invokes a healing spell to cure his wounds. This section lists all of the spells available to you. You will find or buy most of these in the form of Spell Tomes, although you may be taught a few of them directly.

Spell List Notes

Only spells that can be used by your character are included on this list. It does not include Powers, such as a Vampire's Embrace of Shadows or a Werewolf's Beast Form, or enemy spells or spell-like effects that you can't acquire.

All Destruction Spells have secondary effects based on their element, regardless of whether those effects are listed in the spell description.

All Fire spells can light enemies on fire, causing your foes to take additional damage for several seconds. This makes fire spells especially effective against foes with high health.

All Frost spells do Stamina damage equal to their Health damage, and slow targets by 50% for several seconds (the exact duration varies by spell). This makes them especially effective against berserkers and other foes who rely on power attacks, shield bashes, and other tactics that depend on stamina.

All Shock spells do Magicka damage equal to half their Health damage (except where otherwise noted). This makes them ideal for crippling enemy mages.

Spell List Key

Spell Name: The name of the spell as it appears in your Magic Menu.

Level: The level of the spell (Novice - Master). Unique or quest-based spells in each School of Magic are included in a 'Special' category at the bottom of the list.

Standard Cost: The cost of the spell after taking the relevant spell level perk, with the minimum skill required to do so. So Novice Spells are displayed at Skill 15, Apprentice at 25, etc. This is the most useful number, as it provides the most realistic basis for cost comparison among spells.

Base Cost: The cost of the spell at skill level 15, with no perks.

Skill 100 Cost: The cost of the spell at skill level 100, after taking all of the spell level perks. This is provided for comparison so you can see how the costs diminish as you become more proficient.

Description: The description of the spell as it appears in your Magic Menu.

Notes and Restrictions: Lists any quests or other significant limiting factors that govern when you can acquire the spell. Also provides clarifications on how the spell works, and tips on using it effectively.

✓	SPELL NAME	LEVEL	STANDARD COST	BASE COST	SKILL 100 COST	DESCRIPTION	NOTES AND RESTRICTIONS
ALTERATION
	Candlelight	Novice	9	18	6	Creates a hovering light that lasts for 60s.
	Oakflesh	Novice	45	91	30	Improves the caster's armor rating by 40 points for 60s.
	Magelight	Apprentice	35	74	25	Ball of light that lasts 60s and sticks where it strikes.
	Stoneflesh	Apprentice	81	171	57	Improves the caster's armor rating by 60 points for 60s.
	Ash Shell	Adept	93	221	74	Targets that fail to resist are immobilized in hardened ash for 30s.	Sold by Talvas in Tel Mithryn. Ash Shell is effectively a cheaper and weaker form of Paralyze. Foes encased in ash are taken out of the fight, but become immune to damage, preventing you from killing them for the duration.
	Detect Life	Adept	37/s	88/s	29/s	Nearby living creatures, but not undead, machines, or daedra, can be seen through walls.	Excellent in stealth situations for keeping track of patrolling guards. The color of the glow indicates whether the creature is hostile towards you.
	Ironflesh	Adept	98	235	79	Improves the caster's armor rating by 80 points for 60s.
	Telekenesis	Adept	63/s	149/s	50/s	Can pull an object to you from a distance. Add it to your inventory or throw it.	Great for pulling items off pressure plates from a safe distance, or rearranging items (say, in your house).
	Waterbreathing	Adept	82	196	66	Can breathe water for 60s.	Watch for the glow around your body to fade, indicating that the spell has worn off. When it does, you have the equivalent of a full breath (as if you'd just surfaced) before you begin to drown.
	Ash Rune	Expert	138	369	124	Cast on a nearby surface, it explodes when enemies are nearby, immobilizing them in hardened ash for 30s.	Sold by Talvas in Tel Mithryn. Ash Rune effectively casts Ash Shell on all enemies within range of the Rune's explosion. Cast it in a hallway before battle to stall pursuers if you need to retreat, or to take a tightly-clustered group of foes out of a larger fight. The Destruction skill's Rune Master perk increases the range of this spell.
	Detect Dead	Expert	49/s	130/s	43/s	Nearby dead can be seen through walls.	This spell detects undead and corpses. Great for spotting Draugr lurking in dark catacombs.
	Ebonyflesh	Expert	113	300	101	Improves the caster's armor rating by 100 points for 60s.
	Paralyze	Expert	149	396	133	Targets that fail to resist are paralyzed for 10s.	Paralyzed creatures near a ledge will often fall to their deaths.
	Dragonhide	Master	248	738	248	Caster ignores 80% of all physical damage for 30s.	Reward for College of Winterhold Radiant Quest: Alteration Ritual Spell.
	Mass Paralysis	Master	278	826	278	All targets in the area that fail to resist are paralyzed for 15s.	Sold by Tolfair, after completing College of Winterhold Radiant Quest: Alteration Ritual Spell.
	Equilibrium	Special - Novice	0	0	0	Converts 25 points of health into magicka per second. Caster can be killed by this effect.	Can only be found in Labyrinthian Chasm, during College of Winterhold Quest: The Staff of Magnus, in a side chamber. A risky spell, but it is a fast, low-cost way to recover a lot of Magicka in a hurry.
	Transmute	Special - Adept	37	88	29	Transmute one piece of unrefined Iron Ore to Silver, or Silver Ore to Gold, if the caster is carrying any.	This spell is sometimes sold by Enthir, though you can also find copies in Halted Stream Camp, Ansilvund Burial Chamber, and Knifepoint Ridge Mine. Cast this spell twice to transform a piece of Iron Ore (2 gold) to Gold Ore (50 gold). Profit!
CONJURATION
	Bound Dagger	Novice	23	47	15	Creates a magic dagger for 120s. Sheathe it to dispel.	Sold by Talvas in Tel Mithryn. For half the cost of a Bound Sword, you can get a Bound Dagger that does 2/3 the damage (or more, if you have the dagger-oriented Sneak perks). As with Bound Sword, cast this spell separately in each hand if you want to dual-wield bound daggers.
	Bound Sword	Novice	41	82	27	Creates a magic sword for 120s. Sheathe it to dispel.	Dualcasting this spell does not give you dual bound swords. If that's what you want, cast the spell separately in each hand.
	Conjure Familiar	Novice	47	94	31	Summons a Familiar for 60s wherever the caster is pointing.
	Raise Zombie	Novice	45	90	30	Reanimate a weak dead body to fight for you for 60s.	Works on creatures up to Lv6.
	Bound Battleaxe	Apprentice	70	149	50	Creates a magic battle axe for 120s. Sheathe it to dispel.
	Conjure Flame Atronach	Apprentice	62	132	44	Summons a Flame Atronach for 60s wherever the caster is pointing.	Flame Atronachs do good ranged damage, but are fairly weak in melee.
	Conjure Boneman	Apprentice	53	113	38	Summons a Boneman Archer from the Soul Cairn for 60s wherever the caster is pointing.	Bonemen have slightly more health than Flame Atronachs but generally do less damage. They are cheaper to cast, though.
	Reanimate Corpse	Apprentice	60	127	42	Reanimate a more powerful dead body to fight for you for 60s.	Works on creatures up to Lv13.
	Soul Trap	Apprentice	44	94	31	If a target dies within 60s, fills a soul gem.	This spell always places the soul into the smallest soul gem that can hold it. But keep an eye on your soul gem inventory— you don't want to waste a Grand Soul Gem on a Skeever's soul. Remember that human souls can only be captured in Black Soul Gems.
	Banish Daedra	Adept	72	173	58	Weaker summoned daedra are sent back to Oblivion.	Only works on conjured daedra (not on 'permanent' ones, like those in some Warlock dungeons). Works on Daedra up to Lv15 (Familiars and Flame Atronachs). In addition to its stated effect, this spell will also stagger any Daedra it hits, making it useful in buying you some space against even higher-level foes.
	Bound Bow	Adept	76	183	61	Creates a magic bow for 120s. Sheathe it to dispel.	In addition to the bow, this spell also creates bound arrows that last for the life of the bow.
	Conjure Mistman	Adept	71	170	57	Summons a Mistman from the Soul Cairn for 60s wherever the caster is pointing.	Mistmen are frost-based spellcasters with high health.
	Conjure Seeker	Adept	58	139	46	Summons a Seeker for 60s wherever the caster is pointing.	Found only in Apocrypha. Seekers attack from range with non-elemental spells that can't be resisted. They are also very durable, with high health and the ability to create distracting illusions.
	Conjure Frost Atronach	Adept	79	189	63	Summons a Frost Atronach for 60s wherever the caster is pointing.	Frost Atronachs do good melee damage and have high health, but lack a ranged attack.
	Revenant	Adept	68	162	54	Reanimate a powerful dead body to fight for you for 60s.	Works on creatures up to Lv21.
	Command Daedra	Expert	80	214	72	Powerful summoned and raised creatures are put under your control.	Only works on conjured daedra (not on 'permanent' ones, like those in many Warlock dungeons). Works on Daedra up to Lv20 (Frost Atronachs and lower).

<input type="checkbox"/>	Conjure Ash Guardian	Expert	112	300	101	Creates an Ash Guardian that guards that location until destroyed. Consumes a heart stone from your inventory, without which it will be hostile.	Sold by Talvas in Tel Mithryn. Ash Guardians are primarily melee combatants, although they do have a short-range ash cloud attack. Make sure you have a Heart Stone in your inventory before casting this spell (or the Guardian will attack you), and be aware that the Guardian will guard the location where you summon it instead of following you.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Conjure Dremora Lord	Expert	118	316	106	Summons a Dremora Lord for 60s.	Dremora Lords are powerful melee combatants with a number of fire spells at their disposal.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Conjure Storm Atronach	Expert	107	284	95	Summons a Storm Atronach for 60s wherever the caster is pointing.	Storm Atronachs are powerful ranged combatants.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Dread Zombie	Expert	100	266	89	Reanimate a very powerful dead body to fight for you for 60s.	Works on creatures up to Lv30.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Expel Daedra	Expert	71	190	64	Powerful summoned daedra creatures are sent back to Oblivion.	Only works on conjured daedra (not on 'permanent' ones, like those in many Warlock dungeons). Works on Daedra up to Lv20 (Frost Atronachs and lower). Staggers any Daedra it hits.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Conjure Wrathman	Expert	99	265	89	Summons a Wrathman from the Soul Cairn for 60s wherever the caster is pointing.	Wrathmen are powerful warriors with almost four times as much health as a Storm Atronach.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Dead Thrall	Master	296	881	296	Reanimate a dead body permanently to fight for you. Only works on people.	Works on creatures up to Lv40.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Flame Thrall	Master	267	793	267	Summons a Flame Atronach permanently.	Reward for College of Winterhold Radiant Quest: Conjunction Ritual Spell. Thralls are stronger versions of the standard atronachs. After casting this spell, consider resting or waiting to recover your magicka.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Frost Thrall	Master	326	969	326	Summons a Frost Atronach permanently.	Sold by Phinis, after completing College of Winterhold Radiant Quest: Conjunction Ritual Spell.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Storm Thrall	Master	356	1057	356	Summons a Storm Atronach permanently.	Sold by Phinis, after completing College of Winterhold Radiant Quest: Conjunction Ritual Spell.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Flaming Familiar	Special - Apprentice	24	50	17	Summons a Flaming Familiar which will charge into battle and explode.	Reward for Dungeon Quest: A Scroll for Anska. The Flaming Familiar will behave like a standard Familiar for a few seconds, then explode for 40 points of damage.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Summon Arniel's Shade	Special - Apprentice	0	0	0	Summons the Shade of Arniel Gane for 60s wherever the caster is pointing.	Reward for College of Winterhold Radiant Quest: Arniel's Endeavor. Arniel's Shade is physically weak, but a powerful spellcaster.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Summon Unbound Dremora	Special - Novice	88	176	59	Summons an unbound Dremora.	Quest spell for College of Winterhold Radiant Quest: Conjunction Ritual Spell. Summons an Unbound Dremora in a specific location for the quest. Otherwise, no effect.
DESTRUCTION
<input type="checkbox"/>	Flames	Novice	6/s	13/s	4/s	A gout of fire that does 8 points per second. Targets on fire take extra damage.	Targets on fire take more damage because they're burning; the spell doesn't do bonus damage if they're burning.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Frostbite	Novice	7/s	14/s	4/s	A blast of cold that does 8 points of damage per second to Health and Stamina.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Sparks	Novice	8/s	16/s	5/s	Lightning that does 8 points of shock damage to Health and Magicka per second.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Fire Rune	Apprentice	98	207	69	Cast on a nearby surface, it explodes for 50 points of fire damage when enemies come near.	Runes last indefinitely, but you can only place one at a time. For best results, place them in a corridor the enemy will have to use, then pull them towards you. In a pinch, you can also cast a rune directly under an enemy to trigger the explosion immediately, although that's less efficient than your other spells.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Firebolt	Apprentice	17	36	12	A blast of fire that does 25 points of damage. Targets on fire take extra damage.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Freeze	Apprentice	12	26	8	A spike of ice that does 20 points of frost damage to Health and Stamina and slows the target for 15s.	You can only cast this spell while wearing Ahzidal's Ring of Arcana, found in Kolbjorn Barrow. While it does slightly less damage than Ice Spike, it costs only half as much, and slows the target for long enough for you to get away (or back up and cast again). The slow effect does not stack- casting it again on the same enemy just resets the clock.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Frost Rune	Apprentice	122	258	87	Cast on a nearby surface, it explodes for 50 points of frost damage when enemies come near.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Ice Spike	Apprentice	25	42	14	A spike of ice that does 25 points of frost damage to Health and Stamina.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Ignite	Apprentice	12	26	8	A blast of flame that sets the target on fire, doing 4 damage per second for 15s.	You can only cast this spell while wearing Ahzidal's Ring of Arcana, found in Kolbjorn Barrow. This spell costs less than Firebolt, and by the end of its duration, does more than twice the damage. This effect does stack (allowing you to accelerate the damage by casting it repeatedly). Ignite also prevents enemies with health regeneration (like Trolls or Karstoag) from regenerating while it lasts.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Lightning Bolt	Apprentice	21	45	15	A bolt of lightning that does 25 points of shock damage to Health and half that to Magicka.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Lightning Rune	Apprentice	134	284	95	Cast on a nearby surface, it explodes for 50 points of shock damage when enemies come near.

<input type="checkbox"/>	Chain Lightning	Adept	57	137	46	Lightning bolt that does 40 points of shock damage to Health and half to Magicka, then leaps to a new target.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Fireball	Adept	40	117	39	A fiery explosion for 40 points of damage in a 15 foot radius. Targets on fire take extra damage.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Flame Cloak	Adept	107	254	85	For 60s, opponents in melee range take 8 points of fire damage per second. Targets on fire take extra damage.	Cloak spells are great if you expect to be in melee frequently, or prefer short-range spells (Flames, Wall of Flames, etc.), as they significantly increase your damage output.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Frost Cloak	Adept	117	278	93	For 60s, opponents in melee range take 8 points of frost damage and Stamina damage per second.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Ice Storm	Adept	53	127	42	A freezing whirlwind that does 40 points of frost damage per second to Health and Stamina.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Lightning Cloak	Adept	137	326	110	For 60s, nearby opponents take 8 points of shock damage and half magicka damage.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Whirlwind Cloak	Adept	125	298	100	For 60s, opponents in melee range have a chance of being flung away.	Sold by Talvas in Tel Mithryn.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Icy Spear	Expert	106	282	95	A spear of ice that does 60 points of frost damage to Health and Stamina.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Incinerate	Expert	98	262	88	A blast of fire that does 60 points of damage. Targets on fire take extra damage.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Thunderbolt	Expert	113	302	101	A Thunderbolt that does 60 points of shock damage to Health and half that to Magicka.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Wall of Flames	Expert	39/s	104/s	35/s	Sprayed on the ground, it creates a wall of fire that does 50 points of fire damage per second.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Wall of Frost	Expert	45/s	121/s	40/s	Sprayed on the ground, it creates a wall of frost that does 50 points of frost damage per second.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Wall of Storms	Expert	48/s	128/s	43/s	Sprayed on the ground, it creates a wall of lightning that does 50 points of shock damage per second.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Blizzard	Master	328	975	328	Targets take 20 points of frost damage for 10s, plus Stamina damage.	Sold by Faralda, after completing College of Winterhold Radiant Quest: Destruction Ritual Spell. Damages everything in a large radius around the caster for 10s.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Fire Storm	Master	423	1257	423	A 100 point fire explosion centered on the caster. Does more damage to closer targets.	Reward for College of Winterhold Radiant Quest: Destruction Ritual Spell. Does extra damage to things closer to the caster.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Lightning Storm	Master	41/s	122/s	41/s	Target takes 75 points of shock damage per second to Health, and half that to Magicka.	Sold by Faralda, after completing College of Winterhold Radiant Quest: Destruction Ritual Spell. Not an area-of-effect spell, Lightning Storm is a single concentrated bolt that does massive damage and disintegrates targets.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Arniel's Convection	Special - Novice	1	1	1	Burns the target 1 points per second. Targets on fire take extra damage.	Quest spell for College of Winterhold Radiant Quest: Arniel's Endeavor. Heats Dwarven Convector for the quest. Otherwise, not especially useful.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Vampiric Drain	Special - Novice	Varies	Varies	Varies	Absorb health from the target.	A spell unique to Vampires, Vampiric Drain both damages your foes and restores your own health.
ILLUSION
<input type="checkbox"/>	Courage	Novice	17	35	11	Target won't flee for 60s and gets some extra health and stamina.	Best used to strengthen a follower. In a pinch, you can also use it as a cheap way to stop weak enemies from fleeing.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Clairvoyance	Novice	11/s	22/s	7/s	Shows the path to the current goal.	Clairvoyance isn't a spell you'll need very often, but it can be a real help if you get lost in a dungeon.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Fury	Novice	29	59	20	Creatures and people up to Lv6 will attack anything nearby for 30s.	Targets a single foe. Best cast at range, since they'll attack anyone nearby indiscriminately, including you.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Calm	Apprentice	61	129	43	Creatures and people up to Lv9 won't fight for 30s.	Targets a single foe.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Fear	Apprentice	64	135	45	Creatures and people up to Lv9 flee from combat for 30s.	Targets a single foe.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Muffle	Apprentice	60	127	42	You move more quietly for 180s.	Silences your movement. Important for stealthy characters, or anyone who wants to try sneaking around while wearing armor.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Frenzy	Adept	77	184	62	Creatures and people up to Lv14 will attack anyone nearby for 60s.	Targets a single foe.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Frenzy Rune	Adept	103	245	82	Targets up to Lv20 that fail to resist are frenzied for 30s.	Sold by Talvas in Tel Mithryn. All enemies within range of the Rune's explosion will be frenzied, making this great for getting a tightly-grouped band of enemies to start fighting. Note that the Destruction skill's Rune Master perk increases the range of this spell.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Rally	Adept	42	100	33	Targets won't flee for 60s and get extra health and stamina.	Targets a single foe.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Invisibility	Expert	111	295	99	Caster is invisible for 30s. Activating an object or attacking will break the spell.	Another important spell for stealthy characters. Combined with Muffle, you should be able to sneak by most foes without too much difficulty.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Pacify	Expert	96	256	86	Creatures and people up to Lv20 won't fight for 60s.	Affects all foes in a small area.

<input type="checkbox"/>	Mayhem	Master	294	873	294	Creatures and people up to Lv25 will attack anyone nearby for 60s.	Reward for College of Winterhold Radiant Quest: Illusion Ritual Spell. Affects all foes in a large area.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Vision of the Tenth Eye	Special - Novice	0	0	0	See what others cannot.	Quest spell for College of Winterhold Radiant Quest: Illusion Ritual Spell. Reveals the location of the four Master Illusion Texts needed for the quest; otherwise useless.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Healing	Novice	5/s	11/s	3/s	Heals the caster 10 points per second.	If someone is attacking you, Healing rarely heals enough to keep you from dying. Back away and let a follower or summoned creature step in to buy you some time.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Lesser Ward	Novice	15/s	30/s	10/s	Increases armor rating by 40 points and negates up to 40 points of spell damage or effects.	A Ward's armor bonus stacks with the Alteration line of 'flesh' spells for an even stronger defense. Wards are far more effective against spells, although they tie up a hand and cost more to maintain.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Fast Healing	Apprentice	30	65	21	Heals the caster 50 points.	Direct healing spells are less efficient than heal-over-time spells, but they're faster, and may be fast enough to pull you back from the brink of death in a close battle.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Healing Hands	Apprentice	10/s	22/s	7/s	Heals the target 10 points per second, but not undead, atronachs, or machines.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Necromantic Healing	Apprentice	15/s	33/s	11/s	Heals the undead target 10 points per second, but not the living, Atronachs, or machines.	Allows you to heal Serana or your resurrected minions.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Steadfast Ward	Apprentice	24/s	51/s	17/s	Increases armor rating by 60 points and negates up to 60 points of spell damage or effects.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Sun Fire	Apprentice	10	21	7	Ball of sunlight that does 25 points of damage to undead.	Firebolt costs about the same as Sun Fire and generally does more damage to undead because of their weakness to fire.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Turn Lesser Undead	Apprentice	35	74	24	Undead up to Lv6 flee for 30s.	Targets a single foe.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Close Wounds	Adept	46	111	37	Heals the caster 100 points.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Greater Ward	Adept	32/s	76/s	25/s	Increases armor rating by 80 points and negates up to 80 points of spell damage or effects.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Heal Other	Adept	29	71	24	Heals the target 75 points, but not undead, atronachs, or machines.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Heal Undead	Adept	42	101	34	Heals the undead target 75 points but not the living, Atronachs, or machines.	Heal Undead has a higher casting cost but is significantly more efficient than Necromantic Healing.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Poison Rune	Adept	91	217	73	Targets that fail to resist take 3 poison damage per second for 30s.	Sold by Talvas in Tel Mithryn. Before using this spell, consult the Bestiary for more information on which enemies are immune or resistant to poison. Note that the Destruction skill's Rune Master perk increases the range of this spell.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Repel Lesser Undead	Adept	42	101	34	All affected undead up to level 8 flee for 30s.	Affects all undead in the arc of fire.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Stendarr's Aura	Adept	92	219	73	For 60s, undead in melee range take 10 points of sun damage per second.	A slightly cheaper alternative to Flame Cloak if you're fighting undead.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Turn Undead	Adept	62	148	50	Undead up to Lv13 flee for 30s.	Targets a single foe.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Vampire's Bane	Adept	26	63	21	Sunlight explosion that does 40 points of damage in a 15-foot radius to undead.	Fireball is slightly more expensive but has the same radius and generally does more damage to undead.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Circle of Protection	Expert	56	151	50	Undead up to Lv30 entering the circle will flee.	Creates a warding circle around the location where the spell is cast.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Grand Healing	Expert	84	224	75	Heals everyone close to the caster 200 points.	Does not heal Daedra, Automaton, or Undead. But it can heal other enemies, so use this carefully.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Repel Undead	Expert	117	311	105	All affected undead up to Lv16 flee for 30s.	Affects all undead in the arc of fire.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Turn Greater Undead	Expert	88	235	79	Undead up to Lv21 flee for 30s.	Targets a single foe.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Bane of the Undead	Master	293	871	293	Sets undead up to Lv30 on fire and makes them flee for 30s.	Reward for College of Winterhold Radiant Quest: Restoration Ritual Spell. Affects all nearby undead in a large area.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Guardian Circle	Master	212	632	212	Undead up to Lv35 entering the circle will flee. Caster heals 20 health per second inside it.	Sold by Colette, after completing College of Winterhold Radiant Quest: Restoration Ritual Spell. Creates a warding circle around the location where the spell is cast.

Table II: General Data

Weapon Base Properties

This section lists the relative speed and stagger chance for each type of weapon, allowing you to choose the one best suited to your needs.

Standard Weapon, Heavy Armor, and Light Armor Progression

This section lists the standard weapon and armor materials in order of increasing value and damage/armor rating.

For each material, the table identifies the level at which it normally begins to appear.

- ◇ You can obtain items earlier than the indicated level in a variety of ways, such as aggressively increasing your Smithing Skill, discovering an exceptional item in a treasure chest, or clearing a dungeon well above your current level.
- ◇ Non-enchanted items show up at lower levels than their enchanted versions. Typically, enchanted items show up ~1-5 levels after the stated 'Commonly Available' level.

For each material, the level of the enchantments typically found on it are also listed. This is always a range, corresponding to the 'Enchantment Level' column in the Derived Enchantments Table. So, for example:

- ◇ Orcish Swords can be found with Ench Level 2-4 enchantments. So you might find an Orcish Sword of Flames (Fire Damage Ench Level 4), but never an Orcish Sword of the Inferno (Fire Damage Ench Level 6).
- ◇ Dragonscale Boots can be found with level 4-6 enchantments. So you might find a Dragonscale Boots of the Ox (Carry Weight Ench Level 5), but never a Dragonscale Boots of Lifting (Carry Weight Ench Level 1).

This range does not restrict the kinds of items you can enchant. So while you're never given an Orcish Sword of the Inferno, you could enchant an Orcish Sword with a comparable fire enchantment if you really wanted to.

Table III: Weapons

This section lists all of the weapons in the game and their properties.

The critical damage of all weapons is always equal to half their base damage, rounded down.

Weapons marked "Uses [Material] enchant list" have the same enchantment levels as an item of the indicated material type.

Enchanted weapons will have a higher value than shown here. The additional value added by the enchantment depends on the type and strength of the enchantment.

Weapons marked "Leveled" have several different leveled variants; you will always receive the one most appropriate to your level. Higher-level versions may have better statistics and stronger enchantments than the example listed here.

All weapons with the exception of Unique Weapons (of any type) can be found in a variety of locations throughout the world. Unique Weapons are tracked in the Atlas Chapter (page 685) and Appendices of this guide. Note that unique items typically can't be disenchanting unless their enchantment is one of the base enchantments.

Table IV: Armor

This section lists all of the armor, robes, and other clothing available to you, and their properties.

Armor and Clothing marked "Uses [Material] enchant list" has the same enchantment levels as an item of the indicated material type.

Circlets, Rings, and Necklaces may appear with armor enchantments of any level.

Enchanted armor will have a higher value than shown here. The additional value added by the enchantment depends on the type and strength of the enchantment.

Armor and Clothing marked "Leveled" has several different leveled variants; you will always receive the one most appropriate to your level. Higher-level versions may have better statistics and stronger enchantments than the example listed here.

All shields are listed as being 'Heavy Armor'. However, they don't count as Heavy Armor for the purposes of skills or perks. For example:

- ♦ Your Heavy Armor skill doesn't make you any better with a shield.
- ♦ If you have perks that only work if you're wearing a full set of light armor or no armor, holding a shield doesn't count against you.

Clothing often comes in a variety of appearances that aren't distinguished by name (there are at least a half-dozen 'boots', for example). So a representative item from each set has been listed here. Be aware that an item's appearance and properties may vary slightly between instances of these items.

All Armor and Clothing, with the exception of Unique Armor (of any type) can be found in a variety of locations throughout the world. Unique Armor and Outfits are tracked in the Atlas Chapter (page 685) and Appendices of this guide.

Table VIII: Base Enchantments

The two tables below list all of the base weapon and armor enchantments.

When Disenchanting an item, you always learn its Base Enchantment.

- So disenchanting a Daedric Mace of the Inferno teaches you 'Fire Damage'.
- But disenchanting an Iron Sword of Embers also teaches you 'Fire Damage'. Despite the cheaper item, you learn the same effect.

When Enchanting an item:

- You can apply any weapon enchantment to any weapon.
- You can apply armor enchantments only to a subset of armor pieces, as shown below.

Examples:

You can enchant any weapon with Fire Damage, from a dagger to a warhammer.

You can apply Waterbreathing to any Helm, Ring, or Necklace.

You can put Muffle on any pair of Boots, but only on Boots.

Table IX: Derived Enchantments

This table lists all of the Enchantments that can appear on items you find in the world.

Derived Enchantments Key

Modifier: The item suffix (or, occasionally, prefix) that identifies the enchantment.

Base Enchantment: The enchantment that you learn if you disenchant the item. Cross-reference this with the Base Enchantments Table for a complete description of the enchantment.

Ench Level: The level of this particular enchantment. Cross-reference this with the General Data Table to identify which material types this enchantment can appear on.

Magnitude: The "strength" of this particular enchantment, which might be expressed as a percentage, duration, level, or raw modifier. Plug this into the "#" in the base enchantment's description.

Not every possible combination of weapon, material, and enchantment permitted under this system exists in Skyrim... but the vast majority do.

For Example: You find an Elven Mace of Enervating. Looking it up on this table, you find that its Base Enchantment is "Magicka Damage", and its magnitude is "50". Cross-referencing this with the Base Enchantments Table tells you that it does "+50 Magicka Damage".

Note that the College of Winterhold Robes work a little differently:

There are five basic robes: Novice, Apprentice, Adept, Expert, Master. Each of these robes has a specific Fortify Magicka Rate enchantment on it, as listed on the Armor page.

In addition to that enchantment, these robes may also have an additional enchantment related to one of the five schools of magic. The modifier is just the name of the school, since the magnitude is determined by the type of robe. So, for example, you can find:

Novice Robes of Conjuration [+50% Magicka Regen; 12% Conjuration]

Apprentice Robes of Conjuration [+75% Magicka Regen; 15% Conjuration]

Apprentice Robes of Destruction [+75% Magicka Regen; 15% Destruction]

Table X: Staff Enchantments

This table lists all of the Staves you can create using the Staff Enchanter in Tel Mithryn on the isle of Solstheim. In order to use this device, you must complete Solstheim Side Quest: Reluctant Steward for Neloth; see page 637 for further details. Note that unenchanted staves are given to you by Neloth, and must be imbued with Heart Stones.

THE BESTIARY

MINOR SPOILERS

The wild and untamed lands of Skyrim are teeming with adversaries, from the wretched to the powerful, and the monstrous to the meek. This chapter presents them alphabetized by type, so you can identify the foes you're about to engage in battle. This allows you to identify weaknesses that you can exploit, bolster your defenses against the spells and abilities your enemies will use, and know what kind of loot to expect. Heed the following notes before exploring the Bestiary in detail.

BESTIARY ADVICE

Enemies

Enemies that are members of one of the ten races that you can choose from have all the benefits of their race (which you can read about at the start of the Training chapter) in addition to any statistics indicated in the Bestiary below.

For example, a High Elf Warlock has a higher Magicka than indicated due to their Highborn Magicka racial ability. A Breton Warlock will be more resistant to spells because of their Magic Resistance ability. A Nord Warlock will shrug off frost spells (Frost Resistance), while a Dark Elf Warlock will be more resistant to fire (Fire Resistance).

As your level increases, the difficulty of the enemies you encounter will typically increase in stages. This is most visible when you read the name of your adversaries, which usually indicates their level. For example, a "Novice Necromancer" (Level 1) is noticeably weaker than an "Apprentice Necromancer" (Level 6) or a "Master Necromancer" (Level 36). A few characters (such as your Followers) work differently: Their level will gradually increase as your level does, though possibly at a slower rate.

Ordinary citizens of Skyrim and unique enemies for particular quests are not listed in this section. The vast majority of unique enemies borrow their statistics from a related creature that is on the chart, perhaps with a slight change to their weapons, armor, or spells. For example, all of the Civil War military camps have a commander with a unique name. However, these are simply named versions of the "Imperial Legate" or "Stormcloak Commander" characters in the Bestiary.

Items and Spells

(Parenthesis) indicate that an item may or may not be present—random chance per creature.

A / Slash indicates that one of the items will be present, the others will not.

[Brackets] indicate that the version of the item carried by the creature cannot be looted from their body. For example, most Skeleton armor can't be taken from Skeletons.

Many creatures have some form of Loot Item (eg. Skeleton Loot). These are typically lists of small items (food, ingredients, etc.) that the creature may be carrying; a creature may have none, one, or several of these items on them when killed. For each creature type, we've provided a quick summary of the kinds of things they're likely to be carrying.

THE BESTIARY CHART LEGEND

COLUMN	NOTES
Name	Name of the creature as it appears in the game.
Subtype	Not visible in game; provides some additional notes to help identify the creature if the name isn't sufficient on its own.
Lv	Level of the creature; roughly suggests the level at which you should be able to reasonably defeat it. Depending on your particular mix of skills and perks, your actual experience may vary.
Health	The creature's base health.
Magicka	The creature's base magicka.
Stamina	The creature's base stamina.
Weapons	The weapon(s) the creature possesses, in addition to its unarmed attacks.
Armor	The armor the creature wears.
Items	Any loose items the creature carries.
Spells	The creature's list of spells or spell-like special abilities.
Notes	Any special properties, such as elemental weaknesses or resistances that may affect how you choose to fight the creature.

NOTE * If a Level number is starred (for example, "30*"), this creature is one that levels with you: As your level and statistics increase, so will its level and statistics. The values in the table represent the creature's stats for the indicated level, which is often the creature's lowest possible level.

NOTE A Note on Ghosts
All ghosts use the statistics, spells, and abilities of their original forms (often Bandits or Draugr). They disintegrate into Ectoplasm when killed.

Color-coding: In the following tables, elements from the original game are in white and gray. Elements from the Dawnguard, Hearthfire, and Dragonborn add-ons have been color-coded as follows:

Chaurus Hunter Dawnguard/Hearthfire
Reaver Lord Dragonborn

Afflicted

The Afflicted of Peryite have a damaging Vile Vapor ability in addition to their normal attacks.

Apocrypha Keepers

Apocrypha is the plane of Oblivion ruled by Hermeus Mora, lord of fate and keeper of forbidden knowledge. The Daedra of this realm come in two forms: Seekers are masters of illusion, who use invisibility and mirror images as distractions while they sap your strength; use a quick area-of-effect attack to break through their decoys and find the real Seeker. Lurkers are towering monstrosities with powerful physical and poison-based attacks; poison resistance is effective against them, but your best defense may be to simply keep your distance and attack them from range.

Chaurus

The insectoid Chaurus often fight alongside their Falmer masters. Their high health and lingering poison attack makes them dangerous opponents. Be sure to increase your resistance to poison with potions or enchantments before facing them.

When a Chaurus reaches the end of its natural lifespan, it forms a cocoon and is reborn as a flying Chaurus Hunter. Hunters have more powerful attacks, greater health, and stronger chitin that resists physical damage, making magic a more effective choice against them. Minor Treasure includes a tiny chance of: A few gold, a gem, or a ring.

Cultists

Miraak's human followers, the Cultists, oversee his plans on Solstheim and carry out their master's will across Tamriel. Cultists are powerful conjurers, with the ability to command or banish your summoned creatures, and often to summon creatures of their own, including Seekers from Apocrypha. Cultist loot includes a chance of: Gold, Ingredients, Potions, Scrolls, Soul Gems, Spell Tomes, or Recipes.

Miraak's strongest servants are his three Acolytes, powerful Dragon Priests who followed him to Solstheim in the distant past. Each Acolyte uses spells from one element exclusively, so prepare for battle by using potions or equipping gear that gives you resistance to their element. They have no special weaknesses.

Daedra

Daedra include all manner of creatures native to Oblivion, from elemental Atronachs to the powerful Dremora. All of the Daedra in this list will be affected by Daedra-banishing spells and effects (Banish Daedra, Expel Daedra, etc.). Don't bother using Illusion spells against Daedra, but do take advantage of the Atronachs' elemental weaknesses—obviously, fire spells are best against Frost Atronachs, and frost spells against Flame Atronachs.

Note that Atronachs summoned by the common conjuration spells are generally weaker than those bound in more permanent ways (such as the ones you often find in Warlock dungeons). You can claim Daedra Hearts from the bodies of slain Dremora; these are one of the rarest ingredients in the game, and essential for smithing Daedric items.

Long ago, the Dawnguard were an organization of elite Vampire Hunters. Under the leadership of Isran, they have begun to rebuild their base in Skyrim's eastern mountains, and their agents are beginning to spread throughout the Nine Holds. Dawnguard loot includes a chance of food or drink, lockpicks, jewelry, gems, tools, or ingots.

Death Hounds

With a fearsome bite and bloodlust the equal of any vampire, these undead dogs will rend the flesh of any who oppose their masters. As allies, their bite and ever-present Frost Cloak mean they do significantly more damage than a common dog, although common dogs will have more Health at higher levels. When facing them, consider increasing your Frost Resistance to minimize the damage from their Frost Cloak. Spells that damage or turn undead also work well against them.

Minor treasure includes a tiny chance of a few gold, a gem, or a ring.

While dogs are a common sight in Skyrim, purebreeds like Huskies are rare. The Dawnguard train them as war dogs, using them to seek out vampires and hunt them down. With almost twice the Health, Stamina, and attack power of an average dog, the armored Huskies are a worthy companion for any warrior. Minor treasure includes a tiny chance of a few gold, a gem, or a ring.

Dragons

Dragons are among the most formidable foes, with powerful attacks and vast reserves of health. A dragon's color usually indicates their difficulty, allowing you to choose whether to fight or flee as soon as you spot them. When fighting a dragon, stay on the move—patience and ranged attacks work best. Be especially careful of Revered and Legendary Dragons, who have a powerful shout that drains your Health, Magicka, and Stamina.

Dragon Loot includes a chance of: Dragon Bones, Dragon Scales, Gold, Gems, Weapons, or Armor; Dragons usually have several of these items. If you intend to smith dragon weapons or armor, make sure to save a couple dozen Dragon Scales, or a few Dragon Bones.

This is Alduin as he appears during Main Quest: Dragonslayer. Alduin is invulnerable unless weakened by the Dragonrend Shout.

Draugr

Draugr are among the most common foes in Skyrim's many crypts and catacombs. Fire is your best weapon against them. High-level Draugr, like Dragon Priests and Deathlords, are especially deadly foes—don't go toe-to-toe with Deathlords unless you can withstand some serious damage. Draugr Loot includes a chance of jewelry, gems, soul gems, ingots, or potions. Note that you can't loot their armor (would you really want it?).

Dwarven Automatons

Automatons are the mechanical constructs left behind by the Dwarves who once inhabited Skyrim. As constructs, most Automatons are immune to poison, Illusion spells, Frost spells, and Soul Trap, and have 25% Magic Resistance. Dwarven Loot includes a chance of: arrows, scrap metal, oil, ore, gems, or soul gems. Spheres give more (and more valuable) loot than Spiders, and Centurions more than Spheres.

Ebony Warrior

The Ebony Warrior is a unique and powerful foe, with high health and some of the best weapons and armor to be found anywhere. He is marginally more vulnerable to Fire than the other elements, since only his shield confers Fire Resistance, and he won't have it equipped if you fight him from range. Defeat him, and you can claim his gear for your own.

Falmer

Falmer inhabit the deep caves and dwarven ruins of Skyrim, as well as the Forgotten Vale. Most poison their weapons for added damage and charge into battle with their pet Chaurus and spiders. Since Falmer are blind, you can use light spells and torches without being detected. They have excellent hearing, though, so keep your distance and move slowly if you plan a stealthy approach. Falmer loot includes a chance of Falmer Ears, poisons, or gold.

Forgotten Vale Animals

In the centuries that the Forgotten Vale has been isolated from the outside world, its animals have grown to be very different than those in Skyrim. Despite their appearance, these creatures have no special resistances or weaknesses, so the same tactics for fighting them still apply. Minor Treasure includes a tiny chance of a few gold, a gem, or a ring.

Forgotten Vale Frozen Creatures

Deep within the Forgotten Vale, you may find creatures that have been transformed into living ice. They have the statistics, abilities, and resistances of their living forms (as listed in this section) but are additionally [Immune to Frost, Weak to Fire 25%]. They shatter when killed, making any items they carry unrecoverable.

The one exception is the Ancient Frost Atronach, whose power has been amplified by the ice. Keep your distance from him to avoid his persistent Frost Cloak and powerful melee attacks, and use fire spells or weapons with a flame enchantment to bring him down.

Gargoyles

Gargoyles are predatory creatures with a stony skin that allows them to protect themselves and helps ambush their prey. Gargoyles in statue form are immune to all damage and magical effects. Once they emerge, gargoyles are still highly resistant to physical attacks and drain health from their victims with each hit. Keep your distance and use magic or enchanted weapons to bring them down.

Giants

The nomadic Giants shepherd their mammoth herds across the Tundra of central Skyrim. While powerful, they are generally peaceful if left alone. Their cousins, the Frost Giants of the Forgotten Vale, are even more formidable, with hard-hitting attacks and huge reserves of health. When fighting giants, don't let them get within melee range—they are deceptively fast, so don't get caught out in the open. Use cover and obstacles to your advantage, and wear them down with ranged attacks. Giant Loot typically includes several of: Giant Toes, Giant Weapons, Giant Armor, Gold, Gems, Soul Gems, and Animal Parts.

Hagravens

Witches who surrender their humanity become Hagravens, creatures of corruption and decay revered by the Forsworn of the Reach. Before fighting them, do what you can to bolster your fire resistance. Warriors should close to melee range rather than try to take them on at a distance.

Horses

Horses are a common mode of transportation in Skyrim, at least for those able to afford them. You can obtain a number of unique horses through quests. For example, during your time in the Soul Cairn, you may learn how to summon the skeletal horse Arvak.

Hunters

Skyrim's vast forests are home to any number of hunters, who prefer the wilderness to life in the cities. Orcs in particular often take up this nomadic lifestyle. Most are glad to barter with a passing adventurer.

Morag Tong

The Morag Tong are an ancient guild of assassins, legally sanctioned to carry out 'writs' of execution against their targets. They have a long and bitter rivalry with the Dark Brotherhood, which split from the Morag Tong centuries ago. When fighting the Morag Tong, be sure you finish off your target, as most will try to use Invisibility to escape and recover. Morag Tong Loot includes a chance of: Food, Drink, Jewelry, Lockpicks, Gems, or Tools.

Netch

Netch are a wild species native to Morrowind that resemble floating jellyfish. They are generally peaceful, and are often kept and herded like cattle by Dark Elven farmers. But be warned: if provoked, they are highly dangerous. All Netch are resistant to shock, and their tentacles do shock damage, so plan accordingly. Minor Treasure includes a tiny chance of: A few gold, a gem, or a ring.

Reavers

'Reavers' are the bandits and pirates that ply the waters of the eastern Sea of Ghosts. They are almost exclusively Dark Elves (with the Dark Elves' innate resistance to fire), and tend to be slightly more challenging than typical bandits: they have a chance of having better armor, and their leaders, the Reaver Lords, can wield spells and weapons with equal finesse. Reaver Loot includes a chance of: Food, Drink, Jewelry, Lockpicks, Gems, or Tools. Reaver Wizard Loot additionally includes a chance of: Soul Gems, Ingredients, Books, Spell Tomes, and Staffs.

Rieklings

Rieklings are small, blue-skinned humanoid that inhabit the icy northern regions of Solstheim. They tend to live in small clans, stealing or scavenging whatever they can to survive. Some clans raise and keep Bristleback Boars, which their best warriors use as mounts. Riekling Loot includes a chance of: Junk, Ingredients, Gems, Jewelry, Potions, or Gold. Boar Loot includes a chance of: Boar Tusks, Boar Meat, Potions, Gold, or Mushrooms.

Skeletons

The skeletal remains of the dead are a constant threat around Necromancers and Vampires. Unarmored skeletons tend to be weak, while armored skeletons present a much more difficult challenge. As with all undead, use fire magic or spells that damage or repel the undead to deal with them. Skeleton Loot includes a chance of: Jewelry, Gems, Soul Gems, Ingots, or Potions.

Spiders

Frostbite Spiders are giant arachnids often found in Skyrim's caves and ruins. They have a dangerous poison spit attack, though their bite is just as poisonous—try to keep your distance and focus on ranged attacks. Despite their name, they are not actually resistant to frost. The white variety of spiders is somewhat tougher than the red variety for each size category. Minor Treasure includes a tiny chance of: A few gold, a gem, or a ring.

Solstheim Spiders are a unique species of spider that has recently been discovered on Solstheim. Prolonged exposure to certain minerals (particularly gemstones) seems to cause the 'standard' Albino Spider to take on new and volatile forms. When fighting these spiders, observe their coloration and prepare yourself with Fire, Frost, Shock, or Poison Resistance accordingly. The damage from the jumping and exploding variants is half physical and half elemental, so while resistance will help, it won't mitigate the damage completely.

Soldiers & Guards

Each of Skyrim's Nine Holds maintains its own standing force of guards, who owe their loyalty to the Jarl. As the Civil War rages between the Imperial Legion and the Stormcloaks, their soldiers will take possession of the military camps, forts, towns, and cities of Skyrim, replacing some of the local guards.

Spriggan

Burnt Spriggan

Spriggan

Spriggans are spirits of the forest, often dwelling in secluded groves and grottos. They are just as tough in melee as with ranged attacks, and are often accompanied by bears, wolves, and sabre cats that will fight to protect them. Most Spriggans are vulnerable to fire, so use it against them whenever possible.

The Burnt Spriggans of Solstheim are another matter. These tortured creatures are immune to fire (and actually use it against you), but they lack the allies of other Spriggans. Use ranged weapons or magic to take them out from a distance when possible.

Trolls

Trolls are among the most feared of Skyrim's predators. They regenerate health, so attack aggressively—it's worth taking some punishment to keep the attacks up. Trolls are notably weak to fire. Minor Treasure includes a tiny chance of a few gold, a gem, or a ring.

Recently, the Dawnguard's beastmasters have found a way to tame these fearsome creatures. Properly trained and outfitted with heavy iron plates, their Armored Trolls are fearsome allies in the fight against the vampire menace.

Vampires

Vampirism begins as a disease, Sanguinare Vampiris, but quickly progresses to something much worse if left untreated. Vampires tend to congregate in clans, and their fearsome reputation is well deserved. It's worth spending those scrolls and potions you've been hoarding to defeat higher-level vampires. You can't let the fight drag on, because their primary attack heals them while hurting you. Vampire Loot includes a chance of lockpicks, potions, jewelry, gems, gold, books, or staves.

Vigilants of Stendarr

The Vigilants of Stendarr are priests in the service of Stendarr, the Divine of Mercy. They will gladly lend their aid to a hero who fits their ideals of virtue. But werewolves, vampires, and daedra worshippers have reason to fear their wrath.

Warlocks

Warlocks is a catchall term for the mages, wizards, conjurers, and necromancers that you may face on your journey. Warlocks encountered as bosses have more magicka than their non-boss counterparts, and are more likely to carry a staff. Warlock loot includes a chance of: soul gems, potions, recipes, and alchemy ingredients.

Werebears

Among the most fearsome of lycanthropes, Werebears are tough and vicious predators who have sacrificed almost all of their humanity. If possible, kill them before they have a chance to transform, as their health and resistances are far stronger once in beast form. Fighting a transformed Werebear in melee can be difficult— they move quickly, hit hard, and can endure a huge amount of damage before they fall. But like Werewolves, they lack a ranged attack, so archery and spells are effective against them if you can keep your distance. Werebear loot includes a small chance of: Gold, Ingredients, Gems, or Jewelry.

Werewolves

Werewolves have always held a place in Skyrim's darker legends and tales. Despite their bulk, these hulking beasts move quickly and have fast, powerful melee attacks, but they lack any kind of ranged attack. Should you find yourself facing a werewolf, take advantage of this by keeping your distance, using obstacles and cover to your advantage, and attacking with ranged weapons and spells. Minor Treasure includes a tiny chance of a few gold, a gem, or a ring.

Wisps

Wispmothers are always found with a group of Wisps (typically 3). While the Wisps live, each grants the Wispmother a bonus to her Health, Magicka, or Stamina. Make sure to kill the Wisps before attacking the Wispmother directly; she is much weaker without them. When her health is low, the Wispmother will conjure two illusory Shades as a distraction.

QUESTS

MAIN QUEST

OVERVIEW

The Main Quest begins the moment you start your adventure. Over the course of three acts, these quests involve some of the most important and wide-ranging events in Skyrim. Once you escape the town of Helgen, you are free to continue or ignore the Main Quest whenever you wish. However, it is recommended that you complete most of the first act sooner rather than later, as you're rewarded with several important powers (including Shouts) that can make your other adventures less fraught and more entertaining. Remember that you can completely finish the Main Quest and then return to tackle any other quests (or just explore) without penalty.

NOTE Cross-Referencing: Do you want to see maps and learn more about the traps, non-quest-related items, collectibles, crafting areas, and other important rooms of note in every location during these quests? Then cross-reference the location you travel to with the information on that location contained in this guide's Atlas.

NOTE The main quest also involves a number of Skyrim's other factions. For more information, consult their Quest listings. For information on Hadvar, Ralof, General Tullius, and Ulfric Stormcloak, consult the Civil War Quest Introduction.

AVAILABLE QUESTS

There are a total of 20 different Main Quests in three acts. Each quest leads directly into the next, as shown in the following table:

MAIN QUEST: ACT I

UNBOUND

INTERSECTING QUESTS: Main Quest: Before the Storm

LOCATIONS: Helgen

CHARACTERS: Alduin, Elenwen, General Tullius, Gunjar, Gunnar, Hadvar, Haming, Imperial Captain, Imperial Soldier, Ingrid, Lokir, Matlara, Priestess of Arkay, Ralof, Stormcloak Soldier, Thalmor Soldier, Torolf, Torturer, Torturer's Assistant, Ulfric Stormcloak, Vilod

ENEMIES: Cave Bear, Frostbite Spider, Imperial Soldier, Stormcloak Soldier, Torturer, Torturer's Assistant

◆ OBJECTIVES: Make your way to the Keep, Enter the Keep with Hadvar or Ralof, Escape Helgen, Find some equipment, Loot Gunjar's body, (Optional) Search the barrel for potions, (Optional) Attempt to pick the lock to the cage

◆ Bound for the Block

The clattering of hooves against cobblestone and the sway of the prison cart wakes you. Ralof, a Stormcloak rebel, wastes no time in talking to you. You're joined on this condemned wagon by a horse rustler named Lokir who hails from a town called Rorikstead and a large, imposing man who is bound and gagged. After Lokir addresses the man without proper respect, Ralof tells him to watch his tongue: he's speaking to Ulfric Stormcloak, the true High King of Skyrim and leader of the Stormcloak Rebellion against the Empire!

The convoy continues toward the gates of Helgen, a fortified hamlet in Falkreath Hold. You pass by General Tullius, leader of the Imperial forces in Skyrim, and his Thalmor advisors. Ralof looks around the settlement, remembering his youthful indiscretions. You pass a boy named Haming, who wants to watch the soldiers parading in his town. His father quickly herds him back indoors. The wagon stops. This is the end of the line. The prisoners disembark, and their names are recorded. Lokir attempts to flee but is cut down by Imperial archers. An Imperial Soldier named Hadvar beckons you forward and asks for your name.

◆ NOTE At this point, you should create the precise character you wish to adventure as. You need only choose your character's race, gender, and distinguishing features (from the size of your nose to the scars on your face). The only choice that affects your adventure is your race, as each race has specific strengths and powers. Consult the Training section of this guide on page 6 for more insight. For the purposes of this guide, a Male Nord named Dovahkiin was created.

Hadvar turns to his superior and asks her what to do with you, as you're not on the list of captured rebels. The Imperial Captain tells Hadvar to ignore the list; you're going to the block. You step forward, where General Tullius has a rather one-sided discussion with Ulfric Stormcloak, interrupted only by a strange guttural sound in the distance. A Priestess of Arkay attempts to bless the rebels before they're put to death, mentioning the "Eight Divines" (Thalmor law prohibits the worship of the Nordic god Talos, Tiber Septim; this infuriates the Stormcloaks). After the headsman swings his axe, the first rebel is beheaded, and you're summoned to the block just as another bellow echoes through the mountains. Resting your head on the block, the headsman raises his axe...and a gigantic black creature arcs through the skies, landing heavily on Helgen's central tower and unleashing a Thu'um (or Shout) that scatters everyone, both rebel and Imperial alike!

◆ OBJECTIVE: Make your way to the Keep

◆ The World-Eater Returns

Amid the chaos, Ralof yells for you to follow him. Oblige him (as you're still bound, and dashing about in a panic doesn't further your cause). Follow Ralof as he reconvenes with Ulfric Stormcloak inside the Keep and beckons you to follow him up the steps. As you reach the Keep's second landing, a section of exterior wall comes crashing down, and the black dragon roasts the area with fire before flying out of view. Ralof tells you to leap across to the ruins of the town's inn. Jump across, landing in the upstairs area, then head down to ground level.

The streets are filled with fire, wreckage, and panicked citizens. Hadvar is removing the boy Haming from danger, before recommending you follow him to (relative) safety. Shadow Hadvar as you both weave through the ruins of Helgen, briefly pausing to watch hapless Imperial forces trying to bring down the dragon. You can't help or search corpses, as your hands are still tied. Eventually, Hadvar brings you to the main Keep, where you both run into Ralof. After a short but tense standoff, they run to separate doors of the Keep and shout for you to head inside with them.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Enter the Keep with Hadvar or Ralof

NOTE

This quest splits into two parallel paths at this point. The general route out of Helgen through the Keep is the same, but your allies and enemies will be different. The person you join with here affects who you journey with in the next quest and sets you up with an alliance for the Civil War Quests to come. However, you can still switch sides after this quest, so it doesn't matter who you escape with.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Escape Helgen

◆ Battle Through the Keep

Path A: Helping Hadvar

Follow Hadvar into Helgen's Keep, where he removes your bindings and recommends you search the barracks for any weapons and items you can find. Step over to the Warden's Chest, which has what you need.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Find some equipment

- Imperial Light Armor
- Imperial Light Boots
- Iron Sword
- Helgen Keep Key

After searching the room (there's a weapon on the weapon rack by the wall and more items in one of the other chests), Hadvar opens the wooden grating, allowing you to continue down a corridor to a second pull chain and grating. Equip your new weapons and armor, and then slaughter the Stormcloak Soldiers in the room beyond. When they are both dead, you can ransack their bodies for items and different equipment. Unlock the gate to the west and proceed.

Path B: Rendezvous with Ralof

Follow Ralof into Helgen's Keep, where he encounters the remains of his comrade, Gunjar. After wishing him a quick journey to Sovngarde, he cuts your bonds and instructs you to take Gunjar's gear.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Loot Gunjar's body

- Iron War Axe
- Stormcloak Cuirass
- Fur Boots

After inspecting both exits (which are locked), Ralof notices some incoming Imperials and crouches down ready to ambush them. Equip your new weapons and armor, and then slaughter the Imperial Captain and Soldier. When they are both dead, you can ransack their corpses for items and different equipment. You'll find the Helgen Keep Key on the Captain's body. Unlock the gate to the west and proceed.

- Helgen Keep Key

TIP Character Development: During either Path A or Path B, you should be learning all of the following:

How to loot corpses, learning what to take and leave behind and seeing which items give you the best stat increases. The small triangle next to items in your inventory signifies that they are better than the ones you currently have equipped.

How to equip weapons and armor, as well as any spells or powers you may have because of your race.

What it feels like to wield a weapon, a spell, a weapon and shield, or two weapons. Or, take the two-handed weapon one of your enemies was carrying and use it. These help to increase different skills, which you can start doing right now!

How to ready and sheathe your weapon(s), perform regular and power attacks, and block (either with a weapon or a shield).

You can set your Favorites to a combination of weapons and powers that you enjoy, and then a second set to switch between.

You can switch between first- and third-person views to see which you prefer.

Merged Path: Helgen Escape

Follow your ally through the gate and down the steps. The dragon causes the roof to collapse, forcing you left and into a storage room. Two enemies (of the opposing faction) are in this chamber. Bring them both down, helping your ally as much or as little as you wish. He recommends you look around the room for potions; you'll need them!

◆ OBJECTIVE: (Optional) Search the barrel for potions

You can search for whatever you wish. However, simply look in the barrel indicated, collect the potions, and meet up again with your ally.

➤ Potions

Head back out into the main corridor (on the other side of the roof collapse), and follow your friend down into the torture chamber. The Torturer and his assistant (both Imperials) are fighting Stormcloaks in here. After the commotion is over, grab the items from the knapsack on the table, read or take the Book of the Dragonborn, and steal a dagger and any other weapons from the chamber. Your ally notices that one of the torturer's cages houses the corpse of a mage and suggests you pry open the lock. You're given lockpicks for this purpose. Open the lock (Novice), and take the mage's clothing and your first Spell Tome. Then head out of the chamber.

- The Book of the Dragonborn
- Novice Hood
- Lockpick (12)
- Novice Robes
- Loose gear
- Spell Tome: Sparks

TIP Character Development: At this point, you should be:

Swapping, dropping, and equipping weapons that you find interesting.

Opening the two other cells to further improve your Lockpicking skill.

Reading both books and learning the Sparks spell from the Tome. Now equip this spell in one of your hands if you want to try it out.

Donning the mage's Novice Hood and Robes if their enchantment suits you better than your previous outfit.

Wind your way past the prison cells and down the steps, and be ready to combat enemies in the two-level lower dungeon. You can leave your ally to soak up most of the damage or wade in yourself. There are some particular methods of tackling the foes in here:

The terrain is narrow, meaning movement is restricted. So watch your step, as well as the foes armed with bows.

Quickly take down a foe and grab a bow and some arrows. Use those on the enemy, ideally from range and the upper level.

If you have a fire-based spell (because of your race), you can set fire to the pool of oil on the opposite side, burning some foes.

Or you can use Sparks and weaken enemies with electrical damage from a distance.

Follow your ally out of the lower dungeon to a bridge that he lowers using the lever (or you can do this if you're impatient). After crossing the bridge, a giant slab of stone crushes the structure, stopping you from backtracking. However, you can drop through the wreckage and follow the path down the rushing subterranean stream. Follow the flow of water past a skeleton (take its coin purse) and down into a cobweb-filled cave. It is here that you're set upon by around six Frostbite Spiders. Use ranged attacks to weaken them, followed by melee strikes to finish them; this is the best way to battle them.

Leave your ally to attack his own arachnids, or team up and make quick work of them.

After crossing a small natural bridge, your ally crouches and indicates the presence of a bear just ahead. He suggests two ways to get past her: sneaking so as not to disturb her, or hitting her with an arrow from the bow he gives you. The choice is yours. You can:

Crouch (which means you're sneaking) and quietly head left (southeast) down the cave into a tunnel, avoiding the bear completely.

Equip the bow (you may wish to have already set up a melee weapon or weapon and spell in your Favorites to quickly swap to), fire up to three shots before she reaches you, and then finish her off with your ally's help.

Use the weapons or spells you prefer to take down the bear. You may want to invoke your racial power in this fight, if it helps. Wood Elves, in particular, can use Command Animal to simply turn the bear into an ally and walk right by.

Or simply sprint past the bear and down the tunnel as quickly as possible.

➤ Long Bow ➤ Iron Arrow (12)

Quest Conclusion

After the bear encounter, the cave narrows to a winding tunnel, with light streaming from the far end. This is the way out! Main Quest: Before the Storm begins immediately.

BEFORE THE STORM

PREREQUISITES: Character Generation, Complete Main Quest: Unbound

INTERSECTING QUESTS: Main Quest: Unbound, Main Quest: Bleak Falls Barrow, Side Quest: The Golden Claw

LOCATIONS: Helgen, Riverwood, Alvor and Sigrid's House, Hod and Gerdur's House, Whiterun, Dragonsreach

CHARACTERS: Alvor, Dortha, Frodnar, Gerdur, Hadvar, Hilde, Hod, Irileth, Jarl Balgruuf the Greater of Whiterun, Proventus Avenicci, Ralof, Sigrid, Sven

ENEMIES: Rabbit, Wolf

◆ OBJECTIVES: Talk to Alvor in Riverwood, Talk to Gerdur in Riverwood, Talk to the Jarl of Whiterun

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Alvor in Riverwood

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Gerdur in Riverwood

◆ TARGET: Your friend's contact, in the town of Riverwood

Follow your friend down the hillside. He points out the ominous ruins on the river's opposite side: Bleak Falls Barrow. Continue to the edge of the White River, which flows from Lake Ilinalta to the west. Your friend is talking about the current situation regarding your chosen Faction when a couple of wolves interrupt him. Join in the attack, or watch your friend defeat them. Then follow the path along the riverbank and into Riverwood, which is on the edge of Whiterun Hold.

A Wander Down to Riverwood

You emerge into the bright light of Falkreath Hold, north of the still-shouldering ruin of Helgen. You and your companion watch as the dragon responsible for disrupting your execution flies away to the north.

This is Hadvar. You will follow him if you befriended this Imperial soldier while escaping Helgen.

This is Ralof. You will follow him if you befriended this Stormcloak operative while escaping Helgen.

Speak to him so the objective updates. At this point, you can:

- ◆ Follow him down the hillside, which is advisable if you want to complete this quest.
- ◆ Head off alone, ignoring him: To continue this quest, simply meet up with Hadvar's or Ralof's contact in Riverwood, or journey to Whiterun and speak to the Jarl there.

Civil War: The lands of Skyrim are engaged in a fierce Civil War between the Imperials and Stormcloaks. In fact, if you decide to begin the long and bloody routing of the faction you oppose, consult the Civil War Quests elsewhere in this guide. The Civil War can affect some of the Main Quest after this quest, but only if you've made decisions during the Civil War Quests. Such variations are flagged throughout the Main Quest. If applicable, they give you ample time to side with your Faction if you wish.

TIP Roaming Around: Investigate any nearby Primary Locations on your way to Riverwood. Either before or after you reach Riverwood, be sure to inspect the Guardian Stones and perhaps fight off a few bandits inside Embershard Mine. You can also spot salmon leaping the rapids, try the bow and shoot a rabbit or two, and pick any wildflowers or other ingredients growing nearby. Consult the guide's Atlas Chapter (beginning on page 685) to see every nearby location, and what each contains.

NOTE Compass: Nearby Primary Locations are black on your compass. After you discover them, they change to white. Once you "clear" them, this is flagged on your world map. Remember that "cleared" doesn't mean "ransacked"; you can leave the treasures inside a dungeon, and your map will still mark it as cleared.

Imperials: Alvor and Sigrid

Enter Riverwood, where Hadvar beckons you to meet his uncle. Head to the blacksmith's, where Uncle Alvor is hammering away in his forge. He seems confused and troubled by his nephew's appearance and is convinced to head inside his house to talk. Sigrid (Alvor's wife) will prepare some vittles; it looks like you could use some sustenance.

Head inside Alvor and Sigrid's House. Hadvar tells of his assignment to General Tullius's guard and the dragon attack in Helgen. Alvor accuses Hadvar of being drunk, saying the dragons were wiped out long ago. Hadvar finishes the story, telling Alvor that he owes his life to you. Hadvar wishes to leave for Solitude, but you both need food and a place to stay. Alvor offers you a gift, while his daughter Dortha watches silently. You can take any or all of the items offered. Then Alvor turns to you: Riverwood needs your help. Jarl Balgruuf of Whiterun needs to know if there's a dragon on the loose, as Riverwood is defenseless against it. Soldiers must be sent here. Your Quest Objective updates, along with your map, and you can ask Alvor, Sigrid, or anyone else further questions before you leave.

➤ Gift

Stormcloaks: Gerdur and Hod

Enter Riverwood, where Ralof walks around the left (northern) side of the Blacksmith's to meet his sister. Sven and his mother, Hilde, can be heard arguing about the dragon she saw. Ralof shouts a greeting to his sister Gerdur, who is delighted to see him. She seems concerned, especially after learning that Ulfric Stormcloak had been captured. She is convinced to move to a quieter area away from eavesdroppers. She yells for her husband, Hod.

By the river, Hod and Gerdur (and later, Gerdur's son Frodnar) listens to Ralof as he recalls the ambush by the Imperials outside Darkwater Crossing. It was as if they knew the Stormcloaks were there. After narrowly escaping the headsman's block, and after a mistrial for Ulfric, a dragon appeared over Helgen and inadvertently saved them! Now you both need food and a place to stay. Gerdur offers you a key to her home, and a gift. Then she tells you that Riverwood is defenseless, and Jarl Balgruuf of Whiterun needs to know if there's a dragon on the loose. While Ralof and his relatives head back to Gerdur's home, you can follow them or set off. Your Quest Objective updates, along with your map. You may also ask Gerdur, Hod, or anyone else further questions before you leave.

➤ Key to Gerdur's House ➤ Gift

TIP Although you may choose one gift, it is advisable to take everything: The items you don't need you can sell at the Riverwood Trader across the thoroughfare. At the very least, take the Potions of Minor Healing; they are most useful.

NOTE Talk Is Cheap: You are encouraged to speak to any of the townsfolk. Some have problems or tasks you can solve (known as Favors). Some offer a background to this realm. A few may embroil you in local politics. Others won't even give you the time of day. All of these conversations are optional.

Sleep Is Cheaper: You are fortunate that your friend's relatives have a place in Riverwood that you can return to. Sleep in a bed to refresh you, until you find other accommodation. Fast-Travel back to Riverwood to relieve your fatigue, aches, and pains.

Crafting Makes You Money: Alvor has a forge and other blacksmithing tools. Or try out the Alchemy Lab in the Sleeping Giant Inn just up the road.

Quest Objectives: The Quest menu lists the active quests and the related objectives, and it keeps track of miscellaneous objectives, or more minor tasks you can optionally try. To prevent confusion, use the Toggle Active feature in the Quest menu, and select only the quests you're interested in. Also, you can click over to the Objectives submenu and use the Show on Map feature so you know exactly where you're going.

Intersecting Quest: These are quests that take place in the main location you're currently in or will be visiting. We list them in this guide so you don't have to backtrack much. In this particular case, Side Quest: The Golden Claw is available if you visit the Riverwood Trader and speak to Lucan or Camilla Valerius. You can do this before or after the start of the next Main Quest: Bleak Falls Barrow.

The Fortress-City of Whiterun

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to the Jarl of Whiterun

◆ TARGET: Jarl Balgruuf, inside Dragonsreach, in Whiterun

You must now make your way to Whiterun, the capital to the north. The optimal route is to cross the bridge as you exit Riverwood, follow the path with the waterfall rapids to your right (east), and begin a hill descent. You may have a World Encounter on the way down. Take the left (west) path at the two bridges, on the opposite side of the stream to Chillfurrow Farm, and pass the Honningbrew Meadery. You may hear the sounds of combat coming from the outskirts of Pelagia Farm; a giant has lumbered into this area, and a group of fighters called The Companions is fighting it.

NOTE You can help the fighters out and begin The Companions Quests if you wish.

Make your way past the Whiterun Stables and then up the hill, over the drawbridge, and to the main Whiterun gate. As you approach, a guard stops you; the city is closed with the news of the dragons spreading faster than you can travel. You can:

The Elder Scrolls V

SKYRIM

- ◆ Tell the guard that Riverwood calls for the Jarl's aid. This is the optimal plan, and only available with this quest active.
- ◆ (Persuade) Or you can tell the guard you have news from Helgen about the dragon attack.
- ◆ (Bribe) Or bribe the guard with a portion of your collected gold.
- ◆ (Intimidate) Or order the guard to stand aside.

up to the hilltop that the city sits on, past the Gildergreen Tree (part of the Kynareth Temple), and the Shrine to Talos. Climb the stone steps to discover Dragonsreach, home of the Jarl.

the Jarl; you can be as forthright or secretive with the information, depending

Once you're inside the walls of Whiterun, there is much to do and see. Don't worry about roaming this city, entering buildings, and interacting with the locals. But once you decide to complete this quest, head north,

Walk toward the huge central fire on either side of the banquet tables. The inhabitants of Dragonsreach are a little on edge. As you step forward, you are met by Irileth, Jarl Balgruuf's Housecarl. Explain to her that you're here to see on how annoyed you wish Irileth to be. After a stare-down, the Jarl requests your presence. Speak to him about the dragon that destroyed Helgen.

Begin to tell the Jarl your tale; your responses result in the same course of action (assuming you don't go mad and launch into an attack inside Dragonsreach):

If you mention Alvor, Jarl Balgruuf notes that he's a reliable, solid fellow and not prone to flights of fancy.

If you mention Gerdur, Jarl Balgruuf says that she's a pillar of the community and not prone to flights of fancy.

This gives more credence to your story. You can give the Jarl as many personal details as you wish in the course of his questioning and your story. After a discussion in which Irileth wisely asks for troops to be sent to Riverwood immediately, Proventus Avenicci (the Jarl's steward) warns that the Jarl of Falkreath may see this as provocation.

The Jarl of Whiterun and his court can be attacked but not killed. It is unwise to shed their blood, as you're likely to be overwhelmed. If you employ violence, accidental or otherwise, return here after three (3 or more) days to recommence talks.

CAUTION

Quest Conclusion

After Avenicci slinks off to tend to other duties, Jarl Balgruuf thanks you for your initiative and gives you a small token of his esteem, based on whichever Armor Skill (Light or Heavy) is higher.

ENEMIES: Arvel the Swift, Bandits, Draugr, Frostbite Spider, Frost Troll, Skeever

◆ OBJECTIVES: Talk to Farengar, Retrieve the Dragonstone, Deliver the Dragonstone to Farengar

"reliable sources" that have confirmed as much. Before you leave, you can speak to Farengar about a variety of topics to gain a deeper understanding of his role in the Jarl's court.

NOTE If you've already explored Bleak Falls Barrow and found the Dragonstone, you can simply inform Farengar and hand it over, shortening this quest considerably. Skip to the "Quest Conclusion" section for your next actions.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Retrieve the Dragonstone

◆ TARGET: Dragonstone, on Draugr Lord, inside Bleak Falls Barrow

NOTE Traveling Options: At this point, you have three possible options to reach Riverwood, which is the closest place to Bleak Falls Barrow that you've already visited. You can:

- ◆ Trek there on foot. This takes longer, but you receive more experience from any encounters along the way.
- ◆ Head down to the Whiterun Stables and purchase a horse. This is faster, and occurs in "real time," but horses are pricey.
- ◆ Or bring up your world map and Fast-Travel back to Riverwood. The last option avoids combat but also any encounters.

Taking a carriage from Whiterun Stables is not an option, as these trips only take you to Hold Capitals.

TIP Intersecting Quest: Bleak Falls Barrow is the main location for Side Quest: The Golden Claw. You actually begin this quest, too, once you enter the Barrow. For more information, consult the "Side Quest: The Golden Claw" section later in this guide; begin at the Riverwood Trader and speak to the proprietors, Lucan and his sister Camilla Valerius.

Reliable Sources

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Farengar

At the end of your conversation with Jarl Balgruuf the Greater, he asks you to consult with his court wizard, Farengar Secret-Fire. Follow the Jarl into Farengar's study, where the Jarl introduces you. Farengar has a job for you almost immediately: to delve into a dangerous ruin in search of an ancient stone tablet. Ask for further information, and Farengar explains you're to look for something called a "Dragonstone," a tablet said to contain a map of the dragon burial sites across Skyrim. Farengar believes the stone is interred in the main chamber of Bleak Falls Barrow, and he has

Unreliable Bandits

Head up the mountain path north of Riverwood, passing the Riverwood Folly (where bandits room). At the summit, the Nord tomb appears through the blizzard. Expect more bandit activity in this area. Locate the arched carved door leading into Bleak Falls Temple. Inside the first chamber, you hear two bandits around a campfire talking about a Dark Elf heading farther into the Barrow. End their conversation swiftly before venturing down the stairs.

Pass through the spiderwebs and the burial urns, and around the dead Skeever. Engage another bandit on your way to a ceremonial entrance room. A portcullis blocks your path, and the lever nearby is currently inactive. In the alcoves to the left are a trio of three-sided pillars. Approach the first; they can be activated. Each side has a different animal carving: the Hawk, Whale, and Snake.

Puzzle Solution: Rotate the pillars so a Snake, Snake, and Whale face out. The carved Nord heads above the portcullis (and the fallen middle one) hold the answer in their maws.

NOTE (Sneak) If you're remaining unseen as you move through this Barrow, you can follow the third bandit into the ceremonial entrance room and activate the lever on the ground. He succumbs to the dart trap immediately.

Descend the spiral steps beyond, battling a few Skeevers on your way down. As the thick spider silk begins to cover the walls, you hear a voice up ahead and to your left. Cut through the doorway covered in webbing, and enter the lair of a Giant Frostbite Spider. Attack the arachnid before venturing toward the trussed-up Dark Elf—one of the bandits from the raiding party you slaughtered previously. This is Arvel the Swift, who is carrying a Golden Claw, which is pertinent to both this quest and the Side Quest. He quickly tells you he knows how it fits into the door in the Hall of Stories. The bandit is babbling. But he needs cutting down first. Oblige him.

After a couple of weapon swipes (or magical blasts), Arvel's sticky prison gives way. He immediately flees, laughing that he won't be sharing his treasure with the likes of you. This is correct, but that's due to his imminent departure from this realm. This can be by your hands—a quick arrow or two in the back or other ranged attack—or by the denizens that lurk deeper in this crypt.

It isn't wise to rush after Arvel; you'll soon catch up with him, and it is better to be prepared rather than rush headlong into an unknown chamber. CAUTION

Knee-Deep in the Nordic Dead

Follow Arvel, passing through the crypt entrance and down into the catacombs. The Swift soon meets the dead, as Arvel falls under a flurry of Draugr attacks. The Nord undead now turn their attention to you.

Battle them back or run north toward the open spiked gate and pressure plate. Keep to the extreme left, and you can activate the swinging gate trap without being hit. Use it as a skewering device against the Draugr; then search Arvel. Among his belongings are the Golden Claw and the Dark Elf's journal. Read it for more clues on this Barrow's secret.

Golden Claw

Arvel's Journal

Continue downward, battling Draugr and searching corpses, both resting and animated, as you go. At the swinging blades, sprint forward the moment the closest blade swings past you. Brandish your weaponry but don't be overzealous with fire in the passageway with puddles; this is actually oil leaking from a hanging lamp, and the corridor erupts if flames touch the ground. Use this as a trap against your bony foes.

Eventually, you climb steps into a tall chamber with a waterfall, and another Draugr. The Barrow's secret lies past a portcullis above the rushing stream. Locate the chain next to the portcullis and activate it before splashing down the stream and into a larger cavern with an opening at the far end. Head to a natural bridge below the waterfall, or stand atop the waterfall and fire down on the enemy below (this is either a Draugr or a Frost Troll). By the bridge, optionally scavenge on the curved path below. Then follow the path into the illuminated entrance to Bleak Falls Sanctum.

Open the Sanctum doors, and weave your way to a bladed corridor. Coax the Draugr beyond into this trap before dashing through it, into the Great Chamber. Expect attacks from Draugr bowmen on the bridge above and melee strikes from the ground. Remember you can drop oil lamps and burn these foes as you head over the bridge and to the Iron Door leading into the long Hall of Stories and to a Nordic Puzzle Door.

Puzzle Solution: The door consists of three "rings" that rotate when you activate them. Each of them has three animals plated into the structure, and you unlock the central keyhole by using the Golden Claw itself. This puzzle is inaccessible without it. The puzzle solution is actually on the palm of the Golden Claw; rotate it in your inventory to see the three circular petroglyph carvings on the Claw's palm. Move the rings so the Bear, Moth, and Owl appear on the outer, middle, and inner rings, respectively. Then insert the Golden Claw into the keyhole.

Guardian of the Dragonstone

This reveals the Barrow's secret at last: a ceremonial burial grotto with waterfalls surrounding the long-forgotten chamber. Move to the carved stone center, and check the chest and scavenge what you need; then inspect the Word Wall, where you're granted a Word of Power! However, this stirs a toughened Draugr from his rest, and you must defend yourself from this final Barrow guardian. After the fight, inspect the corpse of the Draugr; he is carrying the Dragonstone you seek! Grab this before taking the staircase on the chamber's left side, activating the handle to raise a secret stone slab door out in an upper Barrow alcove, and then exit out into Skyrim.

➤ Word of Power: Unrelenting Force ➤ Dragonstone

◆ OBJECTIVE: Deliver the Dragonstone to Farengar

◆ TARGET: Farengar Secret-Fire, Dragonsreach, in Whiterun

◆ TIP The Golden Claw: Remember you still have it! If you want to complete the Side Quest, too, return it to Lucan in the Riverwood Trader first. He rewards you with a large sum of gold (the amount you receive depends on your level).

◆ NOTE Shouts are made up of Words of Power, and the one you've absorbed from the Word Wall may be your first. If you open the Magic Menu, you'll see that you can't use or equip it until you've absorbed a Dragon Soul from a dragon you've killed. Be patient—that will happen soon enough.

◆ TIP Equipping for Adventure: At this point, it is worth learning how to strengthen your resolve, spend your gold, or barter your unwanted equipment. You can:

- ◆ Visit Riverwood and purchase or barter at the Riverwood Trader. Locate Alvor the Blacksmith for all your smithing needs. Visit the Sleeping Giant Inn and locate the Alchemy Lab to craft some potions.
- ◆ Visit Whiterun and peruse the market area, which has various stalls, shops, and a Blacksmith. Farengar Secret-Fire also has a handy Enchanting Workbench and sells spells.

Quest Conclusion

Return to Dragonsreach (the quickest way is to Fast-Travel directly to it), and immediately consult with Farengar. If this is the second time you've visited him, he is joined in his study by a mysterious hooded figure named Delphine—possibly the "reliable source" he referred to earlier. He is talking about the cross-referencing of texts that mention dragons. Finally, Farengar turns to you, impressed that you didn't die in the Barrow. As you hand over the Dragonstone, he says that you're a cut above the usual brutes the Jarl sends his way. Speak to the Jarl for your reward, which occurs during the initial conversations of the next quest.

◆ NOTE If you already had the Dragonstone prior to this quest and visited Farengar only once, Delphine isn't here. Don't worry—you'll meet her soon enough!

Postquest Activities

Main Quest: Dragon Rising begins immediately.

DRAGON RISING

PREREQUISITES: Complete Main Quest: Bleak Falls Barrow

INTERSECTING QUESTS: Main Quest: Bleak Falls Barrow, Main Quest: The Way of the Voice

LOCATIONS: Western Watchtower, Whiterun, Dragonsreach

CHARACTERS: Farengar, Hrongar, Irileth, Jarl Balgruuf the Greater, Proventus Avenicci, Whiterun Guard

ENEMY: Mirmulnir ("Loyal Mortal Hunter")

- ◆ OBJECTIVES: Talk to Jarl Balgruuf, Meet Irileth near the Western Watchtower, Kill the dragon, Investigate the dragon, Report back to Jarl Balgruuf, (Optional) Use your new Shout power

All Along the Watchtower

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Jarl Balgruuf

As you finish your conversation about the Dragonstone with Farengar, Irileth interrupts you with some troubling news: A dragon has been sighted nearby! Farengar seems positively giddy, while Irileth seems unsure if they could stop an attack on Whiterun. Locate the Jarl, who is questioning the Whiterun Guard who reported seeing the beast. Jarl Balgruuf orders Irileth to bolster the Western Watchtower with more men, a plan Irileth is already undertaking. Then the Jarl turns to you, seeking your help once again. Your experience at Helgen means you're most experienced in dealing with dragons. As a token of his esteem, he's instructed Avenicci that you're permitted to purchase property in Whiterun. Assuming you're alive and have enough gold! You're also gifted something from the Jarl's personal armory:

➤ Leveled Armor

◆ OBJECTIVE: Meet Irileth near the Western Watchtower

NOTE Property Purchasing: Locate Avenici (he's usually within the walls of Dragonsreach, and within whispering distance of the Jarl), ideally after you return from your dragon slaying. A house is quite expensive—5,000 gold pieces—so be sure to have enough funds. Consult the Thane Tasks for further information.

TIP Weaponry Purchasing: At this point, consider purchasing additional supplies, especially Healing potions (if you aren't using Healing spells), and utilizing your "Favorites" to set up both long- and melee-range offense.

As the Jarl prevents Farengar from viewing the dragon, exit Dragonsreach. If you stride through Whiterun with Irileth, she gathers some Whiterun Guards and explains the situation. Or you can leave Whiterun. Follow the stone path that winds between the tundra plains, heading for the lone tower in the middle distance. As you get close, step up to Irileth who is hiding behind a rocky outcrop. If Irileth is behind you, you can either wait for her (and the soldiers) to arrive, or investigate the Watchtower on your own.

NOTE In fact, you can skip talking to the Jarl entirely. As soon as Irileth interrupts Farengar, you can go directly to the Watchtower and trigger the dragon attack after approaching the survivor. Irileth will arrive with troops as the battle begins.

If she's with you, Irileth notes that the Western Watchtower looks to have been ferociously attacked. The small fires and rubble confirm this assertion. She believes the dragon is still skulking nearby and orders you to spread out and look for survivors.

A closer inspection supports Irileth's summation; the place has been struck and lives lost. Move into the tower. As you enter, a fearful Whiterun Guard yells that the beast is still out there and has already taken two guards named Hroki and Tor when they tried to flee! Moments later, a bone-shaking roar announces the return of the dragon!

◆ OBJECTIVE: Kill the dragon

Dragonborn Rising

There's little time to watch the giant lizard circling overhead; you must try to kill the creature as proficiently as possible.

Dragon Slaying:

Switch to whatever long-range offensive weaponry you have, ideally ranged magic or a bow and arrow.

You are fortunate that Irileth and a few Whiterun Guards are attempting to strike the dragon, too, thus keeping it from predominantly attacking you. Irileth's magic is strong, so aid her by attacking from an opposite direction. Split up so there are fewer of you to fry at once!

If you're using a bow and arrow, remember to aim (and slow time, if you have the perk) for a better chance to hit.

This dragon breathes fire, so consuming potions or casting magic that lessens fire-based damage (see The Inventory Chapter on page 131) is a good idea.

When the dragon drops to a hover, it is usually preparing a gout of fiery breath. Take as many ranged shots as you deem safe, and then rush under or around the creature. Fire again as the dragon flies off.

When the dragon lands, attack from the sides; ranged attacks are still just as strong, but melee attacks are now possible, as long as you try cutting down the dragon between breath attacks or from the side.

If worse comes to worst, flee into the tower and use some Health potions. You can also attack from the tower's top or use the stairs to head down, out of the dragon's breath attacks.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Investigate the dragon

Approach the dead dragon. As you get close, it begins to burn! Fortunately, this isn't harmful; in fact, the crackling flesh merges into the ethereal soul of the dragon, and a maelstrom of energy and light whirls around you. You're actively absorbing the soul of Mirmulnir! Once the light subsides, search the dragon for some valuables. Now approach Irileth. The normally stoic Dark Elf is showing a little emotion after this battle.

➤ Dragon Soul Absorbed

◆ OBJECTIVE: Report back to Jarl Balgruuf

◆ OBJECTIVE: (Optional) Use your new Shout power

With a keen eye, it appears the dragon that attacked Helgen is not the one you just fought. This means that more than one dragon has returned—a bigger problem than first thought!

CAUTION

Access your Magic menu, scroll down to Shouts, and equip the Unrelenting Force Shout. You have the Dragon Soul necessary to conjure this Shout, so try it out. It isn't wise to do this on your allies (although they won't attack back), so try staggering a nearby enemy or just yelling at the tundra itself. Your Shout then recharges; note the Compass gradually fills from blue to bright white before becoming a normal white color. With Irileth taking command at the Watchtower, you should leave for Jarl Balgruuf's at once.

Quest Conclusion

Return to Dragonsreach and approach the Jarl, who has recently been joined by his equally imposing brother, Hrongar. Explain to the Jarl that you're actually "Dragonborn" and that you absorbed some of the dragon's power when it was slain. Jarl Balgruuf is shocked; it appears that the Masters of the Way of the Voice—known colloquially as the Greybeards—were not only correct in their predictions, but also are actively summoning you. Your reward? A trek to meet them!

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to the Greybeards

Continue to speak with Jarl Balgruuf about the Greybeards. He informs you that these venerable monks live in secluded isolation high on the slopes of the Throat of the World (the largest mountain in Skyrim). They have the ability to focus your vital essence into a Thu'um, or Shout, and they give you the location of their monastery in High Hrothgar—atop a 7,000-step climb! After a verbal altercation between Hrongar and Proventus Avenicci over Nordic sacred traditions, Jarl Balgruuf grants you the greatest honor within his power: You are named Thane of Whiterun. You also receive a weapon from the Jarl's armory and a Housecarl of your own.

- Axe of Whiterun ➤ Follower: Lydia (Housecarl)

NOTE Followers: Lydia may be your first Follower. You may take her with you on your trek or journey there alone. Lydia remains in Dragonsreach until you instruct her to accompany you on any adventure. Although you have an adept bodyguard, your Follower requires armor and weaponry. For more information on Followers, consult page 100.

Becoming Thane: This is an accomplishment to be proud of. Your new title means you're treated with the utmost respect by the guards and many inhabitants of the city of which you're Thane. You can also purchase property in the city. For more information, consult page 502.

If you ignored this meeting with the Jarl and trekked to High Hrothgar first, the Jarl will be here to reward you when you return. However, you do not witness the tension between Hrongar and Proventus Avenicci.

Journeying to Ivarstead

The route to High Hrothgar involves a lengthy, spiraling journey clockwise around the base of the throat of the World. The first stop along this path is at the base of the 7,000 steps, in the town of Ivarstead. exit Whiterun and trek east, passing the Honningbrew Meadery. Cross the stone bridge over the White River, and follow the marked signpost to Ivarstead. Continue along this stone path past a few encounters with wolves to a fork in the paths. At this point, you can choose one of two recommended routes to Ivarstead: the long and winding road or the short and steep trail.

The Long and Winding Road

You may continue along the marked path, ignoring the track up to the Giants of Guldun Rock. Prepare to pay a toll (or fight) at the bandit-infested Valheim Towers. Then descend past the waterfall, along the same path past some drystone walls and the stone trilithon at the base of a stepped side path indicating the entrance to Hillgrund's Tomb. Cross the bridge over Darkwater River and journey south (and southeast), right past Fort Amol. Head over another bridge close to a waterfall and continue along the stone path. Beware of more animal encounters, including a Sabre Cat or two! Head over another bridge, next to an even-more impressive waterfall, and trek east up a hill, where the stone path deteriorates.

The path soon turns southwest, up a long, steep slope, past Snapleg Cave. Continue southwest, ignoring the bridge. Head into birch woodland where Sarethi Farm is located. Expect elk, deer, a hunter's tent or two, and a view of Lake Geir from the bridge over the Treva River. Continue farther into the forest as the path winds west, past a junction and more drystone walls. Then turn right (northwest) at the small stone ruins near Honeystand Cave. You finally reach Ivarstead after crossing another stone bridge.

The Short and Steep Trail

Or you can try this shortcut. Follow the path around to the right (east) just after you pass White River Watch, and come up to The Ritual Stone on your left. Cut south close to the Whiterun stormcloak camp, and up through the snowy foothills of the mountain, up an unmarked goat trail. Be sure you're traveling southeast up a steep embankment and into the snow. This levels out eventually, after you make several zigzags up very steep terrain above the snow line. Pass a few goats as the trail levels out and then quickly descends, joining a more recognizable trail. Head southeast and over the brow of the hill and past a copse of birch trees to the rushing rapids of Darkwater River. Cross the river, listening for the strange chime of a Nimroot growing around the corpses of a Troll's victims at Darkwater Overhang. Fight or flee from the Troll, then trek up the left side of the roaring waterfalls and into Ivarstead.

Climbing directly up the mountain's side to reach High Hrothgar quickly results in you becoming stuck or falling to your death.

CAUTION

TIP Making Inroads: At this point, you should have learned that taking a long road to an important objective (in this case, Ivarstead) isn't a journey wasted, as you uncover several Primary Locations along the way. You can explore these immediately or at your leisure. You should also learn that using the paths, trails, and rivers is the best way to understand and remember where you are in the rugged lands of Skyrim.

Road Markings: Both signposts and markers (the collections of stacked flat stones, sometimes with a primitive flag attached to them) are visual notes that indicate a nearby area of interest. Look for them.

7,000 Steps Above Ivarstead

Ivarstead is a slightly depressing place. The inhabitants are leaving for the greener (or at least, less snowy) pastures of Riften. You can stay and chat with the locals (mainly about their troubles or the supplies they need to send up to the Greybeards), or listen to them talk about the path up to High Hrothgar; they don't think the 7,000 steps are safe. You'll find out soon enough!

Your pilgrimage begins at the other side of the stone bridge. Almost immediately, you spot a small shrine. Inspect it more closely, and you'll see an Etched Tablet carved into the shrine arch. Read the emblem for the first of ten verses detailing the history of dragons and man.

Follow the winding path: At the second shrine, you may find a hunter named Barknar praying. He tells you to watch for wolves. You're now at the edge of the snow level. Continue up the precarious path: Expect a couple of wolf attacks along the way. The third shrine is nestled on a small snowy plateau. Follow the path down and up two sets of snowbound steps; remain on the side of the mountain, as the drop is precipitous. The fourth shrine is near some stab stones and a small copse of fir trees. You may find another traveler at this shrine, a pilgrim named Karita.

Use the marker stones as you wander up, into a granite gully. A Frost Troll is likely to be guarding this area, leaping down to maul you. Retaliate or run. The fifth shrine is just beyond the Frost Troll ambush. The blizzard is worsening; trek north down the snow steps, passing a few windswept trees to the sixth shrine, in front of a stone marker. Continue north and locate the seventh shrine jutting out to the west, on a precarious promontory. If you could see it, you'd be looking out across southern Eastmarch. Turn north, and look for the eighth shrine in front of a rocky outcrop, to your left (northwest).

The ninth shrine is below a stone statue to Talos. You'll see this as you round the bend in the path and come across the High Hrothgar monastery. As you close in on the final set of steps (did you count 7,000?), the final shrine is set off to the right (southeast) side, by the entrance stairs. Climb the entrance steps, grab any supplies and offerings at the base of the stairs, and then ascend the left set of stairs to enter High Hrothgar.

Something to Shout About

The monastery is adorned with carvings from ancient times and banners bearing the strange symbols of the dragon language. An old monk in a long robe steps forward; this is Arngeir, the leader of the Greybeards. He knows who you are. Speak with him, and he asks for a taste of your voice. Oblige him.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Demonstrate your "Unrelenting Force" Shout

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Arngeir

◆ TARGET: Arngeir, inside High Hrothgar

Select the Unrelenting Force Shout from your Magic menu, and bellow at or near Arngeir. The other Greybeards, Borri, Einarth, and Wulfgar come to watch. Your fate is confirmed; speak with him again, and he welcomes you to the monastery. Master Arngeir speaks for the Greybeards and asks why you have come. Answer any way you wish (questions lead to more information on the monastery and the Greybeards' existence). When you are ready, tell Arngeir that you're "ready to learn." Arngeir wishes to train you so you're better able to execute a Thu'um, or Shout.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Learn the Word of Power from Einarth

Master Arngeir explains that all Shouts are made up of three Words of Power. As you master each Word, your Shout becomes progressively stronger. Currently, you have only learned Fus (or "Force"), the first Word of your Unrelenting Force Shout. Master Einarth now teaches you Ro (or "Balance"), the second Word. This allows you to focus your Thu'um more sharply. Einarth Shouts into the hallowed stone of the monastery. Step onto the dragon runes that glow from the Shout, and absorb this second word.

► Word of Power: Balance, Unrelenting Force

Your learning impresses Arngeir, but he warns you that to unlock its meaning, you must constantly practice. As part of your initiation, Master Einarth allows you to tap into his understanding of Ro. Einarth glows with an orange light, imparting his knowledge onto you, in the same way you absorb the soul of a dragon. Now comes the real test: to see how quickly you've mastered the entire Shout!

◆ OBJECTIVE: Demonstrate your Unrelenting Force Shout (3x)

The monks have three targets for you to bellow your Shout toward. As the first ghostly monk figure is conjured, execute your Shout. The trick to this Shout's strength is the length of time that you hold the Shout button down.

Continuously hold the button until the Shout is omitted. Tap the button if you wish to lessen the stagger you inflict upon your foes (or in this case, your ghostly Greybeard). After you complete three Shouts to Arngeir's satisfaction, he congratulates you and motions for you to follow Master Borri into the courtyard.

TIP Play around with the length of time you hold the button down before releasing it to strengthen or weaken your Shout, so you know how long to attempt this ability.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Learn the Word of Power from Borri

Follow Master Borri to the door to High Hrothgar Courtyard and step outside, stopping next to Borri, who is ready to teach you a new Shout—the Wuld (or “Whirlwind”). Stand over the snow that Borri has projected the Shout into, and absorb the Shout. Then approach Borri and he glows, gifting you his knowledge of the Word.

NOTE The Word of Power that Borri teaches you may be different if (during the course of your adventures) you’ve found a Word Wall and absorbed one or two of the other parts of the phrase for the Whirlwind Sprint Shout. If you have all three Words of Power, this Shout (like all others) is much more potent. Check the Appendices (page 1077) for a list of locations where all Shouts can be found.

► Word of Power: Whirlwind, Whirlwind Sprint

◆ OBJECTIVE: Demonstrate your “Whirlwind Sprint” Shout

Master Borri walks toward an iron gate. Before following him, enter the Magic > Shouts menu to change your Shout to Whirlwind Sprint (you don’t want to bellow Unrelenting Force at the gate!). Stand between the two stone columns facing the gate, with Master Wulfgar in view. He demonstrates the Whirlwind Sprint, rushing at an amazing speed through the gate before it closes. Now it is your turn: The moment the gate opens, execute the Shout and rush forward, aiming for the single stone column by the cliff edge. You should easily pass through before the gate closes. If you don’t, try again.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Arngeir for further training

Quest Conclusion

Master Arngeir is astonished at your quick mastery of a new Thu’um. He tells you that the gods gave you this gift for a reason, but it is up to you to figure out how best to utilize it. For now, though, you are ready for the final part of your trial: Retrieve the Horn of Jurgen Windcaller, the founder of the Greybeards. Arngeir tells you that the horn is in Windcaller’s tomb in the ancient fane (temple) of Ustengrav. If you remain true to the Way of the Voice, you will return.

Postquest Activities

Continue to ask Arngeir questions if you wish. Main Quest: The Horn of Jurgen Windcaller has already begun!

THE HORN OF JURGEN WINDCALLER

PREREQUISITES: Complete Main Quest: The Way of the Voice, 10 gold pieces

INTERSECTING QUESTS: Main Quest: The Way of the Voice, Main Quest: The Horn of Jurgen Windcaller

LOCATIONS: High Hrothgar, High Hrothgar Courtyard, Riverwood, Sleeping Giant Inn, Ustengrav, Ustengrav Depths

CHARACTERS: Delphine, Master Arngeir, Master Borri, Master Einarth, Master Wulfgar, Orgnar

ENEMIES: Bandit, Bandit Thrall, Conjurer, Draugr, Fire Mage, Frostbite Spider, Necromancer, Skeleton

◆ OBJECTIVES: Retrieve the horn, Meet with whoever took the horn, Return the horn to Arngeir, Learn the Word of Power from Wulfgar, Receive the Greybeards’ greeting

TIP Your descent can be done on foot or by horse (if you came on a steed), but a much quicker plan is to halve the distance between here at Ustengrav and Fast-Travel to Whiterun, the Western Watchtower, or any location closest to the temple tomb. Don’t forget to use your new Whirlwind Sprint Shout to cover distances more swiftly than before!

When you finally reach Ustengrav, you may find a small campfire and lean-to by the circular barrow entrance. Expect a confrontation with bandits and a necromancer. Then descend the barrow steps and open the door to Ustengrav.

Heading down the wide steps, into the gloom of the ancient temple, you stumble upon a group of mages and conjurers picking clean the remains of a thwarted bandit attack. You can slink by using Sneak or engage the magicians in combat.

Underground in Ustengrav

◆ OBJECTIVE: Retrieve the horn

◆ TARGET: Horn of Jurgen Windcaller, inside Ustengrav

Once Arngeir gives you this quest, you may ask him about the Greybeards, why dragons are returning, who Jurgen Windcaller is, and other conversation topics. Turn to your world map and locate Ustengrav on the eastern edge of the great marsh, northeast of Morthal in Hjaalmarch Hold. Your first task is to descend from High Hrothgar.

TIP The Bandit Thralls are being controlled by a necromancer—kill him, and the thralls die too.

Locate the opening in the northeast wall of the temple entrance, and follow the trail of lanterns down the steps. This soon becomes a trail of mage corpses, as you watch a group of Draugr demolish the wizards and make a run at you. Cut down the Draugr, or use whatever cunning magic or sneaking you wish, before continuing into the first burial crypt. Scavenge whatever you wish, then head east and turn south, down a passage lit by candles.

There are steps down to your right (west), leading to a small crypt. Grab the items and yank the pull-chain. A section of wall rumbles open, leading you down a cramped tunnel to a secret dead-end chamber and a treasure chest. Retrace your steps. Enter the great hall, with a stone bridge ahead of and above you. Fend off the Draugr that clamber out of their vertical tombs. Then climb the interior stairwell, and cross the bridge you just passed under. Locate the iron door and enter the Ustengrav Depths.

Head down the winding tunnel until it opens into a gigantic, multilevel grotto. It is immense enough to have trees, a waterfall, and a Word Wall! Continue down the tree-root ledge and tunnel, heading south and then east. You appear on a bridge overlooking an ancient banquet hall. Follow the steps down, eliminating Draugr as you go. To the east are the remains of a food-preparation area running parallel to the hall. Head south, up more stairs, and cross a second bridge to exit the hall.

The tunnel to the southwest widens into an entrance room with a middle pillar. To the left is a double portcullis (open it with two wall handles; one is farther along the southwest wall) behind which is a small room with treasure. Take this and optionally shoot the lamp down onto the oil below to burn any Draugr that come to investigate you. Head west through a gap in the wall. Here, there are steps up to a small preparation alcove, and more importantly, an earthen and rock corridor that leads into the gigantic grotto.

Follow the collapsed bridge down to the massive pillars under the chamber, where parts of an ancient fire trap still burn and skeletons roam. Cut down all the bony fiends in this two-floor area, inspect the throne area (with another skeleton to slaughter), and then run northeast around the perimeter wall ledge, down to the rocky base of the grotto. Moments later, you learn a word from the Become Ethereal Shout. Afterward, you fight with a Draugr over a treasure chest behind the waterfall. Before you leave, try your Whirlwind Sprint Shout and traverse the collapsed bridges in this area, leading to a small chamber you can loot.

➤ Word of Power: Become Ethereal

◀ The Tomb Raider

Backtrack to the throne area where you fought the skeletons, and look to your east. Cross the large natural bridge that spans the grotto, to a second two-floor underchamber on the eastern side. First, clear out the skeletons from the balcony above, and then inspect a set of three strange stones back on the lower underchamber area.

Puzzle Solution: If you stand close to each one of the three stones, they pulse with an eerie, magical glow. This has the added effect of opening one of three portcullises in the tunnel to the east. However, after a second or two, the light switches off, blocking your path. This is the only way the portcullises open. If you get through one or two of them, you must turn back; all three must be raised for you to continue. The trick here is to line yourself up on the western side of the stones, as shown in the preceding picture with the stones between you and the portcullises. Then execute a Whirlwind Sprint Shout, followed by another to make sure you dash past the stones and the opening portcullises immediately.

Continue east, jumping to the natural rock on either side of the circular floor tiles, as they blast gouts of fire when you stand on them. This can prove handy when you reach the raised section of floor in the room of alcoves—a pack of Frostbite Spiders descends from the ceiling to attack.

Optionally back up so the spiders scuttle onto the floor tiles and are burned along with your own attacks. Exit by hacking the cobwebs from the doorway to the east. Then open the wooden door.

Pull the chain to raise the portcullis that leads into the final resting place of Jurgen Windcaller. As you step forward, four dragon statue heads rumble up from the water. Continue across the bridge over the flooded lower floor and approach the ornate tomb. The horn should be still clutched by the carved arm of Jurgen in his sarcophagus...but it isn't! Instead, there's a small piece of paper. Take and read it. The damned thief who took the horn has left you a note; it requests that you rent the attic room at the Sleeping Giant Inn in Riverwood, and it is signed "A friend."

➤ Mysterious Note

◆ OBJECTIVE FAILED: Retrieve the horn

◆ OBJECTIVE: Meet with whoever took the horn

◆ TARGET: "A friend" inside Sleeping Giant Inn, in Riverwood

This may be the first time that you've failed an objective. This is mandatory; you cannot succeed at this particular objective at the moment.

CAUTION

◀ A Mysterious Stranger

You'd think "a friend" wouldn't want you risking your life in a Draugr dungeon! Stifle any indignant rage you may be experiencing, and console yourself with any treasure you find through the wooden door behind the sarcophagus. There is an exit tunnel in the left (north) wall, offering a shortcut to an iron door, and a lever that lowers a section of stone wall, allowing you to step into the initial crypt, up into the temple entrance, and out of Ustengrav.

Fast-Travel (or trek back) to Riverwood, and follow the instructions of the Mysterious Note. Locate the Sleeping Giant Inn, enter, and locate Delphine, who owns the place with her slightly dense friend Orgnar. Step up to Delphine and ask to rent the attic room for 10 gold. After the money changes hands, she tells you the Sleeping Giant doesn't have an attic room, but you can take the room on the left. Enter the room, and after a few moments, Delphine joins you. Apparently you're the Dragonborn she's been hearing so much about. As a way of a peace offering, she hands you the horn that you seek.

➤ Horn of Jurgen Windcaller

◆ MAIN QUEST: A Blade in the Dark begins

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return the horn to Arngear

◆ TARGET: Master Arngear, in High Hrothgar

TIP You now have two Main Quests active. In order to finish this one, you must return to High Hrothgar. You can attempt this at any time, but it is usually advisable to speak with Delphine first (the initial part of the next Main Quest). Once you leave the Sleeping Giant, trek (or Fast-Travel) back to High Hrothgar.

Quest Conclusion

Enter High Hrothgar, and head through the monastery until you spot Argeir. He already knows you have returned with the Horn of Jurgen Windcaller and remarks that the time has come for the Greybeards to recognize you formally as Dragonborn.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Learn the Word of Power from Wulfgar

◆ TARGET: Master Wulfgar, in High Hrothgar

Return to the central chamber inside High Hrothgar as the Greybeards assemble. Master Wulfgar approaches the center of the floor and bellows the word Dah ("Push") into the granite. Step onto the glowing runes and absorb the Word of Power. You can now utilize the Shout Unrelenting Force with maximum potency! Absorb the learning from Wulfgar as well.

➤ Word of Power: Push, Unrelenting Force

◆ OBJECTIVE: Receive the Greybeards' greeting

Remain in the center of the room. The Greybeards stand at each point of the diamond paving, and Argeir greets you with a ferocious chant in dragon tongue. You withstand the blast, which pleases and impresses Argeir. You've tasted the Voice of the Greybeards and passed through unscathed. High Hrothgar is now open to you!

Postquest Activities

There are two tasks you can attempt with the Greybeards from this point on. Look up the Other Faction Quests on page 408. Also remember that Main Quest: A Blade in the Dark is already under way!

Return to Ustengrav and activate Jurgen Windcaller's tomb. The horn returns to its rightful resting place, and you receive a bonus Dragon Soul.

➤ Dragon Soul

A BLADE IN THE DARK

PREREQUISITES: Complete Main Quest: The Horn of Jurgen Windcaller

● MINOR SPOILERS

INTERSECTING QUESTS: Main Quest: The Horn of Jurgen Windcaller, Main Quest: Diplomatic Immunity

LOCATIONS: Kynesgrove, Kynesgrove Dragon Mound, Riverwood, Sleeping Giant Inn

CHARACTERS: Delphine, Iddra, Orgnar

ENEMIES: Alduin ("World Eater"), Sahlkknir ("Phantom Sky Hunter")

◆ OBJECTIVES: Talk to Delphine, Locate the dragon burial site, Kill the dragon Sahlkknir, Talk to Delphine

Delphine is part of a group that has been searching for someone like you—a Dragonborn—for a very long time. Delphine needs to know if you can devour a dragon's soul, as you'll have a chance to prove it soon enough. She also holds a low opinion of the Greybeards. Finally, she reveals the reasons for her agitation: She's discovered that dragons aren't just coming back—they're coming back to life! It seems that the dragons weren't banished; they were extinguished from this land, and now something is bringing them back from the dead. Using a pattern she discovered on the Dragonstone you found, Delphine has deciphered the location where she believes the next dragon will rise from the dead, and she needs you to help her stop it. The location is Kynesgrove in Eastmarch.

Grave Concerns

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Delphine

◆ TARGET: Delphine, the Sleeping Giant Inn, in Riverwood

Once Delphine has given you the Horn of Jurgen Windcaller, she requests that you follow her. Oblige her, walking across the inn to the bedroom opposite, where Delphine opens a cabinet and pushes the fake back, revealing a secret set of cellar steps. This leads to a war room of sorts, complete with a map of Skyrim on a central table and various potions and items you can take. Delphine mentions the Dragonborn, and through conversation choices (answer as you wish), you realize Delphine was the one who took the horn (she was Farengar Secret-Fire's "reliable source" back in Dragonsreach who found the location of the Dragonstone). She knows that Thalmor spies are everywhere, so she took precautions to arrange this meeting.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Locate the dragon burial site

◆ TARGET: Dragon mound above Kynesgrove

TIP After speaking with Delphine, you should head to High Hrothgar once you emerge from the Sleeping Giant Inn so you complete the previous Main Quest as quickly as possible.

Use the annotated map bearing all of the dragon burial sites as the basis for tracking and killing all the dragons that may return to Skyrim.

Once you tell Delphine that you're ready, she dons her leathers, informs Orgnar that she's traveling, and sets off on the long walk to Kynesgrove. This settlement is in the northern part of Eastmarch Hold, just southwest of Windhelm. To reach there, you can do the following:

Take the journey on foot. You can either keep up with Delphine or you can fight your way alone. Stay on the roads, prepare for world encounters, and discover as many Primary Locations along the way as possible (that you can return to and explore later). Remember to also use your Whirlwind Sprint for a faster pace.

Or, if you've already made some discoveries in the area in and around Kynesgrove (by visiting Windhelm, for example), you may wish to Fast-Travel to the nearest unlocked location and then travel to Kynesgrove.

Or, you can take a horse for a slightly faster journey.

When you reach Kynesgrove, Delphine should be ahead of you (if she isn't, wait for her). She senses something is wrong; this is soon proven correct when Iddra (a resident of the hamlet) runs over, shouting that there's a dragon attacking at the top of the hill! Delphine starts sprinting.

▶ A Terrible Resurrection

Delphine slows to an incredulous stumble as a huge black dragon with piercing red eyes hovers above a dragon mound at the top of the hill. It bellows a guttural roar in dragon tongue. The dragon mound where Alduin concentrated his Shout begins to swirl with a strange energy, not unlike the ethereal material you've absorbed during previous dragon confrontations. The next moment, the mound bursts open, and a huge skeletal dragon begins to emerge from deathly slumber. The dragons speak quickly to each other, before Alduin turns, mocks your claim to be "dovahkiin," and departs the area as quickly as he arrives.

TIP You may interrupt this resurrection and attack the newly returned dragon as quickly as you wish.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Kill the dragon Sahlokknir

The skeletal Sahlokknir clambers out of his grave and is resurrected by Alduin's powerful magic. Before Sahlokknir's skin can gather around his bones and he regains his powers, race in with your most impressive melee implements and deliver a series of attacks to weaken the dragon's health.

TIP Remember! Attacking a skeletal dragon before it grows flesh and wings to fly is a much easier battle: Get in early and quickly with your weapons.

Delphine fires arrows, then rushes in with melee attacks when the dragon lands; you should demonstrate your offensive powers too. Follow the same set of tactics laid out during Main Quest: Dragon Rising, when you faced Mirmulnir the "Loyal Mortal Hunter." One overriding plan is to ensure that Sahlokknir's life is as short as possible!

When Sahlokknir has been reduced back into a pile of bones, the beast splits apart into hundreds of scaly shards, and you absorb another Dragon Soul. Search the dragon, and then head over to Delphine for her promised revelations.

▶ Dragon Soul absorbed

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Delphine

Quest Conclusion

Delphine lives up to her promise and answers any questions you have. Most importantly, she reveals herself to be one of the last members of the Blades. Long ago, the Blades were dragonslayers, serving the Dragonborn, the greatest dragonslayer. For 200 years, the Blades have been searching for a purpose. Now that purpose is clear. You may mention that you've seen Alduin before; he rampaged through Helgen and prevented your execution. Delphine finds this interesting but is annoyed that she's still blundering around in the dark.

Your next move is to find out who is controlling these dragons, and the Thalmor—the faction that rules the Aldmeri Dominion—are the best lead. Even if they aren't involved, they'll know who is. Delphine believes that there are no worse enemy to humankind than the Thalmor. She also has some ideas for getting you into the Thalmor Embassy, but she needs time to plan. You receive her secret Key and are told to meet her back in Riverwood.

▶ Delphine's Secret Door Key

Postquest Activities

Delphine's Secret Door Key opens the cabinet in her room in the Sleeping Giant Inn. Return to Riverwood when you wish to begin Main Quest: Diplomatic Immunity. Act I now concludes.

The Thinking Schemer

◆ OBJECTIVE: Meet Delphine in Riverwood

◆ TARGET: The Sleeping Giant Inn, in Riverwood

When you are ready to continue prying into the secretive and powerful Thalmor faction, return to Riverwood and seek out Delphine in her usual resting spot—the cellar of the Sleeping Giant Inn. She has crafted a plan to infiltrate you into the Thalmor Embassy, mainly because you're unknown to their organization, while Delphine would stand out like a Stormcloak in Solitude. She tells you that the Thalmor ambassador, Elenwen, is renowned for throwing parties where the rich and connected hobnob with the Thalmor. Once you infiltrate the Embassy, you'll excuse yourself from the glad-handing and attempt to find any of Elenwen's secret files. Delphine has a contact—a Wood Elf named Malborn—inside the Embassy who can help but who doesn't want any exposure. You're to meet him at the Winking Skeeve. You can bombard Delphine with several questions about the contact, how you'll get into the party, and other matters if you wish.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Meet Malborn in Solitude

◆ OBJECTIVE: Give Malborn the equipment

◆ TARGET: Malborn, inside the Winking Skeeve, in Solitude

Journey to Solitude, and locate the Winking Skeeve tavern, close to the main gates. Step inside and find the shifty-looking character, Malborn. Tell him that a mutual friend sent you, and he says that he can smuggle some equipment into the Embassy that you can pick up once you're inside, just in case you need a weapon or two if you're accidentally discovered or if the plan becomes problematic. He tells you to hand over what you can't live without, and he'll have it ready to grab once you're inside.

TIP What to Bring: Follow Malborn's advice, and bring items that aid your sneaking, such as a dagger you can inflict sneak attacks with; items that soften your footfalls; and potions or augmentations that can keep you healthy (or full of Stamina or Magicka) during combat.

If you stink at sneaking, simply load Malborn up with your favorite weapons, some potions, and a full suit of armor. You can hand over anything you wish to him.

After you hand over your preferred equipment to Malborn, he tells you that he'll seek you out at the party, and says to meet up with Delphine, who has some appropriate attire and an invitation to the event.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Meet Delphine at the stables

◆ TARGET: Delphine, at Katla's Farm

Travel to Katla's Farm, halfway up the hill on which Solitude sits. As the Thalmor Guards will notice an adventuring type who's armed to the teeth, Delphine gives you more suitable attire for socializing with the noblemen of Skyrim.

She also hands you an Invitation to Elenwen's Reception and says that she'll keep the rest of your gear safe until you return. When you're inside, you'll have only what Malborn smuggled in and whatever there is to hand in the Embassy. Don the outfit that Delphine gave you; remove any gauntlets, helmets, or shields you're carrying (although amulets and rings are fine to wear). Delphine gives you a quick once-over and asks if you're ready to take the carriage to the Thalmor Embassy. Agree when you wish to continue. The remaining equipment is now removed.

➤ Party Clothes

➤ Party Boots

➤ Invitation to Elenwen's Reception

You disembark from the carriage in the snowy courtyard within the walls of the Thalmor Embassy compound. As you're heading toward the steps and a Thalmor Guard, you hear a man murmuring behind you.

Optionally turn and listen to Razelan, who's late for the party and in a slightly rambunctious mood. He's certain there's not enough drinking going on in the world today. Politely leave him, and amble over to talk with the Thalmor Guard and show him your invitation. You have other conversation options, but you can't proceed until the invitation is shown. Head up the steps, past the guard and into the Embassy.

Be warned! From this moment until the end of this quest, CAUTION you cannot Fast-Travel. You also cannot draw or use weapons until you've left the party with Malborn.

TIP You may explore the grounds of the Embassy (with some deft sneaking), but it's not practical, nor necessary—there's ample opportunity to move around the grounds in a few moments.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Create a distraction and get away from the party

◆ TARGET: Various, then Malborn, at the Thalmor Embassy

Scene, Not Heard

Elenwen greets you as you enter. Make small talk for a few moments (your conversation topics range from asking for a drink to other pleasantries), and before Elenwen's suspicions are raised by any strange or mistaken answers you give her, Malborn calls her from the bar counter, saying that he's run out of the Alto Wine. You now know where Malborn is stationed and can quickly slip away from Elenwen as she says she'll catch up to you later and greets Razelan. Mingle in the main chamber. Here, you'll bump into several important dignitaries from across Skyrim:

- Erikur, the conniving, greedy, and vain owner of the lumber mill in Solitude.
- General Tullius, the right hand of the Emperor in charge of Skyrim's Imperials.
- Jarl Balgruuf, the key Imperial ally and Nord leader of Whiterun.
- Jarl Elisif the Fair, the naive and patriotic new Jarl of Solitude.
- Jarl Idgrod Ravencrone, the odd, hunched crone and leader of Morthal.
- Jarl Igmund, the leader of Markarth and staunch supporter of the Imperials.
- Jarl Siddgeir, the self-assured, entitled bully of a leader of Falkreath.
- Maven Black-Briar, the shrewd family matriarch and meadery owner in Riften.
- Ondolemar, the haughty Thalmor liaison to the Imperial Justicars in Markath.
- Orthus Endario, who runs the East Empire Company's office in Windhelm.
- Proventus Avenicci, the political and inept steward for the Jarl of Whiterun.
- Vittoria Vici, the owner of the East Empire Company and cousin of the Emperor.
- Brelas, a respectful and self-effacing Embassy servant who works the other bar.
- Illdi, the hired bard, offering timid and underwhelming performances.

NOTE Depending on who you've killed or how the Civil War is progressing, the partygoers may change from the ones shown in the preceding list. Here's who to expect:

A guest will not be here if you've killed them, or if they are hostile to you for any reason.

None of the guests are here if you've been openly hostile to them previously and are not on friendly terms.

The Imperial Jarls won't make an appearance if their Hold Cities have been captured by the Stormcloaks.

Vittoria Vici will not be here if Dark Brotherhood Quest: Bound Until Death is active.

Maven Black-Briar will not be here if Thieves Guild Quest: Dampened Spirits is active.

General Tullius isn't here if Civil War Quest: Message to Whiterun hasn't been completed. He is also missing if a city siege is under way.

Proventus Avenicci and Jarl Balgruuf will not be here if Civil War Quest: Message to Whiterun is active or if has been completed.

With the party already under way, you have a few different options to try when attempting a disturbance:

Razing a Ruckus

The loudmouthed fellow you met outside is usually sitting down, away from the mingling. Strike up a conversation with the reprobate, and he'll ask for a drink. Return to Malborn or head over to Brelas and order a drink; then return to Razelan and hand the drink over. He thanks you for it; you then ask if he can cause a distraction. Sure enough, he wanders into the throng and commences a ruckus. Head to Malborn quickly!

► Colovian Brandy

A Fractious Favor

You may spot a good friend among the assembled guests. Possible friendships include Vittoria Vici, Maven Black-Briar, Ondolemar, or any of the Jarls, depending on your previous interactions with them. Begin a quiet chat with one of them and ask if they would cause a small disturbance. When they agree, back away toward Malborn, and watch your friend cause a scene with Razelan, despite the drunkard's innocence. Head to Malborn quickly!

TIP You'll know if you're friendly with a guest, as you'll be able to ask them to do something for you when you speak with them. If you're reading this prior to the quest commencing, refer to the Favor Quests on page 497 for information about how to win Favor with these guests. Some of your "friends" may require a Speech-based Persuasion to agree to cause a distraction:

These friends will act without Persuasion: Jarl Idgrod Ravenclaw, Maven Black-Briar, Jarl Balgruuf, or Orthus Endario.

These friends will act once you Persuade them: Jarl Igmund, Jarl Elisif, Jarl Siddgeir, or Ondolemar.

Vittoria Vici is never a friend but can be Persuaded to cause a distraction.

Ondolemar is furious with your actions after you Persuade him and becomes your enemy after this quest.

You Can't Get the Staff These Days

Speak to Erikur at the party, and you'll see that he has his eye on Brelas, one of the waitstaff.

Speak to Erikur and offer to talk to Brelas to see whether she's interested in a clandestine rendezvous with Erikur.

Brelas, being of high morals (and taste), declines the offer. Return to Erikur and tell him:

(Lie) That she's interested, or

That she isn't interested at all.

Either response makes Erikur accost Brelas, causing a distraction and allowing you to head to Malborn, and quickly!

During any of these distractions, Malborn heads to the door leading into the kitchens and waits for you to approach. He'll then open the door and close it behind you.

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: (Optional) Retrieve your gear
- ◆ TARGET: Chest, in the Thalmor Embassy larder
- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Search for information about the dragons returning
- ◆ TARGET 1: Small chests (2), Thalmor Embassy, Elenwen's Solar and Dungeon
- ◆ TARGET 2: Etienne Rarnis, Thalmor Embassy, Dungeon

Embassy Evidence

Enter the kitchens, now that no one saw you slip away. While Malborn preoccupies Tsavani the cook, open the next door on the left side of the kitchen and enter the larder. The wooden chest on the left has the equipment you gave Malborn back at the Winking Skeever. Take the exit door opposite the chest and begin a clandestine sweep of the Embassy chambers.

► Smuggled Equipment

In reality, the sweep doesn't have to be that sneaky, as long as you're prepared for a fight with the well-armed Thalmor Soldiers patrolling the building. From the first corridor, face south, and check the room to your left (east), into a long hallway with two Thalmor Guards. You may engage them in combat, or stay out of sight (behind the doorway, or via a spell or sneaking) and wait for them to leave so you can sneak past them, or shut the door and easily sneak by. Use the small storage room or the room divider to hide behind, if necessary.

THALMOR THEATRICS

(Sneak) Locate the room on your right as you begin this infiltration. It contains a spare set of Thalmor Robes. Donning these robes allows you to sneak around the Embassy buildings a little more easily. Guards now attack only if they see your face and you're close enough (within around ten feet) to draw their suspicions. Just how easily spotted you are depends on your race:

Beast races, such as Orcs, Khajiit, or Argonians are easily spotted by guards.

Human races, such as Nords, Bretons, or Redguard, have a slightly easier time.

Wood and Dark Elves have a better chance at passing through without drawing suspicion.

High Elves are almost able to wander the Embassy with impunity!

► Thalmor Robes

From the long hallway, you can head east and open the door to the exterior courtyard (western side). Or you can maneuver around the bar, up the stairs to the upper floor, and creep past (or bludgeon) the guard patrolling this area. To your right (east) is a corridor leading to a dining area (with wine, poisons, and potions to pilfer). To the left (west) is a bedroom, which is on your right (north) and an office to the left (south), which also has a door leading to the exterior courtyard (eastern side). Pick either of the exits and head outside.

NOTE From this point on, you have a choice regarding how you find the information the objective has requested:

Plan 1: You can search the solar and the dungeon for written materials from the Thalmor. This allows you to leave without interacting with the prisoner.

Plan 2: You can move through the solar, down to the dungeon, and then free Etienne Rarnis. This is the prisoner a Thalmor spy named Gissur picked up. He has been viciously tortured by a Thalmor named Rulindil. He then escapes with you.

Plan 3: Or you can execute both plans, as the following section reveals:

Creep through the snow, along the perimeter of the Thalmor Embassy grounds, taking care not to be seen by the patrolling guards (or rush in and attack them if you don't believe in the element of surprise). Either perimeter path allows you access into the snow-laden garden, and the door into Elenwen's Solar. Enter that door as soon as you can.

(Sneak) If you're disguised or sneaking, there's usually a Thalmor Mage guarding this door.

(High Elf) If you're a High Elf and wearing Thalmor Robes, you can actually trick the guard into leaving his post with a quick conversation!

When you enter the solar, you hear a Thalmor called Rulindil (one of the spymasters responsible for receiving and utilizing clandestine chatter) talking to one of his spies, a weaselly man named Gissur. They mention an interrogation room below. Beware of a patrolling guard here as you move quietly to the bar and storage room (if you're hiding), or into the withdrawing room that has multiple exits.

Upstairs are two bedrooms and a small storage area. Aside from a variety of expensive items (that aren't critical to your quest), there's nothing to take up here. Instead, remain on the ground floor and sneak (or rush) into the northwest office, next to Rulindil's study. There are books to check out, and a small chest holds some evidence: a Dragon Investigation document (which notes a prisoner in the cellar dungeon who is the key to unlocking the dragon phenomenon), the Interrogation Chamber Key, and two dossiers—one on Delphine and the other on Ulfric Stormcloak. It all makes for some very interesting reading. If you're just considering the prisoner, you can also head west and challenge Rulindil in his study. You can spring into an attack or try to pickpocket Rulindil (which is difficult) for the Interrogation Chamber Key.

- Interrogation Chamber Key (2)
- Dragon Investigation: Current Status
- Thalmor Dossier: Delphine
- Thalmor Dossier: Ulfric Stormcloak

There are two staircases leading down; both lead to a similar-looking door to the Embassy Dungeon (which can also be picked [Expert]). You can head through either door, but the stairs and door to the northeast place you on a balcony where you can see a single guard patrolling.

If you entered this area via Elenwen's Study (the one farthest from Rulindil), then you can sneak down here and watch Rulindil descend the steps from his office and begin a rather unpleasant interrogation. Otherwise, he is likely to have attacked you, or been killed already, along with his spy, Gissur.

Fewer guards make it easier to sneak down the steps, move past the rack, and execute the guard with a sneak attack. Before you investigate that moaning, check the small chest by the table with the rolls of paper on it; there's another dossier, this one on a gentleman named Esbern. Now read all the materials you've gathered (the Dragon Investigation and all three dossiers) to complete your objective.

➤ Thalmor Dossier: Esbern

You may talk to the prisoner moaning in the first cell (and Brelas if you used her as a party distraction). The prisoner's name is Etienne Rarnis, and if you speak to him, he reveals that he may have mentioned the location of a man named Esbern who may shed some light on the resurrected dragons returning to Skyrim. The Thalmor are certainly interested in him. As you release the prisoner, two Thalmor Soldiers and Malborn appear, so fight off the Thalmor if they attack. Take down any guards and search them for the Trap Door Key (there are two available); otherwise you won't be able to escape.

➤ Trap Door Key (2)

◆ OBJECTIVE: Escape the Thalmor Embassy

◆ TARGET: Reeking Cave exit

Drop through the trapdoor—with Malborn, Etienne, and Brelas by your side if they are alive and freed—and enter the Reeking Cave (so named because of the stench of the Frost Troll who lives here who slaughters travelers and brings them back here to consume). You can attack the troll before dropping down so he can't strike you back. Watch out; Etienne or Brelas can die fighting or fleeing from this creature. The cave itself is small; locate the exit, where Malborn, Etienne, and Brelas all flee. You don't need to follow them.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Delphine

◆ OBJECTIVE: Recover your equipment

◆ TARGET: Sleeping Giant Inn, in Riverwood

Quest Conclusion

Delphine is waiting for you in the secret cellar downstairs in the Sleeping Giant Inn. Return here and locate the large chest on the left (north) wall to obtain all the equipment you gave her before visiting the Embassy. Delphine wants to know if you've found out anything useful. Mention that the Thalmor are looking for someone named Esbern. Delphine seems to instantly know who this "crazy old man" is. She reveals Esbern is a Blade archivist who is an expert on the ancient dragonlore of the Blades. From your earned knowledge, it seems Esbern is hiding out somewhere in the city of Riften. Perhaps a well-connected man named Brynjolf can help. To get him to trust you, ask him to remember the 30th of Frostfall.

Postquest Activities

Time is racing; you must now hunt down Esbern, convince him to help your cause, and hope the Thalmor don't get there first! Main Quest: A Cornered Rat begins now. If you visit Windhelm, and Malborn is still alive, you can find him inside the Gnisir Corner Club and begin Miscellaneous Objective: Malborn's Long Shadow.

PREREQUISITES: Complete Main Quest: Diplomatic Immunity

INTERSECTING QUESTS: Main Quest: Diplomatic Immunity, Main Quest: Alduin's Wall, Thieves Guild Quest: A Chance Arrangement

LOCATIONS: Riften, The Bee and Barb, The Ragged Flagon, The Ratway, The Ratway Vaults, The Ratway Warrens, Riftweald Manor, Riverwood, Sleeping Giant Inn

CHARACTERS: Brand-Shei, Brynjolf, Delphine, Esbern, Keerava, Madesi, Riften Guard, Salvianus, Vekel the Man

ENEMIES: Drahhf, Gissur, Hefid the Deaf, Hewnon, Black-Skeever, Knjakr, Shavari, Skeever, Thalmor Soldier, Thalmor Wizard

◆ OBJECTIVES: Talk to Brynjolf, Search the Ratway for Esbern's hideout, Find Esbern in the Ratway Warrens, Talk to Esbern

◆ A Den of Iniquity

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Brynjolf

◆ TARGET: Brynjolf, in Riften

Delphine instructs you to meet with her contact, a member of the Thieves Guild named Brynjolf. However, before you go, ask her about your birthright. You can also ask why the Blades are on the run. Turns out it's because the Thalmor were systematically hunting them down thanks to the White-Gold Concordat, which was signed with the Empire. It ended the war but gave the Thalmor free rein to stomp out the worship of Talos. You may also ask about the Thalmor, the arrogant and extreme rulers of the Aldmeri Dominion, or what used to be the Imperial provinces of Summerset Isle and Valenwood. When you've heard enough, leave the Sleeping Giant Inn and travel to Riften.

◆ TIP Remember the equipment you just gathered from where Delphine deposited it? If you need to equip any of it or arrange your Favorites, do this right now.

When you arrive at either of the city's gates for the first time, a guard halts you and attempts to shake you down for a "visitor's tax." You can:

(Persuade) Realize this for what it is.

(Gold) Realize this for what it is but pay up (the amount varies, depending on how poor you are)

(Intimidate) Threaten that you kill thieves

Any of these options (if successful) allows the guard to open the door. Butchering the guard also gets you into Riften, after dramatically increasing your bounty and forcing you to spend time in the jail.

You meet a mysterious character in the Grand Plaza (during daylight hours) or inside the Bee and Barb the first time you look around the Grand Plaza in Riften.

First-time Thief: If you're meeting Brynjolf for the first time, and if you have some general skills in concealment or silent stealth or you've dealt with the guard at the Riften gate without resorting to violence, a man named Brynjolf strikes up a conversation with you. He may have an errand for you to perform to test your skills and may reward you with gold. Thieves Guild Quest: A Chance Arrangement must now be completed before Brynjolf releases the knowledge of where Esbern is hiding out.

(Persuade) Or you can use your verbal charms to reveal the location of Esbern, without playing Brynjolf's little game. If so, you can skip A Chance Arrangement.

Guild Member: If you're meeting Brynjolf and you've already proved yourself skilled by completing Thieves Guild Quest: A Chance Arrangement, Brynjolf is happy to point you in the direction of where Esbern is hiding out, once you ask him about these matters.

◆ TIP You don't have to play along with Brynjolf's schemes, though.

(Persuade) You can speak to Keerava inside the Bee and Barb to learn about the Ragged Flagon, which gets you partway there.

Or you can skip ahead to 'The Ratway Hidey-hole' and just follow the directions straight to Esbern.

◆ Interlude: A Chance Arrangement

He tells you to pilfer a silver ring from a stall owned by Madesi in the marketplace while he creates a distraction. Place it in the pocket of a Dark Elf vendor named Brand-Shei. If you're caught, you're on your own, but if you succeed, he'll have some better-paying schemes. If you've met Brynjolf during the evening or night, he'll be waiting between eight in the morning and eight in the evening for you. If you met Brynjolf at night, wait until daylight and meet up again.

◆ A CHANCE ARRANGEMENT OBJECTIVE: Meet Brynjolf during daytime

◆ TARGET: Brynjolf, Grand Plaza in Riften

◆ A CHANCE ARRANGEMENT OBJECTIVE: Steal Madesi's Ring

◆ TARGET: Madesi's stand, Grand Plaza in Riften

Brynjolf is waiting for you by his own plaza stand, where he's about to hawk his "amazing" Falmerblood Elixir. Naturally, this patter is designed to draw a crowd (including Madesi and Brand-Shei), allowing you to quickly move around the plaza's perimeter via the stone wall and crouch behind Madesi's stall.

You must attempt to pick this lock only after any city guards pass you, and you're hidden from view while sneaking.

CAUTION

► Madesi's Silver Ring

◆ A CHANCE ARRANGEMENT OBJECTIVE: Plant Madesi's Ring

◆ TARGET: Brand-Shei, Grand Plaza in Riften

Creep around so the assembled beggars and storekeepers don't see you, and position yourself behind Brand-Shei.

(Sneak) You must now "reverse-pickpocket" the Dark Elf. This involves pickpocketing, choosing your own Apparel menu, selecting Madesi's Silver Ring, and giving it to Brand-Shei to finish the technique. Remember, no one must see you attempt this!

If you're successful, Brand-Shei is mistaken for a thief and hauled away to Riften prison. Your paths may cross again in the future....

◆ A CHANCE ARRANGEMENT OBJECTIVE: Speak to Brynjolf

◆ TARGET: Brynjolf, Grand Plaza in Riften

If you're arrested, or you leave Riften and wait more than half a day to complete Brynjolf's Objective, or you murder someone during his distraction, Thieves Guild Quest: A Chance Arrangement still completes. However, this is no reward, and Brynjolf isn't pleased with your inadequacies. This is not the way to impress a future mentor!

CAUTION

Speak to Brynjolf after the ring-plant misdirection, and he congratulates (and rewards) you. You receive no monetary gain if you failed. Then he mentions his organization has been having some bad luck but mentions that there's more money to earn if you can handle it. Reply that you can, and Brynjolf recommends you meet him at the Ragged Flagon tavern, deep inside Riften's subterranean Ratway. He also points you in the direction of Esbern when you ask him; he's down in the Ratway.

► 100 gold pieces

◆ OBJECTIVE: Search the Ratway for Esbern's hideout

◆ TARGET: Ragged Flagon, inside the Ratway, in Riften

TIP This is an optimal time to strike up a friendship with other members of the Thieves Guild and perhaps begin a series of quests with them. Consult the Thieves Guild Quests starting on page 278 for all the pertinent information.

◆ The Ratway Hidey-hole

Open the barred gate by the water's edge and go into the sewers that run the length and breadth of Riften. Down the first tunnel, you may stumble across two equally odious characters: Drahff and Hewnon Black-Skeever. They attempt to mug you for all your equipment. You can:

(Persuade) Try to let Drahff know that you've killed dozens like him.

Any other option results in violence. This doesn't impact your standing in Riften and is the recommended choice.

Now continue through this small maze of interlocking sewage tunnels. Watch for hanging oil traps, and a bear trap along the way. If your Lockpick skill is high enough, there's a chamber to check out, but your main purpose is finding the Ragged Flagon.

The tavern is unique, being constructed on and above a sewage conduit chamber. When you spot Brynjolf, he is talking with the barkeep (Vekel the Man), speaking about Brynjolf's predicament with his "organization." Speak to Vekel the Man, or seek out another Thieves Guild member named Dirge and ask either of them if they've seen "an old guy, hiding out" somewhere in Riften. Both Vekel's and Dirge's minds are cloudy, so you may need to clear them by:

(Persuade) Appealing to his sense of urgency and telling your contact that Esbern's life is in danger.

(Gold) Appealing to his sense of greed and offering gold so he remembers.

(Brawl) Appealing to his boisterous side and proving your might with a bare-knuckle fight. No weapons, or this suddenly gets a lot less friendly!

When one of these choices succeeds, Vekel or Dirge tells you that Esbern is holed up in the Ratway Warrens and hardly ever leaves the place.

If you're already a full-fledged member of the Thieves Guild, which requires you to have Thieves Guild Quest: Loud and Clear active and to have been awarded your thief's clothing, Vekel and Dirge also point you in the direction of the Ratway Warrens.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Find Esbern in the Ratway Warrens

◆ TARGET: Esbern, inside the Ratway, in Riften

The Elder Scrolls V

SKYRIM

QUESTS: MAIN QUEST: ACT II

PRIMA OFFICIAL GAME GUIDE

WWW.PRIMAGAMES.COM

CROSSING THE THALMOR: GISSUR'S REVENGE

Dispatching Gissur back at the Embassy prevents him from shadowing your movements.

If you left Spymaster Rulindil's spy Gissur alive during the previous quest, you may spot him in the Ragged Flagon. You can slay him or leave him alone. If you speak with either Dirge or Vekel, Gissur eavesdrops and sneaks out of the Ragged Flagon, into the Ratway. If you (carefully) follow him, you can eavesdrop as he tells the Thalmor troops where you are. You may wish to attack at any time, or:

You can remain hidden, as the Thalmor enter the Ragged Flagon, confront Dirge or Vekel, and are given a menacing brush-off by the Thieves Guild.

Or, you can reveal yourself (accidentally or otherwise) and turn the Ragged Flagon into a slaughterhouse. Leave no Thalmor alive!

CROSSING THE THALMOR: SHAVARI THE ASSASSIN

The Thalmor are hiring proficient assassins to track and kill you.

Unbeknownst to you, once you escaped the Thalmor Embassy, Elenwen placed a bounty on your head, which attracted the attention of a Khajiit assassin named Shavari. As soon as you enter the Ragged Flagon or the Ratway Vaults, she enters the Ratway after you. Be quick if you spot an unknown Khajiit in these parts; slay her before she can fulfill her task. Inspect her corpse for a note from "E" that proves the Thalmor plot against you.

► Shavari's Note

Remembering the 30th of Frostfall

If you were directed into the Ratway Warrens or even stumbled here on your own, the Thalmor are already prowling this maze of connecting corridors around a central hub room (which you've just entered).

However, if Dirge or Vekel directed you to the Warrens, you are forewarned about the Thalmor ambush, allowing you to expect any attacks and even trying to ambush the guards and gain the upper hand. Either way, unless your sneaking ability is exceptional, expect to fight around four of these enemies throughout your navigation of the Warrens.

From either entrance into the Warrens, there are two possible routes:

The first is to navigate around the interconnected corridors and chambers, sneaking past or fighting Thalmor enemies and a few Skeevers along the way. This is the long route, but it allows you to remain hidden, or at least clear the Warrens of foes for the moment.

Or, you can appear on the upper balcony of the multifloored central hub room, which is well lit and has a cart and hay bale at the base of it. Drop to the open gate on the eastern side of the bottom floor. The entrance to the Ratway Vaults is just south of this point, at the bottom of the Warrens.

Open the wooden door and enter the Ratway Vaults. The Thalmor haven't found this area yet, and it is rarely trafficked. One of the reasons may be the lunatics who populate the chambers here. Beware of Hefid the Deaf, and Knjakr the mad chef, as both of them get violent when they spot you. You'll also have to contend with a brain-addled man named Salvianus, who talks to himself. But you're actually here to locate the well-locked door on the upper balcony of the hub chamber, in the southwest corner.

Sidle up to the door and activate it, and you'll hear an old man shouting for you to go away. Persist, and the door's shutter slides open and a pair of eyes peer out. They are attached to a man who claims to not know who Esbern is.

No amount of persuasion or pleading gets the man to unlock the door. Use the quote Delphine told you to tell the man: "remember the 30th of Frostfall." Only then does the man reveal himself to be Esbern and unlock the door.

If you haven't spoken to Delphine after escaping the Thalmor Embassy, you can inform Esbern that you're Dragonborn, which is enough to pique his interest.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Esbern

Quest Conclusion

Once you're inside Esbern's hidey-hole, he asks how Delphine is after all these years, regarding the situation as "hopeless." He tells you that Alduin has returned, just as the prophecy said. Esbern believes it to be the end of the world. In fact, the only glimmer of hope would be if a Dragonborn returned....

Postquest Activities

During the conversation, Main Quest: Alduin's Wall begins immediately.

MINOR SPOILERS

INTERSECTING QUESTS: Main Quest: A Cornered Rat, Main Quest: The Throat of the World

LOCATIONS: Karthspire, Riften, The Ragged Flagon, The Ratway, The Ratway Warrens, Riverwood, Sleeping Giant Inn, Sky Haven Temple, Alduin's Wall

CHARACTERS: Delphine, Esbern, Orgnar

ENEMIES: Forsworn, Thalmor Soldier, Thalmor Wizard

◆ OBJECTIVES: Escort Esbern to Riverwood, Talk to Esbern, Gain entrance to Sky Haven Temple, Learn the secret of Alduin's Wall

one of the main Akaviri military camps in the Reach, during the conquest of Skyrim. He also places a book on the table. Read it at your leisure for some history.

► Annals of the Dragonguard

Delphine isn't impressed until Esbern informs you both that the Sky Haven Temple is where Alduin's Wall was built to set in stone all their accumulated dragonlore. But the location of the wall, one of the wonders of the ancient world, was lost. Fortunately, Esbern knows where it is and why the three of you should journey there: The ancient Blades recorded both history and prophecy on Alduin's Wall. With any luck, it may reveal how to defeat Alduin himself.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Gain entrance to Sky Haven Temple

◆ Forsworn and Forsaken

Delphine knows that Esbern's description fits an area of Skyrim called Karthspire, in the Karth River Canyon. She asks whether you should all travel there together or whether you should meet them at the Sky Haven Temple entrance. The choice is yours. You can:

Fast-Travel to the nearest location closest to the temple, and then walk there. Or Fast-Travel to the temple entrance itself, if you've already discovered it.

Travel the path along Falkreath Hold, which involves fending off any enemies along the way and fighting as a trio. This takes longer but allows you to raise levels and watch your teammates' considerable fighting talents. Neither of them can die from enemy attacks, so you can back them up in combat if that's your style.

Take the same, lengthy route on your own or on horseback. You won't need to wait around, but you have no backup during any fights.

Catch a carriage from Whiterun to Markarth, and then approach on foot from the west, as Delphine recommends.

After the meeting, Delphine says her last good-byes to Orgnar the barkeep and leaves the Sleeping Giant Inn for good.

The Forsworn—primitive tribesmen fighting to drive the Nords out of this western hold—are active in this area. They are formidable warriors and mages, especially in groups as large as those you find at the Karthspire exterior. Depending on your play style and whether you're traveling alone or with Delphine and Esbern, expect a protracted and furious battle across the sprawling wooden and stone battlements as you cross the platforms spanning the Karth River. After some fine sneaking or impressive combat, seek the inky-black cave entrance and enter Karthspire interior.

History and Prophecy

◆ OBJECTIVE: Escort Esbern to Riverwood

◆ TARGET: The Sleeping Giant Inn, in Riverwood

Now that Brynjolf and the Thieves Guild have helped you locate the slightly deranged Esbern, it is your job to chaperone him to Riverwood. Ask him if he knows the way out of here, and he sets off running. Follow him out of his hidey-hole or request that he follow you. Head down the stairs in the sewer junction chamber. As you both enter the sewer passages, Thalmor agents begin to appear. Defeat them. Combat continues as you push up the stairs and into the Ratway Warrens. Let Esbern fight the Thalmor Soldiers that may appear; Esbern is a powerful wizard and can handle himself in a fight.

Head west, through the open gate in the hub room and into the connecting sewer tunnel. Go north past the tree routes and up the stairs by the dining chamber. Next, travel around to the south, above the hub room. Cross the middle balcony of the hub room, and go to the upper balcony overlooking this same hub room chamber. Head west into the Ragged Flagon. From here, head west, into the Ratway mead-tasting room; then turn right (north) and use the wall lever to lower the wooden bridge if you haven't done this already. From here, you're one winding corridor away from exiting into Riften. At this point, you can Fast-Travel or trek back to Riverwood and the Sleeping Giant Inn.

TIP Esbern simply crouches when overwhelmed by enemy attacks and then rises again. Don't worry about him being killed.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Esbern

TIP If you lose Delphine and Esbern during the journey to the Sky Haven Temple, they appear when you enter the Karthspire interior. If you told them to go ahead, they will be waiting on the road close to the entrance, near the Karthspire Forsworn Camp (unless you reach there first).

Fighting continues inside Karthspire as you head through a Forsworn camp and into a narrow ascension chamber, with stone buttresses and temple columns carved by the early Akaviri. There is an entrance high above you to the west, but it is currently impassable. There is a trick to releasing the two raised bridges that cross the width of the chamber. Move up to the three tricornered small pillars atop the dirt ramp.

west, but it is currently impassable. There is a trick to releasing the two raised bridges that cross the width of the chamber. Move up to the three tricornered small pillars atop the dirt ramp.

Puzzle Solution: The square tile in the middle of each column is significant; study the hieroglyph in each one. One looks like an eye with a pair of horns above it. One looks like a ceremonial bowl with stylized fire. The third looks like two dragon heads facing each other and an arrow pointing down. This is the symbol of the Dragonborn. Activate the pillars so the "Dragonborn" tile is shown and the line atop each pillar points east to west. The bridge to your left (south) lowers with a rumble.

Cross the bridge and wait for Esbern to give his opinion on the tiled floor in the connecting chamber. Expect a fiery death if you step on the incorrect pressure plate. But there is a method to this madness:

Puzzle Solution: Look for the plates that have the "Dragonborn" hieroglyph on them. Step only on those plates to wind your way across the floor, before you finally reach a carved dragon head and a lever. Pull the lever, and the second crossing lowers. This has the added bonus of switching off the pressure-plate trap.

Allegory and Mythic Symbolism

Head north across the two lowered bridges and into the Sky Haven Temple entrance, a large and remarkably well-preserved chamber. Esbern strides toward a big stone head at the far (west) end.

Speak to Esbern about the entrance. He studies the circular floor carvings, murmuring something about them being a "blood seal." The mechanism needs blood to activate: your blood. The ancient Blades revered Reman Cyrodiil, and the whole place appears to be a shrine to him. Esbern explains the historical significance of this site. Listen for as long as you wish, but when you are ready, stand in the center of the circular floor carving and activate the blood seal. You cut your palm, dripping blood into the floor seal, and Reman Cyrodiil's giant carved head lifts open.

OBJECTIVE: Learn the secret of Alduin's Wall

Quest Conclusion

You may wish to run on ahead or witness Esbern's excited discovery of Akaviri bas-reliefs. But the main chamber holds the real prize. While Delphine waits impatiently, Esbern explores the entirety of Alduin's Wall, which dominates this chamber. In the middle of the wall, Esbern discovers that the ancient Nords used a Shout to defeat Alduin. Delphine asks if you know of such a Shout. Answer that the Greybeards might know. Delphine responds with a few choice words about the Greybeards; she believes they shrank from their responsibilities and destiny. She recommends you head off to see them while she remains; Esbern is likely to be here a while.

*"When misrule takes its place at the eight corners of the world,
When the Brass Tower walks and Time is reshaped,
When the thrice-blessed fail and the Red Tower trembles,
When the Dragonborn Ruler loses his throne, and the White Tower falls,
When the Snow Tower lies sundered, kingless, bleeding,
The World-Eater wakes, and the Wheel turns upon the Last Dragonborn."*

Postquest Activities

Esbern continues to inspect Alduin's Wall as Main Quest: The Throat of the World begins. In addition, you can start to befriend Delphine and Esbern inside the Sky Haven Temple and complete the four Blades Factions Quests, earning you Followers, items, dragons to kill, and blessings from Esbern. Consult that Chapter for details.

Sky Above, Voice Within

OBJECTIVE: Talk to Arngeir

TARGET: Master Arngeir, High Hrothgar

While Esbern inspects the third panel of Alduin's Wall (and offers his opinion of it if you wish to listen), you should exit Sky Haven Temple. Head up and north, and exit through any of the "dragon arrow" doors to an outside ruin offering excellent views over the Reach. You have a long trek back toward Whiterun, and then must navigate the 7,000 steps again to High Hrothgar. You should Fast-Travel if you're feeling impatient. Seek out Master Arngeir, and inform him that you need to learn the Shout that was used to defeat Alduin. The Greybeard is angered by your request, blaming the meddling Blades for their reckless arrogance. Arngeir ends the conversation (no matter what you say) by admonishing you for straying from the path of wisdom.

Master Einarth murmurs something to Arngeir in dragon tongue, and Arngeir calls for you to stop. He apologizes for his outburst and informs you that the Shout is called "Dragonrend." It is unknown, even to the Greybeards of High Hrothgar, as it is deemed evil. Only the master of the Greybeards—Paarthurnax—can answer your questions. You are beckoned into the courtyard and are taught another Shout that will open the way to Paarthurnax.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Learn the Clear Skies Shout

◆ TARGET: Master Arngeir, High Hrothgar Courtyard

Follow Arngeir toward the ceremonial fire pit on the raised area of the courtyard, where he bellows three glowing, runic words into the carved stone on the ground below. Step onto and absorb each of them, so your Clear Skies Shout is the strongest it can be. Then absorb the knowledge from the glowing Master Arngeir. You learn Lok ("Sky"), Vah ("Spring"), and Koor ("Summer"). Then enter your Magic > Shout Inventory menu, and select this Shout.

- Word of Power: Sky, Clear Skies
- Word of Power: Spring, Clear Skies
- Word of Power: Summer, Clear Skies

◆ OBJECTIVE: Use the Clear Skies Shout to open the path

◆ TARGET: The mountain fog, atop the High Hrothgar steps

Clearing the Throat

With the Shout selected, turn and depart from High Hrothgar, heading up the steps from the fire pit to the southeast. You are greeted by a perimeter arch, through which is an impenetrable fog. Execute the Clear Skies Shout and the fog dissipates for a few seconds before blanketing the mountain again. This gives you a clear view of the path to the mountaintop.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Paarthurnax

◆ TARGET: Paarthurnax, the Throat of the World summit

Continue up the path until you reach the edge of the fog bank. If the fog returns, then Shout again. As you progress up the zigzagging path, look out for the marker stones and the flags affixed to them. The pace is slow, but you eventually emerge above the fog bank and discover the Throat of the World—the summit of the largest mountain in Skyrim.

Don't wander around blindly in the gray mist; this is dangerous. Linger in the fog can drain your Stamina, and you'll have to contend with Ice Wraiths and possibly a troll along the way.

CAUTION

A deep booming voice echoes around the giant rocks and snowbanks atop the mountain. Paarthurnax greets you. Speak to this giant white dragon, who asks why you intrude upon his meditation. Explain that you need to learn the Dragonrend Shout. He responds that patience is required and that formalities must be observed. Paarthurnax lands on the ground nearby and encourages you to hear his Thu'um and respond—if you are truly Dovahkiin! He opens his maw and scorches a nearby rock in a great gout of fire!

◆ OBJECTIVE: Learn the Word of Power from Paarthurnax

The rock soon glows with a runic Word of Power. Take this as the gift it is intended to be, and absorb another new Word of the Fire Breath Shout. You then absorb Paarthurnax's knowledge of the Word...except the beast is still alive and doesn't need slaying.

➤ Word of Power: Fire Breath

◆ OBJECTIVE: Use your Fire Breath Shout on Paarthurnax

Paarthurnax now wishes you to greet him, not as a mortal but as a dovah ("dragon"). Select the Fire Breath Shout from your inventory, and yell it directly into the dragon, bathing him in your fiery blast. Paarthurnax doesn't become hostile; this is the ceremonial greeting he was expecting.

Of course, don't follow this up with actual combat, or Paarthurnax actually becomes hostile, and you can't kill him now.

CAUTION

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Paarthurnax

Watcher at the Time-Wound

Paarthurnax is happy to make your acquaintance and asks what you wish of him. When you repeat your request to learn the Dragonrend Shout, Paarthurnax has been expecting this. After further conversation, the great dragon says that even he does not know the Thu'um that you seek. After another question, he asks why you want to learn the Shout. Reply with any answer you wish, but do tell him you need to stop Alduin. Paarthurnax describes his elder brother as "troublesome." This hermit soon asks you why he lives up here.

Your answers won't be correct, so he tells you he meditates at this spot, as it was where Alduin was defeated by the ancient Tongues. But even the Dragonrend Shout wasn't enough; they had to employ the Kel—or Elder Scroll—to create a Tiid-Ahraan, or Time-Wound, and cast him adrift on the currents of Time. If you ask, he explains what an Elder Scroll is and reveals he has been waiting: For thousands of years, until Alduin began to emerge from Time. This is important to your cause. If you found an Elder Scroll at this exact location, you might be able to cast yourself back to the other end of the time break—and learn Dragonrend from those who created it!

Quest Conclusion

You're left with one overwhelming question...

◆ TARGET: Esbern, at the Sky Haven Temple

◆ OBJECTIVE: OR (Optional) Talk to Arngair

◆ TARGET: Master Arngair, at High Hrothgar

Finish your conversation with Paarthurnax by asking him to impart all the information about the Elder Scroll that he can. According to him, when you return with the Scroll, you shall meet Hakon, Gormlaith, and Felldir—the first mortals to whom Paarthurnax taught the Thu'um and who led the rebellion against Alduin. Complete your talk with Paarthurnax, and then leave to locate the Elder Scroll, if you haven't found it yet. There are two optional clues that point you in the correct direction.

NOTE Do you already have the Elder Scroll in your possession? This is possible, if you've completed Daedric Quest: Discerning the Transmundane. If so, you can skip this quest and begin Main Quest: Alduin's Bane.

NOTE Remember that, you can still return to him to meditate on Words of Power. Consult Other Factions Quests (The Greybeards Quests): Meditations on Words of Power for more details. This quest becomes available once you complete Main Quest: The Horn of Jorgen Windcaller.

Talking to Esbern: To learn more about your Elder Scroll search, you may wish to return to the Sky Haven Temple. Esbern is usually standing outside, atop the mountain the temple is dug into, gazing over the Reach. Approach the temple pavilion and speak to him. He recommends you visit the College of Winterhold. Your map updates.

Talking to Arngair: To learn more about your Elder Scroll search, you can visit High Hrothgar and speak with Master Arngair. The Greybeards do not concern themselves with the Scrolls, but such blasphemies have always been the stock-in-trade of the mages of Winterhold. He suggests you try their College. Your map updates.

NOTE At this point, you can speak to Arngair and learn the locations of additional Words of Power. Consult Other Factions Quests (The Greybeards Quests): Word Wall Revelations for more details.

Insane Ruminations

Begin your journey to the city of Winterhold. The College is linked to it by a bridge. At the bridge's near end, a High Elf wizard guards the entrance. She stops you, warning that it's not safe to cross the bridge and that you will be denied entrance to the city. She will become hostile if you take a swing at her. Although she has some complaints about the College, which you can ask her about, you really just want to enter the College. Ask if this is possible, and she asks why. Choose the answer that best suits your demeanor. She requires that you take a test to show you're at least competent in the use of magic. You can:

Walk right in without dealing with Faralda, if you're already a member of the College of Winterhold and started that line of Side Quests.

(Persuade) Tell her that you both know you'll be successful.

Agree to take the test. When the test begins, Faralda requests you aim a spell at the seal on the ground near to her.

Ask if she would grant entry to the Dragonborn. Faralda asks if you really have the Voice. Show her any Shout you have.

Spell Casting: Bring up your Magic menu and choose the spell Faralda has requested. She can choose Firebolt, Magelight, Fury, Conjure Flame Atronach, or Healing Hands, depending on your available spells and knowledge of particular magic styles. Aim at the seal and cast the spell. After a successful casting, Faralda tells you to find Mirabelle Ervine inside the College.

Dragon Shouting: Bring up your Shout inventory, choose any Shout (a good choice is Fire Breath), aim it at the seal, and bellow. After you strike the seal, Faralda tells you that there is much you both can learn from each other and that you'd be a superb addition to the College.

You can now ask Faralda more questions about Mirabelle and the College, or even receive training in the arts of Destruction Magic. College of Winterhold Quest: First Lessons is now active, and you are told to report to Mirabelle Ervine. However, this objective is not required or part of the Main Quest. Cross the bridge, enter the College's exterior courtyard, open the grand doors, and enter the Hall of the Elements. Immediately make a right (east) turn and enter the Arcanaeum.

Be extremely careful where you wave your fingers! Don't aim (accidentally or otherwise) at Faralda or choose a spell (or Shout) that has a large area of effect. If you cast a wider flame-based attack, you risk setting Faralda on fire, effectively ending your tryout as an apprentice mage!

CAUTION

TIP Do you want to mingle with other mages? Then consult the College of Winterhold Quests for further information on the denizens of this epicenter of magic in Skyrim. This is also a great time to start their quests, if you haven't done so already.

Look for the Orc Mage named Urag gro-Shub, who runs the Arcanaeum. Although you can ask to assist him in College business (which allows you to accomplish several College-related tasks unrelated to this quest) and can ask about the Arcanaeum library, you're here to ask him about the Elder Scroll. Urag isn't too happy with you offhandedly asking about such a powerful artifact. You may listen to an overview of the Scrolls before asking if there's an Elder Scroll you could use. Urag laughs at this question; he wouldn't show the likes of you, even if he obtained one. Ask if he at least has any information on them. He agrees to locate a couple of arcane tomes that may have some clues. But mostly they contain lies leavened with rumors.

Urag gro-Shub locates and places two tomes on the nearby desk: Effects of the Elder Scrolls and Ruminations on the Elder Scrolls. After reading both books (which you may keep or leave on the desk), you find that the Ruminations tome is the work of a madman. Daedric Quest: Discerning the Transmundane now begins.

➤ Effects of the Elder Scrolls ➤ Ruminations on the Elder Scrolls

◆ DAEDRIC QUEST OBJECTIVE: Ask Urag about the insane book

Return to Urag and let him know that the Ruminations book is incomprehensible. He doesn't seem surprised; after all, this book was the work of Septimus Signus. Although Signus is the world's master of the nature of Elder Scrolls, Urag tells you he's "been gone for a long while." You suspect he means both mentally and physically. He currently resides north of the College in the treacherous Ice Fields.

◆ DAEDRIC QUEST OBJECTIVE: Find Septimus Signus

◆ TARGET: Septimus Signus's Outpost

▶ The Hermit of Hermaeus Mora

The giant chunks of ice floating off the Northern Coast are your next destination. Exit the College and run down to the frigid coastal waters. Hop across any floating ice that you can, navigating your way north. Expect to slice into a few Horkers along the way, and you may encounter wolves and Ice Wolves.

Septimus Signus's Outpost is cut into one of the hill-sized icebergs, close to a moored rowing boat. Climb down the ladder and the slope to reach a lone mage in a chamber of ice. He appears to be guarding some kind of Dwemer box about the size of a house.

Asking Septimus about the Elder Scrolls results in a torrent of knowledge. Ask where the Scroll is, and after receiving moderately useless information, ask once more (either pleasantly or with a more threatening tone). Septimus agrees to tell you, but in return, you must venture into Blackreach, a strange underground Dwemer city that lies below Alfand.

Ask about getting into Blackreach. Septimus keeps up his riddle-based prattling and hands you two items: The first is an odd-edged lexicon, used by the Dwemer for inscribing. The second is an Attunement Sphere, which apparently "sings" when you near an important Dwemer door. Once these are in your grasp, your Main Quest updates. Stay and speak further with Septimus if your sanity can stand it.

➤ Attunement Sphere ➤ Blank Lexicon

◆ DAEDRIC QUEST OBJECTIVE: Transcribe the Lexicon

◆ TARGET: Tower of Mzark

◆ OBJECTIVE: Recover the Elder Scroll

◆ TARGET: Tower of Mzark

▶ Trek to the Tower

TIP You must have the Attunement Sphere on your person in order to continue; otherwise, you cannot access the route necessary to reach the Elder Scroll. The following location is one of a few entrances to a giant underground city called Blackreach. This is the optimal path, but there are others. Consult the Atlas to see all the ways to enter this subterranean citadel and the Tower of Mzark.

Alftand is located on the glacial mountains southwest of Winterhold. Your trek there is usually interrupted by wild animal attacks. The exterior of Alftand is a series of dotted structures, both Dwarven and Nordic in nature.

Below the glaciers is the Alftand Ruined Tower, which offers a dangerous route to the glacier's top. A much better way is to stay outside to reach the two windswept huts, an inaccessible Dwarven tower, and a precarious platform that winds down and around the rooftops, on the side of the glacier. Head down the planked bridges until you reach the entrance to the Alftand Glacial Ruins. This is the way to go.

Wind through the glacial tunnels that have been mined out and left in a real mess, with debris and cooking equipment strewn about, and the signs of fighting everywhere you look. Follow the tunnel down until you reach the beginnings of the Dwarven architecture, a stone tunnel that ends in a connecting room with a stone table, and a large barred doorway to the north. This can only be unlocked from the other side. On the nearby table you'll find Research Notes. Whoever wrote it thought he saw a strange human figure on the other side of the barred doorway.

➤ Research Notes

At this point, the passage west heads up a ramp and down the other side, into another glacial intrusion. Watch for attacks from a Dwarven Spider as you go. A Skooma-addled Khajiit is shouting about being trapped here and attacks if he sees you. Drop him, and continue down into the start of the main Dwarven ruins. The ceilings tower above you as you reach a cog and piston room with a raised center and two Dwarven Spheres appearing from their wall holes to attack. Continue north to a vent chamber with a locked gate (Novice) leading to a few scraps of treasure. Head through the gold door and up to a Dwarven Spider-infested passage stretching south. This leads to a locked (Apprentice) gold door with items to steal behind it, and a main path around to the east, which brings you back into the cog and piston room. This time, you're above the raised center. Navigate the pistons (jump over them, or you risk being pushed off by them) in a counterclockwise route to the short corridor and door to the Alftand Animunculory.

TIP There are many trinkets of Dwemer origin to pick up (and sell once you leave). Among the vendors across Skyrim, a wizard named Calcelmo in Markarth's Understone Keep is most interested in these items and gives a good price, although you can sell them to any merchant or vendor who wants them.

left of the stone steps. Otherwise, head up the steps, over the pipes, and up the ramp with the central slit. Walk on the slit so you don't trigger a blade trap by stepping on the pressure plates. At the barred doorway, use the lever on your right to lower the bars. The lever behind the bars raises them, which isn't necessary unless you're being pursued and want to halt your attackers. Step out into the grand Animunculory shaft—a long vertical drop you need to descend without falling. Remove any Dwarven Spider threats, and head down the sloping stone walkway to an arched entrance platform. The gold door here (Apprentice) just leads to a dead end and more treasure.

Dwarven Spider battle, and a piston that can push you over the edge. The way forward and downward is to the northeast. Look for the lantern and falling water, as the sloping walkway is hidden.

As you descend, something horrific shuffles out of the shadows: an eyeless figure, thought to be myth. These are Falmer, the degenerate remnants of the original Elven inhabitants of Skyrim! Dispatch four of them as you follow the winding platform down. Take care not to lose your footing and fall to your death. Next, face the jet of fire blasting the entrance to a gold door. Dart through or around, and enter a Falmer nest.

Falmer appear from their huts, forcing you to fight or sneak by. Follow the passage down to a second set of Falmer in a boiler chamber. Watch for those rattling, hanging bones if you're sneaking, as these startle the Falmer into finding you. Head down the steps, watching for Skeevers attacks, and look for a gold door on the southeast wall. This is the way onward, but you may wish to turn to the northwest, open a gate, and enter an ancient Dwarven Elevator. Pull the lever and you ascend to the Alftand Glacial Ruins.

Step around the rubble and to the barred doorway where you found the Research Notes. Pull a wall lever here, so the bars retract. This allows you to easily navigate up and down the Animunculory if you explore here in the future. For now, use the elevator to head back down, and open the gold door in the southeast wall. This leads down the sloping walkway to the shaft's bottom, where you encounter another Falmer attack and face a Frostbite Spider. From here, you have only one set of corridor steps and a claw trap (move around the trip wire) before you enter the Alftand Cathedral.

Battle a Falmer and navigate some floor trigger plates to reach a gold door that leads out into the main cathedral chamber—a massive echoing cavern with a central structure and a doorway barred with spears. Check the area for Falmer and the steps to your left (south) before heading to a gold lever above the entrance from which you came. This raises the spears, enabling you to enter the cathedral platform, where a giant steam-powered mechanical monster roars into life. This Dwarven Centurion is a frightening form, but you should defeat it, as it carries a handy key.

► Key to Alftand Lift

Move through the green-tinted corridor to an opening on your left (east). This leads to a large pipeworks corridor. Avoid two Dwarven Spheres by staying on the low ground, and head through the gap in the gold fencing to the Dwarven Mechanism. This leads up to the top of the Alftand glacier, and a tower you couldn't access when you first reached here. Open the gate from the inside using the wall lever (so you can access the cathedral directly from the surface during future adventures); then travel back down to the cathedral. Approach the Dwarven Mechanism now, and insert the Attunement Sphere Septimus gave you. The floor parts, revealing stairs down to a hidden gold door and an entrance into the mysterious undercity of Blackreach.

NOTE Take a moment to adjust to the vastness of this cavern. Aside from firing a Dwarven crossbow using an adjacent lever and investigating the small stone building to the southwest (Sinderion's Field Laboratory, where you can start collecting Crimson Nirnroot and begin Side Quest: A Return to Your Roots), there is a sprawling area to adventure through. Consult the Atlas for information on the entire area; this walkthrough points you directly to the exit necessary to reach the Elder Scroll.

Exiting Blackreach using the appropriate Dwarven Elevator involves a romp west. First, though, you may wish to head southeast, to a golden button encased on a Dwarven head pedestal. Press it, and the elevator behind lights up, allowing you to ascend and exit back outside. Open the gate, allowing you to enter from the Great Lift of Alftand (a new tower entrance northeast of Nightgate Inn). Return to Blackreach and find the cobblestone path heading roughly west. Follow it past ancient structures and towering luminescent fungi. Continue with a giant lake and cascading waterfalls to your left (south), heading over a stone bridge. Go west and turn left (south) to reach a colossal elevator that allows you to ascend into the Tower of Mzark, your destination.

► Oculory Operation

Venture along a corridor with a burst steam pipe and small camping area, and through gold doors into a gigantic, circular Aedrome chamber. The chamber is dominated by a huge sphere. This appears to be some kind of massive Oculory, with a variety of focusing lenses and other golden machinery attached. Head to the cluster of controls on the platform above the Oculory. The controls are comprised of five cylindrical devices: a Lexicon Receptacle and four positioning buttons embedded in pedestals. There is a certain way to use these devices to produce something hidden in one of the lenses.

Puzzle solution: Activate the Lexicon Receptacle, so the Blank Lexicon rests on top of it. The two pedestals to the Receptacle's right—the only ones currently active—open and close the Oculory lenses. Press the taller of the two pedestals (right of the middle one with the lens chart on it) three or four times, until the pedestal with the blue button to the left of the middle one starts to glow. Move to this new pedestal (at this point, the Blank Lexicon may be glowing blue). The two pedestals to the left of the Receptacle—the taller of which is now active—control the ceiling lens array. Press the button of the taller, left pedestal twice, until the button on the far left, smaller pedestal begins to glow. Now press that button, and a large set of lens crystals descends from the ceiling and stops. The main crystal rotates and splits apart to reveal a tubelike carrying device.

Quest Conclusion

Drop down from the balcony controls and approach the open lens crystal. Take the Elder Scroll from its elaborate compartment. Then exit using the door under the Lexicon Receptacle. This leads to one final Dwarven Elevator, which allows you to open the gate from the Tower of Mzark, step out into the exterior, and add another possible entrance to Blackreach, if you decide to return.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Read the Elder Scroll at the Time-Wound

◆ TARGET: Throat of the World (mountain summit)

Once you've taken the Elder Scroll from the Oculory inside the Tower of Mzark, simply return to the Dwarven Elevator and head outside. Once you're back on Skyrim's surface, you can travel (by your preferred means) to the Throat of the World, where Paarthurnax is perched on his rock, watching you intently. Move near the Time-Wound, which glows brighter as you advance upon it, and read the Elder Scroll from your inventory.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Learn the Dragonrend Shout from the Nord heroes

◆ TARGET: Hakon, Gormlaith, and Felldir, through the Elder Scroll

Postquest Activities

As soon as you take the Elder Scroll, Main Quest: Alduin's Bane begins. In addition, you are able to return to the giant underground city of Blackreach and can continue Daedric Quest: Discerning the Transmundane from this point on. Consult that quest for further information.

Your vision pitches back into the past, thousands of years ago, when the Nord heroes of old first fought Alduin and his dragon brethren. But Gormlaith, Hakon, and Felldir are seen as if you could reach out and touch them. You cannot move while watching this memory play out. You watch as Gormlaith and Hakon deliver a series of killing blows to a dragon, with Hakon worrying that Alduin may not appear and fall into the trap they have set for him. Felldir has seen none of his kin stand against Alduin, not Galthor, Sorri, or Birkir. Gormlaith replies that they did not have Dragonrend. But as Alduin cannot be slain like a lesser dragon, Felldir has brought something to even the odds—an Elder Scroll!

The giant black dragon soon descends on the trio of Nord warriors. As planned, the three heroes bellow out Joor ("Mortal"), Zah ("Finite"), Frul ("Temporary")! At the same moment in present time, you absorb the knowledge of this Shout yourself. Alduin is confused, and sees fear for the first time. While Gormlaith is torn and tossed about by an enraged Alduin, Hakon yells to Felldir to use the Elder Scroll. After Felldir yells the incantation, Alduin is consumed by a massive ball of energy, sucked into the Elder Scroll, and is banished from the world of Skyrim...of the past. But what of the present?

► Word of Power: Mortal, Dragonrend

► Word of Power: Finite, Dragonrend

► Word of Power: Temporary, Dragonrend

◆ OBJECTIVE: Defeat Alduin

◆ TARGET: Alduin, Throat of the World

► Rending the World-Eater Asunder

Something black and jagged arcs through the blizzard. Alduin has seen your attempts at reading the Elder Scroll but arrives too late to prevent you from learning the Shout that may be his downfall. Paarthurnax attempts to intercept Alduin's attack but is cut down and lands heavily near you. He tells you to use the Dragonrend Shout if you can.

Dragon Slaying: Immediately select Dragonrend from the Shouts, and target the Thu'um directly at Alduin as he flies down to a hover, swoops past, or lands.

Try to lengthen the attack of the Shout (by holding down the Shout button). When he lands heavily, utilize your favored attack (which can be a second or third Shout as well as your magic and ranged or melee weapons).

If Alduin takes to the skies, use Dragonrend again; it is the only guaranteed way of dropping him back down to earth.

Warning! Alduin is completely invincible except when he's affected by Dragonrend!

CAUTION

Continue combat, which is the most difficult that you've likely faced, and make use of any Health, Magicka, or Stamina potions that you've acquired for this battle.

Quest Conclusion

The battle ends only after you've depleted Alduin's health, or he's savaged you to death; there is no respite. Kill or be killed!

Part 1: Expert Mediation

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Paarthurnax

◆ TARGET: Throat of the World

◆ OBJECTIVE: OR Talk to Arngair

◆ TARGET: High Hrothgar

◆ OBJECTIVE: OR Talk to Esbern

◆ TARGET: Sky Haven Temple

Alduin collapses to the ground after you deal him a particularly impressive blow. But the arch-dragon isn't some common serpent; he is firstborn of Akatosh! He cannot be slain here, even by you. He takes to the skies, and even your Dragonrend cannot stop him. He seems weakened; he's down but not out. Now you must seek the guidance of your chosen ally. You have three to choose from:

1. Paarthurnax

If you are favoring the kinship of the Greybeards over the Blades, you may seek council with Paarthurnax. Mention that you need to find out where Alduin went, and the dragon ponders this. Perhaps an ally of his could be convinced to betray him. Paarthurnax mentions that the palace in Whiterun—Dragonsreach—was originally built to house a captive dovah (dragon). It would be a fine place to trap an Alduin ally. You mention that the Jarl might need some convincing (as the quest updates). Then Paarthurnax tells you the story of how the place came to be named Dragonsreach.

2. Arngair

You may visit Master Arngair, who heard the Dragonrend Shout from High Hrothgar. Arngair tells you that Alduin can travel to Sovngarde to devour the souls of the dead, but no one knows how this is achieved. You reply that one of his dragon allies might reveal this. But there is one possibility: Dragonsreach, which was originally built to hold a captive dragon. This did indeed occur in the time of Olaf One-Eye, thousands of years ago. You might be able to trap a dragon there, once you have the Jarl's cooperation.

3. Esbern

Or you can return to Esbern at the Sky Temple pavilion outside, and he asks what happened. He believes Alduin returned to Sovngarde to feed on the souls of the dead, and if you don't find him soon, he'll return stronger than ever. When you mention that his dragon allies might know where the portal to Sovngarde is, Esbern agrees and asks you about Dragonsreach. Apparently it was built to hold a captive dragon, back before the Akaviri crusaders cleansed Skryim of dragons. You could trap a dragon there, but getting the Jarl to use his palace as a dragon trap might be impossible.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to the Jarl of Whiterun

◆ TARGET: The Jarl of Whiterun, in Dragonsreach, in Whiterun

NOTE Esbern has another problem if you speak with him. He's discovered who the Greybeards' leader really is—a dragon responsible for many atrocities during the ancient Dragon War. On behalf of the Blades, he demands that Paarthurnax die for these crimes. Furthermore, Esbern's oath as a Blade prevents him from offering you aid or comfort until this dragon is slain.

Main Quest: Paarthurnax begins officially at this point. Consult Main Quest: Paarthurnax for further information. It can also occur if you speak to Delphine. You must complete this quest to access help at the Sky Haven Temple from the Blades; otherwise Delphine and Esbern will speak but offer no assistance to you, which takes the form of the four Other Factions Quests involving the Blades.

Return to Whiterun and visit Dragonsreach within its walls. Approach the Jarl, who is usually sitting under Numinex's skull. Numinex is the dragon that Jarl Olaf One-Eye brought back to Whiterun. Request that the Jarl help you, as you require a trap to snare a dragon in the Jarl's palace. The Jarl's responses, and even the Jarl himself differs, depending on how the Civil War is progressing:

 Jarl Balgruuf the Greater is the Jarl if the Imperials still have this Hold during the Civil War or if you haven't decided to start the Civil War.

If the Stormcloaks have one Hold left or have been completely wiped out, and the Imperials (to which Jarl Balgruuf has pledged loyalty) have emerged victorious in the Civil War, the Jarl begrudgingly agrees to let you try out your insane dragon-trapping plan. You can skip Main Quest: Season Unending (which occurs in the middle of this quest), and continue your plan on the Dragonsreach balcony. Main Quest: The Fallen (Part 2) begins.

If the Stormcloaks have more than one Hold left during the Civil War, or you haven't started any of the Civil War Quests yet, the Jarl has more pressing matters than your lunatic schemes: Quest Conclusion Part 1 begins.

 Jarl Vignar the Revered is the Jarl if you've attacked Whiterun and driven out the forces loyal to Jarl Balgruuf and the Imperials and slaughtered those who defended the city.

If the Imperials have one Hold left or have been completely obliterated from the Holds' major cities, and the Stormcloaks (who have installed this newly appointed Jarl) are victorious in the Civil War, the Jarl reluctantly agrees to let you perform your dragon-snaring act. You can skip Main Quest: Season Unending (which occurs in the middle of this quest), and continue the plan on the Dragonsreach balcony. Main Quest: The Fallen (Part 2) begins.

If the Imperials have more than one Hold left during the Civil War, but the Civil War is under way and Whiterun has fallen to the Stormcloaks, the Jarl has problems with the ongoing Civil War conflict. Quest Conclusion Part 1 begins.

Quest Conclusion Part 1

The Jarl has no time (or additional men) to spare to trap a dragon. Explain that this is the only way to find Alduin. The Jarl says he wants to help, but he requires your aid first. Ulfric Stormcloak and General Tullius are both waiting for the Jarl to make the wrong move, and the Jarl's enemies won't sit idly by while a dragon slaughters the Jarl's forces. The Jarl cannot weaken the city while the threat of enemy attacks is looming. That threat would have to be nullified, even temporarily, for the Jarl to agree to your plan. For this to happen, both sides must agree to a truce, but the Jarl feels the bitterness runs too deep.

But all is not lost. The Greybeards might be willing to hold a peace council, and then perhaps Ulfric and Tullius will listen. You're told to negotiate a peace deal, and so begins Main Quest: Season Unending.

◆ MAIN QUEST: Season Unending

◆ OBJECTIVE: Get Greybeards' help in negotiating a truce

◆ TARGET: Master Arngeir, in High Hrothgar

Part 2: Epic Entanglement

◆ OBJECTIVE: Learn Shout to call Odahviing

◆ TARGET: Esbern, in the Sky Haven Temple

◆ TARGET: OR Paarthurnax, at the Throat of the World

Once you have convinced the Jarl to aid you, you still need a way to lure a dragon into your trap. You have a choice of teachers:

Esbern: who has been busy in the Sky Haven Temple library. It appears that the ancient Blades recorded many of the names of the dragons they slew. By cross-referencing the burial-site map that Delphine created from the Dragonstone, Esbern has identified one of Alduin's raised dragons.

Paarthurnax: whose arcane knowledge and commanding expertise of Shouts enables him to easily inform you of the Shout that you seek.

Because the names of dragons are always three Words of Power (Shouts), the dragon will hear and come to you when his name is bellowed. Your teacher has the name of Od-Ah-Viing ("Winged Snow Hunter"), and you learn the Shout to call Odahviing.

➤ Word of Power: Snow, Call Dragon

➤ Word of Power: Hunter, Call Dragon

➤ Word of Power: Wing, Call Dragon

 NOTE Delphine, if she's with Esbern, now has a bone to pick with you. She assures you that the Blades won't be nearly as accommodating if you don't slay Paarthurnax up at the Throat of the World. This is another hint to start Main Quest: Paarthurnax. Once again, it is purely optional. Consult that quest for more information.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Prepare trap for Odahviing

◆ TARGET: Jarl of Whiterun, in Dragonsreach

Now that you've learned the Call Dragon Shout, you can try it out anywhere. Odahviing appears in the skies, but he's too far away to bring down using Dragonrend. As there's no way to capture Odahviing until you reach Dragonsreach, return to Whiterun and speak with the Jarl. He is ready, so inform him you're prepared to catch a dragon. Follow the Jarl up the steps to the side of his throne and out the doors to the northeast.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Call Odahviing to Dragonsreach

◆ TARGET: Battlements, atop Dragonsreach

You emerge on the large stone battlements, which have a dragon-sized porch area. Move to the crenellations at the structure's northeast edge, where the Jarl tells you to call; his men are ready. Execute the Call Dragon Shout and wait a few moments. The ominous sound of leathery wings echoes across the tundra.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Defeat and trap Odahviing

The Elder Scrolls V

SKYRIM

QUESTS: MAIN QUEST: ACT III

PRIMA OFFICIAL GAME GUIDE

WWW.PRIMAGAMES.COM

The mighty red beast soars up and attacks the battlements. At this point, you must bring Odahviing down and spring the trap:

Dragon Trapping: It is important to note that you're trapping—and not killing—Odahviing. Attacking with ranged spells or arrows usually annoys Odahviing enough for him to swoop and land on the battlements.

An easier plan is to yell the Dragonrend Shout at Odahviing. This hampers his flying and makes him drop onto the battlements without having to lengthen this already-difficult battle.

When he drops onto Dragonsreach, Odahviing advances on his wings, furious at being forced to land. Back up (to the southwest) so Odahviing enters the giant hallway and passes between the two huge chains attached to the giant stocks contraption. When the dragon moves forward, the stocks slam down, trapping Odahviing!

◆ OBJECTIVE: Interrogate Odahviing

Remember, you're interrogating, not killing, Odahviing. You cannot dispatch him, so concentrate on trapping him.

CAUTION

Odahviing feels humiliated and is perhaps a little impressed by your trapping talents. Ask where Alduin is hiding (and then ask again), and Odahviing reveals Alduin has traveled to Sovngarde to regain his strength. The door to Sovngarde is located at Skuldafn, one of his ancient fanes (temples) high in the eastern mountains. After answering your questions, Odahviing asks to be freed. Answer that he must serve you. Odahviing initially refuses but remembers one important detail he forgot to mention...

Quest Conclusion Part 2

It seems that Skuldafn can be entered only by flying. Odahviing offers to fly you there, but only after you free him. This conundrum is concluded at the start of the next quest.

Postquest Activities

Once you're pondering how to reach Skuldafn and setting Odahviing free, Main Quest: The World-Eater's Eyrie begins.

MINOR SPOILERS

INTERSECTING QUESTS: Main Quest: Alduin's Bane, Other Faction Quests (The Greybeards Quests): Word Wall Revelations*, Other Faction Quests (The Greybeards Quests): Meditations on Words of Power*, College of Winterhold Quest: First Lessons

LOCATIONS: Riverwood, Sleeping Giant Inn, Sky Haven Temple, Throat of the World

CHARACTERS: Delphine, Esbern, Master Arngair

ENEMIES: Paarthurnax

◆ OBJECTIVES: Kill Paarthurnax, Talk to Delphine or Esbern

NOTE * Quest names marked with this symbol do not appear in your Quest Menu list, although objectives may.

NOTE Killing Paarthurnax does not affect the future Main Quests; you will still be able to complete your task of killing Paarthurnax's brother, Alduin, without any complications.

Return to the Throat of the World (or remain here after the end of Main Quest: Alduin's Bane) and approach Paarthurnax. Kill him using your favorite weaponry. One method is to launch Fire Breath (the Shout he actually taught you) into him until he starts to flinch and takes to the skies. Then wound and bring him down to the ground with Dragonrend. Finish with your other attacks, using a bow, magic, or melee weapons. Gather the gold and bones from Paarthurnax's corpse, but only after absorbing his soul.

➤ Dragon's Soul

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Delphine or Esbern

◆ TARGET: Riverwood or Sky Haven Temple

Quest Conclusion

Return to Delphine or to Esbern. Depending on when you killed Paarthurnax or who gave you this quest, expect a similar response from either of them: They are extremely happy; the ancient evil is avenged, and the shades of many Blades salute you this day!

Return to Master Arngair, and the greeting is slightly colder. You are lucky the Greybeards are men of peace, as you've tested their philosophy beyond the breaking point. You've thrown your lot in with a cabal of Akaviri barbarians. You are no longer welcome in High Hrothgar.

TIP To gain the most knowledge and help from both the Greybeards and the Blades, complete both of the Other Factions Greybeards Quests to your satisfaction, and then complete this quest. After that, you have limited contact with the Greybeards but are on excellent terms with the Blades. You can complete the four different (and some repeatable) Other Factions Blade Quests afterward.

Postquest Activities

Your other Main Quests continue as normal. Contact with the Greybeards is now kept to a minimum; they want nothing more to do with the likes of you. The Blades welcome you into their fold. You may begin any of their Other Faction Quests after speaking to Esbern or Delphine.

◆ Slaying the Summit's Hermit

◆ OBJECTIVE: Kill Paarthurnax

◆ TARGET: Throat of the World (mountain summit)

Your alliance with the Blades sits uneasily upon a knife edge. They refuse to help you (which basically means you cannot access their Other Faction Quests) until you've defeated the monster at the Throat of the World. Reasoning with them that Paarthurnax has changed his ways and now embodies peace and meditation falls on deaf ears. They simply want you to remove Paarthurnax, as they perceive him to be partly responsible for the many deaths of their ancestral clan members.

Remember! This quest is completely optional. You will lose standing with the Greybeards if you complete this task, so it is time to pick a side.

ENEMIES: None

- ◆ OBJECTIVES: Get Greybeards' help in negotiating a truce, Talk to Arngair, Talk to General Tullius, Talk to Ulfric Stormcloak, Talk to Arngair, Take your seat, Negotiate a truce

NOTE Season Unending only occurs if the Civil War still rages across Skyrim; consult the previous quest for more details. In order to convince General Tullius and Jarl Ulfric to attend, you may need to finish your current Civil War quest. Once both have agreed to attend the council, the Civil War effectively comes to a halt, and you cannot obtain any more Civil War Quests until you finish the Main Quest.

A Modicum of Civility

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Get Greybeards' help in negotiating a truce
- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Arngair
- ◆ TARGET: Master Arngair, in High Hrothgar

Return to High Hrothgar and seek out Master Arngair. Initially, he talks about the difficulties in capturing a dragon. Inform him that you're actually here to get his help stopping the Civil War. Arngair reluctantly agrees to this and requests that you journey to Ulfric Stormcloak and General Tullius, and tell them that the Greybeards wish to speak to them. You may approach the leader of the Stormcloaks and the Imperials in either order.

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to General Tullius
- ◆ TARGET: Castle Dour, in Solitude
- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Ulfric Stormcloak
- ◆ TARGET: Palace of the Kings, in Windhelm

◆ General Tullius: Plot a path and trek to Solitude. Enter the walled city. Progress to the entrance to Castle Dour, where the high-ranking Imperials command the ongoing war efforts. Approach General Tullius. He has a different greeting depending on how the Civil War is progressing and whose side you've chosen, but he certainly remembers you from Helgen.

Speak to the general again if he fobs you off and tell him you have a message from the Greybeards—they are convening a peace council at High Hrothgar. You can attempt to persuade Tullius, tell him that Ulfric has already agreed (if this is the case) or convince him with answers that you choose. Eventually he agrees to the treaty.

◆ Ulfric Stormcloak: Figure out a favored route and journey to Windhelm. Step inside the walled city. Move to the entrance to the Palace of the Kings, where the Stormcloak chieftains plan their ongoing raids. Approach Ulfric Stormcloak. His opinion on you differs, depending on how the Civil War is progressing and the side you've chosen, but he can't forget his time at Helgen. Inform him of the message from the Greybeards, that they have requested a peace council at High Hrothgar. You can try persuading Ulfric, letting him know Tullius has already agreed (if this has happened), or bring him around with answers of your choosing. Finally, he agrees to the sit-down treaty meeting.

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Arngair
- ◆ TARGET: Master Arngair, in High Hrothgar

War and Peace

Journey back to High Hrothgar and locate Master Arngair. As you arrive, Delphine and Esbern are having a heated discussion with the Greybeards, demanding to be part of the meeting. If you've completed Main Quest:

Paarthurnax, the conversation is slightly different, depending on how you've dealt with the dragon. The conversation ends, Arngair expresses further concerns to you—especially that this place was built and dedicated to peace—before all parties are requested to take their seats for the council.

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Take your seat

Enter the grand hall in High Hrothgar, and take your seat opposite the entrance. The various members of the factions attending this meeting are as follows:

- ◆ Legate Rikke, a loyal and disciplined second-in-command and a true believer in the rightness of the Imperial cause.
- ◆ Jarl Elisif the Fair, the figurehead of Solitude who defers to Tullius.
- ◆ General Tullius, the leader of the Imperial forces in Skyrim. He is practical but impatient and unimaginative.
- ◆ Jarl Balgruuf the Greater, of Whiterun. A strong, noble, and valiant leader, he attends if he still rules his city.

Elenwen, a steely, determined, and ruthless head of the Thalmor observers. She sits near the Imperials, but her machinations are more complex.

Arngeir, Delphine, and Esbern sit in the adjacent chairs, opposite you. Their alliances are disparate but well known to you.

Ulfric Stormcloak, the fiery and charismatic Jarl of Windhelm, is attempting to win Skyrim's independence.

Galmar Stone-Fist is Ulfric's grizzled, hard-bitten, and fearless housecarl. Importantly, he is also completely loyal.

Jarl Vignar of Whiterun, if the Civil War has progressed and the Stormcloaks have Whiterun under their control.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Negotiate a truce

Opening Remarks

The negotiations now begin. Due to the variations that your previous choices have already had on this peace process, there are several variations and discussions. But it is vitally important for your own machinations that you understand what you should be seeking to accomplish from this:

Failure is not an option

The good news is, unless you start brandishing a weapon and slashing dignitaries, there is no way to "fail" in this meeting. But you must tailor the agreements to your personal wishes. Here's how this all breaks down:

Every time you're asked your opinion, you need to favor a faction, either the Imperials or the Stormcloaks. Logically, you should side with the faction you are helping (or wanting to help) in the Civil War; strongly agree with all their statements.

Or, you can favor the opposing faction. This is counterintuitive, as it will only anger your allies and (if you're interested in the Civil War) will force you to retake any Holds you gave away thanks to your terrible negotiations.

You can favor one faction a little or a lot. Read the answers you're about to give to determine what are strongly or weakly favored responses.

Or, you can favor neither side if the Civil War doesn't interest you, the Civil War Quests haven't started yet, or you wish to simply be impartial. This has no real effects on the faction you may be leaning toward.

◆ Negotiations Begin: Whose Side Are You On?

Hold Importance

First, you should understand how the Holds of Skyrim are broken down, in terms of "type," for this meeting. The following table shows which Holds are strongholds (the base of operations for a faction), which are major Holds (important), and which are minor Holds (less important):

✓	NAME OF HOLD	CAPITAL CITY	HOLD TYPE
<input type="checkbox"/>	Haafingar	Solitude	Stronghold: Imperials
<input type="checkbox"/>	Hjaalmarch	Morthal	Minor
<input type="checkbox"/>	The Pale	Dawnstar	Minor
<input type="checkbox"/>	Winterhold	Winterhold	Minor
<input type="checkbox"/>	The Reach	Markarth	Major
<input type="checkbox"/>	Whiterun	Whiterun	Major
<input type="checkbox"/>	Eastmarch	Windhelm	Stronghold: Stormcloaks
<input type="checkbox"/>	Falkreath	Falkreath	Minor
<input type="checkbox"/>	The Rift	Riften	Major

Negotiation 1: Elenwen

As soon as the negotiations begin, Ulfric raises objections about Elenwen even being involved in this council. Tullius or Ulfric asks you what your thoughts are:

To agree with Ulfric and kick out this unwanted entity

To disagree with Ulfric and keep Elenwen in the meeting

Negotiation 2: Markarth or Riften

The next item to discuss is giving up a major Hold. If you take the Stormcloak side, General Tullius will demand that Riften be turned over to the Empire. Otherwise, Ulfric will demand Markarth be surrendered to the Stormcloaks. The opposing faction's reaction depends on the state of the Civil War:

The faction that controls Markarth or Riften asks you what you think is a fair trade for the city. Your answer is always one of two choices:

◆ An exchange of a major Hold the opposition has

◆ An exchange of a minor Hold the opposition has

The council goes along with whatever choice you make. Bear in mind that the side that controls Markarth or Riften will be unhappy if it is bargained for a minor Hold!

Negotiation 3: The Archivist Speaks

At this point, one of the factions threatens to leave the bargaining table. This is always the faction that is most unhappy at the moment (the one you have favored the least). Esbern restores order with an impassioned speech about the greater danger, and both sides grudgingly agree to continue.

Negotiation 4: Concessions

It is now time for the faction that you've favored less (and thus "losing" the negotiations) to ask for additional concessions.

For each demand, you can choose whether to agree to the concession. This continues until the side demanding a concession from you receives it or they run out of concessions to ask for (which requires you to refuse all their demands).

TIP This is an excellent opportunity to really stick it to the side you aren't allied with! Remember that any changes you agree to (such as a hold changing hands) from here on will affect any Civil War Quests that are currently active.

Quest Conclusion

The council now concludes. If you've favored the enemy over your initial allies, you will be scolded by your allies. The quest then concludes.

Eastward, to the Afterlife

◆ OBJECTIVE: Set Odahviing free

◆ TARGET: Odahviing, Dragonsreach in Whiterun

Although you're right to be suspicious, the only way to reach Skuldafn is to agree to free Odahviing, on the condition that he transport you there. You may also witness Irileth's and Farengar Secret-Fire's reactions and questioning of the dragon. Then climb the steps to the side of the hall where Odahviing is waiting. Instruct the guard to open the trap. The guard isn't too happy, so confirm these are your wishes. If you don't wish to wait, you may activate the pull-chain yourself.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Odahviing

When you return to the dragon, he turns and lumbers to the parapet and waits for your arrival. Odahviing is awaiting your command. When you are ready (and fully equipped for this final adventure), tell Odahviing you're ready to be taken to Skuldafn. You clamber aboard the dragon and set off for a flight across the eastern mountains.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Reach Alduin's portal to Sovngarde

◆ TARGET: Exterior portal, the roof of Skuldafn Temple

Odahviing deposits you on the edge of the Skuldafn fane (temple) and departs; this is as far as he can take you. Bring up your map; you're on the eastern side of the Velothi Mountains, out of the Skyrim realm.

Edge through the first of two giant stone arches and cross the bridge. You're likely to be set upon by a dragon at this point, but it may depart the area before you can take it down (or utilize Dragonrend). Don't overstretch yourself fighting it if it flees (or use Dragonrend if you want it to flee). After passing through the second archway on the bridge's opposite side, there are other foes to concern yourself with.

The first of these are Draugr that clatter down the stone steps as you intercept (or sneak past) them. Continue south, into a cracked courtyard with temple outbuildings to investigate. But first, the dragon returns to try and finish you. As with your other dragon battles, employ the tactics already learned: down the beast with Dragonrend, and then dispatch it with your favorite killing implements or augmentations. You absorb the Dragon Soul after you slay the creature. There is little time to rest; another dragon attacks only moments later. Deal with it in a similar fashion. Should you wish to flee, the only areas suitable are the side temples, filled with Draugr. Absorb another Dragon Soul before continuing your Draugr dispatching.

► Dragon Soul (2)

Take a moment to survey the scenery: This sprawling fane is comprised of a South Temple Tower, a north temple tower, and a main temple interior, which is the likely location to head to when looking for Alduin's Portal. Before you climb the main stone stairs, split by a torch and a stone column, inspect the Skuldafn South Tower. Inside is a spiral staircase and a small chamber with items to gather. A second chamber is atop the stairs and has a chest and a few other items. Expect at least six Draugrs as you battle through this tower. Two upper exits allow you to safely check the main temple and the courtyard from which you just came.

Head back down to the courtyard. Move east up either of the two stone staircases and under either arch to a small open folly with a treasure chest at the top. Next, head north, under another arch, before beginning a pitched battle (or a sneaking maneuver) against the remains of the Nord dead. The Draugr continue to appear as you encroach up the main stairs toward the main temple sanctum. When you're fighting up the stairs, beware of Draugr perched atop the temple's roof, as they can strike you with ranged fire. Fight back using your own projectile attacks, or move to the door so the rooftop foes can't aim at you.

Before entering the main temple, you can optionally turn around and head south, down the eastern platform overlooking the ruined outer buildings you just navigated, to the entrance of Skuldafn North Tower. This provides more Draugr for you to defeat. Take the spiral staircase to an upper chamber and exterior balcony. The balcony leads back to an otherwise-inaccessible interior corridor with a treasure chest to raid. After you emerge back on the eastern platform, investigate the exterior steps to the southwest, which leads to an altar and a battle with a particularly powerful Draugr. Open the treasure chest on the altar, then use the aqueduct bridge and head north. Finally you reach and open the door to Skuldafn Temple.

▶ Prelude to the Maelstrom

You are greeted by ancient Nordic architecture and a central ceremonial buttress with an embalming table to your right. Venture down either corridor (the right has a chest to open, while the left as a floor trigger and a dart trap). Engage the Draugr guarding the connecting passages ahead of you, surrounding a second embalming table. Ascend either set of steps to an upper chamber, where the vertical Draugr coffin lids fly open, and out spills more emaciated bags of bones for you to thwart. After eliminating the Draugr, you'll notice the two archways ahead are blocked by portcullises. Investigate the pillars and lever to continue your progress.

Puzzle Solution Part 1: A lever raises the portcullises, but it is currently not attached to the mechanism. In the upper chamber, there are three pillars with carved animal petroglyphs on them. Investigate the two outer pillars first. On the outside of the ceremonial arch structure they are sitting under is a second carving, which is resting in the mouth of a stone head. Move the pillar on the western side so the Whale glyph is facing the chamber's western side (in the same direction as the carving above the pillar). Move the pillar on the eastern side so the Snake glyph is facing the chamber's eastern side. The mechanism is now attached.

Puzzle Solution Part 2: Before you move the middle pillar, peer at the two portcullises. Above each is a stone head, and in the mouth of each head is another glyph, partially obscured by the stone crossbeam. The left (northwest) mouth has a Snake. The right (northeast) has a Hawk. Now rotate the middle pillar so the Snake or the Hawk faces the lever pedestal. Then pull the lever, and the portcullis corresponding to the Snake or Hawk opens. You can have only one portcullis open at a time.

Take the steps through the left portcullis up to a hallway (as the right one leads to a blocked area and small chest), and drop to the altar and embalming table below. Fight through cobwebs and Frostbite Spiders, and climb some stairs (some cobwebbed alcoves reveal a hidden chest or some egg sacs). Locate an iron double door leading to a second puzzle chamber. Clear the chamber of Draugr and ransack any treasure chests before you concentrate on the animal petroglyphs.

Puzzle Solution: Begin on the ground floor. Head east, and walk around the room until you spot a carved head with a Snake petroglyph in its mouth. Return to the pillar facing the double doors you entered, and turn it so the Snake faces the doors (west). Ascend to the bridge area above. Locate the second carved head with a Hawk in its mouth. Match that so the Hawk is facing the same direction (outward or to the north) in the alcove underneath this head. Turn around (to the north), and match the Whale on the pedestal in the opposite alcove, with the final head above it. Then pull the lever on the pedestal. This lowers the bridge, allowing you to exit.

Follow the corridor around to another embalming room with steps up to a gallery and a bridge to cross into the next chamber. Demolish Draugr along the way. Beware of the spiral steps; there's a pressure plate directly in front of you that releases darts and an oil lamp that falls onto flammable oil. Gather any items before climbing the steps, bring down more Draugr in the connecting chamber with the blocked portcullis exit, and then enter the antechamber with a chest and a lever pedestal to raise the portcullis.

Now follow the wide ceremonial corridor up, watching for oil-lamp traps. Continue toward a Nordic Puzzle Door, guarded by a high-ranking Draugr. Fight this fiend until he collapses; his corpse holds the Diamond Claw, the key to exiting this place.

▶ Diamond Claw

Puzzle Solution: Approach the Nordic Puzzle Door, but first inspect the palm of the Diamond Claw you just picked up. The three symbols etched into the palm are Wolf, Moth, and Dragon. These correspond to the animal symbols on the door's outer, middle, and inner rings, respectively.

The door rumbles down, allowing you to step into a huge main crypt. The place is silent compared to the Draugr infestations you've beaten back previously. Approach the Word Wall at the crypt's far end and absorb another—and extremely potent—Word of Power. Then depart the temple interior, optionally checking an embalming chamber to the side, before opening the double wooden doors to the temple exterior.

▶ Word of Power: Storm Call

You appear on the roof of the temple you've just navigated. Deliver some killing blows to any remaining Draugr you failed to cull while on the lower ground. Although there's some side battlements to investigate, there's little to find. Instead, locate the stone steps and the jet of molten fire roaring into the skies.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Enter Sovngarde

Two large dragons flank you, sitting atop carved columns to your left and right. In the courtyard's center are steps where a Dragon Priest is attempting to close the portal using dragon tongue incantations. The priest's name is Nahkriin, and he carries a staff that opens the maw he's just closed (although it is possible to kill him before this chant is completed). Engage Nahkriin in battle, but beware of his electrical prowess; use the arches and stairs as cover if you need to, and watch for the dragons that intermittently swoop in to attack. Fight back with Dragonrend, and slay each dragon before turning your attention to the priest. Fight him until all that remains is a pile of dust. Aside from some sizable gold, you receive Nahkriin's Mask (useful for Side Quest: Masks of the Dragon Priests*) and the Dragon Priest Staff.

▶ Dragon Soul (2) ▶ Dragon Priest Staff ▶ Nahkriin

Quest Conclusion

Ascend the ceremonial steps. Activate the Dragon Seal at the top of the steps, and you jam the staff's shaft into the seal's center. A great gout of fire blasts forth from a swirling vortex—a gateway to the Aetherius, where Alduin cheats death and feeds off the souls of heroes past. Step down into the light and into Sovngarde!

Postquest Activities

After you step into this writhing gateway, Main Quest: Sovngarde begins. Before you enter, know that you can never explore Skuldafn again. If there are items you wish to collect, do so before entering the gateway.

INTERSECTING QUESTS: Main Quest: The World-Eater's Eyrie, Main Quest: Dragonslayer

LOCATIONS: Sovngarde, Hall of Valor, Shadowed Vale, Whalebone Bridge

CHARACTERS: Erlendr the Quick, Felldir, Gormlaith Golden-Hilt, Hakon, Hunroor the Agile, Jurgen Windcaller ("The Calm"), Olaf One-Eye, Stormcloak Soldier, Tsun, Ulfgar the Unending, Ysgramor, and many others.

ENEMIES: Alduin

◆ OBJECTIVES: Find out how to defeat Alduin, Gain admittance to the Hall of Valor, Talk to the heroes of Sovngarde

◆ Terror in the Shadowed Vale

◆ OBJECTIVE: Find out how to defeat Alduin

◆ TARGET: Lost soul, in the Shadowed Vale

You have crossed the threshold of the living and entered the afterlife, the realm of Aetherius. Alduin's presence is powerful here; indeed, you can see the dragon in the distance, below the red glow of the eternal sunset. Follow the pathway down (north), passing between the mammoth tusks and the monolithic cowed statues and into the valley of mists—the Shadowed Vale.

The mists—created by Alduin—begin to thicken, impeding your path and vision. Use the Clear Skies Shout to clear the fog back for a few moments. Look at the winding path through the misty valley, which is interspersed with runic stones and blue torchlight that indicates the main route to take. Soon you make out a figure, a Stormcloak Soldier, lost and terrified. He pleads with you to turn back. The fellow splutters out a riddle: "vain is all courage against the peril that guards the way." You surmise he's talking about Alduin.

He tells the tale of his own demise but is even more terrified of Alduin, whose hunger is insatiable. The dragon hunts the lost souls snared within this shadowed valley, feasts upon them to regain his power, and returns to Tamriel. The soldier pleads with you to take him to Shor's Hall, where the heroes of old await their eternity in safety from Alduin's hunt. Answer him in any way you wish. Perhaps you might seek some help inside this Hall of Valor?

◆ OBJECTIVE: Gain admittance to the Hall of Valor

◆ TARGET: Tsun, in Sovngarde

Execute the Clear Skies Shout once more to spot the Hall of Valor silhouetted against the gloomy skies in the distance to the north. Venture farther into the valley, and the path splits, continuing around both sides of a central rock outcrop. You can climb the steps cut into the outcrop. Watch Alduin as he swoops about in the middle distance, plucking souls lost in the fog and devouring them. Atop this central outcrop, above the fog, you can also view the entrance to the Hall of Valor, a gigantic whale skeleton that spans a bottomless chasm void.

◆ Seeking Valor

Return to the path below. No matter which path to the whalebone bridge that you take, expect to encounter two or three lost souls caught forever in the fog. Expect both Stormcloaks and Imperials here, along with those you may have dispatched during your adventure. Along the left-hand path, you can also meet High King Torygg, whose death at the hands of Ulfric Stormcloak plunged Skyrim into civil war. All fear the World-Eater. Emerge from Shadowed Vale and approach the steps leading to the whalebone bridge, where a mighty figure stands before you.

Approach Tsun. If you've studied your Tamriel history, you'll know he is a hero of ancient times, the brother of Stendarr, shield-thane to Shor, and a warrior of supreme quality. To Nords, he is revered as the greatest warrior who ever lived.

As you approach, he asks what brings you to Sovngarde. You can:

Ignore him and attempt to cross the bridge without his permission. It takes but a moment for Tsun to catch you in this maneuver, and lightning is summoned from the skies. It strikes you repeatedly, forcing you to stop, die, or leap from the bridge and to your death.

Speak to Tsun. When you ask, he tells you that he judges those fit to join the fellowship of honor inside the Hall of Valor. After further posturing, inform Tsun that you seek to enter the Hall and that you have a right of birth; you are Dragonborn.

Tsun greets you with a series of verses. This warrior poetry is filled with illuminating, rugged beauty. You receive a separate response if you've achieved any (or all) of the following:

- ◆ Become the leader of the Companions.
- ◆ Become the head of the College of Winterhold.
- ◆ Achieved the status as the head of the Dark Brotherhood.
- ◆ Achieved the status as the leader of the Thieves Guild.

Tsun agrees to let you into the Hall, but only after you pass the warrior's test. Tsun unsheathes his two-handed battleaxe and advances upon you!

This battle need not be difficult. You may utilize any of the Shouts that you've learned that damage foes in combat (Fire Breath is a good choice). Back these ranged attacks with your favored offensive weaponry. Once you wound Tsun enough, he halts the attack, judges that you fought well, and steps aside, allowing you to cross the Whalebone Bridge. Don't fall off the bridge as you cross!

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to the heroes of Sovngarde

◆ TARGETS: Gormlaith Golden-Hilt, Felldir, and Hakon, in the Hall of Valor

The giant doors to the Hall of Valor appear before you. Push one open and enter the grand hall. Heroes from Tamriel's recent and distant past walk this Hall, which is dominated by mead and meat: A banquet, including a huge spit-roast is underway, and Shor's subjects make merry, awaiting his summons to the last battle. You are greeted by the mighty warrior who adapted Nordic writing from the elves, Ysgramor. This revered ancestor of the Companions tells you that three warriors stand ready, awaiting your word to loose their fury upon the perilous foe. Their names are Gormlaith the Fearless, Hakon the Valiant, and Felldir the Old. You may remember them as the Nordic warriors you saw in your Elder Scrolls vision. Seek them out among the other heroes of Sovngarde.

The following heroic fighters from yore are among the honored guests in the Hall of Valor:

Erlendir the Quick, a friend of Ulfgar, who was turned into a stone pillar by a mage named Grimkell.

Jurgen Windcaller ("The Calm"), the founder of the Way of the Voice. The Greybeards honor him.

Hunroor the Agile, a companion of Ulfgar, who was turned into a stone pillar by a mage called Grimkell.

Ulfgar the Unending, a Nord barbarian who has finally found his way home, along with his brethren.

Olaf One-Eye, a first-era king who helped capture a mighty dragon named Numinex and housed him in Dragonsreach.

Quest Conclusion

When you're done wandering among the heroes, locate the three Nordic warriors who defeated Alduin the first time around: Gormlaith Golden-Hilt, Hakon One-Eye, and Felldir the Old. Gormlaith is raring to seal Alduin's doom, but hold council before the battle begins. They agree that Alduin's mist is more than a snare; it is his shield and cloak. With the four voices of the heroes and Dragonborn joined in unison, the mist can be removed and Alduin brought to battle. The World-Eater fears you, Dragonborn!

Stand close to your fellow fighters so you can vary the attacks and so you don't face Alduin on your own. If your coordinated attacks come from different directions, Alduin won't focus all his attention on you. Meanwhile, you have the luxury of striking only him.

You need only one Dragonrend to down Alduin; you can switch to another Shout (such as Fire Breath) and attack with that and with your favored weapons. Use any that you've employed successfully against dragons in the past. But remember to attempt this only when Dragonrend is still affecting him.

Alduin thrashes on the ground as his soul leaves his corporeal form. With a final, thunderous spasm, Alduin is torn apart; not even his skeleton remains in this afterlife. Tsun is the first to congratulate you on your mighty deed; you have cleansed Sovngarde of Alduin's evil snare. They will sing of this battle in the Hall of Valor! You may speak to any of the heroes who helped you in battle. When you're ready to leave, only Tsun can transport you from this place. Quest Conclusion

You return to the Throat of the World, with a full complement of dragons perched on the mountaintop at your arrival. The two recognizable beasts are Odahviing and Paarthurnax (if he is still alive). These beasts roar in a death chant for their fallen god—their leader, Alduin, and then take to the skies. Should you attack, they depart without fighting back. Paarthurnax greets you, impressed by your feats. Then he, too, flies away, leaving only Odahviing. Speak with him, and he informs you that he is now in your service.

NOTE The Call Dragon Shout now summons him to do your bidding.

Return to High Hrothgar and speak with Master Arngeir. Inform him of your actions; he believes Alduin may yet rise again, but that is for the gods to decide.

If you return to Sky Haven Temple, Delphine asks whether you have good news. But there's still the matter of Paarthurnax, if he lives. The Blades are grateful but are certainly more appreciative if Alduin's brother is also slain.

THE COMPANIONS QUESTS

OVERVIEW

Optimal Quest Start

You can start the Companions Quests when you arrive at Whiterun for the first time, or at any point thereafter. Warriors may wish to join sooner rather than later for access to a wide range of combat skill trainers.

Sanctuary: Jorrvaskr, in Whiterun

NOTE Cross-Referencing: Do you want to see maps and learn more about the traps, non-quest-related items, collectibles, crafting areas, and other important rooms in every location during these quests? Then remember to cross-reference the location you travel to with the information contained in the Atlas.

Jorrvaskr exterior, as seen from the Whiterun Plaza.

Jorrvaskr interior, during a drinking session.

The Companions' sanctuary is the Nordic longhouse adjacent to Dragonsreach, on the upper end of Whiterun. This is an ancient and honored mead hall where generations of Companions have met. According to local legend, Jorrvaskr is actually the oldest building in all of Whiterun. It existed alone on the mountain while the city was built up around it over the centuries. It features a main dining area, below which are the living quarters for the whelps and for the Circle and Harbinger.

Outside, there is a training area, and close by is the Skyforge, where the Companions' weapons are formed. The forge itself is large, ancient, and built outside on a mountain, close to the sky. Below the Skyforge is a ceremonial area known as the Underforge, which is out of bounds except on rare occasions.

Important Characters

Founder: Ysgramor

Ysgramor was born in Atmora, the ancestral land for all humans. He and two of his sons were the only survivors of the Night of Tears, when the elves attacked Saarthal and killed all the other inhabitants.

Ysgramor retreated to Atmora, rallied an army of Five Hundred Companions, and led them to vanquish the elves and drive them out of Skyrim.

Harbinger: Kodlak Whitemane

For 20 years now, Kodlak has commanded the Companions, balancing his tactical skill, ferocity in combat, and commanding presence. But those days are drawing to a close. A year ago, Kodlak contracted the rot and his condition has rapidly diminished. He has become weak in body, and his frustration shows. He's taken to locking himself behind closed doors, poring over old documents, desperate to cure himself of lycanthropy.

The Circle: Aela the Huntress

Aela is the latest in a long family of women in the Companions. Her mother was a member, as was her grandmother and every woman in her family for generations. Aela claims that her line runs back to Hrothi Blackblade, one of the original Five Hundred Companions. Aela was not raised in the Companions like Vilkas and Farkas were, but it has been a fixture in her life from a very early age.

➤ Trainer (Archery: Expert):

Aela the Huntress

The Circle: Farkas

Farkas and his twin brother, Vilkas, were both raised in the Companions by a man named Jergen, who rescued them from a circle of necromancers. Farkas is a bit cavalier with his Beast Form and a bit loose with his tongue, even to his superiors. This is not a big deal in the Companions, but he shows more disrespect to the older members than others do. Farkas is also...a bit slow.

➤ Trainer (Heavy Armor: Master): Farkas

The Circle: Vilkas

Vilkas and his twin brother, Farkas, were raised in Jorrvaskr—a place not accustomed to the sight of children. Only Tilma the Haggard offered them anything in the way of comfort. Several years ago, Jergen was killed in a battle with brigands near Dawnstar. Vilkas serves as the Master at Arms and is in charge of training younger members in weapon combat. He is hard on his students but is an excellent teacher.

➤ Trainer (Two-Handed: Master): Vilkas

The Circle: Skjor the Scarred

Skjor's early life was one common among the Companions. He fought in the Great War and returned to Skyrim after the Empire's defeat. He earned a reputation as being a sword for hire and was eventually recruited by the Companions. Skjor has always seen his role as the steady and loyal friend to those in power. He has few ambitions of his own, beyond supporting and standing by those to whom he has sworn loyalty. There is no one in the Companions with a greater sense of duty and honor.

OVERVIEW

Member: Athis

Adept in one-handed weaponry, Athis is a Dark Elf who keeps quiet most of the time. He is civil and loyal, but never at the forefront of any battles.

► Trainer (One-Handed: Expert): Athis

Member: Njada Stonearm

An impressive brawler and expert at blocking, but with an unpleasant attitude and uncaring disposition, Njada has few friends, which is just how she likes it.

► Trainer (Block: Expert): Njada Stonearm

Member: Ria

Ria is the youngest of the whelp recruits and is determined to fight and die alongside her Shield-Brothers. She is especially in awe of Aela the Huntress.

Member: Torvar

Torvar is a recent whelp and isn't taking well to the intensive training. He grows ever weary and anxious; the thought of dying in battle terrifies him.

Member: Vignar the Revered

Vignar the Revered was once a general and commander in the Legion during the Great War. He led brave warriors for nearly 30 years. That was a long time, though, and now Vignar lives a life of peace and relative quiet. He holds a place of honor among the Companions, and the group welcomes his council.

Housekeeper: Tilma the Haggard

Tilma the Haggard has been the single servant of Jorrvaskr for as long as anyone can remember. The Companions joke that they built the mead hall around her. To an outsider, it may seem as if Tilma is little more than a slave. But she is definitely there by choice and is committed to her duties and the warriors of Jorrvaskr.

Blacksmith: Eorlund Gray-Mane

Eorlund Gray-Mane is the patriarch of Clan Gray-Mane, one of the oldest, most respected families in Whiterun. Eorlund is widely known to be the best blacksmith in all of Skyrim. Although not a Companion himself, his wares have become the stuff of legend and are especially prized by the Companions. Eorlund is very old (and has a brilliant mane of long gray hair), but his long hours working the Skyforge have kept him incredibly fit.

► Trainer (Smithing: Master): Eorlund Gray-Mane

TIP Forging Ahead: Once you complete Companions Quest: Glory of the Dead, the Skyforge can forge a unique set of Nord Hero weapons. Skyforge steel weaponry is slightly better than normal steel.

NOTE Intimate Companionship: Farkas, Vilkas, Aela, Athis, Ria, Njada, and Torvar are all able to be married once Companions Quest: Glory of the Dead is over. Consult Temple Side Quest: The Bonds of Matrimony (page 423) for more details.

Training

The main members of this guild of fighters are extremely talented in a particular skill. Speak to each of them and increase the chosen skill by a point, to a maximum of five points before you level up. If you have enough gold, you can complete this numerous times:

Available Quests

There are a total of 19 quests available with the Companions. Six of these are Critical Path Quests, and 13 are Radiant Quests.

Critical Path Quests

Simply referred to as "quests," these are the main quests you attempt with the Companions. All but the first quest have one or more prerequisites, as shown in the following table:

✓ QUEST NAME	PREREQUISITES
<input type="checkbox"/> Companions Quest: Take Up Arms	None
<input type="checkbox"/> Companions Quest: Proving Honor	Complete Companions Quest: Take Up Arms, and one or more Radiant Quests.
<input type="checkbox"/> Companions Quest: The Silver Hand	Complete Companions Quest: Proving Honor, and one or more Radiant Quests.
<input type="checkbox"/> Companions Quest: Blood's Honor	Complete Companions Quest: The Silver Hand, and three or more Radiant Quests.
<input type="checkbox"/> Companions Quest: Purity of Revenge	Complete Companions Quest: Blood's Honor.
<input type="checkbox"/> Companions Quest: Glory of the Dead	Complete Companions Quest: Purity of Revenge.

Radiant Quests

These are usually smaller quests that require you to complete a task for a particular Companion. The Initial Wave Radiant Quests are available first, and remain available after the critical path quests are complete. The Second Wave quests are next; you must complete two to begin Companions Quest: Blood's Honor. The Final Wave quests only become available after all of the critical path quests are complete.

In each case, the objectives of a Radiant Quest are usually random. They are listed in more detail after the Critical Path Quests, but consult the following table to learn the prerequisites required to begin every Radiant Quest:

✓	CHRONOLOGY	QUEST GIVER	RADIANT QUEST NAME	PREREQUISITES

INTERSECTING QUESTS: Companions Quest: Proving Honor, Companions Radiant Quests

LOCATIONS: Pelagia Farm, Whiterun, Jorrvaskr, Living Quarters, Skyforge

CHARACTERS: Aela the Huntress, Athis, Eorlund Gray-Mane, Farkas, Kodlak Whitemane, Njada Stonearm, Ria, Skjor, Vilkas

ENEMIES: Giant

◆ OBJECTIVES: Speak to Kodlak Whitemane, Train with Vilkas, Give Vilkas's sword to Eorlund, Bring Aela her shield, Follow Farkas to your quarters

Enter the city of Whiterun and climb the streets until you reach the steps leading up to Jorrvaskr, the Companions' longhouse. When you step inside, you'll likely see a training fight in progress, with two recruits (Athis and Njada Stonearm) brawling. The other Companions watching the melee offer words of encouragement. The sparring is overseen by an intimidating, one-eyed man named Skjor. Speak to him when you wish to proceed with important knowledge about this Guild. He explains the Companions are known by many names, and not all of them complimentary. The battle switches to fists, and Njada Stonearm lives up to her last name, finishing her opponent and ending the fight.

You may speak with her and listen to her rude replies. But when you ask her (or other Companions) who is in charge, she mentions someone named Kodlak Whitemane, who is the Harbinger; this is the closest to a leader this rabble have and to whom they pledge their loyalty. Once you learn about Kodlak, this quest officially commences.

Training the Whelp

You hear the sounds of a pitched battle across the plains, close to Pelagia Farm, within the outskirts of Whiterun. Come closer to the fight, and you'll witness two warriors attempting to topple a giant who was trespassing too far into the farmland. You may watch or join the fracas. After the giant is killed (you can search him without penalty), you may speak with Aela the Huntress, Ria, or Farkas, the warriors who slew the giant. They explain who the Companions are and how you may join their Guild: Head to Jorrvaskr if you're worth anything in a fight.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Kodlak Whitemane

Head to the longhouse's south end, down the stairs, and open the doors to the Living Quarters. Head along the main lower-floor corridor to reach Kodlak. He is usually speaking with Vilkas, who still hears the call of the blood, which Kodlak calls "a burden to bear." They finish speaking and look at you: There is a stranger in their hall.

You can ask Kodlak who the Companions are, why he joined them, where they stand on the Civil War, and, most importantly for this quest, if you can join them. Although Vilkas voices his disapproval, Kodlak says that Jorrvaskr has some empty beds for those with a fire burning in their hearts. He then asks how you are in battle. You may answer how you wish; it results in Kodlak requesting that Vilkas take you outside to see how you handle yourself.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Train with Vilkas

Exit Jorrvaskr and head into the courtyard to the structure's rear. Vilkas instructs you to take a few swings at him. Oblige by unsheathing your favored melee weapon and striking Vilkas, who expertly blocks with his shield. Stop your attacks when instructed (or you'll soon learn why crossing the Companions isn't a good idea). Vilkas seems to think you have an inkling of promise, but you're still considered a whelp to them. In the meantime, you have some orders to take care of: Vilkas wants you to take his sword up to Eorlund Gray-Mane, who is waiting to sharpen it.

► Skyforge Steel Sword

◆ OBJECTIVE: Give Vilkas's sword to Eorlund

◆ TARGET: Skyforge, in Whiterun

Take the sword (optionally testing it out in an unrelated adventure or two), and bring it up the steps hewn into the rocky outcrop to the north of Jorrvaskr. You reach the Skyforge, an impressively large forge where Eorlund

Gray-Mane works the steel. Inform Eorlund of your errand. Depending on your answers, Eorlund tells you to remember that nobody rules anyone in the Companions, so subservient attitudes aren't necessary. They haven't had any leaders since Ysgramor. Eorlund isn't a Companion, but he's an expert in working the Skyforge, which produces the best steel in all of Skyrim. Before you go, Eorlund has a request: He wants you to take a shield to Aela the Huntress. Seeing the irony of this request is optional.

► Steel Shield

◆ OBJECTIVE: Bring Aela her shield

◆ TARGET: Aela the Huntress, in Jorrvaskr in Whiterun

Return to Jorrvaskr, and search the hall or the Living Quarters for Aela the Huntress, who is usually speaking with Skjor. Tell her you have her shield, and she gratefully receives it. She learns who you are and of your fight with Vilkas. She asks how you'd handle yourself in a real fight with him. Answer how you wish, although she won't like it if you threaten violence to a Shield-Brother. She tells you to speak to Farkas, who arrives at the end of this conversation.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Follow Farkas to your quarters

Quest Conclusion

Farkas seems pleasant enough; in fact, he's glad of the company. He takes you down the main hall of the Living Quarters, to the dormitory you'll be sharing. You can pick any bed that isn't being slept in. The quest concludes.

Postquest Activities

Farkas ends the conversation, asking whether you might help with a problem they are having. You may speak to him or ignore him and seek out employment from another Companion: And so begins your Faction Radiant Quests (consult the quest name that appears after agreeing to the task, and cross-reference it with the Radiant Quest in this chapter). You'll need to complete at least one of these before Companions Quest: Proving Honor begins.

Farkas is usually within Jorrvaskr and is ready to retrieve the fragment when you are. You may speak also to Farkas about personal matters if you wish.

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Retrieve the fragment
- ◆ TARGET: Fragment of Ysgramor's Blade, inside Dustman's Cairn

◆ Ysgramor's Blessing

After a trek through the wilderness with Farkas, navigate northwest of Whiterun and up to Dustman's Cairn. Drop below the standing stones. Arm yourself and begin to navigate through these catacombs, and listen for Farkas's advice. Take any treasure as you descend past the loose burial stones. Continue deeper into a ceremonial hub chamber with multiple archways and a couple of thrones.

The way forward is blocked. The only area of interest is an archway with a raised portcullis, which leads to a small alcove with a lever. Activate it, and the portcullis drops, trapping you inside but raising the portcullis of a nearby archway. Farkas looks in and tells you he'll find the release, but as he does, he is surrounded by the members of the Silver Hand! Severely outnumbered, Farkas backs up before letting out a guttural growl and transforming into a massive werewolf that slaughters the Silver Hand where they cower! After freeing you, speak to Farkas, who explains his metamorphosis (known colloquially as his Beast Form) is a blessing bestowed upon some of the Companions.

Press on through the archway Farkas just opened. You face multiple Draugr and Silver Hand as you descend into this elongated crypt. Beware of occasional dart traps (watch for pressure stones beneath your feet that trigger them), and continue the slaughtering up until you reach the large crypt chamber with a locked iron door at the eastern end. Check the burial urns nearby for a key that opens this door.

► Dustman's Cairn Key

Quickly deal with the Skeever problem once you're through the door, passing interconnecting chambers and stone passageways. A battle against a Giant Frostbite Spider occurs soon afterward. Continue through another bank of crypts, until you reach the major tomb room, where a Draugr Wight is buried. Strange chanting draws you to the area behind the raised tomb; this is a Word Wall, and a Word of Power is drummed into your subconscious! With the chant fresh in your memory, inspect the raised tomb and take the fragment lying on top of it (along with any other spoils you wish).

► Word of Power: Fire Breath ► Fragment of Ysgramor's Blade

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Jorrvaskr
- ◆ TARGET: Jorrvaskr, in Whiterun

If you check your map (or the map provided in the Atlas), you'll spot an exit corridor off to the side of this tomb room, behind the raised stone alcove. Alas, when you attempt to breach it, the burial stones will not shift, but the Draugr begin to attack. Drop into the main chamber, where a protracted battle with at least 20 Draugr (including a dreaded high-ranking Draugr that clambers out of the raised tomb) takes place. Keep moving, retreat to safety if you need to, and don't leave Farkas to fend for himself! A final Draugr crashes through the burial stone, allowing access up a tight side tunnel. At the tunnel's end is a lever, which opens a secret rock door leading back to the cairn's entrance.

Quest Conclusion: Brotherhood

From here, it is a simple matter of returning to Jorrvaskr and seeking out Skjor, who gladly takes the fragment of Ysgramor's Blade from you. Vilkas is also waiting, having heard how well you did as a Shield-Sibling. The Companions are assembled in the rear courtyard. They are concluding a circle of judgment, and Kodlak informs you that you are now a member of the Companions. You are welcomed into the fold, but you still need to prove yourself.

INTERSECTING QUESTS: The Companions Quest: Proving Honor, The Companions Radiant Quests

LOCATIONS: Gallows Rock, Whiterun, Jorrvaskr, Skyforge, Underforge

CHARACTERS: Aela the Huntress, Farkas, Skjor, Werewolf

ENEMIES: Krev the Skinner, Silver Hand, Skeevers

◆ OBJECTIVES: Talk to Skjor, Meet with Skjor at night, Enter the Underforge, Participate in the blood ritual, Talk to Aela, Kill the werewolf hunters, Talk to Aela

Forging the Lycanthrope

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Skjor

After completing the Companions Quest: Proving Honor, Skjor has spent enough time judging your worthiness to become one of the Companions. When you find Skjor, he says he has something a little your next task and requests you meet him at the entrance to the Underforge after nightfall.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Meet with Skjor at night

◆ OBJECTIVE: Enter the Underforge

◆ TARGET: Underforge, in Whiterun

Once the sun has set (any time between 06:00 p.m. and 08:00 a.m.), head around the left (north) side of Jorrvaskr building and meet with Skjor by a massive protrusion of stone, below the Skyforge.

Skjor explains this is the most ancient part of Whiterun and that the Underforge taps a vein of magic older than men or elves. Skjor beckons for you to open the rock wall that shifts apart, allowing entrance into the Underforge.

Skjor enters the Underforge with you. Aela the Huntress has taken a lupine form and is waiting around the Sacred Font. Skjor explains the ceremony you will undertake is to be done in secret, as Kodlak is busy trying to throw away the gift the Companions have been granted; he thinks it a curse rather than a blessing. Now join in the shared blood of the wolf and activate the Sacred Font.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Participate in the blood ritual

You experience a tremendous change in your body structure. Your vision is much improved. Your speed is like that of the wolf. Your social standing with the locals is possibly not worth testing out at the moment. Soon, your eyes close and everything turns to black.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Aela

◆ TARGET: Aela the Huntress, on the moors outside Gallows Rock

TIP As a werewolf, any crime you commit will not count against you, as your identity is not known. However, everyone (except for the Companions) is hostile and will fight or flee from you. If you kill anyone, they remain dead (so don't slay a merchant accidentally!). You can howl and sprint places on all fours for an even quicker dash. You may turn into a werewolf once per day.

Clawing the Silver Hand

You wake up on the moors, clad in little more than your modesty. Aela the Huntress is with you and explains that your transformation was not easy but successful. To celebrate becoming part of the Companions, you are to slaughter a pack of werewolf hunters known as the Silver Hand, who are camped nearby. But first, ask Aela any questions about your "condition" that you wish. Then place your armor and clothing back on, and arm up for the assault.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Kill the werewolf hunters

◆ TARGET: Silver Hand clan, in Gallows Rock

Charge or prowl around the exterior battlements of the Gallows Rock fortification before slaying the two Silver Hand guarding the entrance. Then step inside. Judging by the spear bars on the doorway, the Silver

Hand must have locked the place down once Skjor charged in. Activate the lever and head down the stairs. Make sure Aela accompanies you, as she's helpful in combat as a Shield-Sibling. Continue through this complex of stone corridors, removing Skeevers and Silver Hand as you go.

TIP Remember you can use your Beast Form during this quest. Access it via your Magic menu.

Many of your brethren lie dead in the cells; release any who are alive so they can savage their captors. Then push down the stairs, into a stone hall with skinned pelt hangings. Battle through and down the stairs to the circular chamber with the columns. This is the lair of Krev the Skinner, the Silver Hand leader in these parts. He is flanked by two lackeys. Muster your combat potential and savagely dispatch them all. Then ransack the chamber (and optionally, the entire area) for loot.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Aela

Quest Conclusion

There are no rewards here, only sadness. Alas, Aela has seen the body of Skjor. He is dead; he should not have come here without a Shield-Brother. Skjor will be avenged. The plot to kill all of those responsible for this outrage begins now!

BLOOD'S HONOR

PREREQUISITES: Complete the Companions Quest: The Silver Hand, Complete two Companions Radiant Quests

MAJOR SPOILERS

INTERSECTING QUESTS: The Companions Quest: The Silver Hand, The Companions Quest: Purity of Revenge, The Companions Radiant Quests

LOCATIONS: Glenmoril Coven, Whiterun, Jorrvaskr, Jorrvaskr Living Quarters

CHARACTERS: Aela the Huntress, Kodlak Whitemane, Vilkas

ENEMIES: Frostbite Spider, Glenmoril Witch, Silver Hand, Skeever

◆ OBJECTIVES: Collect a Glenmoril Witch's head, (Optional) Wipe out the Glenmoril Witches, Return to Kodlak

Hircine's Curse

After completing the Companions Quest: Proving Honor and then tending to other business, visit Kodlak, who is usually down in his Living Quarters in Jorrvaskr. Sit next to him and begin to talk. After telling him what you've been up to, Kodlak asks if you've heard the story of how the Companions became werewolves. The Order of the Companions is almost 5,000 years old, but the beastblood has only "troubled" them for a few hundred. One of Kodlak's predecessors made a bargain with the witches of Glenmoril Coven; if the Companions were to hunt in the name of their lord, Hircine, they would be granted great power. But there was deception!

Although in wolf form the Companions are powerful, the disease of lycanthropy seeps into the spirit, and upon death, werewolves are claimed by Hircine for his Hunting Grounds. For some, the eternal chase and capture is a boon, but for a true Nord like Kodlak, it is a curse, for he wishes Sovngarde to be his spirit home. Rather than resigning himself to a wolf's death, Kodlak has spent his twilight years trying to find a cure. The answer lies in the same magic that the witches used to ensnare the Companions. You are to go to their coven and strike down all witches. Return with their heads—the seat of their abilities.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Collect a Glenmoril Witch's head

◆ OBJECTIVE: (Optional) Wipe out the Glenmoril Witches

◆ TARGET: Glenmoril Witch, in Glenmoril Coven

Trek across the tundra plains and southwest, into the mountains, keeping below the snow line. The trappings of witchcraft hang from the gnarled trees at the Coven's entrance.

Postquest Activities

You must now complete two additional Radiant Quests for Aela (and her only) to begin The Companions Quest: Blood's Honor.

Enter the Coven, which is formed around a central hub cavern, where a Glenmoril Witch awaits. Strike her with sneak, ranged, or melee attacks. Beware of her frost spells and her familiar. Continue combat until one of you falls—be sure it's the crone! Then inspect the withered corpse and collect the head (as well as any Hagraven Feathers you may need for crafting).

➤ Glenmoril Witch Head

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Kodlak

At this point, you are prompted to return to Kodlak. Before you return (which is a critical part of this quest), you can also hunt down the four other Glenmoril Witches who inhabit this coven.

◆ TIP If you're having trouble locating any of the witches' chambers, carefully inspect the hub chamber (where the first witch was), as some connecting tunnels can be hard to spot.

Journey back to Whiterun, and head toward Jorrvaskr. Judging from the onlookers, Aela's drawn weapon, and the slaughtered Silver Hand at her feet, the longhouse was the scene of a vicious Silver Hand attack while you were away. Enter Jorrvaskr and speak with Vilkas. He has some sorrowful news; Kodlak was killed during the fighting.

Quest Conclusion

The Silver Hand made off with all the fragments of Wuuthrad that you had collected. Vilkas vows that you and he will bring the battle to their chief camp. Kodlak will be avenged.

Postquest Activities

The Companions Quest: Purity of Revenge begins immediately. There are now no Radiant Quests available, due to the recent Silver Hand attack. Although you may think the Witch Heads aren't of use, they become important during Companions Quest: Glory of the Dead and afterward.

PREREQUISITES: Complete the Companions Quest: Blood's Honor

MINOR SPOILERS

INTERSECTING QUESTS: The Companions Quest: Blood's Honor, The Companions Quest: Glory of the Dead, The Companions Radiant Quests

LOCATIONS: Driftshade Refuge, Driftshade Cellar, Whiterun, Jorrvaskr

CHARACTERS: Vilkas, Werewolf

ENEMIES: Silver Hand

◆ OBJECTIVES: Retrieve the fragments of Wuuthrad, (Optional) Wipe out the Silver Hand, Return to Jorrvaskr

Fight your way past the stacked wood and barrels, watching for the pressure plate lest you receive a swinging gate trap in the face—a fate you can attempt for any foes if you wish. Venture farther into the cellar, and split open the Silver Hand guarding a large distillery tank of mead. Exit via a hole in the stone wall and into a snow tunnel. You appear in a small cavern complete with holding cells. Release any werewolves still alive (they are locals afflicted with lycanthropy, rather than Companions). The snow tunnel connects back into the cellar.

Severing the Silver Hand

◆ OBJECTIVE: Retrieve the fragments of Wuuthrad

◆ OBJECTIVE: (Optional) Wipe out the Silver Hand

◆ TARGET: Wuuthrad fragments, inside Driftshade Refuge

Vilkas wishes to immediately depart for the Silver Hand stronghold of Driftshade Refuge and accompanies you as your Shield-Brother. Purchase any equipment if necessary, and then journey north into the Mountains of Winterhold, to the southeast of Dawnstar. Combat begins immediately. Sneaking is inadvisable for a Companion, especially one with an optional objective to fulfill and a recently slain advisor. Dispatch the foes guarding the entrance to the Refuge. Kill the one on the roof with ranged weapons, or sneak up the steps to the rear of the entrance.

Pass the remains of a werewolf and shred the foes in the torture room. Enter the remains of the cellar's grand hall, now full of collapsed masonry. After more Silver Hand slaughtering, head south, up the steps and back into the refuge area. Enter the small dungeon room, then turn left and bound up the stairs. The remaining Silver Hand are in this chamber. Kill them all. Your optional objective should complete at this point. Then inspect the table on the elevated dining area, where all the fragments of Ysgamor's Blade can be found...again. Take them before resting for a moment with Vilkas, who seems to have finally realized your prowess as a fighter.

► Fragments of Wuuthrad

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Jorrvaskr

Quest Conclusion

Head south out of Driftshade Refuge, back outside, and then to Whiterun and your longhouse home. As you near Jorrvaskr, Vilkas remarks that your brethren should have finished preparing the funeral of Kodlak by now.

Postquest Activities

The Companions Quest: Glory of the Dead begins immediately. There are now no Radiant Quests available, due to the preparations for Kodlak's departure.

Descend the stone-stepped corridor and into a lower shrine room, with moss-covered pillars and Silver Hand to cut down with speed and ferociousness. Make a systematic sweep of every chamber via the connecting corridors, culling foes as you go. Leave no one alive, lest you mock the death of the beloved Kodlak! Eventually, you reach a chamber with vertical spears blocking an entrance. Activate the lever just to the right of the spears, and they retract, allowing you into Driftshade Cellar.

PREREQUISITES: Complete the Companions Quest: Purity of Revenge

MAJOR SPOILERS

INTERSECTING QUESTS: The Companions Quest: Purity of Revenge, The Companions Radiant Quests

LOCATIONS: Whiterun, Jorrvaskr, Jorrvaskr Living Quarters, Skyforge, Underforge, Ysgramor's Tomb

CHARACTERS: Aela the Huntress, Danica Pure-Spring, Eorlund Gray-Mane, Farkas, Jarl of Whiterun, Kodlak Whitmane, Vilkas

ENEMIES: Companion Ghost, Frostbite Spider, Kodlak's Wolf Spirit, Skeever

- ◆ OBJECTIVES: Attend Kodlak's funeral, Retrieve Kodlak's fragment, Give the final fragment to Eorlund, Meet the Circle, Go to Ysgramor's Tomb with the Circle, Return Wuuthrad to Ysgramor, Get to the burial chamber, Speak to Kodlak, Put witch head into fire, Defeat the wolf spirit, Speak to Kodlak

Enter Jorrvaskr and descend into the Living Quarters. Head north, past the chair where you and Kodlak sat and talked. His bedroom is to the right (east). Check the bedside table and grab the two items within. One is the fragment Eorlund mentioned, and the other is Kodlak's Journal. You may optionally read it. Kodlak's wishes for your role within the Companions are detailed in it.

- Fragment of Ysgramor's Blade
- Kodlak's Journal

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Give the final fragment to Eorlund

Return to Eorlund, who is usually at the Skyforge, and hand over the fragment. He thanks you and says the Companions are waiting for you inside the Underforge.

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Meet the Circle

- ◆ TARGET: Underforge, in Whiterun

Out of the Strong Comes Forth Steel

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Attend Kodlak's funeral

- ◆ TARGET: Skyforge, north of Jorrvaskr, in Whiterun

Upon your return to Jorrvaskr, there is no one inside the building; they are all at the Skyforge, where Eorlund has prepared the pyre for Kodlak's funeral. The Companions are there, along with some of Whiterun's population, including the Jarl and the priestess Danica Pure-Spring. Aela steps forward to join Eorlund and Vilkas in a simple, strong-hearted eulogy. Aela lights the pyre, and Kodlak's body is set ablaze. With his spirit departed, she requests that the members of the Circle should withdraw to the Underforge to grieve together. Before you leave with them, Eorlund asks whether you have the Fragments of Wuuthrad; he needs to prepare them for mounting back in Jorrvaskr. There is a final piece of the Wuuthrad that Kodlak always kept close. Eorlund requests that you go to Kodlak's chambers and bring the piece back for him.

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Retrieve Kodlak's fragment

- ◆ TARGET: Living Quarters, in Jorrvaskr in Whiterun

Open the loose rock wall below the Skyforge and enter the place where you were once baptized into the moon-born. Vilkas and Aela are having a heated discussion over Kodlak's final wishes. Although Aela is at one with her Beast Form, Vilkas knows that Kodlak wished to meet Ysgramor and know the glories of Sovngarde and the Hall of Valor. The curse of lycanthropy took that from him. Aela relents, understanding that Kodlak's wishes are to be respected.

Vilkas then tells you of the Tomb of Ysgramor, where the souls of Harbingers past heed the call of northern steel. But the tomb cannot be entered because Ysgramor's Blade is in pieces. Eorlund informs them that tools are meant to be broken...and repaired! This is the first time that all pieces of the Blade have been returned together, and the flames of Kodlak fuel the rebirth of Wuuthrad! Eorlund hands you the blade, which is now in one piece, and the Circle of Companions set off to enter the tomb and help cast Kodlak off into the Nordic realm of the afterlife.

- Wuuthrad

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Go to Ysgramor's Tomb with the Circle

- ◆ TARGET: Entrance to Ysgramor's Tomb

TIP Wuuthrad the Elf-Slayer is a powerful two-handed weapon that does 20% more damage to elfen foes. It is a suitable reward for someone who has brought honor to the Companions.

◆ Taming the Wolf

Northwest of Winterhold, in the ice fields of the Sea of Ghosts, lies the Nordic cairn indicating the entrance to Ysgramor's Tomb. Climb over the lip of the cairn and open the iron door that leads into the tomb interior. Your Shield-

Siblings are already inspecting the weaponless statue at the tomb's entrance plinth. Vilkas says this is the resting place of Ysgramor and his most trusted generals, and you should be cautious. Then Vilkas reveals that he won't be accompanying you on this final mission; his mind is too fogged and his heart grieved. He then instructs you to grant Ysgramor's statue its rightful blade.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return Wuuthrad to Ysgramor

Approach the statue of Ysgramor and place the Wuuthrad in the statue's grip. The tomb entrance behind (north of) the statue slides open. You, Farkas, and Aela the Huntress will now meet Ysgramor's guardians and fight your way to the resting place of Ysgramor.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Get to the burial chamber

Brush aside the cobwebs and investigate the tunnel beyond, which turns west and ends at a double door with an alcove on either side. From each alcove, a Companion Ghost appears, ready to test your mettle. Slay them as if they were enemies; you are proving yourself to them in battle, and there is no greater honor. Open the double doors and enter the entrance hall, where three more ghosts appear to thwart you. Tackle them, checking on your Shield-Siblings in case they need your support.

Head south, down another level, and into the hall of crypts. Return several more Companion Ghosts to Sovngarde as they emerge from their vertical tombs, then head south, hacking at the entrance filled with cobwebs. Farkas parts company with you at this point. The cobwebs lead to two connected chambers filled with Frostbite Spiders (expect at least one to be Giant). Dispatch them all before activating the chain by the portcullis to the south. Venture into the main tomb. At least six more Companion Ghosts appear to stop you between here and the corridor and the steps up to an iron door.

Open the door to reach a long hall with a pedestal at its far end. Atop the pedestal is a handle. Pull it to open the portcullis in the sunken corridor on your left (north). Head down into a giant ceremonial chamber, with the skull of a mammoth dominating the central embalming table. At least four more Companion Ghosts appear. Stick your bladed weapon into their ethereal forms. When the fight is over, you may climb the final steps, open the double doors, and enter Ysgramor's burial chamber.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Kodlak

◆ And So Slain the Beast Inside

Stride over to meet the spirit of Kodlak, who (along with his fellow Harbingers from history) have been warming themselves in this chamber and trying to evade Hircine. Although you can see only Kodlak's spirit, he assures you his predecessors are with you, in this most sacred of chambers. Tell Kodlak that Vilkas mentioned a cure was still possible, and Kodlak instructs you to take one of the witches' heads and throw it into the blue fire. It will release their magic—for him at least.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Put witch head into fire

◆ OBJECTIVE: Defeat the wolf spirit

Approach the Flame of the Harbinger and drop a witch's head into it. The moment the blue flames begin to devour the head and the witch's magical grip loosens, Kodlak's Wolf Spirit appears. You must destroy it in combat.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Kodlak

Quest Conclusion

Return to Kodlak's spirit and tell him you killed his beast spirit. He thanks you for this gift, one tainted by sadness that the other Harbingers remain trapped by Hircine. Perhaps a battle for their souls could be waged from Sovngarde. For today, however, you must triumph in your victory and lead the Companions to further glory!

Postquest Activities

Locate any treasure chests you wish to plunder. Pull the chain and exit via the raised area on the chamber's eastern side. Head up the spiral stairs to a second chain that removes a section of rock wall. Return to the entrance chamber where Ysgramor's statue is standing. You may now return to Jorrvaskr at your leisure. Although your critical Companions Quests are over, there are now three additional Radiant Quests available (along with the initial ones). You enjoy the companionship of your Shield-Brothers and Sisters as you return, victorious, as Harbinger!

► Word of Power: Animal Allegiance

TIP You may wish to take Wuuthrad from Ysgramor's statue before you leave, and use this weapon.

TIP Forging Ahead: The Skyforge, burning with Kodlak's Spirit, can now forge a unique set of Nord Hero weapons if you have the skill to craft them.

NOTE Intimate Companionship: Farkas, Vilkas, Aela, Athis, Ria, Njada, and Torvar are all able to be married once Companions Quest: Glory of the Dead is over. Consult Temple Side Quest: The Bonds of Matrimony (page 423) for more details.

THE COMPANIONS RADIANT QUESTS

The following 13 Radiant Quests occur between (and after) the critical Companions Quests and typically offer you a random task to accomplish. These tasks are available in three different "waves," depending on how far you are in the critical Companions Quests. For a complete list of how to unlock each Radiant Quest, consult the Introduction to the Companions Quests, at the start of this chapter.

INITIAL WAVE: ANIMAL EXTERMINATION (I)

Quest giver: Aela

Speak to Aela and request some work. It seems that someone has a problem with a wild animal loose in their dwelling and has requested a Companion to help eradicate the menace. Aela orders you to locate the animal and kill it quickly.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Kill the [random animal]

◆ TARGET: Random animal, random location

Journey to the dwelling where the reported animal intrusion occurred. Draw your preferred weapon as you enter; the animal usually strikes once you're inside the premises. Cut down the animal, obtaining its pelt if you wish.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Aela

Quest Conclusion

Return to Jorrvaskr, and seek out Aela. Inform her of the quick and noble death you've given the creature. You're given some coin for your troubles.

► Gold pieces (leveled)

Postquest Activities

You may now speak to another Companion and begin another Radiant Quest (or access the critical Companions Quest if you haven't already).

INITIAL WAVE: ANIMAL EXTERMINATION (II)

Quest giver: Aela

Speak to Aela and request some work. It seems that there is an animal den located close to a group of friends of the Companions, and periodically, the animals attack them. Aela orders you to eradicate the threat; you are to find all the animals within the den and dispatch them.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Clear out the [random animal den]

◆ TARGET: Random animal den, random location

Trek to the animal den indicated on your world map, and draw your weapons. Investigate all areas of this location. Whenever you encounter an animal, kill it. Continue with your animal slaughter (obtaining pelts if you wish, and if applicable) until the quest updates.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Aela

Quest Conclusion

Return to Jorrvaskr and seek out Aela. Inform her that you've dealt with the animals within the den. You're given some coin for your troubles.

► Gold pieces (leveled)

Postquest Activities

You may now speak to another Companion and begin another Radiant Quest (or access the critical Companions Quest if you haven't already).

INITIAL WAVE: HIRED MUSCLE

Quest giver: Farkas

Tell Farkas that you're looking for work. As it happens, he has received a letter requesting some "muscle." Farkas doesn't know what the fight is about, and it isn't the Companions' business anyway, but he needs you to head to the place of the altercation and scare the ruffian into submission. This is to be a roughing up, not a killing!

◆ OBJECTIVE: Intimidate a [random troublemaker] in a [random location]

◆ TARGET: Random target, random location

(Brawl) Journey to the location where the troublemaker is causing a fuss. Journey to the location where the troublemaker is causing a fuss. Step up to the annoyance, and explain that you're here to resolve a dispute. Then pummel them in a brawl until they collapse to the ground. Do not kill them, as this reduces your reward.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Farkas

Quest Conclusion

Return to Jorrvaskr and seek out Farkas. Inform him of your success at pummeling some sense into the troublemaker. You're given some coin for your troubles.

➤ Gold pieces (leveled)

Postquest Activities

You may now speak to another Companion and begin another Radiant Quest (or access the critical Companions Quest if you haven't already).

INITIAL WAVE: TROUBLE IN SKYRIM

Quest giver: Farkas

Tell Farkas you're looking for work. Fortunately, he has a job that requires your immediate attention. Farkas has received word that a group of aggressors are causing a disturbance and must be dealt with using your combat mettle. He needs you to journey to the place where the problem has arisen and slay those responsible. This is to be a killing; take no prisoners!

◆ OBJECTIVE: Kill the leader of a [random location]

◆ TARGET: Random target, random location

Travel to the place indicated on your world map where a group of enemies is causing problems for one of the Companions' clients. Locate the leader. Proceed to slay this enemy as swiftly as possible.

You can dispatch anyone who attempts to stop you, although you need kill only the leader for this quest to complete. This is a simple slaying mission.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Farkas

Quest Conclusion

Return to Jorrvaskr and seek out Farkas. Inform him of your success at massacring those who sought to upset the Companions' clients. You're given some coin for your heroics.

➤ Gold pieces (leveled)

Postquest Activities

You may now speak to another Companion and begin another Radiant Quest (or access the critical Companions Quest if you haven't already).

INITIAL WAVE: FAMILY HEIRLOOM

Quest giver: Skjor

Quest giver: Vilkas

Speak with either Skjor or Vilkas, and they inform you that they have work that involves locating and retrieving a valuable family heirloom, lost to a high-ranking family or other well-connected faction that the Companions are friendly with. You are to find the heirloom, said to be hidden somewhere in a Primary Location in Skyrim, and bring it back to the quest giver.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Retrieve the [valuable heirloom] from a [random location]

◆ TARGET: Random item, random location

Journey to the random location, and utilize your sneaking or combat abilities on any entity blocking your path, both before and after you enter the interior of the place, which is usually a castle, keep, or dungeon.

Creep or carve your way to the location flagged on your local map, and pry the item away from the enemies; it is usually hidden in a chest. Finding the item is your only task; no bloodshed need occur, although it is encouraged!

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Skjor or Vilkas

Quest Conclusion

Return to Jorrvaskr, and seek out Skjor or Vilkas to inform him that you've located the heirloom. Hand it over. You're given gold pieces for your time.

➤ Gold pieces (leveled)

Postquest Activities

You may now speak to another Companion and begin another Radiant Quest (or access the critical Companions Quest if you haven't already).

INITIAL WAVE: ESCAPED CRIMINAL

Quest giver: Skjor

Quest giver: Vilkas

Speak with either Skjor or Vilkas, and he informs you that a wanted fugitive is fleeing from authorities, who are able to pay for the killing of the criminal. You are to locate this ne'er-do-well, face him in combat, and make sure he dies.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Kill the [random criminal]

◆ TARGET: Random criminal, random location

Set off to the location indicated on your world map, with the express intention of slaying this criminal. As the troublemaker may be flanked by foes who normally reside in this location, prepare for attacks throughout the criminal's hideout. When you finally reach the criminal in question, there's no pleading and no stalling, just a quick and justified death.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Skjor or Vilkas

Quest Conclusion

Return to Jorrvaskr and seek out Skjor or Vilkas. Inform him that the criminal has been brought to justice—Companion justice—and he is satisfied with your progress. You receive a cut of the reward.

► Gold pieces (leveled)

Postquest Activities

You may now speak to another Companion and begin another Radiant Quest (or access the critical Companions Quest if you haven't already).

INITIAL WAVE: RESCUE MISSION

Quest giver: Skjor Quest giver: Vilkas

Speak with either Skjor or Vilkas, and he lets you know that a member of an important family or organization with ties to the Companions has been kidnapped. Those responsible have taken the victim to a hiding place. You are to find the victim and return him to the location from which they were kidnapped. Obviously, the victim's health is of paramount importance.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Rescue a [random victim] from a [random location]

◆ TARGET: Random victim, random location

Journey to the location where the enemies took the victim. Begin to battle your way toward the victim's location. The target is usually close to any enemy leader or imprisoned in a cell or a cage. Unlock them if necessary, using lockpick, searching any nearby foes you've slain for a key, or finding a lever to release the victim from their prison.

With the victim found and released, they become a Follower, and you must emerge from your current location with them in tow. Once you reach the surface, having protected the target throughout the rest of the escape, Fast-Travel to the safe location indicated or the nearest already-discovered location and walk the rest of the way, defending the victim from any further attacks.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Skjor or Vilkas

Quest Conclusion

Return to Jorrvaskr and seek out Skjor or Vilkas to inform him you recovered the kidnapping victim alive and chaperoned them back to a safe place. Your quest-giver is pleased with this outcome, and you receive some of the reward.

SECOND WAVE: STRIKING THE HEART

Quest giver: Aela the Huntress

Speak with Aela and ask what her targets are. She mentions a group of Silver Hand, holed up in a fortification. You're to assault this location and slaughter the Silver Hand leader inside.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Assassinate the Silver Hand leader

◆ TARGET: Silver Hand leader, [random location]

Journey to the settlement Aela has indicated and begin a systematic slaughter of the Silver Hand foes within, along with any indigenous foes that attack. This battle culminates in a confrontation with the Silver Hand lieutenant.

Cut the fiend down with a final offensive flourish. The location of the Silver Hand leader is important; you may not need to scour the entire fortification to find him. As always, utilize your local map to learn where the leader is holed up and to learn any shortcuts to his location. But it is just as satisfying to plow through the leader's troops first!

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Aela

Quest Conclusion

With the blood of the Silver Hand leader still coating your melee weapon, head back to Jorrvaskr, inside Whiterun, and let Aela know of your victory. You receive no reward; just your vengeance satiated.

Postquest Activities

If this was your first Second Wave quest, Aela will present your next target. If you have now completed two of these quests, Companions Quest: Blood's Honor will begin.

SECOND WAVE: STEALING PLANS

Quest giver: Aela the Huntress

Speak with Aela and ask whether she has additional work for you. She's heard rumors of a Silver Hand camp, with a set of plans somewhere inside that could contain information helpful to the Companions; for example, it could enable a Silver Hand lieutenant to be tracked and killed. You're tasked with obtaining the plans.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Steal the plans from a [random Silver Hand camp]

Locate the Silver Hand camp specified by Aela (these are usually keeps, caves, or other fortifications known to house bandits), and cut a swathe through the defending enemies inside (or attempt a sneaky infiltration). The plans are usually resting on or under a table or other furniture, rather than inside a chest. Look carefully for the Stratagem, then depart with it.

➤ Silver Hand Stratagem

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Aela

◆ TARGET: Aela the Huntress, Jorrvaskr, Whiterun

Quest Conclusion

Return to Jorrvaskr, inside Whiterun, and inform Aela that you've been successful. Aside from furthering this quest line and a verbal congratulations from Aela, there are no rewards.

Postquest Activities

If this was your first Second Wave quest, Aela will present your next target. If you have now completed two of these quests, Companions Quest: Blood's Honor will begin.

SECOND WAVE: RETRIEVAL

Quest giver: Aela the Huntress

Speak with Aela and ask what her targets are. She mentions a fragment of the Wuuthrad, hidden somewhere in Skyrim.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Retrieve the fragment of Wuuthrad

◆ TARGET: Fragment of Ysgramor's Blade, in a [random location]

Journey to the location Aela has indicated, and slay the Silver Hand forces inside, along with any foes lurking at this locale. The fragments of the blade are usually inside a treasure chest or on a piece of furniture. It is almost always in the same chamber where you found the leader of the Silver Hand. Retrieve the fragments immediately.

➤ Fragment of Ysgramor's Blade

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Aela

◆ TARGET: Aela the Huntress, Jorrvaskr, Whiterun

Quest Conclusion

With the Fragment of Ysgramor's Blade in your possession, journey back to Jorrvaskr, inside Whiterun, and inform Aela that you've been successful. Aside from furthering this quest line and receiving a verbal congratulations from Aela, there are no rewards.

Postquest Activities

If this was your first Second Wave quest, Aela will present your next target. If you have now completed two of these quests, Companions Quest: Blood's Honor will begin.

FINAL WAVE: TOTEMS OF HIRCINE

Quest giver: Aela the Huntress

Speak with Aela and ask what additional work there is to achieve. She mentions a powerful object – a Totem of Hircine – that could channel the power of the Companions' Beast Forms in a new direction. Aela instructs you to head to a particular location to find it.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Retrieve the Totem of Hircine

◆ TARGET: Totem of Hircine, in a [random location]

Journey to the location Aela has indicated (with Aela as your Shield-Sister), and slay the foes lurking around. The Totem is located inside a treasure chest or on a piece of furniture in the chamber farthest away from the location's entrance. Battle to this point and take the Totem.

➤ Totem of Hircine

◆ OBJECTIVE: Take the Totem to the Underforge

◆ TARGET: Underforge, Whiterun

Quest Conclusion

With the Totem of Hircine in your possession, journey back to Jorrvaskr, inside Whiterun, and head to the Underforge. Place the Totem on this stand. The Totem allows you to change your Werewolf Power. Repeat this quest for more Totems.

- Totem of the Hunt (Detect Life)
- Totem of Brotherhood (Summon Spirit Wolves)

Postquest Activities

You may now speak to another Companion and begin another Radiant Quest.

FINAL WAVE: PURITY

Quest giver: Farkas Quest giver: Vilkas

Talk to Farkas or Vilkas. They are worried that when they pass from this realm, they, too, will share the same fate that befell Kodlak—trapped in a purgatory and desperately avoiding Hircine's Hunting Grounds. The quest giver wants the curse of lycanthropy to be purged from his spirit and asks for your help in acquiring the necessary ingredients to make this possible.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Collect a Glenmoril Witch Head

◆ TARGET: Glenmoril Witch Head, Glenmoril Coven

There are two options at this point: If you have already culled the Glenmoril Coven of all five witches, you should have a spare Witch Head in your inventory. If you don't, you should journey to the Glenmoril Coven, sever another Witch Head, and return to Farkas's or Vilkas's location.

➤ Glenmoril Witch Head

◆ OBJECTIVE: Cleanse [the quest giver] of beastblood

Only one location has the necessary magic to thwart the power of Hircine, and that is Ysgamor's Tomb. Follow the route set out in the Companions Quest: Glory of the Dead (with the quest giver as your Shield-Brother) until you reach the chamber with the Flame of the Harbinger.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Kill [the quest giver's] wolf spirit

Quest Conclusion

Place one of the Witch Heads into the flickering blue flame, and then defeat the wolf spirit that leaves the body. Once this combat is over, Farkas or Vilkas is effectively "cured" of lycanthropy. You can also drop a head into the flames and cure yourself. But be warned: Once cured, you lose your Beast Form ability forever.

Postquest Activities

You may now speak to another Companion and begin another Radiant Quest.

FINAL WAVE: DRAGON SEEKERS

Quest giver: Farkas Quest giver: Vilkas

Either Farkas or Vilkas tells you that a dragon is terrorizing a nearby Hold. The exact details are scarce, but this would be a fine and victorious combat victory and would help keep the denizens of Skyrim safe. You are given instructions on where this dragon's lair may be.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Kill the dragon at [a random dragon's lair]

Walk the path to the dragon's location (with the quest giver as your Shield-Brother), and begin combat with this monstrous beast. Depending on how far through the Main Quest you are, the Shouts you have learned can very much help in this epic confrontation. Defeat the dragon and claim its soul for your own.

TIP If you require more information on how to defeat the dragon, consult the tactics listed in Main Quest: Dragon Rising or Main Quest: A Blade in the Dark. If you've learned the Dragonrend Shout (after completing Main Quest: Alduin's Bane), fighting with melee weapons suddenly becomes a whole lot easier.

➤ Dragon Soul

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to [the quest giver]

Quest Conclusion

Farkas or Vilkas are impressed by your dragon-slaying abilities. You are truly the Harbinger of the Companions!

THE COLLEGE OF WINTERHOLD QUESTS

OVERVIEW

Optimal Quest Start

The College of Winterhold Quests begin when you arrive at the College for the first time. They give you access to trainers and vendors that considerably increase your magical abilities and skills. You can join the College whenever you like, although Magic-focused characters may want to join sooner rather than later to gain access to this ready source of spells. Most other characters will come to the College much later, as part of Main Quest: Elder Knowledge.

NOTE Cross-Referencing: Do you want to see maps and learn more about the traps, non-quest-related items, collectibles, crafting areas, and other important rooms of note in every location during these quests? Then cross-reference the location you travel to with the information on that location contained in this guide's Atlas.

Sanctuary: College of Winterhold

The College of Winterhold, perched on its pillar of rock.

Inside the College, where mages perfect their magic.

The threadbare Hold City of Winterhold has seen most of its population driven away. The center of life in these parts nowadays is the College of Winterhold. Once a prominent, influential location in Skyrim, Winterhold has fallen on hard times but is still a haven for mages in Skyrim, a safe refuge from distrustful Nords. Largely self-sufficient, the College of Winterhold is quite content to be isolated from the rest of the province, although a more peaceful coexistence with the outside world is always preferred.

The College of Winterhold is situated on a cliff overlooking the Sea of Ghosts. Over the years, the cliff has fallen into the sea, taking nearly all of the original city with it. Only a few buildings remain, though somehow the College of Winterhold has largely been untouched by the damage. It now resides on a free-standing crag of rock and ice. Inside, the College is split into three distinctive towers: Halls of Countenance and Attainment where apprentices and senior mages reside; the Hall of the Elements, where the Arch-Mage resides, gatherings are held, and the Arcanaeum (the College's great library) is kept. Below the College lies the Midden, a warren of icy tunnels where the remnants of long-forgotten experiments reside.

Important Characters

Arch-Mage: Savos Aren

Savos has been the Arch-Mage of the College for a very long time and tried to assure the people that the College was not responsible for the Great Collapse. He took threats seriously after the White-Gold Concordat and helped secure the grounds of the College. Through it all, he's managed to maintain his good demeanor and his faith in humanity. He has little concern for public perception these days, believing that if the mages of the College keep to themselves, no one will bother them. As such, he has every intention of staying out of the Civil War and the Thalmor's rise to power.

Thalmor Advisor: Ancano

A Thalmor agent currently residing at the College of Winterhold, acting in an "advisory" position, Ancano's patronizing tone and haughtiness have made this High Elf into a hated figure. Feeling he has no one to answer to, Ancano is using his time at the College to find out any secrets he can and relay them to his masters back at the Embassy in Haafingar. He isn't winning any popularity awards in the College.

Master-Wizard: Mirabelle Ervine

Mirabelle may be second-in-command, but she's the one who really runs the College. The day-to-day operations are under her jurisdiction, which doesn't make her popular, but she knows someone has to do the job. Mirabelle is frustrated that the College is seen as a black mark, that magic in general is shunned, and takes very seriously any allegations of wrongdoing leveled at the College or its members. She has no use for either the Psijics or the Thalmor—they're all just getting in the way and giving the College a bad reputation.

Wizard: Sergius Turrianus

Well aware of the contempt Nirya and Faralda have for one another, Sergius takes time from his duties as Enchanting instructor to instigate conflict between the two women, in the hopes that Faralda will turn to him for comfort. While he's sure this is going to backfire on him eventually, he's going to enjoy it while he can.

➤ Trainer (Enchanting: Expert): Sergius Turrianus

SKYRIM

QUESTS: THE COLLEGE OF WINTERHOLD QUESTS

PRIMA OFFICIAL GAME GUIDE

WWW.PRIMAGAMES.COM

Wizard: Drevis Neloren

Drevis is a strange duck. Quite versed in Illusion, he's well liked by the apprentices but has little presence outside his class. His colleagues barely seem to acknowledge him; he floats through the day leaving little mark on anything. If they were paying attention, one might question whether he's really there at all....Drevis has a habit of wandering into the Arcanaeum and talking Urag gro-Shub's ear off, largely because Urag can't get away.

- Vendor: Illusion spells
- Trainer (Illusion: Master): Drevis Neloren

Wizard: Faralda

Faralda has her eye on Mirabelle Ervine's position, a stepping stone on her way to being Arch-Mage. Recently she's noticed that Nirya seems to have her sights set on the same position, and the two have developed a bitter rivalry over it. Rumors of sabotaged experiments and undermined research provide plenty of gossip for the other mages. When upset over something Nirya has done, Faralda goes running to Sergius Turrianus, who is in fact playing up both sides of this conflict to get close to Faralda.

- Vendor: Destruction spells
- Trainer (Destruction: Expert): Faralda

Wizard: Phinis Gestor

Phinis has little concern for the affairs of mortals. He's a wizard who conjures creatures from the Beyond—what else matters? Phinis is also interested in Necromancy and takes solace in the notion that the College is one of the few places he can get away with honing his art without being stoned to death in the process. He regularly relies on Enthir to procure some of the more sensitive items his conjurations require, but only interacts socially with Arniel Gane, the one person in the College who doesn't seem nervous when speaking to him.

- Vendor: Conjuration spells
- Trainer (Conjuration: Expert): Phinis Gestor

Scholar: Arniel Gane

Arniel is a small, frail little man who's never been entirely comfortable in his own skin. He feels weak and helpless, and while turning to magic has alleviated some of that, he wants to take it a step further. His ultimate (and very secret) goal is to research dwarven artifacts and figure out why the civilization disappeared. To that end, he occasionally procures the services of Enthir for some controversial items.

Scholar: Colette Marence

Colette is the Restoration teacher at the College and is well aware that she's been labeled as a peace-loving star-gazing Spriggan-hugger. Having made repeated attempts to break out of that role and finding that everyone treated her even worse when she no longer fit the image they'd created for her, she's finally given in and accepted that no one will ever see her differently.

- Vendor: Restoration spells
- Trainer (Restoration: Expert): Colette Marence

Scholar: Enthir

Enthir is the "man who knows how to obtain materials" in the College. While the College has very flexible rules on what's acceptable research and what's not, there are some reagents and spell components that just can't be acquired through legal means. Enthir, working with Birna in Winterhold, is the elf who takes care of that. He also becomes a Fence in Winterhold during the Thieves Guild Quests.

- Fence (Thieves Guild)

Scholar: Nirya

Nirya is supremely confident of her abilities and is far more interested in jostling for a leadership position than improving her skills. As Faralda seems to be the only other mage to share these ambitions, she's decided to take her down. Sergius provides insight as to how to go about doing this, and while Nirya has a sense that he may be using her, she can't imagine what his motivation is and so she doesn't worry about it.

Wizard: Tolfdir

Tolfdir is old. Very old. And while it's easy for the others to write him off as a doddering old fool, he is actually one of the few real masters of Alteration magic. He loves his work, offering to give new apprentices their first taste of the College, and is always available to help if it's needed and if it doesn't involve too much physical activity. Despite his elderly nature, those with perceptive qualities know to treat him as the venerable mentor and advisor that his years have taught him to be.

- Vendor: Alteration spells
- Trainer (Alteration: Master): Tolfdir

Lorekeeper: Urag gro-Shub

Urag's never been a "normal" Orc, preferring books and spells to blades and war paint. He put on a good show for as long as he could, then quietly snuck off to the College of Winterhold when he had the chance. While he's very good at what he does and loves it, he's still somewhat conflicted by how contrary this is to what's perceived as typical Orc behavior. As such, he feels it necessary to attempt to maintain a gruff, serious exterior. He's actually developed a close relationship with Savos Aren and with Drevis Neloren (against his better judgment), largely because Drevis seems oblivious at Urag's attempts to drive him away.

- Vendor: Books

Apprentice: Brelyna Maryon

Brelyna comes from a line of Telvanni wizards, well known for their proficiency. However, she is struggling with magic and has opted to study at the College, out of sight of her friends and relatives. Her plan is to get over whatever problem she's having and then return to Solstheim to finish her studies—and do so as quickly as possible.

- Follower: Brelyna Maryon

Apprentice: J'Zargo

Encouraged by his peers to seek greater magical knowledge, he's traveled to Skyrim to learn what the Nords have to offer about magic. J'Zargo is not intimidated to be the only of his kind at the College; rather, he takes this as a sign that he's an exceptional mage. He believes himself superior to his fellow apprentices and thinks the only reason he hasn't already been made a scholar (or higher) is protocol.

- Follower: J'Zargo

Apprentice: Onmund

As a Nord, Onmund's natural magical ability was seriously frowned upon by his family. Coming from a difficult childhood as a result, he's happy to finally be somewhere where everyone is more like him. Unfortunately, no one seems quite as happy as he is, which he finds to be very puzzling. His frequent attempts to make friends and engage in social activities often fall flat, but this has not dampened his enthusiasm.

- Follower: Onmund

Augur of Dunlain

Formerly a mage from Dunlain in High Rock, Augur was working on some unapproved experiments in the Midden and wound up fused to the magical energies that flow through the College. Now incorporeal, he has sequestered himself in a locked room in the Midden but keeps tabs on everything going on in the College.

Psijic Monk: Quaranir

Quaranir is a member of the Psijic Order, a group that teaches a philosophy called the Elder Way, peaceful meditation to reach a higher state of consciousness and manipulation of the living world. These monks have been known to guide particularly adept mages, and Quaranir believes that his guidance is needed now.

Training and other Notes

In addition to a warm bed and like-minded brethren, some of the members of this College of mages are extremely talented in a particular skill. Speak to each of them and increase the chosen skill by a point, to a maximum of five points before you level up. If you have enough gold, you can complete this numerous times:

Followers and Marriage

Any of the three Apprentices—Brelyna, Onmund, and J'Zargo—can become Followers once you complete their Faction Radiant Quests. In addition, Onmund and Brelyna are candidates for marriage. Consult Side Quest: The Bonds of Matrimony for more details on the nuptials.

Magic Robes

Scour the College for a series of different-colored variations of College Robes; these are the finest premade enchanted robes you can obtain and are rarely found as loot. You can find them from merchants and randomly lying around in chests, wardrobes, or other containers.

Available Quests

There are 31 different quests available with the College of Winterhold. Eight of these are Critical Path Quests; 23 are Radiant Quests.

Critical Path Quests

Simply referred to as "quests," these are the main quests you attempt. All but the first quest have one or more prerequisites, as shown in the following table:

FIRST LESSONS

PREREQUISITES: None

INTERSECTING QUESTS: The College of Winterhold Quest: Under Saarthal, Main Quest: Elder Knowledge

LOCATIONS: College of Winterhold, Hall of Attainment, Hall of Countenance, Hall of the Elements, Winterhold

CHARACTERS: Brelyna Maryon, Faralda, J'Zargo, Mirabelle Ervine, Onmund, Tolfdir

ENEMIES: None

- ♦ OBJECTIVES: Visit the College of Winterhold, Cast a [chosen] spell, Report to Mirabelle Ervine, Tour the College of Winterhold, Listen to Tolfdir

At the near end of the bridge that links Winterhold to the College, a High Elf wizard guards the entrance. She stops you (and warns you to stop if you ignore her or try to gain entry into the sealed College without her approval). Although she has some complaints about the College (which you can ask her about), your real reason for being here is to enter the College. Ask if this is possible, and she asks why. Choose the answer that best suits you. She requires that you take a test to show you're at least possibly competent in the use of magic. You can:

(Persuasion) Attempt to gain entry without completing her unnecessary test.

Agree to take the test. When the test begins, Faralda requests you aim a spell at the seal on the ground near her.

A Cold to a Warm Reception

During your adventuring, you soon learn of a great college to the north, adjacent to the Hold City of Winterhold. You can speak to various folk across Skyrim and receive the following objective. Denizens include:

Innkeepers or barkeepers in each of the Hold's inns or taverns	Iddra in Kynesgrove
Court wizards in the Jarl's service in each Hold City, where available	Jonna in Morthal
Ambarys Rendar in Windhelm	Keerava in Riften
Corpuslus Vinius in Solitude	Kleppr in Markarth
Dagur in Winterhold	Madena in Dawnstar
Dravynea in Kynesgrove	Melaran in Solitude
Elda in Windhelm	Mralki in Rorikstead
Faida in Dragon Bridge	Orgnar in Riverwood
Frabbi in Markarth	Skuli in Old Hroldan Inn
Hadring in Nightgate Inn	Sybille Stentor in Solitude
Haelga in Riften	Valga Vinicia in Falkreath
Hulda in Whiterun	Vilod in Helgen
	Wilhelm in Ivarstead
	Wylandriah in Riften

- ♦ OBJECTIVE: Visit the College of Winterhold

Alternatively, you can simply journey to Winterhold and approach the bridge spanning from the city to the College.

- ♦ OBJECTIVE: Cast a [chosen] spell

- ♦ TARGET: Marker stone, College of Winterhold entrance

Ask if she would grant entry to the Dragonborn. Faralda asks if you really have the Voice. Show her using your Fire Breath (or any other) Shout.

Spell-casting: Bring up your Magic menu and choose the spell Faralda has requested. She can choose Firebolt, Magelight, Fury, Conjure Flame Atronach, or Healing Hands, depending on your available spells and knowledge of particular Magic styles. Aim at the seal, and cast the spell. After your successful casting, Faralda tells you to find Mirabelle Ervine inside the College.

TIP If you don't have any spells, Faralda offers to sell you one for 30 gold pieces. This is a great way to obtain an Apprentice-level spell for a cheap price!

Be extremely careful where you're waving your fingers! Don't aim at Faralda or choose a spell (or Shout) that has a large area of effect. If you cast a wider flame-based attack, you risk setting Faralda on fire, effectively ending your tryout as an apprentice mage!

CAUTION

Dragon Shouting: Bring up your Shout inventory, choose any Shout (a good choice is Fire Breath), and bellow. After you strike the seal, Faralda walks over and tells you that there is much you both can learn from each other and that you'd be a superb addition to the College.

You can now ask Faralda more questions about Mirabelle and the College, and you can even receive training in the arts of Destruction magic. College of Winterhold Quest: First Lessons is now active, and you are told to report to Mirabelle Ervine.

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Report to Mirabelle Ervine.
 ◆ TARGET: Mirabelle Ervine, College of Winterhold courtyard

◆ The Makings of a Mage

Walk across the bridge to the impressive stone edifice, a fortress both highly defensible and remote enough for its students to concentrate on their studies. Head into the outer exterior courtyard, and meet with Mirabelle Ervine.

She greets you and hands you the garb of a mage (which you can wear if you wish). She then begins a tour of the College, and you are most definitely encouraged to follow her.

- Apprentice Hood of Magicka
- Boots
- Apprentice Robes of Destruction

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Tour the College of Winterhold

Mirabelle explains that the Hall of the Elements is the primary location for lectures, practice sessions, and meetings. She also points out that the Arch-Mage's quarters are adjacent but are strictly off-limits to students. Follow Mirabelle to the living quarters. She talks about recent problems the College has been having with Nords. Newest members stay in the Hall of Countenance, where students may be working on spell-casting or experiments. Mirabelle then takes you to the Hall of the Elements.

She tells you that your teacher is likely to be Tolfdir, who is probably already addressing the new Apprentices. She encourages you to report any problems to a senior member before handing you off to Tolfdir.

- College of Winterhold: Bed

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Listen to Tolfdir
 ◆ TARGET: Tolfdir, in the Hall of the Elements

NOTE The entire tour of the College is optional; you can ignore it and run straight into the Hall of the Elements and find Tolfdir.

Find Tolfdir, who tells you that the lesson has just started. Mingle with the other students — Brelyna Maryon, J'Zargo, and Onmund—and heed Tolfdir's advice, although a few of the apprentices are more keen on mage dueling than on hearing a verbal lesson. Tolfdir advises them against impulsive behavior and seeks your thoughts. You may answer with an unsure, practical, or safety-based response. Soon enough, Tolfdir agrees to a practical lesson in the art of Wards.

Wards are protective spells that block magic. Tolfdir has made sure no one within the Hall of the Elements will be hurt and then turns to you and asks if you know a Ward spell. You can answer with one of these options:

You don't have a Ward spell; Tolfdir immediately teaches you Lesser Ward.

You have a Ward spell but don't know how to use it. Tolfdir then explains how they work.

You have a Ward spell and know how to use it. Tolfdir begins a practical demonstration, which eventually happens no matter which answer you choose.

- Spell: Lesser Ward

Select a Ward spell from your list and activate it. Tolfdir throws a fire-based spell at you, which you absorb. Once you complete this, Tolfdir seems more confident in the newcomers' abilities and says that he will be leaving soon and taking the Apprentices to Saarthal, a Draugr tomb and the site of an ongoing excavation by the College of Winterhold. He expects you to meet him there in a few hours. The lesson now ends.

Quest Conclusion

You are now a member of the College and are free to roam the College of Winterhold.

Postquest Activities

The College of Winterhold Quest: Under Saarthal begins immediately. You can also begin to complete Faction Radiant Quests for the College's many mages.

UNDER SAARTHAL

PREREQUISITES: Complete the College of Winterhold Quest: First Lessons

INTERSECTING QUESTS: The College of Winterhold Quest: First Lessons, The College of Winterhold Quest: Hitting the Books, Side Quest: Forbidden Legend

LOCATIONS: College of Winterhold, Hall of Countenance, Hall of the Elements, Saarthal, Saarthal Excavation

CHARACTERS: Arniel Gane, Brelyna Maryon, J'Zargo, Onmund, Nerien, Savos Aren, Tolfdir

ENEMIES: Draugr, Jyrik Gauldurson

- ◆ OBJECTIVES: Meet Tolfdir outside Saarthal, Follow Tolfdir, Find Arniel Gane, Search for magical artifacts (4), Use the Saarthal Amulet to escape the trap, Follow Tolfdir, Tell Tolfdir about the vision, Follow Tolfdir, Find the danger within Saarthal, Talk to the Arch-Mage

◆ A New Vision for Saarthal

This quest begins immediately after you complete the College of Winterhold Quest: First Lessons. Completing this is also part of Side Quest: Forbidden Legend. Check that quest for more information.

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Meet Tolfdir outside Saarthal

Tolfdir has already made preparations to take his Apprentices (including you) to Saarthal—the remains of an ancient Nordic burial site of great importance and unknown depths and the site of an ongoing excavation by the College. Saarthal is southwest of Winterhold, in a treacherous part of the mountains where wolves like to roam. If you reach the entrance first, wait for the others; they may have been held up by an unexpected encounter. You may converse with any or all of them, but let Tolfdir know when you're ready to begin the exploration. Find out more about the site by asking him, too. Then follow him into the Saarthal Excavation.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Follow Tolfdir

NOTE The Saarthal Excavation door is firmly sealed and opened only during this quest.

Tolfdir descends the rickety steps into the entrance chamber, explaining that Saarthal was one of the earliest Nord settlements in Skyrim, and the largest. It was sacked during the infamous Night of Tears, but little else is known about what happened to the settlement. After some further instruction, ask Tolfdir what he needs, and he asks you to help Arniel Gane catalog some finds and locate enchanted items.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Find Arniel Gane

Follow the path of lanterns along the passages and into a multifloored chamber with wooden scaffolding. Drop from the bridge, and find Arniel Gane in a side corridor. He instructs you to look around the chambers to his north and to be careful.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Search for magical artifacts (4)

The intersecting passages north of Arniel Gane aren't dangerous, but the enchanted items dotted around here may be difficult to spot. Make slow, deliberate sweeps of each area until you find the items in question. Once you have the first three easy-to-spot items, head to this strange, torch-lit carved arch with the Saarthal Amulet on it. Grab it, and you immediately hear strange, scraping sounds. You triggered a spear trap. Tolfdir appears to see if you're all right. Explain what happened, and he suggests using it in some way.

➤ Enchanted Ring (3) ➤ Saarthal Amulet

◆ OBJECTIVE: Use the Saarthal Amulet to escape the trap

◆ OBJECTIVE: Follow Tolfdir

Select the Saarthal Amulet from your inventory and wear it. Tolfdir remarks that the wall from which you took the amulet may be susceptible to your magic. Launch a Firebolt (or other target-based spell) at the carved wall section, and it shatters back into an unexplored passage. The spear trap recedes. Instead of rushing through, wait for Tolfdir to approach, and follow him into the rocky tunnel. As Tolfdir plods ahead, he wonders why this place was sealed off. You both step into a small mausoleum chamber, where Tolfdir tells you to be on your guard.

▶ The Saarthal Discovery

A moment later, an apparition named Nerien appears in a startling vision. He is unknown to you, and you appear to be the only one who is communicating with him. He mutters a warning that the events you've set in motion cannot be undone. But judgment on you will be based on your forthcoming actions and how you deal with the dangers ahead. The Psijic Order believes in you. You alone have the ability to prevent disaster. Take great care, and know that the Order is watching....

◆ OBJECTIVE: Tell Tolfdir about the vision

◆ OBJECTIVE: Follow Tolfdir

Immediately inform Tolfdir about your vision, and the message. Tolfdir thinks this is all very odd, as the Psijics have no connection to these ruins, and no one has seen their order in a long time. He suspects the coffins embedded around this room are connected to deeper chambers. His excavation techniques are quickly abandoned as a Draugr breaks through from the other side. After dispatching the Draugr, follow Tolfdir into another newly discovered passage beyond.

Pull the lever at the bottom of the passage to open the portcullis. This leads into a grand, circular chamber with a bridge crossing a chasm. Fortunately, grating prevents you from plummeting to your death. Around the chamber are coffin alcoves. The Draugr start to stir. Back Tolfdir up as you bring your magic (or other attacks) to bear on the advancing undead. Once you down the Draugr, Tolfdir begins inspecting the chamber in greater detail and wishes to remain here. You're tasked with finding out what terrible dangers the Psijic Order mentioned in your vision. On your own...

◆ OBJECTIVE: Find the danger within Saarthal

▶ Awakening the Scourge of Skyrim

Head north, removing the spear bars and portcullis from the iron door by activating a lever on both sides of the door. Step into Saarthal itself, and work your way through a grand burial crypt. You awaken the Draugr, so expect them to step out of their wall coffins as you progress. Head up the wooden steps, inspect the raised sarcophagus near the iron door, and pass through into a sloping stone burial tunnel. Watch for traps of a flame and dart-based nature. Then enter the crypt corridor of carvings.

At this corridor's far end is a barred archway with a lever on a pedestal. Activate the lever, and you're struck by darts. Along the sides of the corridor are a total of six pillars, each with a trio of animal petroglyphs carved into them.

Puzzle solution: The trick here is to notice a smaller carving above each pillar. Make sure that the pillar below matches this smaller carving. Along the north wall from left to right, adjust the pillars so the following animal forms are facing out: Whale, Snake, and Hawk. Along the south wall from left to right: Hawk, Hawk, and Whale.

Inside the two-level ceremony room beyond, you encounter a power Draugr close to the wooden side steps. Battle it, then take the upper door exit past the treasure chest. Avoid the runic traps and reach a second puzzle passage. Expect a dart trap if you pull the lever before correctly positioning the four carved pillars.

Puzzle solution: The four correct positions are displayed in the large carved mouths on each side of the passage and behind each movable pillar. On the west wall from left right: Hawk and Whale. On the east wall from left to right: Snake and Whale. Each pillar makes several other pillars move too. This causes no end of adjustment problems if you don't know how many pillars move during each activation (look at the nearby picture, which has each pillar numbered):

Pillar 1 (Whale):
Activate it to move all four pillars.

Pillar 2 (Snake):
Activate it to move pillars 2, 3, and 4.

Pillar 3 (Hawk):
Activate it to move pillars 3 and 4.

Pillar 4 (Whale): Activate it and only it moves.

The solution is deceptively simple: Turn the pillar that rotates the most number of pillars first, and continue activating pillars that rotate consecutively fewer pillars until the puzzle is solved. That way you affect fewer pillars as you go. Face the portcullis archway (to the south):

Activate pillar 1 to show the Whale.

Activate pillar 2 to show the Snake.

Activate pillar 3 to show the Hawk.

Activate pillar 4 to show the Whale.

Watch for more runic and dart traps as Tolfdir catches up with you. He finds all of this fascinating. You can ask him further questions about the Psijic Order and then continue exploring. Open the iron door and enter the chamber of Jyrik Gauldurson. Tolfdir is transfixed by a massive ten-foot glowing orb, floating in a bubble of writhing magic, at the room's opposite end. It is pulsing and made of some strange, unknown material. Tolfdir averts his gaze when a ferocious-looking Draugr rises from his eternal throne chair; you're about to face Jyrik Gauldurson. This most evil of Nords was sealed down here to prevent his reanimation. Not anymore!

Jyrik Gauldurson is coursing with evil magic, and for the first ten seconds of the battle, he is utterly impervious to any attacks. Use this time to step behind cover, or let any summoned creatures or Followers bear the brunt of his attacks. Eventually, Tolfdir realizes that all your combined offensive capabilities aren't having an effect, so he turns to the Eye and focuses his attacks on the crackling globe. A few seconds later, he yells that Jyrik is vulnerable. Attack!

To further complicate matters, Jyrik is bathed in an elemental shield that cycles through the different elements; he is impervious to attacks from the same element. So, if he's bathed in fire, then any Flame-based spells have no effect on him. Use attacks from any other element instead. If you have only one type of elemental magic (i.e., only Fire), wait a few seconds until Jyrik's shielding changes elements and then strike!

TIP Jyrik is extremely vulnerable to frost damage when he's on fire, and when encased in a frost shield, he's very vulnerable to fire. Use this to your advantage!

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to the Arch-Mage

Quest Conclusion

With Jyrik Gauldurson gurgling his last curse, turn your attention to the giant orb. Tolfdir agrees that the Arch-Mage at the College of Winterhold should be informed immediately. Use the iron door behind the orb to exit the chamber, which leads to a fern-filled grotto and an ancient Word Wall. Absorb the power before you return to the excavation site, releasing the portcullis exit with a wall handle, and leave Saarthal.

It seems there are two other Gauldurson brothers to face elsewhere in Skyrim! Consult Side Quest: Forbidden Legend quest (on page 431) for more information.

Return to the College and seek out Savos Aren, either in the Hall of Countenance or Hall of the Elements. You may ask him about the Psijic Order, but you're here to speak to him about the Saarthal discovery. Savos Aren is taken aback by your findings and believes more research is needed while he journeys to Saarthal to inspect the orb. You are rewarded for your efforts.

Tardy Bookkeeping

This quest begins immediately after you complete the College of Winterhold Quest: Under Saarthal.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak with Urag gro-Shub

◆ TARGET: Urag gro-Shub, in the Arcanaeum

Arch-Mage Savos Aren will form a plan for dealing with the large undulating orb you found in the depths of Saarthal. In the meantime, locate the Arcanaeum off the Hall of the Elements. Seek out Urag gro-Shub the Lorekeeper in his library. There are several questions you can ask him, and you can help him find special books (aside from this quest). But to further this quest, tell him you need to learn about the orb that was found in Saarthal. Urag has no information on the matter.

PRIMA OFFICIAL GAME GUIDE

WWW.PRIMAGAMES.COM

However, he is aware of some missing texts, taken from the library by a student and never returned. One of these may have some knowledge to impart. The student's name was Orthorn. If you ask about him, Urag tells you the books were stolen so Orthorn could ingratiate himself with a group of warlocks who left the College long ago over a "difference of opinion." You may ask more about where Urag believes Orthorn is holed up—a place called Fellglow Keep.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Find the stolen books (3)

◆ TARGET: Ritual Chamber, inside Fellglow Keep

Before you leave the Arcanaeum, Ancano the Thalmor adviser appears. He's showing considerable interest in what was found at Saarthal and asks about it. Answer him however you wish. Many mages feel he's not to be trusted.

Assault on the Warlocks

Fellglow Keep is east of Whiterun, on the edge of the Tundra just below the snow line. This crumbling fortification has a group of Fire and Ice Mages watching from the remains of a beacon and the ramparts. The Keep's front door is locked, so follow your quest target to the stone spiral steps in the foundations of the west tower. As there's an Atronach close to the top of the stairs, combat is favored over sneaking.

Make your way through the ankle-deep flooded chambers, and engage the first warlock and his two "pet" spiders in the chamber with the crumbling support pillar. Watch for dart traps as you exit via the upper passage and head through a small maze of passages into the dungeon chamber with cells.

Once you've defeated the jailer, you can unlock the cells or just pull the levers on the wall nearby to release the captive vampires, who rush forward into the next room to attack the warlocks there. Join the melee or sneak past it; then head down a cobwebbed corridor to a second circular prison chamber. Levers in the middle unlock the cells around the perimeter.

TIP If you don't attack the vampires, they won't attack you. If they manage to kill the warlocks in the next room (with or without your help), they'll flee the dungeon. It's not really worth the trouble to kill them—as prisoners, they don't have any loot worth taking.

As you enter the prison chamber, the warlock on the room's far side spots you and rushes for the levers. If he reaches them, he'll release the two wolves in the far cell, which makes combat here more difficult. Rush him or take him out with an arrow to the head before that can happen.

The former student Orthorn is one of the captured souls inside a cell. You can speak with him. He appears remorseful and pleads with you to release him; he'll lead you straight to the books you seek. Pull the middle lever to free him, or you can kill him, tell him his services aren't needed, or ask him to accompany you.

◆ OBJECTIVE: (Optional) Free Orthorn

➤ Follower: Orthorn (temporary)

Whether Orthorn is backing you up or not, descend past the root cellar and tackle the mages practicing their magical attacks in the firing range. Then continue up into the undercroft, where two necromancers set upon you and beckon skeletons from the coffins on either side of the chamber. The door at the end of this crypt allows further access into the Keep area.

Expect a fierce battle if you aggressively attack the mages in the ruined chapel. Don't forget to grab the Conjuration skill book from the podium before moving on into the dining room and great hall where further combat can commence.

Storm Mages and other warlocks attempt to thwart your progress.

After climbing the stairs in the great hall, loot the workroom on the right, then take the eastern exit up to a circular library. From there you find a corridor with a giant boulder in it and the entrance to the Keep tower. Climb the candlelit staircase, loot the shelves at the top, and enter the Ritual Chamber.

TIP The shelves before the Ritual Chamber have several extremely useful items, such as Fire Resist potions, Ice Spike Scrolls, and Health potions. Gather them all, as you'll need them for the battle to come, especially at low levels.

➤ Shelving Loot

Silencing the Caller

Speak to the Caller, who is most put out that you've disrupted her plans during your Keep infiltration. If Orthorn has made it this far, you can arrange a trade—she gives you the books, and you give her Orthorn (who, naturally, is less than pleased with this arrangement). Carefully collect the books and leave the way you came. There's no need to trek back through the dungeons; collect the front door key from any of the mages on the upper level, then leave through the double doors in the great hall.

Otherwise, you have no choice but to fight. The Caller summons one or two Atronachs (the type and number depend on your level) and attacks. When she takes damage, she uses a unique spell to teleport away, often shifting one of her summoned Atronachs into her previous position.

At low levels, the Atronachs are especially dangerous. Take them out quickly, and the Caller's teleporting can actually work in your favor: When she warps away, it buys you a few seconds to heal and regroup.

At higher levels, you may find yourself facing two Frost Atronachs or (if you're particularly unlucky) Storm Atronachs! At this point, the Caller is the easier target. Ignore the Atronachs as best you can and focus all your offensive fire on her to bring her down.

When the Caller finally falls, search her corpse for a key, and scour the chamber for the three missing tomes. Then unlock the door in the northwest wall, scavenging any treasure from the room beyond before using the trapdoor that leads back down to the barred door in the great hall and an exit outside. If alive, Orthorn thanks you but will not follow you.

➤ Fragment: On Artaeum ➤ The Last King of the Ayleids

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return the books

◆ TARGET: Urag gro-Shub, in the Arcanaeum

Quest Conclusion

Back at the College of Winterhold, locate Urag gro-Shub (who is usually in the Arcanaeum) and hand over the books. Urag reminisces about the tomes and surmises that there is much to learn from them that may help your cause. This will take some time, however. For now, you are rewarded with a small library of books, all of which increase magic skills once you read them. Do that now!

TIP Once you've acquired the skill increases from the books, return to Urag and sell the books back to him for some considerable coin. This is doubly rewarding!

ENEMIES: Draugr, Flame Atronach

◆ OBJECTIVES: Speak with Tolfdir, Listen to Tolfdir, Follow Ancano, Find the Augur of Dunlain, Report to Savos Aren

Ancano says that someone from the Psijic Order has appeared at the College and is asking for you by name. Ask Ancano for further information if you wish. Then follow him out of the Hall of the Elements and into the Arch-Mage's Quarters. You have little time to speak with Savos Aren or Ancano; the cowl figure wearing the same robes as the initial mage you saw in your vision pauses time and introduces himself as Quaranir. Time is fleeting, so he is quick to impart that the Order has had little success in contacting you previously and that this is probably because of the Eye of Magnus.

According to Quaranir, the longer the Eye remains in the College, the more dangerous the situation becomes. They expect dire consequences if the Eye isn't banished, but the future is obscure, and the Psijic Order is unsure how you must act. Seeking out the Augur of Dunlain is the next logical step. Moments later, there is a flash of light, and time resumes as normal.

Witnessing the Eye of Magnus

This quest begins immediately after you complete the College of Winterhold Quest: Hitting the Books.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak with Tolfdir

◆ TARGET: Tolfdir, in the College of Winterhold

Tolfdir has returned from Saarthal and with the help of the Arch-Mage has moved the giant floating orb of crackling energy into the Hall of the Elements. Tolfdir is nearby. You can ask him if he has any lower-priority tasks for you to complete (beginning any of the College's additional quests), be sure to tell him that Urag suggested you come see him and that you found a book entitled Night of Tears. He tells you he'll have to read it, but he's having difficulty tearing himself away from the beauty of the orb, which some people have called the Eye of Magnus. If you'll permit him (and you should), he wishes to make a few observations.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Listen to Tolfdir

He observes that the markings are quite unlike anything seen before; not even Falmer runes are a match. The object is also radiating Magicka, and this has caused the Arch-Mage to fully commit to researching the orb. Tolfdir is about to continue, when he is interrupted by Ancano, a gaunt High Elf with a highfalutin attitude that riles Tolfdir. He reluctantly agrees to let you leave with Ancano, who has important information to impart.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Follow Ancano

◆ OBJECTIVE: Find the Augur of Dunlain

◆ TARGET: Augur of Dunlain, in the Midden, below the College

Forgotten Experiments

Ancano is furious at the Psijic Order's interruption and vows to get to the bottom of this matter. Begin searching out the mages within the College and asking them about the Augur of Dunlain (if you don't wish to immediately journey to his location). No one is aware of the stoppage of time except you. Here's what the main inhabitants of the College know (or reveal) about the Augur:

Ancano is rather cagey, professing to know nothing about the Augur.

Savos Aren is rather annoyed that Tolfdir has been telling stories again, and he hopes you'll instruct the old fellow to knock it off.

Colette Marence relates a tragic story of an experiment gone horribly wrong; the ghost of the unfortunate College member is said to still roam the halls.

Urag gro-Shub has little to say on the subject.

Mirabelle Ervine says that the Augur is nothing that need concern you and remains tight-lipped about whatever was going on.

(Persuade) Mirabelle can be persuaded to reveal the location of the Augur if you speak with her.

Arniel, Enthir, and the other Apprentices say they don't know anything, but suggest you speak to Tolfdir about it.

Nirya is more concerned with her animosity with Faralda. Other mages in the Hall of Countenance and around the College are professing to know nothing about the Augur.

Hidden in the Midden

The most trustworthy of your close colleagues has the information you require. Ask Tolfdir about the Augur of Dunlain, and he tells you it has been years since he's spoken with him. The Augur is down in the Midden. Now seek either of the entrances and descend into the Midden. The icy and dank dungeons known as the Midden are beneath the College. It consists of a series of passages and stairs. The remains of innumerable experiments are scattered about and long forgotten. Unhappy Draugr and Atronachs roam these gloomy corridors, so expect a few fights along the way.

As you cross an icy bridge, you begin to hear the voice of the Augur, echoing through the tunnels. He tells you there is nothing for you here and that your perseverance will only lead to disappointment.

The sealed door to the Augur's chamber is locked. Try it, and your persistence is rewarded; the Augur lets you into his grim oubliette. Speak to this maelstrom of writhing oddness and flame, who believes events are too late to change. You also find out that you aren't the only one who's visited the Augur recently. A Thalmor named Ancano has been here too. Thinking that Ancano was simply here to strengthen his own hand, the Augur neglected to tell him that the Eye of Magnus is extremely dangerous, and a staff of great power is required to mitigate this threat. Find the Staff of Magnus at the earliest opportunity.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Report to Savos Aren

◆ TARGET: Arch-Mage Savos Aren, in his quarters or Hall of the Elements

Quest Conclusion

Return to Savos Aren, who is probably gazing at the Eye of Magnus. Tell him you have important information. He initially scoffs at your request to find the Staff of Magnus, but after you mention who gave you this information, his tune changes. He is impressed with your initiative and wants someone to follow up on locating the staff. He means you. He remembers Mirabelle Ervine mentioning something about the staff, but that was a while ago. Receive the Arch-Mage's gratitude:

Arch-Mage Savos Aren has requested that you speak to Mirabelle Ervine, who may have some knowledge regarding the Staff of Magnus. You may find her wandering the Hall of the Elements or in the exterior courtyard within the College. Ask her about the staff, and after a few roundabout conversations, Mirabelle recalls that some Imperials from the Synod were interested in it and came to the College to question them. Leaving empty-handed, it appears they had a secondary plan: to head toward the sprawling dwarven ruins of Mzulft, which apparently has a derelict observatory that would somehow help locate the staff.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Find the ruins of Mzulft

In the foothills by the edge of the mountains that carve through Eastmarch Hold, south and a little east of Windhelm, you come across ancient carved stone columns and archway entrances and a spectacular stone-and-pipework facade with steam still hissing from the hillside. Enter the huge golden door and step inside.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Search for Synod researchers

◆ TARGET: Gavros Plinius, inside Mzulft

Slumped to the right of the second interior door is an Imperial named Gavros Plinius. He was ambushed while attempting to reach the Oculory, where another member of the Synod, Paratus, is holed up. Before collapsing, he murmurs something about a crystal being stolen. Search his robes for a couple of important items: a key so you can enter Mzulft and a Research

Log. Reading the log allows you to understand who exactly was here (an attendant on behalf of the First Adjunct Oronrel) and what he was doing (delivering a new Focusing Crystal to the Oculory). Unfortunately, the crystal that is mentioned is nowhere to be found. Now use the key to open the second door.

➤ Mzulft Key ➤ Research Log

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Reach the Oculory
- ◆ TARGET: Mzulft Aedrome

◆ Onward and Upward

Enter this dwarven labyrinth, heading along the corridor and checking the body of a Synod Researcher. As you reach a connecting corridor of belching steam pipes, tough mechanical Dwarven Spiders attack you. These pester you as you continue up the linked corridors. Soon you're met by more Dwarven Spiders and a huge gold door. Head through into a more natural cavern, but with elements of dwarven architecture still visible. In a natural rock cavern, engage your first Chaurus. Use the wooden scaffold to escape it during this war of attrition. Your third and fourth dead Synod Researchers are found here, at the foot and the top of the ramped scaffold.

Beware of a trip wire releasing a pile of rocks as you move through into a second, much taller cavern with a mammoth skeleton, more Chaurus, and an arched granite entrance. Enter another ramped corridor and expect Dwarven Spheres to elongate and attack at the top. Then continue up, pausing to dispatch Dwarven Spiders along a mechanical corridor. Head past a sunken chamber with stone steps until you reach a pipe-pillar room, where you tackle more dwarven creations. Your internal mountain climb continues, past the corpses of a dead Falmer or two, and finally to the gold doors leading into the Mzulft Boilery.

TIP You may wish to sprint (or sneak) past the enemies in these corridors, if they are proving too difficult to defeat.

◆ Gaining Focus

The upper chambers inside the Boilery are less tall and have had periodic rockfalls in the past, where ferns now grow. Falmer roam these halls. Dispatch them. Continue into a hub room with cage doors. Go through the open doors to the east, across a raised platform, and through a gap in the wall, caused by Falmer tunneling. This continues past a chest; expect further Chaurus and Falmer incursions. As the tunnels take on a more eerie glow caused by fungus, battle (or sneak past) a small Falmer camp, and ascend further up into another broken wall. Step back into the dwarven-built chambers.

The ceilings are higher and the chambers more impressive as you reach a huge gallery with a sunken central area. Falmer are swarming about in this location. Search any chests you wish, but be sure to head up the steps in the west wall and into one last corridor. The doors at this corridor's end lead to the Mzulft Aedrome.

The Aedrome is comprised of three giant chambers connected by corridors of ornate pillars and snaking pipes (the locked door [Master] to the north ends abruptly with a Falmer chest).

The central chamber has numerous Falmer, but one is especially important: a boss that carries a Focusing Crystal. Pry it from its corpse (or pickpocket it if you're being extremely stealthy), and then head east, passing the plinth with dwarven metal resting on it, into a dead-end chamber dotted with Falmer corpses and a powerful automaton. There is an important chest here; it contains the key that will open the important chambers on this level. This brings up the following two quest objectives:

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Find the Focusing Crystal
- ◆ TARGET: Falmer Boss, Mzulft Aedrome
- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Return the Crystal to Paratus
- ◆ TARGET: Paratus Decimus, Mzulft Aedrome

➤ Focusing Crystal ➤ Mzulft Observatory Key

◆ Oculory Jocularity

Paratus Decimus is behind a closed door up the western corridor ramp, accessed via the key. He is expecting Gavros (the Synod Researcher you found dead at the entrance) and is displeased by your presence. Inform him you have the Crystal, and Paratus strolls along the corridor leading to a giant Dwarven Armillary.

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Follow Paratus

Paratus isn't sure what the dwarves called this huge focusing globe, but from the Synod's research, the machinery appears to have been made to collect starlight, for an as-yet-unknown purpose. Paratus replaced one of the elements with his crystal, after months of perfecting it. Using the Focusing Crystal will allow the Synod's research to continue. And you're the one who has to activate the giant, tumbling machinery!

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Place the Crystal into the Oculory

After you follow Paratus into the Armillary chamber (and optionally speak to him about related matters), you are instructed to approach the Oculory, the giant series of lenses atop the Armillary. Activate the Dwarven Armillary.

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Focus the Oculory

Gaze around the curved observatory chamber, and you'll notice a series of circular blue focusing mirrors on the ceiling panels around you. Directly above the center of the Oculory are three focusing lenses. A stream of bright light bounces off them, onto the ceiling. Some of the blue focusing mirrors are lit with starlight, as is the main circular mirror in the center of the ceiling. Head up either ramp and look to the stone table, upon which is a number of valuable items:

- Antecedents of Dwemer Law ➤ Dwemer Inquiries Vol. III
- Dwemer Cog (3) ➤ Spell Tome: Flames
- Dwemer History and Culture ➤ Spell Tome: Frostbite
- Dwemer Inquiries Vol. I
- Dwemer Inquiries Vol. II

Puzzle Solution: You may read all the tomes, but the ones you must memorize (if you haven't already) are the Flames and Frostbite spells. However, any ranged fire and frost spells you already use are just as effective. Brandish both spells, one in each hand, and stand underneath or within range of the lenses. Now accurately shoot both fire and ice projectiles at the lens until the beam of light each one has captured hits the middle of each of the horizontal panels with the blue mirrors in them.

TIP Make sure the three light beams are each hitting the center of a separate panel.

Now move the blue mirrors. Each of the dwarven pedestals atop the ramp rotate one of the three horizontal ceiling panels. The trick is to press the button on each pedestal so the panels shift sideways until one of the blue mirrors lines up with the light beam. The beam then ricochets off and up to the ceiling mirror. When all three light beams hit the ceiling, you know the Oculary is focused properly.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Paratus

As a map of the northern part of Tamriel is projected onto the wall underneath the buttons, Paratus is initially excited to watch the results of his months of work. However, this is tempered slightly as the results come in: Something is creating a huge amount of interference, something at Winterhold. You can speak to Paratus (and be as honest or as cagey as you like), but he is highly suspicious of the mages. He angrily wants to know what you did and thinks you have something at your College. Whether you tell him about the Eye of Magnus or not, steer the conversation to the Staff of Magnus's location. Paratus finally reveals its location: Labyrinthian! Now leave before Paratus gets any more testy.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Report to Savos Aren

◆ TARGET: Arch-Mage Savos Aren, College of Winterhold

Quaranir appears from a side corridor to tell you that trying times are ahead. It is imperative that you return to your College immediately. You must take swift action and show what you're capable of. He believes you will prevail. Now exit through the pair of doors Quaranir was standing behind (the latter of which you unlock with the Mzulft Observatory Key), and step outside into the inclement weather. Unless you fancy a precarious descent, Fast-Travel back to the College.

Quest Conclusion

Arch-Mage Savos Aren is in a vexed state when you return, and this situation is about to take a turn for the explosive. Ancano—the erstwhile conspirator and now a full-fledged traitor—has magically barricaded himself in the Hall of the Elements, with the Eye of Magnus! The Arch-Mage, having little time to talk about your quest to find the Staff of Magnus, is embroiled in a battle to break through Ancano's magical barrier and confront him. As Aren closes, there is a huge flash and an explosion. Everything fades to white. Your reward is escaping with your life (and with the spells and books you uncovered during your exploration)!

Postquest Activities

Through the smoke and dust, you find Mirabelle Ervine lying on the ground. The College of Winterhold Quest: Containment begins immediately. There are shorter, additional Radiant Quests to complete, too.

INTERSECTING QUESTS: The College of Winterhold Quest: Revealing the Unseen, The College of Winterhold Quest: The Staff of Magnus, The College of Winterhold Faction Radiant Quests

LOCATIONS: College of Winterhold, Hall of the Elements, Winterhold

CHARACTERS: Arch-Mage Savos Aren, Arniel Gane, Faralda, Mirabelle Ervine, Tolfdir

ENEMIES: Ancano, Magic Anomaly

◆ OBJECTIVES: Find the Arch-Mage, Protect the town of Winterhold, Defeat the creatures infesting Winterhold (10), Report to Mirabelle Ervine

◆ A Plague on Winterhold

This quest begins immediately after you complete the College of Winterhold Quest: Revealing the Unseen.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Find the Arch-Mage

◆ TARGET: Exterior courtyard, in the College of Winterhold

Mirabelle Ervine rouses you from the battle-scarred Hall of the Elements, where strange magics are emanating from the Eye of Magnus. Ancano remains with the Eye, protected by bonded magic too strong to pierce. Mirabelle's most pressing concern is finding the Arch-Mage, who was knocked away by the explosion. Rendezvous in the exterior courtyard, where a crowd is forming around the crumpled form of Savos Aren. Tolfdir confirms the shocking news; Savos Aren has succumbed to the wounds he suffered during the battle with Ancano. But the time for mourning will come later; Winterhold is being overrun with entities summoned by the Eye!

◆ OBJECTIVE: Protect the town of Winterhold

◆ TARGET: The bridge to Winterhold

The danger present in Winterhold is threatening the entire town. A plague of odd, wisplike balls of terror are attacking the townsfolk! Although optional, it's worth stopping on the bridge to tell Faralda of the situation. Ask her to help;

she gladly brings her considerable magic to bear on the enemy and manages to coax Arniel Gane into the fight as well. The three of you should help even the odds once you cross the bridge into Winterhold.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Defeat the creatures infesting Winterhold (10)

◆ TARGET: The streets of Winterhold

The ten Magic Anomalies are easily spotted and quickly removed. Ranged magic is a good choice, but pinpoint spells that don't hit the townsfolk who are under Anomalies attack work best; you don't want collateral damage killing off the very people you're here to protect! You may wish to rush over to any groups of these magical entities and leave Faralda and Arniel to deal with them; this allows you to coax as many of them away from the townsfolk as possible. If Faralda is here when the ten magical foes are dead, she shouts that she'll stay here and check for any more incursions. Pick up any Soul Gems that the Magic Anomalies dropped when they were dispatched.

Although the chance is small, the attacking Anomalies may kill one or more of Winterhold's townsfolk, and it may not be possible to save them. This may affect other quests, so exhaust your talking options with the inhabitants of the town prior to their infestation problem.

CAUTION

◆ OBJECTIVE: Report to Mirabelle Ervine

◆ TARGET: Mirabelle Ervine, the College of Winterhold

Quest Conclusion

Return to the College and seek out Mirabelle Ervine, letting her know that Winterhold is safe for now. She wishes she could say the same for the College. While she attempts to keep the Eye of Magnus contained with her fellow mages, you are to locate the Staff of Magnus once and for all. Mention that you're off to Labyrinthian, and Mirabelle is taken aback: The Arch-Mage gave her an item from this place and told her she'd know what to do with it. She hands the following items over to you and tells you to leave. Quickly.

MAJOR SPOILERS

INTERSECTING QUESTS: The College of Winterhold Quest: Containment, The College of Winterhold Quest: The Eye of Magnus, The College of Winterhold Faction Radiant Quests, Side Quest: Masks of the Dragon Priests*

LOCATIONS: College of Winterhold, Hall of the Elements, Labyrinthian, Labyrinthian Chasm, Labyrinthian Thoroughfare, Labyrinthian, Tribune

CHARACTERS: Atmah (Ghost), Elvali Veren (Ghost), Girduin (Ghost), Hafnar Ice-Fist (Ghost), Mirabelle Ervine, Savos Aren (Ghost), Takes-in-Light (Ghost), Tolfdir

ENEMIES: Dragon Priest Morokei, Draugr, Estormo, Frost Troll, Skeletal Dragon, Skeleton, Troll, Wisp, Wispmother, Wizard Thrall

◆ OBJECTIVES: Entrance to Labyrinthian, Find the Staff of Magnus, Return to Tolfdir

NOTE * Quest names marked with this symbol do not appear in your Quest menu list, although objectives may.

Ignore the Lost Valkygg area to the east as well as the ceremonial buildings, steps, and statuary; focus on the Frost Trolls and the giant low arch of the Labyrinthian entrance. Look for the strange, glowing figures standing beneath the giant overhang. The spirit of Savos Aren is here. You can't speak to him or to the other ghosts standing in front of Labyrinthian's entrance—Girduin, Hafnar Ice-Fist, Atmah, Elvali Veren, and Takes-in-Light. This appears to be a recording from a time before Savos Aren became the Arch-Mage, an imprint from the past. The party is wondering about entering the place. Once they disappear, move to the Ceremonial Door and activate it. You automatically remove the Torc of Labyrinthian and slot it into the door. The entrance rumbles apart.

Chilled to the Bone

Walk forward from the entrance, and Savos Aren's spectral party appears once again, hoping to find enchanted weapons and lost spell books. After they depart again, open the double doors and activate the lever to raise the portcullis. This allows you into a tremendously epic main chamber. The rattling of old bones announces the animation of a group of skeletons guarding this huge temple hall. There are bowmen in the distance, and a massive Skeletal Dragon rises from the earth and attempts to thwart you! Dodge the incoming attacks, concentrating on the Skeletal Dragon (and any skeleton you're close enough to strike), and prepare for a lengthy battle.

TIP The massive stone columns in this chamber are most helpful; take cover and recharge behind them.

This Skeletal Dragon was summoned by dark magic within this place and doesn't have a soul to steal. Continue east, down the tunnel to an Etched Tablet, where Savos Aren's specters appear again, confused after losing one of their own. They vow to continue on, and so should you. The Tablet has a suitably troubling verse to dissuade tomb robbers. Now head down and open the doors to Labyrinthian Chasm.

Getting Lost in Labyrinthian

This quest begins immediately after you complete the College of Winterhold Quest: Containment. Be sure you have the Torc of Labyrinthian (given to you by Mirabelle Ervine at the end of College of Winterhold Quest: Containment).

◆ OBJECTIVE: Enter Labyrinthian

◆ TARGET: Entrance to Labyrinthian, Hjaalmarch Hold

Mirabelle and Tolfdir have retreated back, unable to halt the tide of magic sweeping across the College. The Staff of Magnus is needed, and now! Trek west—the mountain crags to the south and east of Morthal is where the vast and sprawling remains of this ancient Nordic city are located. Enter the surface courtyards from the mountains above, or the forest below, using the stairs and the dried aqueducts.

QUESTS: THE COLLEGE OF WINTERHOLD QUESTS

PRIMA OFFICIAL GAME GUIDE

WWW.PRIMAGAMES.COM

◆ OBJECTIVE: Find the Staff of Magnus

◆ TARGET: Staff of Magnus, carried by Dragon Priest Morokei

Pass the nightshade plant and gnarled tree, and check the left, caved-in tunnel for trinkets; then take the right tunnel to continue. As you reach a door sealed by ice to your right (west), you hear a strange voice rasping the tongue of dragons. Draugr appear. Dispatch any that trouble you before checking the arched alcove, where a pedestal holds a Spell Tome. Pick up Flames if you haven't learned it already, and read the book at once. Equip Flames as an offensive spell, and blast the door sealed by ice. When it slides open, step through into a precarious path of descent.

► Spell Tome: Flames

► Carnage in the Chasm

The voice echoes this chamber again, and Draugr begin to stir. Avoid or fight these bony fiends while navigating the narrow cliff path down to a junction. A side passage to the south leads to steps, several Draugr, and a tunnel collapse that prevents progress. However, in a side chamber, you find the remains of a conjurer, a Spell Tome (which you should learn immediately), an Alchemy Lab, and an Arcane Enchanter. This is your last opportunity to utilize these crafting facilities before unearthing the deeper secrets of Labyrinthian! Now return to the path of descent, face west, and continue down the bridges across the chasm. The voice in the dark now speaks to you in your native tongue and seems to be growing impatient.

► Spell Tome: Equilibrium

You may head to the bottom of the chasm, where a Nirnroot grows and a fast-flowing underground stream coaxes you toward an Iron Door. Or you can exit via the tunnel above, cross the remains of a bridge, and head into a great hall of alcoves. Expect Draugr foes as you head down the steps, out into a rocky fissure, and reach the fast-flowing stream from this direction. The voice mentions the return of Aren as you open the door to Labyrinthian Thoroughfare.

► Thoroughfare Fights

There are two routes to choose from, and both take you through some waiting skeletons. One has a gate (Novice) to unlock and a stream to follow to an exit above an open archway. The other way requires less lockpicking and more combat. Follow the running water into the pens, where you may encounter a troll or two. Ahead are three grated windows you cannot budge. Instead, tackle the troll and use the side passage to exit the pens. The voice in the dark mocks you. In the main thoroughfare, you have more skeletons to disassemble. The voice calls again, noting you're not Aren but were sent in his place.

Head west across a bridge, to a side cave where trolls and treasure can be found. Then move north, cutting down more skeletons. You also encounter the turquoise glow of wisps as you reach a series of small standing stones and a flaming basin. You can face the Wispmother or flee from it on the raised end of the thoroughfare. Cross the wooden bridge to the northeast.

The voice in the dark mocks your power. The door at the bridge's far side is sealed with fire. Utilize an ice-based spell (such as Frostbite) to open it.

Open the gate to the north and stumble upon the spectral party, now down to four members. They have grave concerns, but Savos Aren urges them to push on. You're unable to access the spiral steps they were standing by, as they are blocked. Instead, dispatch the skeletons at the end of the cylindrical sewage corridor and pick one of two routes heading down:

The Watery Fall: Stand on the trapdoor by the waterfall and open it, aiming to land on the series of crossbeams so you don't suffer falling damage. A troll is usually attacking a Draugr. You can wait for them to damage each other and drop in to finish the straggler, or wait on a crossbeam and launch ranged attacks on them both. The exit from this circular room is through the archway to the west, ending in an Iron Door.

The Side Chambers: Or you can walk over the trapdoor and head through the opening to the east. Follow the tunnel as it dries up and ends at a balcony guarded by Draugr. Drop to the adjacent earthen floor and open the wooden door to the west. The dark and narrow corridor leads down to the circular room where the troll and Draugr are fighting. Use the same western archway to exit to the Iron Door.

► Prelude to a Dragon Priest

The tunnel is riddled with tree roots and the long-dead remains of Nordic warriors. As you reach an open double door to your right (west), expect more Draugr attacks. Before you head down the connecting passage, take the Spell Tome on the pedestal if you haven't learned Steadfast Ward yet. Now head into the corridor, watching for crackling electrical attacks from Soul Gem Pedestal traps and Floor Runes. Take the Soul Gems from the pedestals to deactivate them, or use the Steadfast Ward to shield yourself. Head up the tower steps to an outside ramp. You encounter more Draugr if you inspect the chest at the top. Otherwise, locate the tunnel to the west.

► Spell Tome: Steadfast Ward

Pass the locked gate (or optionally open it to find some impressive loot) and head through the small torture dungeon and the double doors. Expect vicious combat with a high-ranking Draugr, sitting on his throne and guarding a Word Wall. Absorb another Word of Power and optionally use it in the columned hall to the west. Several Draugr and skeletons roam here, so use the columns to dodge them and seek cover if necessary. Then meet up with the ghostly Savos Aren and his two remaining followers. They stare at a door: This is it, they say!

► Word of Power: Slow Time

Although your progress is encouraging with a newly learned Word of Power, it is also tempered by the strange voice of a powerful Dragon Priest echoing in your ears. This foe speaks in the language of dragons and then in your native tongue, initially believing you to be Savos Aren. Each time you hear him, he completely drains you of all your Magicka! Depending on your augmentations and equipment, your Magicka can return slowly or quickly; either way, this leaves you at a disadvantage for a few seconds. When you hear the voice, seek an empty area and wait, or switch to nonmagical attacks.

CAUTION

► Within Your Clutches

Fling the doors open, and enter the ceremonial chamber where Morokei has been sealed in an impenetrable magic ward by two Wizard Thralls.

Dragon Priest

Slaying: There is a beam supporting Morokei's barrier, and the barrier gives the Dragon Priest invulnerability to your attacks. Interrupt the thralls from their ritual by striking or killing them (either one or both) to break the beam. Once the barrier falls, Morokei becomes vulnerable and attacks you. Retaliate, using the chamber's topography to hide, dodge, or face the fearsome foe out in the open using your favored offensive weaponry.

TIP When you deal the final blow to the Dragon Priest, be sure to inspect his crumpled form: He carries the Staff of Magnus! You can also pry off his mask, which is extremely important when completing Side Quest: Masks of the Dragon Priests.* Consult that quest on page 471 for more details.

➤ Staff of Magnus ➤ Morokei

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Tolfdir

◆ TARGET: Tolfdir, College of Winterhold

Exit from the ceremonial chamber via the eastern doors. After a final encounter with the ghost of Savos Aren, who sealed Morokei, you can continue up the stairs, opening the portcullis using the wall lever.

As you step through, a Thalmor agent named Estormo appears and informs you that Ancano was correct; you are a threat. He wants the staff and wants you dead! So begins another battle. Muster your remaining magic and deal a death blow to Estormo before navigating your way out of one final crypt, up the southern steps, and outside. You are back at labyrinthian's sprawling exterior. Avoid or face the Frost Trolls and head back to the College.

Quest Conclusion

Back at the College, the surviving members have pulled back to the bridge from Winterhold. Sadly, when you ask Tolfdir where Mirabelle is, he tells you she didn't make it; she died to save the others. Tolfdir is now in charge, but none of the College members can come close to countering the magic at Ancano's disposal. Agree to face Ancano with the Staff of Magnus in hand. There may be a way to stop him yet!

Postquest Activities

The College of Winterhold Quest: The Eye of Magnus begins immediately.

THE EYE OF MAGNUS

PREREQUISITES: Complete the College of Winterhold Quest: The Staff of Magnus

MAJOR SPOILERS

INTERSECTING QUESTS: The College of Winterhold Quest: The Eye of Magnus, The College of Winterhold Faction Radiant Quests

LOCATIONS: College of Winterhold, Hall of the Elements

CHARACTERS: Gelebros, Quaranim, Tandil, Tolfdir

ENEMIES: Ancano

◆ OBJECTIVES: Use the Staff of Magnus to enter the College of Winterhold, Reach the Hall of the Elements, Defeat Ancano, Talk to Tolfdir, Speak with Quaranim

Upon arriving at the Hall of the Elements, Ancano is well aware of your presence. The mad elf spots you and Tolfdir, taunting you and crowing that he's so far beyond your pitiful attempts at magic that you cannot even touch him. Unfortunately, this is true, as you both find out when Tolfdir's aimed fireball dissipates harmlessly. The old mage has just enough time to tell you to bring out the Staff of Magnus and use it on the Eye before an enraged Ancano strikes him—and anyone else (such as Followers) in your vicinity—with a Mass Paralysis spell, leaving you standing alone. Ancano decides to finish you himself, opening the Eye of Magnus and tapping into its full and incredible power.

Defeating Ancano: While Ancano opens the Eye, he's still invincible.

Wait until the Eye is fully open. When this occurs, a casting from your Staff of Magnus absorbs its energy, and the Eye begins to close. Now is the time to thwart Ancano! Strike often and hard, because eventually the Eye reopens and Ancano becomes invincible again. When the Eye is pried open a second time, several Magic Anomalies are also let loose. Although you must deal with them, their presence has the potential to be very useful, as the Soul Gems they drop can recharge the staff if it is out of charge.

Use the chamber's topography to your advantage, keeping your distance from Ancano, which gives you more time to maneuver around his spells. If possible, stand behind one of the chamber's many pillars, or the Eye itself, blocking the full force of Ancano's attacks. Your own summoned creatures can also provide temporary distractions.

Switching between Favorites and utilizing your different weapon combinations is imperative, too. However, equip the Staff of Magnus in one hand to remove Ancano's invulnerability and power up a spell in your other hand, readying it for the moment you can hit Ancano. Then immediately switch to spells in both hands to deal the maximum amount of damage before the Eye reopens. Keep this up, and you may rid the College of this enormous anomaly!

Into the Eye of the Maelstrom

This quest begins immediately after you complete the College of Winterhold Quest: The Staff of Magnus.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Use the Staff of Magnus to enter the College of Winterhold

◆ OBJECTIVE: Reach the Hall of the Elements

Approach the College of Winterhold, now caught in an increasingly unstable maelstrom of magic. Equip the Staff of Magnus, and use it to force your way across the courtyard and into the Hall of the Elements. Ancano is waiting within the mass of crackling and ethereal discharge. Face Ancano and attack the Eye of Magnus and the Thalmor traitor directly.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Defeat Ancano

The Nick of Time

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Tolfdir

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak with Quaranir

With the hated High Elf now dispatched for good, you can return to Tolfdir. He is thankful you have stopped Ancano but has no idea how to dispel the gathering crescendo of power that the Eye of Magnus is magnifying. Fortunately, Quaranir has appeared just in the nick of time. Speak to him, and although he is as cryptic as ever, he tells you that the Psijic Order always believed in you, and your actions have proved that you are ready to lead the College of Winterhold. Now that the Eye has grown unstable, it may not only destroy the College, but also the entire world! Ancano's actions proved that this world is not ready for such power; Quaranir prepares to secure the Eye. The Psijic Order will maintain the Eye for now, and he summons his brethren, Gelebros and Tandil, to perform a binding ritual. The monks and the Eye soon disappear from this world.

Quest Conclusion

Now that you have been appointed as the new Arch-Mage, return to Tolfdir and speak with him.

Postquest Activities

You should now complete as many outstanding additional Faction Radiant Quests as you wish, including a couple of newly available ones. Tolfdir presents you with the key to the Arch-Mage's Quarters and your own robe and hood. You also receive a 10 percent discount when purchasing from College vendors.

- Key to Arch-Mage's Quarters
- Arch-Mage's Hood
- Arch-Mage's Robe

THE COLLEGE RADIANT QUESTS

The following Radiant Quests occur throughout (and between) the critical College of Winterhold Quests and offer you a (sometimes random) task to accomplish. These objectives become available based on two factors: where you are in the critical College Quests and your skill in the five Schools of Magic. For a complete list of how to unlock each Radiant Quest, consult the Introduction to the College of Winterhold Quests, at the start of this chapter.

NOTE Task names marked with an asterisk (*) do not appear in your Quest menu list, although objectives may.

REJOINING THE COLLEGE

If you commit a minor crime, such as accidentally striking a College member or pickpocketing them, you're usually let off with a warning. However, if you commit a serious crime, such as assaulting or murdering one of the College members, all of them become hostile and will attack you. At this point, you can:

Continue on the killing spree, which doesn't result in much else besides dead bodies and fewer places to sell or train.

Yield by sheathing your weapons, or flee the College, wait three days, and return. Don't expect the College members to be hostile, but they won't be friendly toward you either.

If you speak to Tolfdir, he is concerned but a little more understanding. However, he requires a sum of gold be paid to the College before you can rejoin. Pay up, and you become firm friends again. Refuse, and expect to be ostracized until you pay the fine. You must pay 250 gold for your first offense, 500 gold for the second, and 1,000 gold for every subsequent offense.

TOLFDIR'S ALEMBIC*

NOTE This Radiant Quest becomes available as soon as you join the College. You can complete it once per day. It is always given to you by Tolfdir.

Start a conversation with Tolfdir, and tell him that he looks like he could use a hand. He sheepishly admits to misplacing his Alembic, an alchemic still (two vessels connected by a tube). He's hoping you might find it, as it has sentimental value for him. If you see it, will you bring it back to him?

Visit the Hall of Countenance and search the following locations to find the Alembic:

Top floor, in the chamber directly across from the stairs, on top of a barrel.

In the chamber with the Arcane Enchanter, under a display case.
Ground floor, in the room with the large cask, on top of a crate.

- Tolfdir's Alembic

Quest Conclusion

When you have the Alembic, return to Tolfdir and tell him you found what he was looking for. He thanks you for your help and rewards you.

- 30 gold pieces
- Filled Soul Gem (random)

Postquest Activities

You may now speak to Tolfdir or another mage and begin another Radiant Quest. You can repeat this quest once a day.

NOTE This Radiant Quest becomes available as soon as you join the College. It is repeatable, but once you complete it, you must wait two or three days for it to become available again. It is always given to you by Drevis Neloren and always randomly.

Talk to Drevis Neloren, and he's initially astonished that you can see him; his illusion spell still needs a little tinkering. If you ask about College business that you can help with, he tells you that the various points of focus for magic energies around the College have become polluted. Agree to help with their cleansing, and he hands you a special pair of enchanted gloves that allow you to delve into these focal points. He warns you of possible "consequences" that this cleansing may have on you, and urges caution.

Mystic Tuning Gloves

◆ OBJECTIVE: Cleanse the focal points for magical energies around the College.

The Mystic Focal Points—pillars of light with a strange glow—were visible to you previously but are easy to spot now you're attuned to them. There is one in the courtyard's center, one in the middle of the Hall of Attainment, and one in the middle of the Hall of Countenance. Beware of a random and sometimes beneficial or slightly harmful discharge as you purify these points. These are completely random and range from items to damage-causing effects.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Drevis Neloren

Quest Conclusion

Once you cleanse the three focal points, return to Drevis Neloren, who is already feeling the difference you've made. He congratulates you and removes the gloves from your person.

Postquest Activities

You may now speak to another mage and begin another Radiant Quest.

AN ENCHANTED JOURNEY*

NOTE This Radiant Quest becomes available as soon as you join the College. You can repeat it multiple times. It is always given to you by Sergius and always randomly.

Speak to Sergius the Enchanter to check whether there's College business you can be part of. Sergius earns a steady income enchanting weapons for local residents of Skyrim, who aren't happy about mages inhabiting their lands but seem to have no qualms utilizing their services. Sergius has already set up an interested party, but it falls to you to take the item back to Sergius for enchanting.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Go to [the indicated random person] in [a random location] and pick up the item

Head over to the person indicated when your objective updated (the objective is in your Miscellaneous list). They are usually in one of the nine major Hold cities. Talk to them, asking about the item they want enchanted. The person hands it over to you.

➤ A [random item] for enchanting

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return the item to Sergius Turrianus

Quest Conclusion

Back at the College of Winterhold, Sergius takes the item from you. He'll get around to that enchanting when he's good and ready. He hands over some coins for your troubles.

➤ 100 to 200 gold pieces

Postquest Activities

You may now speak to him again or to another mage and begin another Radiant Quest.

RESTOCKING SOUL GEMS*

NOTE This Radiant Quest becomes available as soon as you join the College. You can repeat it multiple times. It is always given to you by Sergius and always randomly.

Speak to Sergius the Enchanter, and ask if there is any College business you can assist with. Sergius tells you he's running low on Soul Gems and requires you to retrieve some more for him. He'll pay you when you collect the ones he specifies.

◆ OBJECTIVE*: Collect [a random number] of [a random type of] Soul Gems

Quest Conclusion

The type (Lesser, Common, Greater, etc.) and number are random. Sergius won't be interested in your collecting antics until you have the exact number (or more) of the Soul Gems he has specified. Then return and give them over. He's relatively pleased and rewards you.

➤ Gold pieces

◆ TIP Sergius even takes Soul Gems you find lining the shelves across the College (as long as you aren't stealing them), reducing your traveling considerably!

Postquest Activities

You may now speak to him again or to another mage, and begin another Radiant Quest. The gold pieces you are awarded are 120 percent of the value of the gems you delivered, making this worth your time.

NOTE This Radiant Quest becomes available as soon as you join the College. You can repeat it multiple times. It is always given to you by Urag gro-Shub. It is separate from Radiant Quest: Shalidor's Insights.

Talk with Urag gro-Shub in the College's Arcanaeum, and ask whether there's any College business you can help him with. He's always wanting more books for the library and pays for those collected from more dangerous areas. Agree to this work, and Urag updates your map and objective with the last known location of a particularly important tome.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Find the copy of [a random book]
◆ TARGET: [A random book] in [a random location]

Quest Conclusion

Journey to the location indicated on your in-game world map, which can be any dungeon or fortification that has a large treasure chest within its walls. Battle through the enemies until you reach the book's location: a large treasure chest.

➤ [A random book]

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return the book to Urag gro-Shub

Take the book, head back to the Arcanaeum, and tell Urag you have the book he was looking for. He is pleased with your progress and offers a reward for your troubles.

➤ Gold pieces

Postquest Activities

You may now speak to him again or to another mage and begin another Radiant Quest. The gold pieces you are awarded are 120 percent of the value of the books you delivered. Continue this indefinitely, as you wish.

SHALIDOR'S INSIGHTS

NOTE This Radiant Quest becomes available as soon as you join the College. It is repeatable, but once you complete it, you must wait two or three days for it to become available again. It is always given to you by Urag gro-Shub and is separate from Radiant Quest: Valuable Book Procurement.*

Speak to Urag gro-Shub in the College's Arcanaeum. During the conversation, ask him if there are any special books he's looking for. He mentions Shalidor, a powerful mage from the First Era. His writings are scattered across Skyrim, and only Urag can translate them. He's heard whispers that more of his work has turned up, and he wants you to find it.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Find Shalidor's writings
◆ TARGET: Shalidor's Insights, in [a random location]

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Urag gro-Shub

Take the book, head back to the Arcanaeum, and give the book over. Then return after 48 hours, which gives Urag enough time to translate the script within the tome. As a reward, he (randomly) gives you three of any of the following scrolls or increases one of your magic skills:

- Shalidor's Insights: Alteration (3) or
- Shalidor's Insights: Conjuration (3) or
- Shalidor's Insights: Destruction (3) or
- Shalidor's Insights: Illusion (3) or
- Shalidor's Insights: Restoration (3) or
- Shalidor's Insights: Magicka (3)
- +1 to Alteration, Conjuration, Destruction, Illusion, or Restoration skill

NOTE The Alteration, Conjuration, Destruction, Illusion, and Restoration scrolls halve the Magicka cost of spells of that specific skill and double their duration. This lasts two minutes. The Magicka scroll fortifies Magicka by 100 and doubles regeneration for two minutes.

Quest Conclusion

Head to the location indicated on your in-game world map, which can be any dungeon or fortification with a large treasure chest. Battle through the denizens there until you reach the book's location: inside a large treasure chest.

Postquest Activities

You may now speak to Urag gro-Shub again or to another mage and begin another Radiant Quest.

While exploring the forgotten catacombs beneath Winterhold College, you'll probably stumble upon a large dais in a chamber seemingly reserved for conjuration...and possibly darker arts! This is the Atronach forge, an arcane device capable of converting mundane items into various relics from beyond Oblivion. A nearby book provides details on the forge and on a few basic recipes for conjuring Atronachs at the forge. However, the real power of the forge lies in its ability to turn several mundane items into something much more potent and arcane.

Beware! These aren't the subservient Atronachs you'll control with a typical Conjunction spell; they attack on sight.

CAUTION

► Book: The Atronach Forge

NOTE Once you meet the Augur during the College of Winterhold Quests, additional recipes can be found while exploring Skyrim, especially when battling magic-using enemies. Loot containers or corpses to find more of them. Or simply read on!

Basic Recipes: To create an arcane item, place the required mundane items for a specific recipe into the golden offering box and activate the nearby pull bar. The forge combines and consumes the items for the first complete recipe it finds. The created item (or creature) then appears on the dais.

Daedric Recipes—Hail Sigill: After completing the Conjunction Ritual Spell Quest, you're awarded with a Sigil Stone. That item can upgrade the Atronach forge, and with the Sigil Stone in place, more powerful Daedric items can be crafted! These recipes are also found as rare loot but appear only after you receive the Sigil Stone.

Venture into the deepest reaches of the Midden Dark and find the bizarre remnants of magical experiments gone awry. Among those is a relic in the shape of a Daedric Gauntlet emblazoned with the Sigil of Oblivion. Nearby is a key and journal that once belonged to a mage who was investigating the disappearance of four students.

► Book (relating to Daedric Relic) ► Key to Arcanaeum Chest

Read the book to learn that there was little trace of the missing students, but four mysterious ringlike relics were recovered from the gauntlet and locked away in the Arcanaeum, where they still remain. Try to avoid being noticed as you reclaim these from an Investigation Chest on the north wall of the library.

(Pickpocket) Or, simply pick the lock and steal the rings; if you're expedient, you can attempt this before entering the Midden.

► Ceremonial Rings (4)

Return to the Midden Dark with the ceremonial rings, and attempt to match each ring to its corresponding finger. There's no penalty for guessing incorrectly. Pithiken's ring belongs on the little finger, Balwen's fits the ring finger, Treoy's ring belongs on the middle finger, and Katarina's fits the index finger. When all four rings are fitted, the fingers of the relic curl shut, and a disoriented Dremora is summoned into the chamber with you! This is Velehk Sain, who the students unwittingly permitted into the world. He's since made himself a legendary pirate of the Abecean Sea and will offer a share of his booty if you'll release him. Otherwise, prepare yourself to tangle with an ethereal foe from beyond!

If you release the Dremora, a treasure map appears in your inventory. The treasure is magically concealed and only reveals when the map comes within its range. You can find this stash to the west of Winterhold College, at the foot of a shelf below a large Talos shrine. Look for it on a small, coastal island just offshore.

► Velehk's Treasure Map ► Velehk's Stash

AFTERSHOCK

NOTE This Radiant Quest becomes available once you complete College of Winterhold Quest: The Eye of Magnus. You can repeat it multiple times. It is always given to you by Tolfdir.

Once the events of the Eye of the Magnus have subsided, converse with Tolfdir. He informs you there have been reports of some kind of magical anomaly appearing in Skyrim. He fears this may be a side effect of Ancano's meddling with the Eye of Magnus and requests that you find out what is going on. He also recommends bringing along the Staff of Magnus.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Close the rupture

◆ TARGET: Rupture, in [a random location]

Journey to the outdoor location with the perceived rift (which can be anywhere on Skyrim's exterior surface, in any Hold), and battle any entities you see prowling the area close by. Brandish your Staff of Magnus, and destroy the three Magic Anomalies surrounding the rupture. This seals it away and restores what passes for normality around these parts.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Tolfdir

Quest Conclusion

Return to the College of Winterhold and speak with Tolfdir, confirming that the rupture was there, and you dealt with it. You are not rewarded if the rift occurred in Winterhold Hold, as this was part of the College's problem and needed to be covered up before the already-angry population got any more furious with mages. If the rift occurred in any other Hold, you're given the following:

► 300 to 500 gold pieces

Postquest Activities

You may now speak to Tolfdir again or to another mage and begin another Radiant Quest.

ROGUE WIZARD

NOTE This Radiant Quest becomes available once you complete College of Winterhold Quest: The Eye of Magnus. You can repeat it multiple times. It is always given to you by Tolfdir.

When the events of the Eye of the Magnus have quieted down, converse with Tolfdir. The venerable mage says that he has received word of a troublesome mage who is hell-bent on wrecking havoc in the realm. The sorcerer in question is formidable and may have felt the effects of the Eye closing.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Deal with the rogue wizard

◆ TARGET: Rogue wizard, in [a random location]

Head to the dungeon or building where the enemy mage was last sighted, and battle your way to a confrontation. The Insane College Wizard is usually powerful and may have strong allies to defeat, too. The wizard is always wearing the College's robes. He is hardly a good role model for the organization, considering its ongoing struggles for acceptance in Nordic Skyrim. Finish the foe off, grabbing any nearby loot that is dropped or on the corpse.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Tolfdir

Quest Conclusion

Return to the College of Winterhold and speak with Tolfdir, letting him know you have defeated this appalling advertisement for the College. Your only reward is thanks from the College.

Postquest Activities

You may now speak to Tolfdir again or to another mage and begin another Radiant Quest.

ARNIEL'S ENDEAVORS

These four Radiant Quests are available from Arniel, a reclusive and timid experimenter within the College.

Arniel's Endeavor (Part 1)

NOTE This Radiant Quest becomes available after you complete College of Winterhold: Under Saarthal. It is given to you only by Arniel, and you can complete it only once.

Locate Arniel Gane and ask if there's any College business you can assist him with. There's nothing officially, the nervous mage tells you, but he does mention a "project" that he's been working on. He refuses to divulge any information about it, but he requires you to bring him 10 Dwemer Cogs. He needs to examine them.

◇ OBJECTIVE: Bring Arniel Gane Dwemer Cogs (10)

The Dwemer Cogs in question are golden, and many are scattered throughout the Dwarven Ruins and dungeons of Skyrim. Check every stone table, chest, and dwarven machinery for possible cogs to gather. Be patient, as this takes some time. You may wish to combine your searching with other quests (such as Main Quest: Elder Knowledge).

TIP Another option is to visit Understone Keep in Marthal, search the ruins of Nchuand-Zel, and then sneak into Calcelmo's Museum (or get his permission to visit) and steal any cogs you haven't found — or grab all ten from there. There's obvious hostility consequences if you're caught trying to enter the museum, though.

➤ Dwemer Cog (10)

◇ OBJECTIVE: Deliver the Dwemer Cogs to Arniel Gane

Quest Conclusion

He is most pleased and rewards you with some gold.

➤ [Leveled] gold pieces

Postquest Activities

Arniel continues his research, but it is three entire days before it produces results.

Arniel's Endeavor (Part 2)

NOTE This Radiant Quest becomes available after you complete Arniel's Endeavor (Part 1) and wait three days. It is given to you only by Arniel and can be completed only once.

After you hand over the Dwemer Cogs Arniel had requested, he thanks you, and you can ask if he requires further assistance. He needs more help with his project, but this involves a fellow wizard. Enthir is refusing to follow through on a trade regarding an important item Arniel needs for his work. He hopes you'll talk to Enthir on his behalf.

◇ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Enthir

When you find Enthir and ask about the item, he tells you Arniel misinformed you; he was going to sell the item to Arniel but decided against it. You can have the item, but Enthir needs you to find a staff one of Enthir's "friends" (likely himself) wishes to acquire. The staff is in the hands of unfriendly folks. If you bring Enthir the staff, he'll consider it payment for Arniel's item.

◇ OBJECTIVE: Acquire the Staff

◆ TARGET: Staff of Tandil, in [a random dungeon]

Set off to the dungeon or fortification Enthir specified (on your world map), and battle a hardy foe for the staff, which is usually on his or her corpse.

➤ Staff of Tandil

◇ OBJECTIVE: Deliver the staff to Enthir

Quest Conclusion

Return to the College and hand over the staff you obtained. Enthir honors his end of the deal and gives you a gem Arniel was after. Find Arniel, speak to him to give over the Soul Gem Enthir just handed you, and he thanks you profusely.

➤ Warped Soul Gem

Postquest Activities

Arniel continues his research, but it may be a while before it produces results. Complete the indicated quests to begin the third part.

Arniel's Endeavor (Part 3)

NOTE This Radiant Quest becomes available after you complete Arniel's Endeavor (Part 2) and after the College of Winterhold Quest: The Eye of Magnus ends. You can complete it only once, and it is given to you only by Arniel.

In the aftermath of the battle for the College of Winterhold, Arniel has been beaver away on his secret project. Ask how the project is coming along, and the news isn't good. He's destroyed a prototype and explains that the Dwemer technology he's tinkering with was put together by a race of beings that mastered magic in a way that is inconceivable to current mages. He's trying to re-create the circumstances of the failure to see what he can learn. While the Dwemer tapped power from the Heart of Lorkhan (a dead god), Arniel is making do with a Warped Soul Gem. But the Gem needs to be purified in a Dwarven Convector, which Arniel constructed and recently destroyed.

If you're willing to help, the Convector machines that exist deep within the dwarven ruins could be used to heat the Gem. Arniel even teaches you the spell to heat a Convector to the correct temperature. You are to find a Dwarven Convector, place the Warped Soul Gem inside, and heat it for at least three seconds. Approximately three Connectors will be needed, so this is a quest that requires much trekking.

➤ Warped Soul Gem

➤ Spell: Arniel's Convection

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Place the Warped Soul Gem into a Convector
- ◆ TARGET: Dwarven Convector, [in a random location]

Your journey into Dwarven Ruins begins now! Follow your Quest Targets and fight or sneak through the indicated locations until you reach a Convector. Convector can be found in the following locations:

- Inside the first interior location of Mzulft
- Inside a small dungeon located near the main entrance to Mzulft
- Out in the wilderness southwest of Shor's Stone
- Outside the entrance to Bthalf
- Outdoors near Deep Folk Crossing
- Along the river, northeast of Druadach Redoubt

You find each Convector easily, as it has a quest target on your compass. When you finally arrive at the Convector, access it and store the Warped Soul Gem in the Convector. Remember to store it first! Your objective updates:

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Heat the Convector
- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Retrieve the Soul Gem

Now equip Arniel's Convection spell and blast the Convector for three seconds to heat it up. The Soul Gem becomes superheated, while its extremities remain oddly cold to the touch. Take the Soul Gem from the Convector and begin a lengthy trek to the next Convector scattered around Skyrim; it will be pinpointed on your world map. When you've superheated the Warped Soul Gem in three separate Convector, the Gem finally becomes potent enough to be used in whatever clandestine experiment Arniel is conducting.

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Arniel Gane

Quest Conclusion

Return to Arniel's location, and hand over the Warped Soul Gem. The single-minded tinkerer thanks you for your help. Perhaps you'll see his actual experiment at some point?

Postquest Activities

Arniel continues his research, but it may be a while before it produces results.

Arniel's Endeavor (Part 4)

- ◆ NOTE This Radiant Quest becomes available after you complete Arniel's Endeavor (Part 3) and the College of Winterhold Quest: The Eye of Magnus ends. You can complete it only once, and it is given to you only by Arniel.

Wait 30 hours and speak to Arniel once again. Although he's been having success using your Warped Soul Gem, he still requires an incredibly important piece of this puzzle (which you still haven't seen yet), and that pesky Enthir is failing to uphold an agreement to deliver the item. Arniel asks you to sort this problem out.

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Enthir

Enthir is usually in the College or the Hold City of Winterhold. When you quiz him about the package Arniel wants, he appears a little exasperated, explaining that he doesn't need money—Arniel overpaid for the item—but the courier never arrived from Morrowind. He has little idea where the courier is but knows the package is likely to be with the courier.

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Find the courier
- ◆ TARGET: Courier, in [a random dungeon]

Journey to the location indicated on your world map, and begin a systematic search of the area until you find the Courier, who's looking a little worse for wear. Fortunately, whatever killed him ignored the package he was seeking to deliver. Remove a strange-looking dwarven dagger named Keening.

➤ Keening

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Deliver the package to Arniel

- ◆ TIP You can try out the dagger against foes if you wish.

Head back to Arniel's location at the College. Inform him you have the dagger that he wanted. He is both excited and worried; it seems the courier company didn't even wrap the item correctly!

- ◆ NOTE Arniel is right to be worried: Keening is a blade made infamous during the adventures of a champion of Morrowind. At the time, this weapon was an immensely powerful and dangerous artifact that could kill the wielder if used without the proper equipment. This explains why Arniel is concerned about the state it has arrived in and why he didn't inform Enthir of the true value of this fabled artifact!

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Observe Arniel's experiment

Quest Conclusion

Ask Arniel if he has everything he needs, and he excitedly exclaims that he does. Keening was one of the great tools of the dwarves and a nearly priceless artifact. It was used to tap into the Heart of Lorkahn. With this dagger, Arniel can test his theories regarding why the dwarves disappeared. This grand experiment was to re-create those events and thus unravel the mystery. Arniel begins the experiment. Watch as nothing continues to happen, until Arniel applies some considerable pressure, loses his temper, and then blinks out of existence completely!

Postquest Activities

Arniel has disappeared! He leaves Keening behind. Keep it as a memento (it absorbs Health, Magicka, and Stamina). Who knows if he'll ever be seen again? Well, actually you do; you are granted a new spell. Try this out and see who arrives and what he has to say....

➤ Spell: Summon Arniel's Shade

APPRENTICE RADIANT QUESTS

These three Radiant Quests are available from the Apprentices you trained with under Mage Tolfdir.

BRELYNA'S PRACTICE

NOTE This Apprentice Radiant Quest becomes available after you complete the College of Winterhold Quest: Under Saarthal. You can complete it only once, and it is given to you only by Brelyna.

After a couple of chats with Brelyna, she asks if you have a moment to help her with something. Agree, and she says the reason she's here is to become a better mage, just like the rest of you. But she needs a willing volunteer she can cast practice spells on. Apparently, they aren't dangerous. You can refuse, agree, or ask what's in it for you, and she begrudgingly offers you an amulet if you'll help.

Stand still in front of her, and Brelyna releases a spell that turns everything green. Her reassurances that this wasn't supposed to happen aren't reassuring. Wait until the spell's effects wear off and you can see properly again. Then return to Brelyna. Agree to more aural punishment, as she tries a "variation" on the first spell. You transform into a cow. Then you appear as a horse and a dog. Finally, you return to normal. She isn't convinced this has worked any better and suggests it's probably better to stop.

Quest Conclusion

After those spell failures, Brelyna is thankful that you helped her test out her spells and offers to help you on your travels.

- Follower: Brelyna
- Enchanted Necklace (random)

J'ZARGO'S EXPERIMENT

NOTE This Apprentice Radiant Quest becomes available after you complete the College of Winterhold Quest: Under Saarthal. You can complete it only once, and it is given to you only by J'Zargo.

After a few conversations with J'Zargo, he asks if you could possibly help him. Ask what he needs, and he tells you he's been working hard learning new spells but has little time to test them. If he gives you scrolls with a spell he's inscribed, you're to use them and report back with the results. Agree, and J'Zargo tells you about the excellent variation on a Flame Cloak spell, with special potency against the undead. He hands them over.

➤ J'Zargo's Flame Cloak Scroll (10)

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Test J'Zargo's Flame Cloak spell on the undead (3)
- ◆ TARGET: Draugr, in [any Draugr-infested location]

Journey to any Nordic crypt where the Draugr are restless. You can do this while other, more crucial quests are in progress. When you conjure the Flame Cloak, you're submerged in writhing fire, which promptly explodes, causing damage to everything living and undead in a six-foot radius from you. Try coaxing three Draugr close to you so you need cast this only once. If you run out of scrolls without burning three Draugr, you can ask J'Zargo for more.

TIP Using the scrolls is a lot faster if you select them as "Favorites" and quickly flick between a scroll and your usual weaponry. Also use items or spells to reduce your fire damage (or have a healing spell close at hand). Remember that this has most of the properties of a Flame Cloak spell, except it explodes when you near undead (and only undead).

The damage inflicted on you by this Flame Cloak can be severe. It isn't wise to employ it when multiple Draugr are near!

CAUTION

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Test Speak to J'Zargo

Quest Conclusion

After that burning sensation, J'Zargo apologizes. He is grateful that you helped him test out his spell and offers to help you on your adventures.

- Follower: J'Zargo

NOTE This Apprentice Radiant Quest becomes available after you complete the College of Winterhold Quest: Under Saarthal. You can complete it only once, and it is given to you only by Onmund.

After a couple of conversations with Onmund, he asks you for help regarding a private matter. When you ask what is wrong, he tells you he's entered into an "agreement" with Enthir. Onmund has mistakenly traded an amulet that belongs to his family, and he regrets parting with it. He hopes you can talk to him and get it back. Ask him more questions about the amulet if you wish before heading off to find Enthir.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak with Enthir

Head to Enthir's room in the Hall of Attainment, or elsewhere in the College if he's wandering, and tell him that he has something of Onmund's, who wants it back. Enthir scoffs and tells you his trades are firm and final. Apparently, there's nothing more to be said. You can:

(Persuade) Tell him it's in everyone's best interest if he returns the amulet.

Or ask him if there's something you can do to change his mind.

Enthir isn't interested in you buying the amulet, and the persuasion is difficult (but not impossible). Usually, you're left with a task Enthir wishes you to complete: He tells you a story about someone (him) who traded some valuables for a staff. Afterward, that someone (Enthir) realized the staff might be misused. This would make that person (him) look bad. So he wants the staff back and fails to see any irony in this task. Agree to this.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Find the staff for Enthir

◆ TARGET: Grand Staff of Charming, in [a random location]

The staff is located randomly, somewhere in one of Skyrim's dungeons or crypts. Find it on your world map, enter the location, and fight your way to the staff, which is always in a large treasure chest.

➤ Grand Staff of Charming

◆ OBJECTIVE: Deliver the staff to Enthir

Quest Conclusion

Return to Enthir and make the swap.

➤ Onmund's Amulet

◆ OBJECTIVE: Deliver the amulet to Onmund

Now find Onmund and return the amulet to him. He thanks you and now values you as a true friend. He offers to help you on your travels.

➤ Follower: Onmund

RITUAL SPELL RADIANT QUESTS

DESTRUCTION RITUAL SPELL

PREREQUISITES: Destruction Skill of 90
INTERSECTING QUESTS: None

NOTE This Ritual Spell Quest becomes available as soon as your Destruction skill reaches 90. It is always given to you by Faralda.

Talk to Faralda inside the College, and ask her if there's anything else to be learned regarding Destruction magic. But of course there is a fabled tome known as the Power of the Elements, which Faralda hands to you. It is imbued with power, but most of the magical text inscribed on it is missing. Faralda wishes you to travel to various locations within Skyrim to finish imbuing the tome to increase its potency. Return with the completed book.

➤ Power of the Elements

◆ OBJECTIVE: Complete the book Powers of the Elements

◆ TARGET: Windward Ruins, North Skybound Watch, Four Skulls

Power Convergence:

When you examine the book, a vague description points you to a source of power for this tome: Windward Ruins. Journey there and locate the pedestal. Place the book on it and begin your imbuing by casting any flame-based spell at the book. Instead of burning, there's a small explosion. Pick the book up, and there is additional writing. Study this and the tome points you toward North Skybound Watch. Find the pedestal here and place the book on it once more; this time, cast any frost-based spell. After another explosion and more writing appearing, your journey points you to Four Skulls. Find the final pedestal here, and cast any shock-based magic at it. When you pick the book up this time, its secrets are revealed:

➤ Power of the Elements (completed)

➤ Spell: Fire Storm

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Faralda

Quest Conclusion

Return to Faralda and show her the Power of the Elements. She is pleased with both your abilities and the Destruction spells she can study and learn.

Postquest Activities

Along with the Fire Storm spell, Faralda now has the following spells for sale, should you wish to buy any:

➤ Spell: Blizzard

➤ Spell: Lightning Storm

ILLUSION RITUAL SPELL

PREREQUISITES: Illusion Skill of 90

INTERSECTING QUESTS: None

NOTE This Ritual Spell Quest becomes available as soon as your Illusion skill reaches 90. It is always given to you by Drevis Neloren.

Talk to Drevis Neloren inside the College, and ask him if there's anything else to be learned regarding Illusion magic. Indeed there is; there are several books that Urag isn't even aware of, hidden tomes completely invisible to the naked eye, that are scattered around the College. They contain information that, when read together, may unlock some as-yet-unknown Illusion spells. You are granted a spell that enhances your vision—the only possible method of finding these books. Return with the books. Ask further questions if you need to.

➤ Spell: Vision of the Tenth Eye

◆ OBJECTIVE: Bring the Four Master Illusion Texts to Drevis Neloren

◆ TARGET: Master Illusion Texts, within College of Winterhold

Focusing the Tenth Eye: Begin a careful search of the entire College of Winterhold. There are four texts to find, and they are reasonably easier to spot if you're being thorough, checking on top of barrels, below benches, on tables, or bookshelves. It also helps to know where each of the texts resides: There is book in the Arcanaeum, one in the Hall of Countenance, one in the Hall of Attainment, and one in the Midden. Search each area thoroughly.

➤ Master Illusion Text (4)

◆ OBJECTIVE: Bring the Four Master Illusion Texts to Drevis Neloren

Quest Conclusion

Return to Drevis Neloren and reveal the four Master Illusion Texts in your possession. He is impressed and immediately awards you with a spell:

➤ Spell Tome: Hysteria

Postquest Activities

Along with the Hysteria spell, Drevis Neloren now has the following spells for sale, should you wish to buy any:

➤ Spell: Call to Arms ➤ Spell: Harmony ➤ Spell: Mayhem

CONJURATION RITUAL SPELL

PREREQUISITES: Conjuration Skill of 90

INTERSECTING QUESTS: Radiant Quest: The Atronach Forge*

NOTE This Ritual Spell Quest becomes available as soon as your Conjuration skill reaches 90. It is always given to you by Phinis Gestor. Completing this allows you to create more powerful items as you upgrade the Atronach forge.

Speak to Phinis Gestor inside the College, and ask him if there's anything else to be learned regarding Conjuration magic. Indeed there is: powerful spells that can more closely and permanently bind creatures to your will. One of the riskiest involves summoning and commanding an Unbound Dremora. Phinis agrees to teach you the summoning spell, but it will work only in a properly prepared location. When you summon the Dremora, you must order it to deliver you a Sigil Stone from an Oblivion gate. Return with the stone, and Phinis will inscribe the spells you've yet to learn. Ask further questions if you need to.

➤ Summon Unbound Dremora

◆ OBJECTIVE: Summon and subdue an Unbound Dremora

◆ TARGET: Unbound Dremora, top of the Hall of Attainment, College of Winterhold

Binding the Unbound:

Once you're on the roof of the Hall of Attainment, approach the area Phinis has prepared and attempt the spell. When the Dremora appears, it is extremely angry at your impertinence and refuses to yield to you.

Quickly change your weapons to those you favor when fighting foes, and battle the Dremora. Dispatch it, banishing it back to Oblivion. Rest if you need to and summon the Dremora again. Seething with rage, it again refuses to yield. Kill it so it is banished once more.

When you summon the Dremora for a third time, its demeanor is somewhat subdued. Speak to it, commanding it to bend to your will. Summon it one more time. On this fourth occasion, it grudgingly oblige your wishes: Order it to retrieve the Sigil Stone. It disappears and returns with the Sigil Stone.

➤ Sigil Stone

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Phinis Gestor

Quest Conclusion

Return to Phinis and present him with the Sigil Stone. He is pleased with both your abilities and the Conjuration spells he can release. In return, he hands you back the Sigil Stone and teaches you a new spell.

➤ Spell: Flame Thrall

Postquest Activities

Along with the Flame Thrall spell, Phinis now has the following spells for sale, should you wish to buy any:

➤ Spell: Dead Thrall

➤ Spell: Frost Thrall

➤ Spell: Storm Thrall

In addition, you can plug the Sigil Stone into the Atronach forge in the Midden. Otherwise, this is a very pretty paperweight.

PREREQUISITES: Restoration Skill of 90
INTERSECTING QUESTS: None

NOTE This Ritual Spell Quest becomes available as soon as your Restoration skill reaches 90 and after you meet the Augur during College of Winterhold Quest: Good Intentions. It is always given to you by Colette Marence.

Talk to Colette Marence inside the College, and question her about what else there is to learn about Restoration magic. She's comforted that you've not dismissed this art, unlike the other College members. It seems you are ready to speak with the Augur, who was especially gifted when it came to Restoration magic. He's very particular about who he shares his knowledge with. You need his approval first.

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Gain the Augur's approval
- ◆ TARGET: Augur of Dunlain, in the Midden, in the College of Winterhold

Journey into the Midden under the College, and seek out the Augur of Dunlain's circular chamber. This sage already knew you were coming to seek something and that he has it. He asks if you are prepared. Answer how you wish, and the Augur explains that you're about to be tested not on your belongings, scrolls, or potions, but on what lies within. Are you ready to step into the light? Confirm you are with the Augur.

The Augur conjures a portal, and you must step through it. At that very moment, you are stripped of all your equipment, including melee weapons, potions, armor, and any clothing. The door to the Augur's chamber is sealed. The only protection you have are your Restoration spells. Use these to survive as a ghost appears in this chamber. After the first ghost appears, a second one manifests after ten seconds, and then a third appears after ten more seconds. All are invincible to any other attacks. After ten more seconds, all the ghosts disappear.

Quest Conclusion

The Augur appears after a few moments and is impressed by your learning of magic. He returns all of your equipment and rewards you with the following spell:

- Spell Tome: Bane of the Undead

ALTERATION RITUAL SPELL

PREREQUISITES: Alteration Skill of 90
INTERSECTING QUESTS: None

NOTE This Ritual Spell Quest becomes available as soon as your Alteration skill reaches 90. It is always given to you by Tolfdir.

Speak to Tolfdir inside the College, and ask if there's anything more you can learn about Alteration magic. As it happens, Tolfdir has been working on an improvement on the Ebonyflesh spell and has hit a snag. He requires dragon scales for his incantations, as he uses their essence, but they lack potency. From ancient records, he's discovered references to dragon "Heartscales." In addition, there are stories of a dagger called "Kavohzein's Fang," which is sharp enough to carve these scales off a dragon. You are to retrieve the dagger, use it to carve off a few Heartscales from a dragon's corpse, and return the scales to him.

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Use Kavohzein's Fang to collect Heartscales
- ◆ TARGET: Kavohzein's Fang, inside [a Dragon Priest's dungeon]

Finding the Fang: The dagger is randomly located in one of the large dungeon crypts and guarded by a fearsome Dragon Priest. Battle through the dungeon, slay the Dragon Priest, and locate the treasure chest close to its corpse. The chest contains Kavohzein's Fang. The following table shows the possible locations to try:

✓	DRAGON PRIEST	LOCATION	INTERSECTING QUEST
<input type="checkbox"/>	Rahgot	Forelhost	Dungeon Quest: Siege on the Dragon Cult
<input type="checkbox"/>	Vokun	High Gate Ruins	Dungeon Quest: A Scroll for Anska
<input type="checkbox"/>	Morokei	Labyrinthian	College of Winterhold Quest: The Staff of Magnus
<input type="checkbox"/>	Krosis	Kilcreath Ruins	None
<input type="checkbox"/>	Otar	Ragnvald	Dungeon Quest: Sarcophagus of Ragnvald*
<input type="checkbox"/>	Nahkriin	Skuldfafn	Main Quest: The World Eater's Eyrie
<input type="checkbox"/>	Hevnoraak	Valthume	Dungeon Quest: Evil in Waiting
<input type="checkbox"/>	Volsung	Volskygge	None

➤ Kavohzein's Fang

NOTE For more information on Dragon Priests, consult Side Quest: Masks of the Dragon Priests.*

Scavenging the Scales: Now that you have the dagger, you need to find a dragon. If you haven't completed Main Quest: Dragon Rising, do so now. Otherwise:

Battle a dragon with any and all offensive weaponry you have. After you kill it, approach the dragon's corpse and equip Kavohzein's Fang. You don't have to fight the dragon with the dagger; only search the corpse with it in your hand. Among the other items, you receive Heartscales from the corpse.

Or, simply return to any dragon you've previously killed, and search the corpse. This is a much quicker and easier option!

➤ Heartscales

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Tolfdir

Quest Conclusion

Meet Tolfdir again, and inform him that you have the dragon Heartscales that he requires. He is most excited about this and crafts a brand-new spell.

- Spell: Dragonskin

Postquest Activities

Along with the Dragonskin spell, Tolfdir now has the following spell for sale, should you wish to purchase it:

- Spell: Mass Paralysis

THIEVES GUILD QUESTS

OVERVIEW

Optimal Quest Start

The Thieves Guild Quests begin when you arrive at Riften for the first time. You can join the Guild whenever you like, although Stealth-focused characters may want to join sooner rather than later to gain access to this ready source of missions and trainers. Most of the other characters will encounter the Guild much later, as part of Main Quest: A Cornered Rat.

NOTE Cross-Referencing: Do you want to see maps and learn more about the traps, non-quest-related items, collectibles, crafting areas, and other important rooms of note in every location during these quests? Then cross-reference the location you travel to with the information on that location contained in this guide's Atlas.

Sanctuary: The Ragged Flagon, under Riften

The Ratway is the underbelly of Riften, both literally and figuratively. It is a cross-section of old avenues, buildings, and catacombs buried beneath the shifting surface of the city. After navigating these treacherous tunnels, fending off beggars, muggers, and Skeevers, you reach the Ragged Flagon, where mead and machinations run wild. The Ragged Flagon is retrofitted into the Cistern located beneath the well in the center of Riften's marketplace; it's the market beneath the market. This is the central part of the Ratway, and offers access into the Warrens (where only the most deranged of madfolk dwell) and the inner chambers of the Cistern.

Currently hidden in the woodland south of Riften, away from those who aren't blessed by Nocturnal herself, Nightingale Hall is the source of power and residence for the Nightingales, a strange and secretive subset of the Thieves Guild. No one knows quite what these powerful individuals are up to, but many scholars have speculated that Nightingales carry out the wishes of Nocturnal.

Important Characters

Patron: Nocturnal

Nocturnal, the Mistress of Shadows, is the daedric lord of twilight and shadow and the patron of thieves and gamblers, and influences luck throughout the realm. Her passiveness in the affairs of man only deepen her mystery. On the occasions where she deals directly with mortals, such as in the case of the Nightingales, she usually refers to everything in almost businesslike terms, calling oaths "transactions" and making "deals" with her followers.

Guild Master: Mercer Frey

Mercer grew up with Delvin Mallory in the Guild but climbed the ladder a little faster and was able to attain his rank in the Guild through manipulation and skill. He is the current head of the Thieves Guild of Skyrim. Frey is very clever, and even though he is a bit older, he is certainly not weak, maintaining a calm veneer and never appearing troubled or agitated.

Guild Second: Brynjolf

Brynjolf is a go-between, passing Mercer Frey's rulings down to the newer recruits, whom he mentors and is fiercely proud of. He is extremely loyal to the Thieves Guild and has a reputation for being a problem solver, especially within Riften, where he maintains an excellent rapport with those who cooperate with them. When not in the Guild itself, he is often at the Ragged Flagon or the marketplace topside, scoping out possibilities for new recruits.

Former Guild Second (Outcast): Karliah

Karliah, a female Dunmer, was exiled from Riften after being accused of murdering Gallus. Her exile was self-imposed, under duress. She has been keeping an ear open for the right opportunity to arise and repay certain Guild members for their treachery. At first glance, Karliah is very cold and withdrawn. She isn't used to much company, keeping herself in isolation. But those who warm to her will find Karliah to be quite cunning and agile.

Former Guild Master (Deceased): Gallus Desidenius

Gallus was Mercer Frey's predecessor as Guild Master for the Thieves Guild in Skyrim. He was also a member of the Nightingale Trinity along with Karliah. Gallus was killed under suspicious circumstances.

Guild Third: Delvin Mallory

Delvin grew up in Riften's Honorhall Orphanage. He was taken in by Gallus, but Delvin accidentally killed a man while on a robbery. Gallus arranged to have Delvin stay with the Dark Brotherhood, and he remained in hiding in their sanctuary for a year. While there, Delvin gained a new respect for the shadowy organization. After the death was long forgotten, Delvin Mallory returned to Riften, and the embrace of the Thieves Guild, but never forgot his friends in the Dark Brotherhood (and his lover, Astrid).

➤ Additional Jobs Giver

➤ Fence

➤ Trainer (Stealth: Master):
Delvin Mallory

Guild Third: Vex

One of the newer members of the Thieves Guild, Vex is quiet and rarely shares in the normal camaraderie of her fellow guildmates. Since she refuses to give her real name and based on her actions, others began to call her "Vex." She is an exceptional thief and is well aware that her behavior alienates her. And she likes it that way. Of all the Guild members, she is the best combatant (save for Mercer Frey). Accosting her in the Ragged Flagon was the last mistake several of its non-Guild denizens ever made.

➤ Additional Jobs Giver

➤ Trainer (Lockpicking: Master): Vex

Guild Matron: Maven Black-Briar

A powerful businesswoman, Maven is virtually unapproachable and elitist. Maven's wealth, power, and influence in Riften make her an important asset to the Thieves Guild. She holds the actual pulse of Riften within her crushing grasp; nothing gets done without her say-so. She's well connected within the Empire and Skyrim alike. Anyone who crosses her usually ends up dead or in prison—even her son, Sibbi Black-Briar.

Guild Member: Etienne Rarnis

Defiant, tough, but ultimately broken by the Thalmor, Etienne was responsible for revealing the location of Esbern's hideout during Main Quest: Diplomatic Immunity. He seeks revenge on the man that caused his arrest; a ne'er-do-well spy named Gissur.

Guild Member: Dirge

Dirge is a hulking behemoth of an Imperial who serves as the bouncer and general crowd control for the Ragged Flagon. Dirge earned his nickname because his voice is the last thing people hear before they die. He has been good friends with Vekel the Man for years.

Guild Member: Vipir the Fleet

Vipir earned his name from the speed at which he can run and outmaneuver armored opponents. He plays to his strength and is most adept at pickpocketing and snatch-and-grab robberies. Of all the Thieves Guild members, Vipir is the most down-to-earth. He rarely acts condescendingly and is never overly rude or brash, but he can still handle himself when backed into a corner. He's quite approachable and excellent for learning what's new around the Guild.

➤ Trainer (Pickpocket: Master): Vipir the Fleet

Guild Member: Niruin

Niruin wandered into the Ragged Flagon with a well-worn travel cloak and a huge sack of coin that he "gifted" to Mercer Frey. He grew up in Valenwood as the son of a very wealthy Wood Elf Lord but very quickly grew tired of the pomp and circumstance that was expected of him. Thinking himself quite cavalier, he raided his father's treasury and joined the Guild but possesses very little aptitude for actual theft. The only thing that has kept Niruin in the Guild's good graces is his gift of gab.

➤ Trainer (Archery: Master): Niruin

Guild Member: Sapphire

Sapphire (the name she goes by within the Guild) left the Dark Brotherhood several years ago to satisfy her lust for wealth. Joining the Thieves Guild, she instantly became a natural at larceny, specializing in lifting the valuable (and favored) gemstones bearing her name. Sapphire is extraordinarily withdrawn, spending her time day training, always honing her skills with both the bow and the blade.

Guild Member: Cynric Endell

Cynric is an older member of the Thieves Guild, joining shortly after Brynjolf and Delvin Mallory. He's quiet, reserved, and generally not as boisterous as the rest of his fellow Guild members, but once in conversation, his extreme cynicism surfaces. His specialty is break-ins, which he executes with his superior lockpicking abilities. He's never been a problem for the Guild but tends to shy away from leadership, explaining why Vex surpassed him as a Guild Third.

Guild Member: Thrynn

Thrynn ran with a group of bandits for years until they forced him to slaughter a farming village full of women and children. He couldn't take that way of life anymore. He wandered Skyrim and bumped into Brynjolf in Riften. Despite his attitude, Brynjolf saw Thrynn's potential with a blade and allowed him to join. Thrynn has little experience as a stealthy thief. However, when the Guild needs a troubleshooter and brute force is necessary, Thrynn is generally the first one selected to carry out the assignment.

Guild Member: Rune

As a child, Rune was rescued from a sinking ship in the Sea of Ghosts. He was taken in by a fisherman who discovered a small stone covered in unidentifiable runes. It took Rune several weeks to recover, only to discover that he couldn't remember who he was. Shown the mysterious stone, Rune vowed someday to discover his identity. He lived a happy childhood with the fisherman. When he reached the age of 16, Rune set out on adventure and met Brynjolf.

Guild Member: Garthar

Appearing in the Guild with an attitude problem but ready to help out and make a bit of money, Garthar considers himself a problem-solver. When something needs to get done and heads need to be knocked together, he's the person others call upon. Even though he has a large frame and looks like quite the brute, Garthar is actually rather smart and is quite adept at stealth, lockpicking, and pickpocketing; he is quite a unique asset for the Thieves Guild.

NOTE Garthar appears once your Thieves Guild growth reaches Stage 3.

NOTE ‡ For more information on the "Stages" of the Thieves Guild, refer to the section City Influence Quests: Ultimate Rewards on page 307.

Guild Member: Ravyn Imyan

Ravyn was a member of the Morag Tong (Morrowind's assassin's guild and bitter rivals of the Dark Brotherhood) and left it when the Red Mountain erupted and the great evacuation of Morrowind occurred. He is in the Guild biding his time until the Tong one day re-forms.

NOTE Ravyn Imyan appears once your Thieves Guild growth reaches Stage 4‡.

Guild Vendor: Vekel the Man

A sly Nord who owns and operates the Ragged Flagon tavern, Vekel was once a resident of the Honorhall Orphanage and continually got into trouble for concocting strange and powerful alcoholic drinks that kept his fellow orphans in a near continual stupor. He eventually ran away and saved enough from his burgeoning pickpocketing career to afford the tavern. He is loved and respected by his fellow thieves, partly because of his confidence, but also because of his amazing skills as a brewer.

➤ Vendor (Bartender)

Guild Vendor: Syndus

Syndus has strung bows for as long as he could remember. He has spent most of his life plying his trade in various places all over Tamriel, until finally settling in Solitude. After the city fell back under the Thieves Guild's influence, Syndus decided to apply his knowledge of the ranged weapons for the darker side of the law and made contact with the Guild hoping to strike up a relationship.

➤ Vendor (Fletcher)

NOTE Syndus appears once your Thieves Guild growth reaches Stage 1‡.

Guild Vendor: Herluin Lothaire

Herluin is young but is a very sharp apothecary with unique skills who can aid the Thieves Guild through his unusual concoctions. He is always preoccupied, a bit off into space when being spoken to, but that shouldn't be mistaken for absentmindedness.

➤ Vendor (Apothecary)

NOTE Herluin Lothaire appears once your Thieves Guild growth reaches Stage 2‡.

Guild Vendor: Arnskar Ember-Master

Arnskar's imposing appearance and boisterous Nordic temperament masks a shrewd and cheery man with an impressive skill at the forge.

➤ Vendor (Blacksmith)

NOTE Arnskar Ember-Master appears once your Thieves Guild growth reaches Stage 3‡.

Guild Vendor: Vanryth Gatharian

Vanryth is the Guild's light armor vendor. He's dismissive and a bit rude but is an expert craftsman when it comes to armor and armor repair.

➤ Vendor (Light Armor)

NOTE Vanryth Gatharian appears once your Thieves Guild growth reaches Stage 4‡.

Guild Fence (Riften): Tonilia

Tonilia is a fetching Redguard who is the Thieves Guild's main fence. She's pretty, sure of herself, and quite cocky at times.

➤ Fence

NOTE Tonilia appears immediately but becomes a Fence after you complete Thieves Guild Quest: Loud and Clear.

Guild Fence (Solitude): Gulum-Ei

Gulum-Ei has long been a contact for the Thieves Guild in the East Empire Company but has become quite greedy and rarely pays the proper respects to the Guild any longer. He's greedy and has set up an entire smuggling operation of his own in Brinewater Grotto.

➤ Fence (Solitude)

NOTE Gulum-Ei becomes a Fence if he survives Thieves Guild Quest: Scoundrel's Folly.

Guild Fence (Whiterun): Mallus Maccius

Mallus left Cyrodiil many years ago to seek his fortunes in Skyrim. All he got for his trouble was an empty coin purse and a menial job at the Honningbrew Meadery. The owner, Sabjorn, saw an opportunity to exploit Mallus when he walked through the door to the meadery that first day, a way to place poor Mallus in debt and make him work it off very slowly over time. Mallus fell in with Maven Black-Briar, and together they hatched a plan to take Sabjorn out of the picture.

➤ Fence (Whiterun)

NOTE Mallus Maccius becomes a Fence if he survives Thieves Guild Quest: Dampened Spirits.

Guild Fence (Winterhold): Enthir

Enthir is the "man who knows how to get things" in the College. While the College has very flexible rules on what's acceptable research and what's not, there are some reagents and spell components they don't acquire through exactly legal means. Enthir, working with Birna in Winterhold, is the mage who takes care of that. He fancies himself a ladies' man and believes that Birna helps him because she's in love with him. Enthir and Gallus were good friends for a very long time (Gallus always fancied himself as somewhat of a scholar).

➤ Fence (Winterhold)

NOTE Enthir becomes a Fence once you complete Thieves Guild Quest: Hard Answers.

QUESTS: THIEVES GUILD QUESTS

PRIMA OFFICIAL GAME GUIDE

WWW.PRIMAGAMES.COM

Guild Fence (Windhelm): Niranye

A beautiful High Elf who runs a stall in the Stone Quarter, many attribute her fortune to membership in the Thieves Guild, so they keep a wide berth. In actuality, Niranye is the Fence for the Summerset Shadows Thieves Guild. Linwe is the leader, and they maintain a small headquarters of about a dozen Altmer thieves in Uttering Hills Cave.

➤ Fence (Windhelm)

NOTE Niranye becomes a Fence if she survives (and once you complete) City Influence Quest: Summerset Shadows.

Guild Fence (Markarth): Endon

Endon is a silversmith in Markarth, like his forefathers and mothers before him. He is proud of the long cosmopolitan tradition in Markarth (unlike most of the rest of Skyrim), which is not widely known, and he deplores the sad state that the feuding of the Nords and Reachmen (known as the Forsworn) has brought the city. Endon works out of his small but tidy house in Dryside. His wife, Kerah, works with him, and also sells their jewelry in the market during the day. His daughter Adara is his apprentice.

➤ Fence (Markarth)

NOTE Endon becomes a Fence if he survives (and once you complete) City Influence Quest: Silver Lining.

Guild Fence (Caravan): Ri'saad

Ri'saad is the patriarch of Skyrim's Khajiit Caravans. A skilled merchant and gifted leader, he has organized a small syndicate of independent merchant caravans that travel the roads and cities of Skyrim.

Guild Fence (Caravan): Atahba

Ri'saad's first wife is a shrewd businesswoman in her own right. She's with Ri'saad mostly because he's the shrewdest Khajiit in Skyrim and had more money than anyone else she knew, but she's also grown to love him over the years. She refuses to talk about her past.

➤ Fence (Caravan)

NOTE Ri'saad and Atahba become a Fence once your Thieves Guild growth reaches Stage 3† and you complete Quest: Moon Sugar Rush*.

Guild Fence (Caravan): Ma'jhad

Ma'jhad is a bodyguard in Ma'dran's caravan, which travels the roads between Windhelm and Solitude. He is a seasoned safecracker, and is always willing to train customers in the fine art of Lockpicking.

➤ Fence (Caravan)

➤ Trainer (Lockpicking: Expert): Ma'jhad

NOTE Ma'jhad becomes a Fence once your Thieves Guild growth reaches Stage 3† and you complete Quest: Moon Sugar Rush*.

Guild Fence (Caravan): Zaynabi

Struck by wanderlust, Zaynabi has traveled far and wide. She's seen her fair share of troubles, but nothing seems to phase her go-lucky attitude. She has become quite the archer. She occasionally freelances out her scouting services and offers her services as a bowyer and fletcher.

➤ Fence (Caravan)

NOTE Zaynabi becomes a Fence once your Thieves Guild growth reaches Stage 3† and you complete Quest: Moon Sugar Rush*.

Associate: Maul

Maul is a close friend of Hemming Black-Briar, having met each other during a bandit ambush: Maul happened by and dove into the fray to save him. Ever since then, they have been literally partners in crime, with Maul assisting Hemming in his more nefarious activities assigned by Maven Black-Briar. Whenever Hemming needs "wet work" done, Maul is the go to for these things. Maul's brother is Dirge. Maul is quite fond of his brother (as they grew up alone together) and would seek vengeance on anyone that harmed him.

Associate: Galathil

Assuming you've learned of her presence via Dawnguard Side Quest: Face to Face* (see page 585), the water deck of the Ragged Flagon becomes home to a mysterious Dunmer named Galathil, who utilizes a mixture of magic and deft cutting to rearrange your features for a (potentially) reasonable fee of 1,000 gold. Nothing is known about her, except for her services: You can completely change your facial appearance, just like you did prior to your escape from Helgen at the very start of your adventure. You cannot change your race or sex. If you're a female Khajiit, you stay one. If you've contracted vampirism, Galathil notices this straightaway. Her techniques work only on the living, so you'll have to seek a cure before she agrees to work on you.

Associate: Glover Mallory

Glover Mallory is one of the most prominent non-Dunmer citizens in Raven Rock. He's jovial, warm and when he isn't at his anvil, can be found hoisting a mug at the Retching Netch. In actuality, Glover Mallory is a member of Skyrim's Thieves Guild and brother to Delvin Mallory. Glover was sent to Solstheim by Mercer Frey in order to establish a base of operations there. Unbeknownst to Glover, this was Mercer's way of separating Delvin from his brother, who he feared might tip the scales against him if his true nature was ever revealed. Glover (who possesses superior smithing skills) was more than happy to assist the Guild and make some extra money on the side and gladly accepted the funding that Mercer provided so he could establish a front on Solstheim. Pickings have been quite scarce in Raven Rock, but due to his cheery disposition, Glover's made the most of it. Absolutely no one on the island is aware of his past.

AN INFLUX OF IMMIGRANTS

The following table details the names, occupations, and quest prerequisites (or Stage that the Thieves Guild needs to be at) for allies of the Thieves Guild to arrive at the Ragged Flagon or Cistern or to set up in a Hold City:

OTHER ADVANTAGES

Guild Chests

In addition to your kinsmen and an influx of like-minded ne'er-do-wells joining the Guild as news spreads of its power and influence, there are other advantages of being a Thieves Guild member. In the Cistern, there are a group of "Guild Chests" that you can loot: They contain useful items such as lockpicks, potions, and gold. But the real advantage is that you can use the chests to store your items, without fear of them being lost. Use this as a dumping ground for extra equipment you wish to sell, craft, or otherwise dispose of.

Mercer's Bookcases

The shelving behind Mercer's desk in the Cistern slowly fills with trophies relevant to your exploits and with any Larceny Targets you may recover and sell to Delvin. As you finish the Additional Jobs that Vex and Delvin give you, trophies of recovered items begin to fill the shelves too:

- Jeweled Candlesticks appear after you complete five jobs.
- An Ornate Drinking Horn appears after you complete 15 jobs.
- A Golden Ship Model appears after you complete 25 jobs.
- A Golden Urn appears after you complete 35 jobs.
- A Jeweled Goblet appears after you complete 45 jobs.
- A Jeweled Pitcher appears after you complete 55 jobs.
- A Jeweled Flagon appears after you complete 75 jobs.
- A safe appears along the back wall, next to the bookcases, after you complete 125 jobs. It contains gems, gold, and some very useful customized Thief potions!
- If you complete Thieves Guild Radiant Quest: No Stone Unturned, the Crown will appear on the bust and pedestal behind the desk, between the bookshelves.

Additional Accouterments

If you complete Thieves Guild Quest: Darkness Returns, a Shrine of Nocturnal appears in the Cistern. This is the same as the other temple shrines scattered across Skyrim, which cure diseases. This bestows a Sneak Blessing.

If you become the Guild Master, a tribute chest appears in front of the desk in the Cistern. It contains gold and gems and is periodically restocked.

The Guild has four visible Stages of growth. As the Stages progress, you will witness more opulent furnishings; additional boxes, barrels, and banners; and the occasional new Guild member. A new vendor appears in the Ragged Flagon in an empty niche, one per Stage.

Alas, no one in the Thieves Guild is the marrying type.

AVAILABLE QUESTS

There are 29 different quests available within the Thieves Guild. Twelve of these are Critical Path Quests, while 17 are Radiant Quests or Additional Objectives.

Critical Path Quests

Simply referred to as "quests," these are the main quests you attempt. All but the first quest require one or more prerequisites, as shown in the following table:

✓ QUEST NAME	PREREQUISITES

Radiant Quests

These are usually smaller quests and are split into three subsections. There are "Radiant Quests," which you can opt to attempt and are grouped together as they affect your relationships with the Guild. There are additional objectives that you can complete to strengthen the ties the Thieves Guild have across Skyrim. Finally, there are City Influence Quests (culminating in you becoming the Guild Leader), which complete your Guild domination across this realm, as merchants and new thieves flock to your sewer.

In some cases, the Additional Objectives are randomized. The prerequisites required to begin every Radiant Quest is in the following table:

✓ QUEST NAME	PREREQUISITES

A CHANCE ARRANGEMENT

PREREQUISITES: None

INTERSECTING QUESTS: Main Quest: A Cornered Rat, Thieves Guild Quest: Taking Care of Business, Thieves Guild Quest: No Stone Unturned

LOCATIONS: Ríften, The Bee and Barb, Marketplace

CHARACTERS: Brand-Shei, Brynjolf, Madesi,

ENEMIES: None

◆ OBJECTIVES: Meet Brynjolf during daytime, Steal Madesi's Ring, Plant Madesi's Ring, Speak to Brynjolf

Sizing up Your Mark

The first time you visit the Bee and Barb or look around the marketplace in Ríften, a man named Brynjolf strikes up a conversation with you. He has an errand he wants your help with, and will reward you with gold.

He tells you to pilfer a silver ring from Madesi's stall in the marketplace while he creates a distraction. You are then to place it in the pocket of a Dark Elf vendor named Brand-Shei. If you're caught, you're on your own; if you succeed, Brynjolf will have some better-paying schemes. If you've met Brynjolf during the evening or night, he'll be waiting between eight in the morning and eight in the evening for you. If you met Brynjolf during the night, wait until daylight and meet up again.

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Collect Keerava's debt
- ◆ TARGET: Keerava, in the Bee and Barb in Riften
- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Collect Bersi Honey-Hand's debt
- ◆ TARGET: Bersi Honey-Hand, in the Pawned Prawn, in Riften
- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Collect Haelga's debt
- ◆ TARGET: Haelga, in Haelga's Bunkhouse in Riften

(Optional) Remain in the Ragged Flagon for a moment and quiz Brynjolf on each of the targets to gain more information. You learn about Keerava's lover Talen-Jei, Bersi's love of dwarven pottery, and Haelga's devotion to the goddess Dibella. Be sure your quest updates with the following:

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: (Optional) Use Talen-Jei to get to Keerava
- ◆ OBJECTIVE: (Optional) Smash Bersi's prized Dwarven Urn
- ◆ OBJECTIVE: (Optional) Steal Haelga's Statue of Dibella

Shopkeeper Shakedown

Return to the surface, ensuring you activate the lever in the Ratway that lowers the bridge, enabling a fast exit. Now visit each of the three shopkeepers on Brynjolf's list, while remembering the following:

1. You can approach any of the three shopkeepers in any order. Apply the information you've learned...
2. You may impose your unarmed prowess against them but can do so only the first time you talk to your target. Be sure you begin this from a conversation, or you'll have the whole town against you!
3. Once two of the three shopkeepers have paid up, the third has heard of your intimidation and hands over their payment without any fuss.
4. You must collect all three payments before returning to Brynjolf to complete the quest. Brynjolf is essentially expecting 300 gold. If you spend some of the payments the shopkeepers gave you (dropping your total below 300), Brynjolf won't be satisfied until you bring the entire amount. No skimming!

Keerava's Comeuppance

Enter the Bee and Barb, and venture toward Keerava. You may:

(Brawl) Speak to her before pummeling her with your fists. Once she's knocked down, she pays up.

Or tell her you've finished wasting your time talking to her. Then seek out Talen-Jei.

Talen-Jei is usually inside the tavern, close to his lover. Converse with him and tell him to talk some sense into Keerava. He lets you in on the location of Keerava's family. This is something you can use to your advantage. Return to her and threaten to visit "that farm in Morrowind." Her bravery falters. She begs you not to hurt her family and then pays up.

➤ 100 gold pieces

Bersi's Reimbursement

Enter the Pawned Prawn and locate Bersi Honey-Hand at the counter. You can:

(Brawl) Tell him to shut his mouth, and beat him down with your fists until he pays his dues.

Or tell him you've had enough of this banter and look around the room for something to break.

Behind you is a rather fine example of dwarven pottery. Produce your favored smashing implement and strike the urn until it shatters. Ignore the yells from Bersi and his wife. When the pottery is in pieces, return to Bersi and ask if he wants anything else broken. This does the trick, and he hands over the gold he owes.

➤ 100 gold pieces

Haelga's Hostage

Step into Haelga's Bunkhouse and find the proprietor. You're able to:

(Brawl) Tell her that she'll have to pay in more than just coin, and beat her into agreement.

Or inform her that the Guild has run out of patience with her. Gaze around the interior for something to steal.

On the wall near the door is a small shrine dedicated to the goddess of women, Dibella. Steal the Statue of Dibella, then return to Haelga and threaten to drop it down a well. Soon the monies owed appears in your hands.

➤ 100 gold pieces

Quest Conclusion

Find Brynjolf back in the Ragged Flagon. He's impressed you managed to both acquire the gold and keep it "clean"—not resorting to bloodshed. In return for your services, he gives you a cut of the gold you've collected and offers you the following:

- One Poison [random]
- One Healing potion [random and leveled]
- Fortify Stealth Skill potion [random and leveled]

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Brynjolf
- ◆ TARGET: Ragged Flagon, in the Ratway in Riften

TIP The Ripper of Riften: Remember all that talk about keeping the targets alive? Well, you can completely disregard that and murder any or all of the targets! Aside from forfeiting the potion rewards, you receive a severe dressing-down from Brynjolf, who takes exception to your actions. But the quest still completes.

Brynjolf recognizes the telltale signs of a practiced thief in you and thinks you'll fit in with the rest of the team. After telling you not to worry about the rough patch the Guild has been in, Brynjolf offers to show you what the Thieves Guild is all about.

Postquest Activities

Thieves Guild Quest: Loud and Clear is now active.

PREREQUISITES: Complete Thieves Guild Quest: Taking Care of Business

INTERSECTING QUESTS: Thieves Guild Quest: Additional Jobs, Thieves Guild Quest: Larceny Targets, Thieves Guild Quest: Dampened Spirits

LOCATIONS: Goldenglow Estate, Goldenglow Estate Basement, Goldenglow Estate Second Floor, Riften, Ragged Flagon, Cistern, Ratway

CHARACTERS: Brynjolf, Delvin Mallory, Maven Black-Briar, Mercer Frey, Tonilia, Vex,

ENEMIES: Aringoth, Mercenaries, Skeevers

- ◆ OBJECTIVES: Follow Brynjolf, Listen to Mercer Frey, Talk to Brynjolf, Burn three beehives, Clear out Aringoth's safe, (Optional) Speak to Vex about, Goldenglow Estate, Meet the Family: Learn more about the Thieves Guild from Vex, Meet the Family: Learn more about the Thieves Guild from Delvin, Meet the Family: Retrieve your Thieves Guild Armor from Tonilia, (Optional) Enter Goldenglow using the sewer, (Optional) Obtain the key to Aringoth's safe, Return to Brynjolf

Do as You're Told, and Keep Your Blade Clean

◆ OBJECTIVE: Follow Brynjolf

◆ TARGET: Ragged Flagon, in the Ratway in Riften

You begin this quest with the previous objective already active. Follow Brynjolf into the Ragged Flagon's Cistern. The time has come to meet the rest of his team, including the leader of this small operation—Mercer Frey.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Listen to Mercer Frey

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Brynjolf

◆ TARGET: Mercer Frey and Brynjolf, in the Cistern in Riften

Mercer Frey is initially suspicious of you and tells you that acting like a maverick will result in a docking of your pay. You may be with thieves, but there is a code to uphold. Once you agree, Mercer Frey has a job for you, one that Brynjolf is worried may be much too difficult. It involves infiltrating Goldenglow Estate, just outside of town; even one of Mercer's own found this job too dangerous. The farm's proprietor is no longer honoring his bargain with the Guild; you must go there to teach him a lesson. Brynjolf suggests you speak to more of the Guild members to gain a better perspective of both your task and the Guild in general.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Burn three beehives

◆ OBJECTIVE: Clear out Aringoth's safe

◆ TARGET: Beehives, Goldenglow Estate

Ask Brynjolf about the Goldenglow job. The farm is owned by some smart-mouthed Wood Elf named Aringoth. Honey production is a valuable commodity on the farm, so setting fire to some of the hives there is your first instruction. Then clear out the safe inside the main house. You can't set the whole place ablaze, though, as an important client with ties to Goldenglow Estate would be furious. Ask for more information, and Brynjolf mentions the estate is guarded by mercenaries; the entire island is fortified, and Brynjolf recommends you find out more from Vex, who already scouted the area and narrowly missed being killed.

◆ OBJECTIVE: (Optional) Speak to Vex about Goldenglow Estate

◆ OBJECTIVE: Meet the Family: Learn more about the Thieves Guild from Vex

◆ OBJECTIVE: Meet the Family: Learn more about the Thieves Guild from Delvin

◆ OBJECTIVE: Meet the Family: Retrieve your Thieves Guild Armor from Tonilia

◆ TARGET: Ragged Flagon, in the Ratway in Riften

Back in the Ragged Flagon, seek out Vex, who sees the recent Guild problems as a run of bad luck. You can speak to her about some extra work: This starts the Thieves Guild Quest: Additional Jobs (consult this quest for more information). You can also pay her to train you in Lockpicking if you have the coin. Lastly, if you ask her about Goldenglow, she mentions a sewer access point running under the estate, which could be a more clandestine way of entering the premises.

◆ OBJECTIVE: (Optional) Enter Goldenglow using the sewer

◆ TARGET: Goldenglow Estate

A few years ago, the Ragged Flagon was as busy as an Imperial City, but speak to Delvin Mallory and he firmly believes a curse was responsible for the Guild's downfall. Speak to him, and he offers you the chance to earn more coin: This starts the Thieves Guild Quest: Additional Jobs (consult this quest for more information). He can also train you in the art of Sneaking, provided you have the gold to pay him.

Speak with Tonilia, who gives a "warts and all" review of this little Guild—you're only as good as the gold you're bringing in. She buys and sells, but on this one occasion, she has something for free; you're given your Thieves Guild attire. You can now begin your first major infiltration!

➤ Thieves Guild Boots (Fortify Pickpocket)

➤ Thieves Guild Armor (Fortify Carry)

➤ Thieves Guild Gloves (Fortify Lockpicking)

➤ Thieves Guild Hood (Fortify Speech)

Compare the statistical increases of this attire to your normal apparel and see which you favor; the magical bonuses offered by the Thieves Guild clothing makes them extremely useful.

Goldenglow Estate: Reconnoiter

The Goldenglow Estate consists of three connected islands in the middle of a lake. How you choose to access this location influences how dangerous this task becomes. Bear in mind any or all of the following plans before you set foot on Aringoth's property.

To enter the property, you can:

Slay the gate guard at the main gates and search his corpse for the key to the main gates. Use this to unlock the main gates for an easier way onto the island.

Fire on the mercenaries from a distance and take down any you can before setting foot on the islands.

Swim around to the jetty behind the main building, and sneak up to the house from this point.

Locate the sewer entrance on the northwest side as Vex described. Drop down and follow it to the back entrance of the estate house.

There are other helpful methods of completing this task. You can:

Infiltrate the estate under cover of darkness; this makes you less likely to be spotted by the mercenary guards.

Complete the beehive destruction first, as this lures more mercenaries out of the estate house, helping your main infiltration.

Throw caution to the wind and wade into the establishment. Although not normally tolerated, killing any mercenaries. This isn't a problem.

(Sneak) You may also utilize Sneak throughout this task, creeping around to either estate entrance and moving through the house, launching Sneak attacks on enemies you cannot pass before hiding and continuing on.

There is a locked rear entrance to the estate building just near the exit from the sewers. It's a difficult lock but a great way to slip inside unseen.

Beehive Burn

Set the bees ablaze, but don't snuff out all the hives. Do this at any time, but coaxing more mercenaries out of the house before you enter the dwelling means you can fight them in an open area and at distance, which is easier. Burn the hives before or after alerting the mercenaries. You can:

Use a ranged fire attack (such as a fireball or arrow fired from a flame-enchanted bow).

Use a melee-range fire attack (such as a torch).

Continue with this ransacking until three of the hives are alight. Ignore the other hives or face a dock in your reward and an annoyed Brynjolf if you set more than three ablaze.

Sneak to the Safe

◆ OBJECTIVE: (Optional) Obtain the key to Aringoth's safe

◆ TARGET: Aringoth, Goldenglow Estate

No matter which route (or entrance) you took to infiltrate the estate house, once inside, an additional objective becomes available: As Aringoth's safe is tricky to unlock, you may wish to seek out Aringoth and take both of his keys. If you want them, head up to the second floor and search for the Wood Elf. You may be able to avoid further bloodshed. You can:

(Persuade) Try a little light threatening to make him hand over the key.

(Fight) Or use violent bloodshed, a normally frowned-upon plan but one sanctioned for this task.

(Sneak) You may also be able to sneak up to his room and pickpocket the key from him.

➤ Goldenglow Cellar Key ➤ Goldenglow Safe Key

QUEST: LARCENY TARGET

Aside from helping yourself to any valuables you find throughout your estate infiltration, keep a lookout for your first Larceny Target: The Queen Bee Statue is found on a bedside table upstairs in Aringoth's bedroom. Sell it to Delvin or keep it if you wish. Consult the Thieves Guild Quest: Larceny Targets for further information.

➤ Queen Bee Statue

If you don't want the hassle of confronting Aringoth for the keys, head to the gate door that leads to the cellar. You can:

(Lockpick [Novice])
Unlock it using your skills.

Or utilize the Goldenglow Cellar Key.

After navigating down more steps and encountering additional mercenaries, you finally locate the safe. You can:

(Lockpick [Expert]) Utilize your talents and open the safe.

Or use the Goldenglow Safe Key, which you pried from Aringoth.

Inside the safe is the Goldenglow Bill of Sale and some gold. Take everything!

➤ Goldenglow Bill of Sale

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Brynjolf

◆ TARGET: Ragged Flagon, in the Ratway in Riften

Quest Conclusion

Locate Brynjolf in the Ragged Flagon and hand the Bill of Sale over to him. Assuming you burned the correct number of beehives, he rewards you with gold for your troubles. The Bill of Sale is of particular interest, as it reveals that the estate was purchased by an unidentified buyer who seems to be aligning against the Thieves Guild! The note has a strange dagger symbol on it, but no one is certain what it means. Maven Black-Briar will be furious now that she's been cut out of a deal. Brynjolf rewards you and then tells you it is time to meet the real power behind the Guild.

➤ Leveled gold pieces

Postquest Activities: Meet the Family

Thieves Guild Quest: Dampened Spirits is now active. After your induction into the Thieves Guild, you are requested to speak to Vex and Delvin Mallory about Thieves Guild Quest: Additional Jobs.

NOTE * Quest names marked with this symbol do not appear in your Quest Menu list, although objectives may.

Now that Mercer Frey has fully inducted you into the Thieves Guild, there are now several benefits of having close ties to this organization, which are available to you from this point on:

- ◆ The Caches hidden in Riften are now available. Consult the City Influence Quests: Ultimate Rewards table on page 312 to learn more about these.
- ◆ The hidden Hall of the Dead Mausoleum entrance for the Thieves Guild is now accessible from the graveyard. Press the button on the face of the mausoleum. The entire slab slides into the wall, leading to some steps to a hatch and into the Cistern. This means you need not traverse the Ratway any longer and can Fast-Travel directly to this location, as it becomes a map marker!
- ◆ You can now bribe and pay off Guards in The Rift, giving you more options for dealing with any bounties you may acquire. See the Crime and Punishment section on page 64 for details.
- ◆ You are now part of the Thieves Guild faction! Everything contained within the Cistern (including Guild chests, books, and anything else you may have wanted to steal) can now be looted!

INTERSECTING QUESTS: Thieves Guild Quest: Additional Jobs, Thieves Guild Quest: Larceny Targets, Thieves Guild Quest: Scoundrel's Folly

LOCATIONS: Honningbrew Meadery, Honningbrew Basement, Honningbrew Boilery, Ríften, The Bee and Barb, Black-Briar Manor, Cistern, Ratway, The Ragged Flagon, Whiterun, The Bannered Mare

CHARACTERS: Brynjolf, Commander Caius (if Imperials hold Whiterun), Mallus Maccius, Maven Black-Briar, Sabjorn, Sinmir (if Stormcloaks hold Whiterun)

ENEMIES: Frostbite Spider, Hamelyn, Venomfang Skeever,

- ◆ OBJECTIVES: Speak to Maven Black-Briar, Speak to Mallus Maccius, Speak to Sabjorn, Poison the Nest, Poison the Honningbrew Vat, Return to Sabjorn, Attend the tasting ceremony, Speak to Mallus Maccius, Identify Sabjorn's silent partner, Return to Maven Black-Briar, Return to Brynjolf

Enter Whiterun and the Bannered Mare, before locating the weasel-like Mallus Maccius. He has already formulated a plan to bring Sabjorn down: The Honningbrew Meadery has a well-known Skeever infestation (partly because he told the townsfolk about it). The vermin are interfering with Sabjorn's latest batch of "Honningbrew Reserve," which is being readied for Whiterun's Captain of the Guard. A tasting ceremony cannot be held until the meadery is cleared of Skeevers. This is where you come in. You're to pose as a helper, ready to poison the rodents, but you'll also sabotage the brewing vats too.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Sabjorn

◆ TARGET: Honningbrew Meadery

A Plan Is Brewing

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Maven Black-Briar

◆ TARGET: Black-Briar Manor or the Bee and Barb in Ríften

You begin this quest with the previous objective already active. Leave the Ragged Flagon and find Maven. You can be as flippant or sycophantic as you like in your responses to this ale baroness; she still has a particular role for you to undertake once you agree to it. This involves her only real competition in Skyrim: the Honningbrew Meadery located close to Whiterun. With the mead production of the Goldenglow Farm being interrupted, this has a knock-on effect with her production too. Her rival, a Nord named Sabjorn who owns the Honningbrew Meadery, cannot be allowed to up his production and cut into her profits. You're to head to Whiterun and seek out Mallus Maccius, Sabjorn's disgruntled assistant (and unofficial contact for Maven), and hatch a plan to bring Sabjorn down. Maven is also keen to learn who backed Sabjorn financially.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Mallus Maccius

◆ TARGET: The Bannered Mare in Whiterun

Sabjorn's Subjugation

You can ask Mallus further questions to gain more understanding of the situation if you wish. Then travel a short distance to the meadery and enter the main building. Sabjorn is just inside, worried about his Skeever problem and annoyed that his no-good assistant Mallus isn't around to help. After agreeing to help, you can:

(Persuade) Request payment in advance.

(Intimidate) Threaten him to obtain a payment in advance.

Agree to receive the payment once the job is done. This isn't the most prudent of options.

If you're successful in your Persuasion or Intimidation, Sabjorn agrees to pay you half your reward (500 gold pieces) now.

QUESTS: THIEVES GUILD QUESTS

PRIMA OFFICIAL GAME GUIDE

WWW.PRIMAGAMES.COM

Head into the barrel storage room and venture into Honningbrew Basement. The door is only accessible once Sabjorn gives you the key. Watch for bear traps and a Venomfang Skeever scurrying out of a small fissure at the cellar's far (south) end. The fissure opens up into underground warrens. Bring down any Venomfang Skeevers and a small family of Frostbite Spiders as you continue south. Locate the mound of straw and the chest. Poison this nest.

During this frenzied clearing, you should begin to uncover the source of the Venomfang Skeever infestation: It didn't begin by accident but rather is the result of a series of macabre experiments undertaken by a mad mage named Hamelyn. He had constructed a makeshift laboratory at the nest site, where he has been creating these fiends. If you slay him, you can read his journal, which speaks of his exile from Winterhold and his strange notion of being a "parent" to his army of Skeever. However, to defeat him, you'll need to attack with cunning, as he's tough. Check any nearby chests for some particularly satisfying loot.

Continue farther into the warrens and up into a second cellar. Open the door in the eastern wall leading into the Honningbrew Boilery. Step up to the Honningbrew Reserve vat and poison it. You need poison only one vat. Then leave via the door leading outside.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Sabjorn

Back in the meadery tasting room, inform Sabjorn that the job is finished, and claim the rest (or all) of your reward. Alas, Sabjorn isn't prepared to pay you until after the tasting ceremony.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Attend the tasting ceremony

◆ TARGET: Honningbrew Meadery

Step back and watch the Captain of the Guards—Commander Caius (if Whiterun is under Imperial rule) or Commander Sinmir (if Whiterun is under Stormcloak control during the Civil War)—as he impatiently asks for a flagon of Sabjorn's latest reserve. After Sabjorn proudly plonks it down, the Commander drinks from the poisoned reserve and certainly finds the taste not to his liking. He escorts a bewildered Sabjorn out of the building, with the intention of imprisoning him in Whiterun's Dragonsreach prison for almost poisoning him, and temporarily puts Mallus in charge of the meadery!

TIP

Success or not, you don't receive any additional payment from Sabjorn. Remember to shake him down earlier for half the proposed payment!

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Mallus Maccius

◆ TARGET: Honningbrew Meadery

Keeping the Mead Flowing

Find Mallus Maccius skulking around the meadery. He can't believe how well the plan went. Tell him you need to look at Sabjorn's books. He hands you a key and tells you to look upstairs, in Sabjorn's desk:

➤ Sabjorn's Dresser Key

◆ OBJECTIVE: Identify Sabjorn's silent partner

◆ TARGET: Sabjorn's dresser, inside Honningbrew Meadery

After speaking to Mallus about future operations for this meadery (it is now effectively in Black-Briar hands), head upstairs from the barrel storage room and use the Honningbrew Meadery Key to open the bedroom door (which is otherwise [Adept] level to unlock). Now open the dresser with Sabjorn's Dresser Key. There's a Promissory Note inside.

➤ Promissory Note

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Maven Black-Briar

◆ TARGET: Black-Briar Manor or the Bee and Barb, in Riften

QUEST: LARCENY TARGET

You'd do well to unlock the door (Hard) inside Sabjorn's bedroom just after obtaining the Promissory Note. There's a Honningbrew Decanter on the table inside the room. Take the Decanter and hand it to Delvin Mallory for a cash reward. Consult the Thieves Guild Quest: Larceny Targets for further information.

➤ Honningbrew Decanter

Quest Conclusion

Head back to Riften and seek out Maven, handing over the Promissory Note when she asks. The strange marking (a dagger symbol) you saw on the Goldenglow Estate deed is also on this note. Maven wants you to bring this information to the Thieves Guild immediately. Then you're given your payment.

➤ Leveled Enchanted Weapon

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Brynjolf

◆ TARGET: The Ragged Flagon, inside the Ratway in Riften

Locate Brynjolf (either in the Ragged Flagon or the adjacent Cistern). He already knows about the fate of Sabjorn; in fact, he thinks this is a good example of how the Thieves Guild's system works. But there is something else; the strange symbol is beyond coincidence. Brynjolf believes someone is trying to drive a wedge between Maven and the Guild. A furious Mercer believes he's figured out how to reveal this new thorn in the Guild's side and wants to meet you right away.

Postquest Activities

Thieves Guild Quest: Scoundrel's Folly is now active. Optionally speak to Vex and Delvin Mallory and continue Thieves Guild Quest: Additional Jobs. Optionally visit Mallus at the Honningbrew Meadery; he is now the bartender and a Fence, allowing you to sell him stolen goods. The first time you return to the meadery, all of the external signs have been changed to "Black-Briar" and all the Honningbrew Mead is gone, replaced by Black-Briar Mead. Maven works with a swiftness that matches her machinations and cunning!

An Argonian with Answers

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Mercer Frey

◆ TARGET: Cistern or the Ragged Flagon, in the Ratway in Riften

You commence this quest with the previous objective already active. Speak to Mercer, who reckons the entity responsible for weakening the Thieves Guild is certainly cunning and shares similar methods to his own! But the Promissory Note refers to a name that Mercer knows as a nom de plume of an Argonian named Gulum-Ei. He's the Guild's inside man at the East Empire Company and needs to be shaken down regarding his role in this nefarious plot.

◆ OBJECTIVE: (Optional) Speak to Brynjolf

◆ TARGET: Cistern or the Ragged Flagon, in the Ratway in Riften

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Gulum-Ei

◆ TARGET: Gulum-Ei, in Solitude

Find Brynjolf, who seems surprised that an Argonian as hapless as Gulum-Ei could be involved in such schemes. Gulum-Ei is an adept scammer but lacks the brains to devise a plan to weaken the Guild. Still, this lizard is stubborn. You'll likely need to buy him off or follow him to see what he's up to. But you must keep him alive; killing someone as valuable to the Guild as Gulum-Ei is not an option. Before you leave, you can learn more about the East Empire Company and the Argonian by further conversation.

Track Gulum-Ei down to a location within the walls of Solitude. His usual haunt is the Winking Skeever tavern (indeed, he remains here once this quest concludes, providing he survives to the end of this quest). Gulum-Ei seems overly dismissive, denying involvement with the Goldenglow Estate; he says he only deals in goods. But when you use the "code name" of Gajul-Lei (that was in the Promissory Note), he softens a bit but can't remember every detail. Jog his memory by:

(Persuade) Asking him to identify the buyer, after which the Guild will forget his involvement.

(Bribe) Asking him what it would take to identify the buyer.

(Intimidate) Threatening to kill him.

If the first or third plans are successful (or when you return the Firebrand Wine Case, below), Gulum-Ei reveals that he was approached by a woman who wanted him to act as a broker for the Goldenglow Estate purchase. The only other information he gives is she was quite angry at Mercer Frey but never mentioned why. But for the bribe, the lizard is after something more than gold: a case of Firebrand Wine. (Gulum-Ei is really not being helpful here. He's sidestepping the truth and showing his true colors as a scam artist. You will ultimately have no choice but to follow him and see if he's up to something.)

TIP You may wish to choose bribery over other techniques, as Gulum-Ei rewards you with Soul Gems if you retrieve the wine, and these are always helpful to have!

◆ OBJECTIVE: Steal case of Firebrand Wine

◆ OBJECTIVE: Get information from Gulum-Ei

◆ TARGET: Blue Palace, in Solitude

BRIBERY: FINDING THE FIREBRAND WINE

If you choose bribery when speaking to Gulum-Ei, he requests a case of Firebrand Wine that he knows is kept in the Blue Palace. Travel there (it is still within the walls of Solitude), and head to Elisif's room to pick up the case. The quest updates, and you should return to him. Hand over the case and receive a reward for your troubles.

➤ Firebrand Wine Case ➤ Leveled Soul Gem (3)

Gulum-Ei finally reveals that he was approached by a woman who wanted to use Gulum-Ei as a broker for "something big": the Goldenglow Farm deeds. He didn't ask too many questions, but the woman did seem angry and directed much of the anger toward Mercer Frey. You won't get anything more from Gulum-Ei, and as you're under strict instructions not to spill any Argonian blood, there's only one other pertinent action to take: follow him.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Shadow Gulum-Ei

Down on the Docks

With the conversation over, Gulum-Ei leaves for the East Empire Company. Follow him at a safe distance. If he notices you following, he'll wave you off and ask you to stop, but this will not hinder his progress toward the warehouse. Instead, keep farther back or dive into cover and remain at a greater distance as he continues down onto the docks, onto the main waterside jetty, past the warehouse store, and into the warehouse itself. This is where your proper shadowing begins.

Once inside the warehouse, continue to sneak, keeping your distance. If Gulum-Ei spots you and yells for help, engage any East Empire Wardens who react violently to your trespassing. Just past the guard station, you can walk up a log leaning against the shelves, and gain some height. This provides a good view of the warehouse and keeps you out of the guards' path. You can also swim across, but be careful nobody sees you when you emerge on the warehouse's other side.

Whether you're keeping this shadowing clandestine (without combat) or carnage-filled (after Gulum-Ei raises the alarm), the Argonian continues to the same place and seems to disappear into the storage bays. Depending on whether you've been spotted, he runs frantically or strolls into the water underneath the large barrel and stairs along the north side of the gigantic warehouse cavern. Be careful when he walks close to the large door at the front of the warehouse, as he changes the ledger and doubles back shortly, making you easy to spot if you take this opportunity to move.

Gulum-Ei now heads up a ramp and enters the Brinewater Grotto. Before you follow him inside, visit the foreman's office and obtain the East Empire Shipping Map.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Confront Gulum-Ei

◆ TARGET: Gulum-Ei, in Brinewater Gully

TIP The art of shadowing occurs once Gulum-Ei enters the East Empire Warehouse. The wardens inside are hostile when they see you. They are not Solitude Guards, so you won't increase your Crime in Haafingar Hold. However, it is far better to sneak through here without being detected.

QUEST: LARCENY TARGET

Inside the East Empire Company Warehouse is a dock overseer's hut, on the higher ground in the northwest corner. Climb up to it and take what you wish to steal, but make sure one of these items is the East Empire Shipping Map. Remember to return it to Delvin Mallory for a cash reward.

➤ East Empire Shipping Map

◆ Gulum-Ei's Grotto Confession

Inside the grotto, be ever mindful of the trip-wire traps at your feet, unless you want a mace to the face. Expect to face bandits in this location, which continues along an underground river to a storage area and a Horker pen. Witnessing your dogged determination, Gulum-Ei suddenly becomes a lot more forthcoming with information, claiming he was approached by a Dunmer named "Karliah" who murdered someone named Gallus and was headed to "where the end began." He hands over the Bill of Sale as further proof, and a goodwill gesture. This exhausts your interrogation tactics. Remember to keep Gulum-Ei alive afterwards!

➤ Goldenglow Bill of Sale.

TIP Killing Gulum-Ei is both unwise and foolish, as he becomes a Fence for the Thieves Guild from this point on. You'll find him based out of the Winking Skeeve in Solitude.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Mercer Frey

◆ TARGET: Cistern or the Ragged Flagon, in the Ratway in Ríftén

Depart for Ríftén. Once you're back in the Cistern, reveal your information to Mercer Frey. Frey's demeanor changes for the first time; he seems shocked and stammers when you mention Karliah's name. Mercer tells you Karliah is a murderess, killing Mercer's former colleague Gallus in cold blood. Then she vanished...until now! Mercer is sure she's back to kill him, as the only remaining Guild member from the old days. Mercer knows she must be at Snow Veil Sanctum, and you must venture there to kill her before she disappears again. Now ready yourself by obtaining some additional armor as a reward.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Tonilia about exchanging a piece of armor

◆ TARGET: Tonilia, at the Ragged Flagon, in the Ratway in Ríftén

An Early Argonian Ending

Was Gulum-Ei slain during this quest before he revealed any information about Karliah? Then the objectives change. "Shadow Gulum-Ei" or "Confront Gulum-Ei" now fail.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Find an Alternative Source of Information

You must journey via the route that Gulum-Ei takes to a chest located in Brinewater Grotto. Inside is a note.

➤ Note: Gulum-Ei's Confession

The note is written by Gulum-Ei to his brother. It, too, reveals the name of Karliah, her murder of Gallus, and the fact that she's after Mercer Frey, heading to "where the end began." You are now instructed to return to Brynjolf. As expected, killing Gulum-Ei results in a severely negative reaction from both Brynjolf and Mercer, and you won't be able to exchange any of your armor. Follow instructions, won't you!

Quest Conclusion

This is purely optional: Visit Tonilia and choose which section of Guild clothing you wish to trade for the new (and improved) section. You receive an enhanced version of only one of the following:

- Thieves Guild Boots (Improve Pickpocket 25%)
- Thieves Guild Armor (+35 Carry Weight)
- Thieves Guild Gloves (Improve Lockpick 25%)
- Thieves Guild Hood (Improve Prices 15%)

Guild Quest: Additional Jobs, Thieves Guild Quest: Larceny Targets, Thieves Guild Quest: Hard Answers

LOCATIONS: Riften, Cistern, Ratway, The Ragged Flagon, Snow Veil Sanctum, Snow Veil Catacombs

CHARACTERS: Karliah, Mercer Frey

◆ OBJECTIVES: Meet Mercer Frey outside Snow Veil Sanctum, Enter Snow Veil Sanctum, Find Karliah, Speak to Karliah

◆ A Crypt of Snares and Traps

◆ OBJECTIVE: Meet Mercer Frey outside Snow Veil Sanctum

◆ OBJECTIVE: Enter Snow Veil Sanctum

◆ TARGET: Mercer Frey, outside Snow Veil Sanctum

You commence this quest with the previous objective already active. Travel to the icy Tundra and locate Mercer standing outside the cairn entrance to the Sanctum. He wants you to lead him into the underground catacombs.

Before you head inside, speak to Mercer to gain more information about how Gallus died, about Karliah, and about other matters that are informative but not critical to this quest. After you drop into the circular depression, wait for Mercer to open the door into the Snow Veil Catacombs.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Find Karliah

◆ TARGET: Karliah, in Snow Veil Sanctum

Ready your favored offensive equipment or magic, and venture into the vast connecting crypts filled with burial urns and intermittent Draugr attacks. Be constantly on the lookout for traps, such as the swinging gate just to the right of the first portcullis chain in the first coffin chamber. As the Draugr dislodge from the wall, you may also rely on Mercer to follow up with his own (exceptional) strikes; he appears to be supremely adept at bladed combat.

Deeper into this dungeon, beware of bear traps, a hanging oil lamp with which to burn Draugr (but hopefully not yourself), and a trip wire to trigger further Draugr incursions. Watch for the rattling bone chimes; brushing against them summons more Draugr. When you reach the upper caged stone paths, you're close to entering the actual Sanctum.

QUEST: LARCENY TARGET

Just before the corridor to the upper caged stone paths, there's a large open chamber with several Draugr to fight and a low central platform with two coffins on it. Head south, up the wooden steps. Follow the corridor south and around to the north, to an upper balcony and pedestal. Your Larceny Target is either resting on the pedestal or has fallen off it. Remember to return it to Delvin Mallory for a cash reward.

► Ship Model

◆ A Silent Shout

The Sanctum's crypts are taller and the Draugr more restless than ever. Beware of bone trip wires that summon more corpses, although this keeps Mercer's weapons bloody. Progress deeper still, opening the portcullis that knocks over a cluster of jars, and fight your way to the double Iron Door, where a more mighty Draugr rises from his slumber. Strike him and his cohorts down before approaching a Word Wall on the opposite side of the raised burial crypt and learning a new Word of Power.

► Word of Power: Disarm

With the Word of Power ringing in your ears, venture down a final corridor that leads to one of the infamous Nordic Puzzle Doors. Avoid the bear traps and let Mercer approach the puzzle.

Puzzle Solution: Mercer figures that Karliah has probably taken the necessary Key Claw and that the door has a specific weak spot only Mercer can exploit. He opens the door without your help or the need for puzzle-solving.

The two of you arrive in the central burial chamber where Karliah supposedly murdered Gallus. It takes a moment before you realize you've been poisoned.

◆ Song of the Nightingales

An arrow arcs through the black crypt. Your vision blurs and you black out. You awaken on the ground. You cannot move, and you're still smarting from the poison-laced missile. Stepping out of the darkness, Karliah notches another arrow, approaches Mercer, and the two begin a startling exchange.

Revelations Abound: The conversation turns Mercer's story on its head; Gallus was actually slain by Mercer Frey, but he blamed Karliah for it, causing her exile from the Thieves Guild. Karliah also mentions a mysterious group known as the "Nightingales," alluding that both Mercer and Karliah were part of it. Although you're expecting combat, Karliah places a potion to her lips and sips, slipping back into the shadows without firing. She seems to know she's no match for Mercer. After a few choice words (and blades) leveled at you, Mercer seems satisfied that he's finished you off. Your vision turns to black once again.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Karliah

◆ TARGET: Karliah, outside Snow Veil Sanctum

You awaken in a wobbly state outside Snow Veil Sanctum, looking straight at Karliah. She explains that aside from saving your life and dragging you from the catacombs, she requires your help in tracking down Mercer. The traitor must be brought before the Guild to answer for his crimes: He must be hunted like she was. She was at the Sanctum for two reasons. The first was to capture Mercer using her special paralyzing poison arrow. However, she elected to use it on you instead, foiling the first half of her mission but saving your life in the process. The other reason she visited Snow Veil Sanctum was to locate a journal penned by Gallus, the third Nightingale. She believes this book may contain information you both could bring to the Guild as proof of Mercer's foul deeds. But the journal is written in an unrecognizable language. You must journey to Winterhold and find Enthir, a good friend of Gallus, who may be able to decipher it.

Quest Conclusion

You are given the journal to take to Enthir, and you receive four doses of a random Leveled Poison. It appears Karliah's attributes extend to that of alchemist too.

- Gallus's Encoded Journal
- Leveled Poison [random] (4)

INTERSECTING QUESTS: Temple Quest: The Book of Love, Miscellaneous Objective: Calcelmo's Ring*, Miscellaneous Objective: Neutralizing Nimhe*, Thieves Guild Quest: Additional Jobs, Thieves Guild Quest: Larceny Targets, Thieves Guild Quest: The Pursuit

LOCATIONS: Markarth, Understone Keep, Calcelmo's Laboratory, Calcelmo's Tower, Dwemer Museum, Markarth Wizards' Balcony, Winterhold, The Frozen Hearth

CHARACTERS: Aicantor, Calcelmo, Enthir, Karliah

ENEMIES: Captain Aquilius, Markarth City Guard, Wizard's Guard

- ◆ OBJECTIVES: Speak with Enthir, Speak with Calcelmo, Gain entry to Calcelmo's Museum, (Optional) Obtain the key to Calcelmo's Museum, Obtain Calcelmo's Falmer Translating Guide, Duplicate the writing on Calcelmo's Stone, Return to Enthir, Speak to Enthir, Speak to Karliah

Make your way west toward the canyon city of Markarth. Once through the front gates, scale the stone steps to reach Understone Keep, the site of major excavation work. You'll find Calcelmo to the left (west), checking over artifacts and the progression of the dig inside a gigantic Dwemer entrance chamber. Alas, Calcelmo is extremely overworked and uncooperative (even if you helped him during Temple Quest: The Book of Love). He says your idea to view his work on the Falmer tongue is "preposterous," and he won't allow anyone to view it before it is completed. You can:

(Persuade) Inform him you're a great admirer of his work. With a high enough Persuade, Calcelmo allows you access to the Museum part of his quarters but still keeps the Laboratory off-limits. You also receive a key to the Museum, which is reasonably handy for this quest but still means you must break into the Laboratory.

(Bribe) Ask what it'll cost to change his mind. He isn't interested in personal wealth, so this option leads you nowhere.

(Intimidate) Threaten him. He isn't interested in your threats, so this fails as well.

Calcelmo also remembers if you've helped him before but points out he's already given you access to the Museum. Alas, none of these options allow you access to Calcelmo's research, which is likely to be ready in several more years. You need another plan. The only way you're getting into that laboratory is by clandestine sneaking, lockpicking, out-and-out brutality, or a mixture of these.

Calcelmo's Secrets

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak with Enthir

- ◆ TARGET: The Frozen Hearth, in Winterhold

You commence this quest with the objective already active. Trudge up to Winterhold, where you can find Enthir in the cellar of the Frozen Hearth Inn (usually he wanders the College of Winterhold). After you speak with him, he reveals Gallus's Journal to be written in Ancient Falmer, a long-dead language of the Snow Elves. Even he won't be able to translate this, but he believes that Calcelmo, the court wizard of Markarth, may have the materials needed for the translation. But he warns you that Calcelmo guards his research fiercely, and getting the information won't be easy. You can also ask Enthir about Gallus, what the Falmer actually were, and other related questions before stepping out into the cold.

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak with Calcelmo

- ◆ TARGET: Understone Keep, in Markarth

Trespasser in the Keep (Part 1)

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Gain entry to Calcelmo's Museum

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: (Optional) Obtain the key to Calcelmo's Museum

- ◆ TARGET: Understone Keep, in Markarth

If you've helped Calcelmo in the past, you may already have access to his Museum (both Temple Quest: The Book of Love and Miscellaneous Objective: Neutralizing Nimhe* award you the key and his permission to enter the Museum). If not, you can do either of those quests now. Having legitimate access to the Museum will make the next part of this quest much easier, especially if you have a low Sneak skill.

Alternately, you can steal a key. Your quest target points you to one on the low plinth nearby, hidden among Calcelmo's artifacts. Both Calcelmo and the guard near the Museum entrance (at the top of the stairs in the keep's entry chamber) have keys you can pickpocket.

Or you can simply pick the Adept Lock on the Museum door and slip in while the guard's back is turned.

► Dwemer Museum Key

◆ OBJECTIVE: Obtain Calcelmo's Falmer Translating Guide

◆ TARGET: Calcelmo's Tower, inside Understone Keep in Markarth

As you enter the Museum, creep forward to overhear a conversation between two of the guards. This eavesdropping gives you a preview of your objectives to come; it sounds as if Calcelmo has called in every one of his favors to populate and secure the upper level using his own private expedition team. As Calcelmo's overriding plan is to ensure his research is protected, your tasks just got a lot tougher. From the Museum, you have three options:

Plan A: Walk on through with nonchalance. If Calcelmo gave you the key and permission to visit the Museum, the guards have already been informed and won't ask any questions. Provided you don't try to steal anything, you can head through, take in the sights, and then continue through the western door to the second level. This is both straightforward, safe, and direct.

Plan B: Blind, ugly violence. Despite all the valuables, Calcelmo's Museum is protected by just three city guards. Depending on your level, you may be able to take them out with melee strikes or (preferably) with some well-placed arrows, allowing you to loot the room at your leisure. When you're done here, continue to the western door. Note that these are Markarth Guards, so you'll pick up a hefty Bounty (3,000+ in Crime Gold) for their murders.

Plan C: Stealth. The museum is large, well lit, open, and patrolled by three guards, so expect a significant challenge here. All the usual tips on Sneaking still apply—use anything you have to increase your Sneak; use spells, potions, abilities, or items that give you Invisibility or Muffle, and take off those heavy boots. Then, when you're ready, carefully take the following path:

1. From the entryway, observe the guard on the north side. When he passes by, carefully sneak along behind him and crouch behind the spider display in the room's northeastern corner.
2. When the northern guard steps into the room's center, carefully head west. This time, watch the guard in the center. When he faces back south, duck into the northern hallway.
3. Wait for the northern guard to begin another loop, then creep west. When the center guard turns away again, carefully sneak into the western hallway (ducking behind the pillar if necessary on the way).

If you've chosen Plan A or B, it's worth spending some time in the Museum. There are more lockpicking opportunities in this room than anywhere else in Skyrim, making this a fantastic place to improve your skills. Also, the loot here is exceptional (provided you don't get caught). The two side rooms off the main chamber are also worth exploring.

Your ultimate target is the door at the Museum's west end. This leads to Calcelmo's Laboratory. You can:

Unlock the door with the Museum Key, which you may already have, or you can pickpocket/loot from any of the guards in this room.

(Lockpick [Adept]) Or pick the lock on the door if you don't.

► Trespasser in the Keep (Part 2)

NOTE Much of this section of Understone Keep is accessible only during this quest, so it is worth fully exploring this entire area.

Enter the Laboratory and note the scene between Aicantar and the soldier up ahead. You're not facing city guards any longer. Calcelmo's men have orders to kill intruders on sight and will call for reinforcements if they spot you. Your permission from Calcelmo doesn't extend to this floor of the Keep, so you'll have to sneak or fight your way through.

Initial Two Chambers

There are two guards in this first area. One already patrols the second room to the west; the other enters after a minute or two through the previously sealed eastern door, once Aicantar has finished with him. You can:

Try to sneak by. This is all but impossible without Invisibility, as the western guard keeps a close eye on the exit.

Fight them head-on. They're tough, and they'll call for reinforcements if they spot you—one guard who enters from the far eastern door.

Take them out with the traps in this space. You have plenty of options to choose from: The first room has a large pool of flammable oil and a row of dart traps. The second room has a wall trap, a set of threshers, and a ballista in the hallway littered with rubble.

But by far the most unusual (and entertaining) option is just to your left as you enter the first room. On the table in this small chamber is a unique item: Aicantar's Spider Control Rod and a journal that explains it. When you take the Rod, a Dwemer Spider drops in, ready to help you take on the guards.

► Spider Control Rod

► Aicantar's Lab Journal

The door on the western end of the second room is locked (unless you triggered the reinforcements). You can:

(Lockpicking [Adept]) Pick the lock.

Or unlock the door with one of the Laboratory Keys. All of the Wizards' Guards carry a key, or you can find one in Calcelmo's bedroom on the north side of the second chamber.

► Calcelmo's Laboratory Key (2)

► Dwemer Museum Key

The Steam Hall

Two guards patrol the steam hall and comment on one of the traps there as you approach. As before, you can try to sneak by them (which is extremely difficult) or fight them and their reinforcements (with or without the help of the Dwarven Spider).

A better option is to continue past them and take the ramp to the lower level, where the hallway is blocked by clouds of noxious steam. Sneak through here, out of sight of the guards, stopping on the pressure plates as necessary to turn off the gas and allow your health to recover. If the spider is following you, direct it onto the pressure plate to keep the gas off, allowing you to walk through.

Back on the upper level, the valve at the hall's far end will turn on the thresher traps, easily wiping out the guards. Loot them and the treasure in the side rooms before continuing on.

The Statue Room

The next chamber, decorated with two Dwarven Sphere statues, is relatively easy to sneak through. Just wait until the guard by the eastern door leaves his post. Or, as always, you can fight your way through.

QUESTS: THIEVES GUILD QUESTS

PRIMA OFFICIAL GAME GUIDE

WWW.PRIMAGAMES.COM

Aicantar's chamber offers one final set of options. Once again, sneaking here is difficult: Aicantar keeps close watch on the exit. You can certainly fight him, the guard, and a pair of reinforcements (optionally with your spider). But a better option is to sneak into the control booth on the walkway and turn the valve.

Chaos breaks out below. All the traps in the room turn on, and Aicantar and the guard panic, yelling for everyone to flee the Laboratory. They and any surviving guards in the Laboratory make a break for the Museum. They may not get far, as Aicantar's robes have a nasty tendency to get caught in the threshers....

QUEST: LARCENY TARGET

Before you struggle out of the Laboratory, check the alcove on your right, which has a Dwemer Puzzle Box on display. Snag it now, as you won't be returning this way. Hand it to Delvin Mallory for a cash reward. Consult the Thieves Guild Quest: Larceny Targets for further information.

► Dwemer Puzzle Cube

Continue out onto the Markarth wizards' balcony.

◆ There's the Rub

After marveling at the impressive vista, clamber up the steps and enter Calcelmo's Tower. On this room's upper level, you can see an ornate stone covered in hieroglyphics: there appear to be verses written in Ancient Falmer and Dwemer. This looks to be the guide to translating Gallus's Journal! However, getting it back may pose a challenge....

Continue up the stairs on the left (east) and enter Calcelmo's private office, packed with artifacts and rubbings. A door from the office leads out to the stone. But interacting with it won't get you far: The stone is much too heavy to lift.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Duplicate the writing on Calcelmo's Stone

◆ TARGET: Calcelmo's Tower, in Understone Keep in Markarth

Puzzle Solution: Sift through the valuables and check the main table. Calcelmo has been making some rubbings on paper, and these are scattered everywhere. Take a roll of paper and some charcoal from a side table. Return to Calcelmo's Stone and make a rubbing of the text there. (It's possible to find the roll of paper and charcoal in the world prior to this quest, but it isn't necessary; there's plenty of it around.)

► Roll of Paper ► Charcoal ► Calcelmo's Stone Rubbing

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Enthir

◆ TARGET: The Frozen Hearth in Winterhold

◆ Nocturnal's Quisling

Now for the small matter of an escape plan. Mere moments after you make the rubbing, the doors to the tower open and a group of soldiers enter, led by Captain Aquilius of the Wizards' Guard. They are joined by Aicantar (if he's still alive). After a brief argument, they spread out to scour the tower.

You can try to fight or run past them. With an excellent Sneak skill, you may even be able to get out undetected: drop onto the platform to the west and head up the stairs. At the gap, leap onto the narrow metal catwalk and race for the door.

Out on the balcony, you have a choice: You can try to backtrack through the Laboratory, Museum, and Keep, but between the Wizards' Guards and the city guard, you've probably made some enemies by now. Your quest target suggests a better option: On the balcony's east side, some of the stonework has fallen away, exposing a narrow stone path. Follow it, leap into the waterfall at the end, and make your getaway. Fast-Travel back to Winterhold at your earliest convenience.

Back inside the Frozen Hearth, hand the stone rubbing to Enthir and tell him it should help with the translation. Karliah will be here when you arrive with the rubbing. As Enthir pores over the rubbing and Gallus's Journal, he reveals the disturbing truth: Gallus suspected Mercer's wavering allegiance to the Thieves Guild for months; this included a vast expenditure on a lavish lifestyle of gold and trinkets. Mercer was apparently paying for this by removing valuables from the Guild's treasure vaults without anyone's knowledge! There is also talk of Mercer desecrating something known as the Twilight Sepulcher, which disgusts Karliah.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Enthir

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Karliah

◆ TARGET: The Frozen Hearth, in Winterhold

Quest Conclusion

Speak to Enthir again, and he urges you to help Karliah and reveal the traitor to your brethren. He also thanks you for your help and tells you that if you're ever in this area again, he can fence any goods you may have gathered via slightly nefarious means.

► Gallus's Translated Journal (Item)

► Vendor (Fence): Enthir

Locate Karliah nearby, who tells you the Twilight Sepulcher is the sacred temple to Nocturnal, the patron of thieves and gamblers. Defiling the sacred ground he swore to protect, Mercer is now revealed as an insidious fiend. But getting the rest of the Guild on your side may require more than simple guile. For your part, Karliah rewards you with Gallus's old weapon.

► Nightingale Blade

Postquest Activities

The Nightingale Blade is a leveled weapon, with an Absorb Health and Drain Stamina enchantment on it. After some optional additional questions, Thieves Guild Quest: The Pursuit commences. Build up influence in more cities by continuing Thieves Guild Quest: Additional Jobs. You may want to return to Markarth, especially if you've slain the museum guards, and brush up on your Lockpicking before cleaning the place out, as there's a wealth of loot to pick over.

A Perfect Heist

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Meet Karliah at the Ragged Flagon
- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Follow Karliah
- ◆ TARGET: Inside the Ratway, in Riften

This quest begins with the first objective already in play. Return to the familiar grounds of the Thieves Guild, and you'll find your usual entrance point by the Hall of the Dead Mausoleum is locked. You must navigate the sights (and smells) of the Ratway, down to the Ragged Flagon, where you'll meet Karliah. She has Gallus's translated journal ready to show the Guild members who require convincing. Agree to back her up and move into the Cistern. As expected, Brynjolf (flanked by Vex and Delvin Mallory) draws his blade and sharply asks why you're here with "a murderer." Armed with proof of Mercer's betrayal, Karliah hands over Gallus's Journal.

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Brynjolf

Brynjolf cannot believe Mercer has been stealing from the Guild, so he orders Delvin to open the vault. The gold, the jewels...they're all gone! It takes two keys to unlock the vault. Delvin, Brynjolf, and Mercer are the only ones who carry such keys, so how did Mercer break into the vault alone? The answer is a mystery (even though Karliah quietly has her suspicions). Although vindicated, Karliah is just as angered by this as the rest of the Guild, except perhaps for the seething Vex, who vows to kill Mercer immediately. Brynjolf's cooler head prevails, and he orders Vex and Delvin to guard the Ragged Flagon. Then he turns to you and asks what you've learned from Karliah.

Explain that Mercer killed Gallus, that the three of them were Nightingales, and that Karliah was behind Goldenglow and Honningbrew (a cunning plan to try and make Mercer look weak in front of Maven Black-Briar). Then Brynjolf has an important task for you: Break into Mercer's Riften house—Riftweald Manor—and gather any information that may indicate where the traitor has gone. Before you leave Brynjolf, ask him what is the best way into Riftweald Manor. You receive information about a "watchdog" and an exterior ramp with a mechanism to lower it, which could aid in your escape. Then ask about the "watchdog" named Vald. Brynjolf indicates Vex may have more information to provide. These grant you two optional objectives.

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Infiltrate Mercer's House
- ◆ OBJECTIVE: (Optional) Shoot the mechanism to lower the ramp
- ◆ OBJECTIVE: (Optional) Speak to Vex about Vald
- ◆ TARGET: Riftweald Manor, in Riften

Locate Vex in the Cistern or Ragged Flagon, and ask her about Vald. She tells you he's only interested in gold, so buying him off is a possibility. But even Vald might not betray Mercer Frey (as he wouldn't live long enough to spend his bribe). Instead, Vex suggests you speak to Maven Black-Briar about erasing Vald's debt. Or you could run him through with your blade...Vex doesn't care either way.

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: (Optional) Talk to Maven about Vald's debt
- ◆ TARGET: Maven Black-Briar, in Riften

OPTIONAL: ERASING VALD'S DEBT

Locate Maven Black-Briar in the Bee and Barb, the marketplace, or Black-Briar Manor. Tell her you'd like to remove Vald's debt. Maven isn't receptive to this; she tells you she commissioned a unique Quill, and Vald was hired to ensure it reached her safely. Because of his blundering, it ended up at the bottom of Lake Honrich, and she's very keen to have it retrieved. She'll call the debt satisfied if you'll fish it out. You can also ask her about the properties of this fabled Quill and how it ended up in the lake. Finally, Maven can also give you vague directions to the Quill's location if you ask if she has ideas where to look for it: underwater, and close to one of the small islands in the lake.

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Locate the Quill of Geminaton under Lake Honrich
- ◆ TARGET: Beneath a small island, in Lake Honrich

The sunken rowboat's location isn't on your world or local maps, so consult the adjacent picture. The "current location" shows the exact spot where the rowboat sank, south of a small island and halfway between Riften (to the east) and Goldenglow Farm (to the west). The murky water makes finding this extremely tricky, but it isn't that far down. When you find the half-embedded boat, search for Vald's Strongbox [Average], and use your Lockpick skill to open it. Grab the gold and the Quill, and swim back to Riften.

► Quill of Geminaton

◆ OBJECTIVE: Bring the Quill of Geminion to Maven

Find Maven and hand over the Quill. She gives you a document absolving Vald of his debt, but she doesn't want to ever see him in Riften again. Rejoin the main part of this quest.

➤ Vald's Debt

NOTE If you wish, you can keep this Quill, complete this quest, and then sell it for around 150 gold pieces.

◆ Ransacking Riftweald Manor

Whether or not you went swimming for a Quill, you should figure out how best to enter Mercer Frey's abode. All of the ground-level doors are barred from the inside and are never accessible. The only way in is the door off the balcony.

Head to the rear gate and speak to Vald. He is immune to Bribery or Intimidation, and ignores you unless you present him with Vald's debt document. He agrees to flee the area, unlocks the (otherwise impassable) side gate, and gives you the key to Mercer's house.

A successful Persuade will trick him into leaving you to guard the house, and he'll present you with the key to the house. He'll then walk away from the house and you are free to bring down the ramp.

(Lockpick [Expert]) Or, you can lockpick the rear gate. You need to deal with Vald, but remember that killing him in cold blood doesn't win over the local guards and increases your Bounty. The moment you enter the backyard in this manner, Vald will become hostile and attack.

For those less inclined to lockpick: Vald's patrol causes him to pause with his back to the gate. It's possible to pick his pocket and grab the key right off of him, but you may still have to deal with him if he detects you once you pop the lock and enter the yard!

through the front door. Climb the ramp, and use the house key to unlock the otherwise-difficult-to-open door (Lockpick [Expert]).

Time for a spot of precision archery: Aim your arrow at the mechanism just below and to the left of the upper balcony, and fire. This releases the ramp, allowing you a much more stealthy way into the residence, instead of

◆ OBJECTIVE: Discover evidence of Mercer's location

◆ TARGET: Mercer's House, in Riften

Head through Mercer's House, electing to sneak by or slaughter any bandits guarding the location. Progress downstairs and find the room with the bench table and single chair. Adjacent to the barred door is a suspicious cabinet. Open it and activate the false back panel. Step into a secret room with stairs leading down into a subterranean cellar; this is part of the sewer system linking to the Ratway. Head through, watching for dart, fire, and swinging traps, and open the door into Mercer's hidden office. Gather some gold and his plans. Before you leave, attempt to open the display case (Master), which houses Mercer's exceptional frost sword!

QUEST: LARCENY TARGET

While you're rummaging around in Mercer's private office, snag that expensive-looking bust up onto the bookshelf. Consult the Thieves Guild Quest: Larceny Targets for further information.

➤ Bust of the Gray Fox

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Brynjolf

◆ TARGET: The Ragged Flagon or Cistern, in the Ratway

Either retrace your steps back to the surface or (better yet) head into the Ratway Sewers, which offer you a quick route back to the Ragged Flagon.

Quest Conclusion

Return to Brynjolf, who hasn't had any luck in tracking Mercer down. But after you produce the plans, these reveal that Mercer is intent on taking the Eyes of the Falmer, a heist Gallus had been planning for years. The only course of action is clear: to pursue this cur into an ancient Falmer dungeon and intercept him before he can take this invaluable item! Aside from Chillrend, there are no other rewards, only a summoning to meet Karliah at once.

Stride toward the entrance to the Welksight Chamber, where Karliah explains the steps to becoming a Nightingale. After some hesitation on Brynjolf's part, follow the procession forward as the gate opens, and stand on the ancient circle glyph inscribed into the ground. Karliah performs the oath, and a dialogue with Lady Nocturnal begins. (Her voice emanates from a ball of energy. She doesn't appear in person at this point.)

Once the ceremony is over, Karliah reveals the last secret of the Nightingales: Their purpose is to guard not only the Twilight Sepulcher, but also the secret kept within—the Skeleton Key of Nocturnal. Mercer stole this key, which opens any lock (indeed, the artifact allowed him to bypass the otherwise-sealed locks on the Guild's vault doors), and the powers of the key may have imbued him with powers beyond normal reckoning.

Quest Conclusion

Brynjolf tells you that due to the circumstances that have befallen the Thieves Guild, there is no one qualified to lead the forces except for you.

At this point, if you've completed all of the City Influence Quests, Brynjolf indicates that after this whole sorry affair is over, you are to become Guild Master.

At this point, if you haven't completed all of the City Influence Quests, Brynjolf says that as soon as Delvin tells him the Guild has regained a foothold in Skyrim, you are to become Guild Master.

Postquest Activities

Thieves Guild Quest: Blindsighted begins now!

An Audience with Lady Nocturnal

◆ OBJECTIVE: Listen to Karliah

◆ TARGET: Inside the Ratway, in Riften

This quest begins with the first objective already under way. Although Karliah is a Nightingale, it falls to the current acting leader of the Thieves Guild to order the murder of Mercer. Brynjolf has no qualms about this, but Karliah points out that great care must be taken; after all, Mercer is a Nightingale, and an agent of Nocturnal. She suggests meeting Mercer on equal footing. Just outside Riften is a clearing and an old standing stone. She cryptically asks that you meet there.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Meet Karliah at the Standing Stone

◆ TARGET: Nightingale Hall, just southwest of Riften

Take the southwest exit from Riften and walk the path until you see the large petroglyph stone among the silver birch trees. Both Brynjolf and Karliah are waiting for you. Karliah explains this is the headquarters of the Nightingales, and you're here to seek an edge in the forthcoming fight with Mercer. You may ask her further questions, but she says she'll tell you more once you're inside Nightingale Hall. Follow her inside. A secret door in the face of the rocky cliff will open, revealing a door into Nightingale Hall.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Follow Karliah

Step through the still air of the entrance tunnel. Brynjolf can't believe this place existed but doesn't know why he's here. Karliah reveals you are the first of the uninitiated to set foot in here in over a century. You are to accompany Karliah to the armory to don the armor of a Nightingale and begin the oath. Your roles should now become increasingly clear.

► Infiltration of Irkngthand

◆ OBJECTIVE: Travel to Irkngthand

◆ TARGET: Entrance to Irkngthand Arcanex

This quest begins with the first objective already under way. Head to Irkngthand, in the mountains above Lake Yorgim. The exterior is a sprawling jumble of fallen dwarven ruins, a sealed gate, and a complement of bandits you must sneak past or slay. Ignore the gate with the bars and instead head right (west), under the fallen columns, and to the stone steps near some bear traps. Step onto the upper ledge next to the dwarven exterior, and head southeast. Follow the ledge to a corridor in the right wall, watching for the spear trap as you exit. Find the rickety wooden steps and follow this precarious path across the domed rooftops and over two wood bridges to the upper entrance of the main structure, Irkngthand Arcanex. Another option is to locate a lever along the path that drops the gate, allowing an easier access in and out.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Karliah

◆ TARGET: Entrance to Irkngthand Grand Cavern

Step into the golden gloom. Pass the bloodstained camp, moving southwest into a ceremonial pool chamber with more strewn dwarven machinery. A sphere springs to life here. Head into a chamber of faint green mist, and quickly avoid the numerous fire pillars, following the path among the rubble to the southeast gate. Once through the gate, locate the Dwarven Elevator and ride it down to the Grand Cavern. You meet Karliah and Brynjolf down the steps. Mention the bandits Mercer slew, and commence your hunt for Mercer Frey.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Locate Mercer Frey

◆ TARGET: Irkngthand Sanctuary

Moving around to the large balcony overlooking the last chamber in this area, Karliah spots Mercer Frey skulking close to the exit. You can't directly access this lower stepped chamber, so head through the door and along the winding corridors to a giant chamber of dwarven ruins. Cut down the Falmer that inhabit these parts before moving west along the ledge. There's a locked (Master) cage where an ancient ballista can be fired on foes down below. Head to a ledge with a lever. There is a second lever on the room's opposite side. Brynjolf mentions that these levers hold the key to your progress:

Puzzle Solution: Both the levers must be pulled to lower the bars that block your passage. Each lever is on either side of the raised area. If you aren't quick enough, the levers reset, so remove the enemy threats first. Then pull the lever farthest from the exit, and quickly rush to the opposite side and pull the other. This gives you the most amount of time to reach the exit. Both lamps by the door should be lit for you to proceed.

Now descend to the earthen floor, fighting Falmer and Dwarven Spheres, and head through the exit you created.

TIP You can run off on your own if you wish; Karliah and Brynjolf will join you in a subsequent section of this place. If you get too far from them, they will attempt to catch up.

The subsequent chamber is in an even more dilapidated state. Climb atop the rubble and rooftops, fighting Falmer as you go. Head west to the stone ramps and up to the gold door. Beyond is a small study area and a gate to the southeast. Although Mercer has already ransacked this area, he neglected to grab a couple of Detect Life Scrolls strewn in this room; grab them, as they are useful later during your battle with him.

► Scroll: Detect Life (3)

Enter the gate, and your route opens up into a massive grand cavern. This is actually the location you saw from the balcony, which is in this chamber. Now you can battle through the Falmer to the opposite side, optionally challenging a Dwarven Centurion to fight if you wish or jumping off the small bridge and pressing the button on the console to release the Centurion on the hapless Falmer. Climb the stone ramp and run across the ledge to reach the upper Falmer camp. Exit into the Irkngthand Slave Pens.

Brynjolf notices the stench in these parts; you're going to be encountering several Falmer and their nasty pets, the Chaurus. First, though, destroy a Dwarven Spider or two, pass a locked gate (Apprentice), and head down the steps into a Dwarven Torture Chamber with bone chimes that alert the Falmer of your movements. If you sneak up on them, you can use the lever on the overlook to unleash a dwarven thresher trap on the Falmer below.

Journey down the corridor, turning right (south) into a Falmer camp. Slaughter (or sneak) your way east and south, opening the Chaurus pens to reach a chamber of pipes. Take the low road or high ledge to the drop-down at the eastern end, which leads to your ultimate destination: the Irkngthand Sanctuary. Or you can sneak across the dwarven pipes that run along the ceiling in one area, allowing you to cross most of this large expanse undetected.

► No Mercy: Into the Frey!

A giant Falmer statue greets you from the opposite side of this huge Sanctuary chamber. Mercer has set about defiling it already, and Falmer blood has been spilled. Although Karliah and Brynjolf attempt silence, Mercer Frey finishes prying out the statue's massive eyes, notices you all, and casts a shock-wave-type spell that disrupts and destabilizes the massive chamber. The pipes in the ceiling burst, and water floods the chamber to about ankle depth. There's an immediate rumbling as you tumble down from the ledge, which splits apart, leaving your brethren stranded. You must face Mercer Frey alone! He speaks to you from your fallen position. You can speak to Frey about Nocturnal and the key, but there's only one way this ends: with one of you at the end of a blade!

◆ OBJECTIVE: Slay Mercer Frey

Target: Mercer Frey. Mercer is a vicious swordsman. He is nimble and dextrous and can turn himself invisible. Even before you fight him, he uses one of his stolen Nightingale powers to frenzy Brynjolf, who turns on Karliah, effectively keeping them from helping you in this battle. This causes no end of problems, especially as the chamber you're on is getting wetter and is very steep. There are steps around the statue, and you can cross the statue's lap.

Mercer Frey may be invisible for most of the fight, but keep an eye on the water, as it will ripple when Mercer runs through it.

If you grabbed the Detect Life Scrolls or have a spell of the same name, now would be an exceptionally good time to use it!

Strike Mercer with your Nightingale Blade. This drains him and leaves a shimmering trail from him, even when he's invisible. Use that to your advantage. Keep moving so he can't sneak up on you, and keep your back to a wall so he can't hit you from behind.

Mercer's form is shimmering and isn't completely invisible; strike out quickly when you see this shape. If you're attacking at melee range, remember you can still block and then counterattack immediately. This helps when fighting blind. Spells with ongoing effects also help, such as Flames, which coat Mercer in fire, allowing you to see him more clearly.

After the shadows take him, search Mercer Frey quickly. Among his belongings, you can claim the two Eyes of the Falmer and the Skeleton Key Karliah spoke of. Now is the time to make good your escape!

◆ OBJECTIVE: Retrieve the Skeleton Key

◆ OBJECTIVE: Escape from Irkngthand

◆ TARGET: Bronze Water Cave

➤ Eye of the Falmer (2) ➤ Skeleton Key

QUEST: LARCENY TARGET

Make sure to bring these enormous gems to Delvin. Consult Thieves Guild Quest: Larceny Targets for more information.

The statue chamber becomes increasingly unstable, with torrents of water cascading down from an increasing number of holes in the ceiling. Karliah yells that there must be a way out, and yet the water still rises. Stay calm, and after snagging your final Larceny Target, turn and face the chamber's southeastern side, just above the head of the Falmer Statue. Right before the cavern completely fills with water, a cluster of rocks dislodge, revealing a tunnel opening—but only if you have the power of the Skeleton Key, so be sure to grab it off Mercer's corpse. Don't waste any more time; scramble up into the tunnel and escape!

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Karliah

Quest Conclusion

You emerge into the Bronze Water Cave, on the shore of Lake Yorgrim. Brynjolf has matters to attend to, but Karliah speaks with you for a few moments, realizing her 25-year exile is over and presenting you with a token of her esteem. Now it is time to return the Skeleton Key to its rightful place, by traversing the Pilgrim's Path in the Twilight Sepulcher. This is a journey you'll be taking alone.

◆ A Dark Journey: Pilgrim's Path

◆ OBJECTIVE: Enter the Twilight Sepulcher

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to the Nightingale Sentinel

This quest begins with the first objective already under way. Journey to the mountains to the west of Falkreath, and find the entrance to the Twilight Sepulcher, close to a rushing mountain stream. Open the ornate Iron Door, and step into this sacred site. The large entrance cavern is dominated by an arched entrance ahead (south) of you. Waiting for you at the steps below the entrance is a ghostly figure. Speak to the last of the Nightingale

Sentinels, who blames himself for this predicament after allowing Mercer Frey to lure him to his fate and steal the Skeleton Key.

You recognize this entity to be Gallus, although this spirit hasn't gone by that name in a long time. Explain you have the key. Continue the conversation, mentioning Karliah is still alive and telling him the key has been returned. Alas, Gallus cannot help you, as this place holds the Ebonmere—a conduit to Nocturnal's realm of Evergloom. When Mercer removed the key, it closed the conduit, weakening the guardians of this place and causing them to forget their true purpose. To rectify this situation, you must take the Pilgrim's Path.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Follow the Pilgrim's Path

◆ TARGET: Entrance to Evergloom, in Twilight Sepulcher Inner Sanctum

You can ask Gallus more questions about what is wrong with the other Sentinels, how the Ebonmere affects you, and what you'll face along Pilgrim's Path. For this question, the spirit recommends you read the journal of a long-dead adventurer who had hoped to take the Path.

◆ OBJECTIVE: (Optional) Retrieve Nystrom's Journal

Nystrom's skeletal remains lie in this chamber, to the east. Search him and check out his weapon, but the real prize is the journal on his corpse.

► Nystrom's Journal

THE FIVE TESTS OF PILGRIM'S PATH

The journal mentions five tests, giving obtuse advice on each of them:

1. "Shadows of their former selves, sentinels of the dark. They wander ever more and deal swift death to defilers."
2. "Above all they stand, vigilance everlasting. Beholden to the murk yet contentious of the glow."
3. "Offer what She desires most, but reject the material. For her greatest want is that which cannot be seen, felt or carried."
4. "Direct and yet indirect. The path to salvation a route cunning with fortune betraying the foolish."
5. "The journey is complete, the Empress's embrace awaits the fallen. Hesitate not if you wish to gift her your eternal devotion."

Puzzle Solution: The five clues refer to the following sections of your forthcoming quest:

1. This refers to the Sentinels guarding this place.
2. This refers to the chamber with the areas of light and darkness and the archers that fire upon you, and that the light is damaging.
3. This refers to the offering room with the basin; Nocturnal desires darkness more than anything else, so the basin is a red herring; extinguish all of the braziers to create darkness.
4. This refers to the long gauntlet of traps in the narrow passage that can be bypassed by picking the lock and avoiding it.
5. This refers to the shaft with no exit.

Party of the First Part: Sentinels

Head up the stairs, weaving your way past a sealed grating and down through an Iron Door, into a candlelit crypt. Nightingale Sentinels are poised here to repel intruders and cannot be reasoned with. Slay those you encounter, pausing only to sift through any books in the upper library. Next, squeeze past the central pedestal, past a floor trigger in the next corridor, and head west to an Iron Door.

Party of the Second Part: Shadows

Beware! This chamber of shadows can burn you to a crisp in moments. You may wish to save your game before proceeding!

CAUTION

Enter a chamber of shadows. Urns glow with inhuman light. Stone plateaus and a weaving path coax you forward. Then the burning starts! You begin to lose health at an alarming rate as you walk through this collection of cursed passages and platforms.

Puzzle Solution: Walk into the lit areas, and your health plummets. The darker the areas, the less your health diminishes. As you enter, run west (and slightly north, to the right) and climb atop the first platform, dodging any dart traps you trigger. Wait up here to regain your health. Turn southwest and rush behind the next structure, and use the wooden steps to climb up after a sharp left (east) turn. Next, rush over the wooden bridge, stepping to the right to avoid more darts. Run up the wooden steps, past the cauldron of light, to the dark edge of the ledge. Regain your health and look southwest. Drop down, running south up the dark middle of the steps to the exit door.

Party of the Third Part: Struck

Walk through the crypt to a pedestal of Nocturnal with a dead bandit at the foot of it. The two ornate wall torches are each hiding the pull chain; yank this to reveal a false wall that rumbles open. Weave through the corridor, heading west, to a group of swinging axes blocking your path. Look left to see a locked door. Pick the lock (Lockpick [Master]) and you can bypass all the traps and head straight to the fourth part). Or, watch for a floor trigger that launches darts. Sprint between them to the Iron Door, avoiding another floor trigger that skewers you with spears by the door. Wait as the door opens and a battering ram swings at you. Step to the right to avoid it, and run under it as it repositions. You can enter the Inner Sanctum from here, or optionally investigate a ghostly banquet hall with items to scavenge and two more Sentinels to dispatch.

Party of the Fourth Part: Skeleton

Amble through a candlelit hallway with a faint purple mist in the air. This leads to a nasty drop down a circular well. At the bottom are the skeletal remains of Anders, an adventurer. Read his message if you wish, before realizing you're well and truly stuck down this well.

Puzzle solution: After a few moments of sweating, you produce the Skeleton Key automatically; the arcane device seems to "know" what you want to unlock and allows you to pass through the floor and into the Ebonmere chamber.

► Anders's Message

Party of the Fifth Part: Summoning

After producing the Skeleton Key and dropping the down the well and into the entrance to Evergloom, you have but one choice: Return the Skeleton Key to the Ebonmere.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return the Skeleton Key to the Ebonmere

◆ OBJECTIVE: Listen to Nocturnal

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Karliah

A circle of impossibly deep blue vapors congeals around the Ebonmere, a three-pronged portal to Evergloom. A flock of black nightingales departs, announcing the arrival of Nocturnal. She notes that a champion has returned the Skeleton Key to the Sepulcher and the Ebonmere is restored. You shall have your trinkets of reward and must drink deeply from the Ebonmere to become an Agent of Nocturnal! It seems this Skeleton Key unlocks more than just doors; it also reveals inner potential.

Once you choose the power, you can now freely and quickly leave the temple. This ends the Thieves Guild critical path quests.

Quest Conclusion

You have done well in the eyes of Nocturnal. Karliah has also appeared. She is visited by the spirit of Gallus one final time; his tormented imprisonment has been lifted, and he leaves his love to walk with the shadows. Speak with Karliah, and she gives you more information about the circles at the base of the Ebonmere. These imbue you with powers befitting a Nightingale Agent. The symbol is of the waxing and waning moon. You can return here once every 24 hours to change your ability, and one day you may be forced back to defend this place; this is your pact with Nocturnal. For now, though, there are pockets brimming with coin and coffer ripe for the picking all across Skyrim!

◆ OBJECTIVE: Choose Nightingale Role

- Agent of Shadow: For two minutes, you are invisible when sneaking. Note that attacking or activating something makes you appear, just as with standard invisibility. You simply need to begin to sneak again, and the invisibility will instantly reactivate. This is a power, so you can use it only once per day.
- Agent of Subterfuge: You can cast a massive Fury spell that can Frenzy any target regardless of its level. This is a power, so you can use it only once per day.
- Agent of Strife: You can cast a huge blast of energy that damages the health of the target for 100 points and grants this same health to you. This is a power, so you can use it only once per day.

Postquest Activities

Karliah makes Nightingale Hall her home, and you can visit her there. Activate the portal to reach the Sepulcher's entrance hall, and head back to finish any remaining additional jobs. This allows you to finally assume the leadership of the Thieves Guild. But your Critical Path Quests are now over.

THIEVES GUILD RADIANT QUESTS

The following 18 Radiant Quests, Additional Jobs, and City Influence Quests occur throughout (and between) the critical Thieves Guild Quests and offer you a different task to accomplish, usually with a sizable reward. Additional Jobs can be completed multiple times. These are available depending on how far along through the critical quests you are. NOTE If you haven't met any Thieves Guild members yet, journey to Riften's Stables and enter via the northern gate. A loud named Maul (the brother of Guild member Dirge) accosts you as you enter Riften. You can speak with him, using Persuasion, Bribing, or Brawling to test his mettle. Then ask about the Unusual Gem you have, and you're directed toward Vex (although he doesn't mention her by name until you're a full member of the Thieves Guild). If Maul has died or you've angered him to the point that you're not on speaking terms, you must simply stumble upon Vex.

Once you know to speak with Vex, meet her at the Ragged Flagon in Riften. Ask her if the Unusual Gem you found is worth anything, and she tells you the gem is a Stone of Barenziah. Although it isn't worth anything in its current state, it is one of 24 prized gems pried off Barenziah's ceremonial crown. Many have attempted to collect all the gems but have failed. Until now! She will pay for a full set of gems and asks you to talk to her again once you've found all 24.

A Crowning Achievement

During your adventures, you may stumble upon an odd-looking but possibly extremely valuable gemstone. This particular valuable stands out from the rest and is called an "Unusual Gem." Any other precious stone is irrelevant to this quest. Once you take (or steal) the gem, the quest begins and one of two objectives appear. The first occurs if you haven't yet joined the Thieves Guild.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Recover the Crown of Barenziah

After you collect all 24 Stones of Barenziah, return to Vex, and she lets you in on a little secret: She knows the location of the Crown of Barenziah, and she'll pay handsomely if you bring it back. Naturally, this involves a long and dangerous trek through Tolvald's Cave, to the southwest of Riften. This place is infested with wild animals and worse—Falmer and their horrific pets, the Chaurus. Battle through this maze of caves to Tolvald's Crossing, moving to a large, dead-end chamber. There's a refuse pile at the end of the path that winds to the right, just after the waterfall. Sort through the pile for the crown.

➤ Crown of Barenziah

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Vex

Quest Conclusion

Back at the Ragged Flagon, tell Vex you've found the Crown of Barenziah. She's suitably impressed and rewards you with the Prowler's Profit perk, which vastly increases the chances of finding gems while scavenging dungeons. You can then sell these for substantial sums of gold. The completed crown with gems is in the Guild behind Mercer's desk once you complete the quest.

➤ Perk: Prowler's Profit

REPARATIONS

If you commit a minor crime, such as accidentally striking a Guild member or pickpocketing them, you're usually let off with a warning (if you're caught). However, if you commit a serious crime, such as assaulting or murdering a Thieves Guild member, all of them become hostile and will attack you. At this point, you can:

Continue on the killing spree, which doesn't result in much else besides dead bodies and fewer places to sell or train. Note that Vex, Delvin, Brynjolf, and Mercer are essential, so surviving in this state is going to be exceedingly difficult!

Yield by sheathing your weapons, or flee the Ragged Flagon, wait three days, and return. Expect the Guild to be unfriendly but not hostile toward you.

Speak to Vex. She requires the princely sum of 1,000 gold pieces paid to the Guild as reparations. Pay up, and you become firm friends again. Refuse, and expect to be ostracized until you pay the fine. This halts all quest progress, including Additional Quests and City Influence Quests. Until reparations are made, you are all alone.

NOTE * Quest names marked with this symbol do not appear in your Quest Menu list, although objectives may.

Eagle-eyed members of the Thieves Guild may notice certain locations across Skyrim are marked with strange little pictorial signs. These inscriptions, which are unknown markings to outsiders, are actually a cryptotext that the Guild uses to flag locations that members feel are particularly safe or dangerous or that have entities that may be helpful or problematic. The symbols are known as Shadowmarks.

To learn more about Shadowmarks, search the Thieves Guild premises for a particularly well-researched book called Shadowmarks, written by Delvin Mallory. It contains all the markings the Thieves Guild uses.

Shadowmarks

GLOSSARY OF SHADOWMARKS

The following Shadowmarks appear throughout the realm of Skyrim. Here's what they mean:

✓	SHADOWMARK	DESCRIPTION
<input type="checkbox"/>		"The Guild" This place is as safe as the Flagon's Cistern. Someone from the Guild is nearby for certain.
<input type="checkbox"/>		"Safe" A safe way around an obstacle, such as a hallway without traps or a house already cleared out. Head the way it is pointing to be safe.
<input type="checkbox"/>		"Danger" Head the other way or take your life in your hands. Danger lurks beyond this point!
<input type="checkbox"/>		"Escape Route" If you find yourself in jail, look for this marking and find an escape route nearby.
<input type="checkbox"/>		"Protected" Don't go here when thieving; the people at this location are under the Guild's protection and should never be robbed or assaulted.
<input type="checkbox"/>		"Fence" This should become your favorite landmark; expect to sell your hard-earned stolen goods here at a fair price.
<input type="checkbox"/>		"Thieves' Cache" Find this on a chest or barrel; expect a gift. Membership has its privileges.
<input type="checkbox"/>		"Loot" There's something near here worth stealing.
<input type="checkbox"/>		"Empty" Pass over this place, as there's nothing of note inside.

These markings can reveal (for example) who they consider a Fence, so if you're prowling a new town, you can learn where friends, foes, thieving opportunities, and like-minded souls reside. This can also help during certain Jobs so you know what's likely to be inside a house before you enter it; every one of the five largest Hold Cities (Solitude, Markarth, Whiterun, Windhelm, and Riften) has these markings to find. Also note that Guild Cache barrels are clearly emblazoned with the Thieves Cache Shadowmark, making them easier to spot for eagle-eyed thieves exploring the five largest capitals.

MOON SUGAR RUSH*

When you speak with Tonilia after being inducted into the Guild, she tells you that she has something for you to do. The Guild is lacking a reliable way to transport merchandise across Skyrim. Tonilia reckons the shrewd Khajiit caravaneers might want a cut of the profits for selling (and fencing) for the Guild. Their leader, Ri'saad, should make a deal if you present him with the satchel of Moon Sugar she gives you.

Satchel of Moon Sugar

◇ OBJECTIVE: Deliver Moon Sugar to Ri'saad

◇ OBJECTIVE: Return to Tonilia

Head back to the Ragged Flagon, inform Tonilia of your success, and she gives you some gold for your troubles. Much more importantly, you can sell stolen property to the following Fences, in each of the Caravans!

- Leveled gold pieces
- Fence (Caravan): Zaynabi
- Fence (Caravan): Atahba
- Fence (Caravan): Ri'saad
- Fence (Caravan): Majhad

ARMOR EXCHANGE*

Once you successfully complete Thieves Guild Quest: Scoundrel's Folly, Brynjolf mentions that Tonilia has a special piece of armor that you can exchange. When you speak to her, she offers to exchange one of your four pieces of Thieves Armor for a piece that's more enhanced. Choose from the hood, cuirass, gloves, or boots. You can choose only one and can't go back on your choice. The quest then concludes.

- Thieves Guild Armor (+35 Carry Weight)
- Thieves Guild Boots (Improve Pickpocket 25%)
- Thieves Guild Gloves (Improve Lockpick 25%)
- Thieves Guild Hood (Improve Prices 15%)

LARCENY TARGETS*

Throughout almost all of the Thieves Guild Critical Path Quests, you'll find a valuable item to steal, with the express intention of making a little money from it. The exact location of each Larceny Target is detailed in each specific quest. Return and speak to Delvin about cashing in your stolen goods for gold. The following table lists all available Larceny Targets and the quests they appear in:

Queen Bee Statue

Honningbrew Decanter

East Empire Shipping Map

Model Ship

Dwemer Puzzle Cube

Bust of the Gray Fox

Eye of the Falmer (Second Gem)

<input checked="" type="checkbox"/> LARCENY TARGET	THIEVES GUILD QUEST	LOCATION	DESCRIPTION
<input type="checkbox"/> Queen Bee Statue	Loud and Clear	Goldenglow Estate second floor	On a bedside table upstairs in Aringoth's bedroom
<input type="checkbox"/> Honningbrew Decanter	Dampened Spirits	Honningbrew Meadery	Locked upstairs office belonging to Sabjorn
<input type="checkbox"/> East Empire Shipping Map	Scoundrel's Folly	East Empire Trading Company Warehouse	In the dock overseer's hut, northwest corner
<input type="checkbox"/> Model Ship	Speaking with Silence	Snow Veil Sanctum	Fallen from a pedestal, deep in the dungeon
<input type="checkbox"/> Dwemer Puzzle Cube	Hard Answers	Calcelmo's Laboratory	In an alcove, near Calcelmo's assistant Aicantar
<input type="checkbox"/> Bust of the Gray Fox	The Pursuit	Mercer's House	In Mercer Frey's cellar office, in his house in Riften
<input type="checkbox"/> Eye of the Falmer (Second Gem)	Blindsighted	Irkngthand Sanctuary	Taken from Mercer Frey's corpse.

TIP Did you miss one of these trinkets? Then return to the location and snag it; all should still be there. Also look for sold Larceny Targets to appear as trophies on one of the bookcases behind Mercer's desk in the Cistern and for the bust of the Gray Fox on the desk.

➤ 150 to 300 gold pieces (per item)

ADDITIONAL JOBS

PREREQUISITES: Complete Thieves Guild Quest: Taking Care of Business

AN OVERVIEW

Ready for some extra work? Once Brynjolf instructs you to speak with Vex and Delvin Mallory about additional work they may have for you (after you complete Thieves Guild Quest: Taking Care of Business and you "officially" join the Guild), immediately chat with either of your new brethren. Aside from offering you training in Lockpicking (Vex) and Sneaking (Delvin), ask them to explain the jobs they have to offer you, and then begin any you wish. You can have one Additional Job from each of them active at any given time. The Guild frowns on you quitting jobs you may be finding too difficult, but this is possible too. When you successfully finish a certain number (and variety) of Additional Jobs, Part 3: City Influence Quests become accessible (see below).

➤ Leveled gold pieces

<input checked="" type="checkbox"/> JOB GIVER	TYPE OF JOB	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/> JOB GIVER	TYPE OF JOB
<input type="checkbox"/> Delvin Mallory	The Numbers Job	<input type="checkbox"/> Vex	The Shill Job
<input type="checkbox"/> Delvin Mallory	The Fishing Job	<input type="checkbox"/> Vex	The Sweep Job
<input type="checkbox"/> Delvin Mallory	The Bedlam Job	<input type="checkbox"/> Vex	The Heist Job
<input type="checkbox"/> Vex	The Burglary Job

NOTE The following gives general information on all seven types of jobs and provides a particular example of each. You can continue to choose jobs for as long as you like; there's no upper limit.

Be warned! Killing witnesses or the owners of any object you are pilfering is against the Thieves Guild code and fails the active job. Thieves steal valuables, not lives! Even worse, once the job fails, there is no gold reward, and the job does not count toward unlocking the City Influence Quests!

CAUTION

DELVIN'S ADDITIONAL JOBS

The Numbers Job

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Make changes in the ledger at [business name] in a Hold City
- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Delvin

Delvin is concerned with skimming a little off the top: To this end, he requires you to visit a store somewhere in the realm and make some subtle changes to the ledger. Enter the establishment, find the ledger, and fix it.

only need to complete the ledger changes without being spotted, although some ledgers are in the same room as a vendor, meaning you need to enter at night or use Sneak abilities.

The Fishing Job

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Retrieve [item] from [mark] in [Hold City].
- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Return the valuable to Delvin.

Delvin has numerous jobs to test one of the oldest and most important skills that a thief must possess: a penchant for pickpocketing! Move to the location indicated and observe the person. Check the route they take and be patient; then quickly crouch and follow them. Swipe the valuable before they can react or even know it's gone! Augmentations both magical and skillful help here.

The Bedlam Job

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Steal [a set amount of] gold in goods, from a Hold city
- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Return the valuables to Delvin

Delvin's third job involves surreptitiously entering a city and emptying it of a set number of valuables up to a value in gold pieces that Delvin has determined. The trick here is to know where in the city you can pillage (everywhere within the local map but not adjacent locations such as the Blue Palace in Solitude or Understone Keep in Markarth) and to take items only while you're hidden; therefore, crouch and check every time, just before you make the snatch. If you are seen taking an object, it doesn't count toward the total, so make sure you are completely hidden. Basically, keep stealing until the quest triggers that you're done!

TIP The best locations to pilfer from are stores, marketplaces, and private residences. The Dwemer Museum in Markarth does not count. Any additional stolen goods can be sold to Tonilia, as this is the one job where you're allowed to keep the items at the end!

VEX'S ADDITIONAL JOBS

The Burglary Job

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Retrieve [an item] from [a wealthy home] somewhere in a Hold city
- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Return the valuable to Vex

Vex requires you to break into a location (usually the residence of a high-ranking or wealthy person) and steal a valuable object that the Thieves Guild can sell. This almost always requires you to wait until any residents of the location have left or to utilize your Sneak and Lockpick talents to unlock one of the location's doors, steal the valuable, and leave quickly.

The Shill Job

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Plant [evidence] in [a wealthy home] somewhere in a Hold City
- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Vex

Vex wants you to take a stolen item acquired by the Guild and place it inside the home of a high-ranking person, in order to implicate them in a crime. Aside from taking the usual precautions when entering and exiting the building (ensuring no one sees you inside or out), you must locate a chest or other object that holds items and place the stolen item in it. Remember; only place the specific item you're carrying!

The Sweep Job

◆ OBJECTIVE: Clear [a wealthy home], somewhere in a Hold City, of [valuables]

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return the valuables to Vex

Vex orders you to head to a location the Guild has staked out and believes has numerous high-quality items. You must enter the premises unseen. Once inside, you are to clear the house of a specific number of valuables (and optionally, anything else you can get away with, although this isn't necessary for this quest). Then return to Vex without arousing suspicion at any time.

strongbox usually holds the valuable item, proficient sneaking, usually at nighttime, is the only way to avoid angering the locals and increasing your Bounty (which can occur but is not recommended).

The last type of job Vex has is similar to burglary but with an important difference: You're taking a valuable item from a store rather than a private residence. As there's usually someone in a store and in a storeroom where a

TIP Common sense should prevail when you're trying to complete jobs without being caught:

Burglarize stores when they are closed so the vendors don't see you.

Stake out private residences and watch when the inhabitants leave; when the house is empty, pick the lock and steal without the possibility of discovery.

The more risk you take by attempting crimes with vendors or residents gazing at you, the harder you're making it for yourself.

There's no reason to rush; spend time staking places out and learning where the targets are, and come back later to attempt the deed.

The Heist Job

◆ OBJECTIVE: Steal [an item] from [a store] in a Hold City

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return [the item] to Vex

CITY INFLUENCE QUESTS

GROWING THE GUILD AND GAINING INFLUENCE

An Overview

As you become continuously successful with your jobs, you can inquire during conversations with Delvin Mallory or Vex about the reasons for these jobs and how they help the Guild. The reasons are simple: Years ago, the Guild had a foothold in every major city in Skyrim—folks wouldn't dare lifting an apple without checking with the Guild first—but as the Guild collapsed, they lost Fences, influential contacts, and, most importantly, respect. With your help, the Guild can be taken seriously and start to take the cities back again.

Thanks to Maven Black-Briar, you have some pull in Riften, but if you're caught in a nefarious act in Whiterun or another Skyrim city, you should expect an extended jail stay. But once you complete a unique job for an influential and powerful individual within each prominent city, you can expect a much more lenient attitude. However, these city leaders won't approach the Guild until numerous smaller "jobs" have been completed—the tasks you're undertaking already.

To activate the following City Influence Quests (one per city), you must complete a total of 5 Additional Jobs within that city. After you successfully finish 5 Additional Jobs in a particular city, contact Delvin Mallory inside the Ragged Flagon and begin one or more of the following jobs. Continue to complete Additional Jobs until you successfully finish 5 or more in every city. Obviously, with the random nature of the jobs, you may have to complete more than 10 before receiving a job for a city you haven't finished all the necessary jobs in yet. The cities that the Thieves Guild wishes to gain influence in are:

✓ NAME OF CITY	ADDITIONAL JOBS COMPLETED?	AVAILABLE QUEST
<input type="checkbox"/> Markarth	5	Silver Lining
<input type="checkbox"/> Solitude	5	The Dainty Sload
<input type="checkbox"/> Whiterun	5	Imitation Amnesty
<input type="checkbox"/> Windhelm	5	Summerset Shadows
<input type="checkbox"/> Riften	0	None†

NOTE † Additional Jobs are available but no additional quest is available. You can perform jobs there, but they don't contribute to the City Influence Quests.

The rewards you receive for spreading the Thieves Guild's influence across Skyrim are detailed after the following four City Influence Quests.

PREREQUISITES: Complete Thieves Guild Quests: Additional Jobs in Markarth (5)

INTERSECTING QUESTS: All further Thieves Guild Quests

LOCATIONS: Pinewatch, Pinewatch Bandit's Sanctuary, Riften, Ratway, Cistern, The Ragged Flagon

CHARACTERS: Adora, Delvin Mallory, Endon, Rhorlak

ENEMIES: Bandit, Rigel Strong-Arm

◆ OBJECTIVES: Speak to Endon the Silversmith, Enter Pinewatch, Recover Endon's Silver Mold, Return to Endon

► Molding Endon's Alliance

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Endon the Silversmith

◆ TARGET: Endon, in Markarth

After you complete 5 (or more) successful Additional Jobs in Markarth, Delvin Mallory receives word that one of the finest Silversmiths in all of Skyrim, a man named Endon, has ordered a special mold from far-off Valenwood but it never arrived at his shop. Meet Endon (and his daughter, Adora) and tell him Delvin sent you. He informs you that bandits were most likely to blame. As Markarth's other resources are stretched thin, he has requested that the Thieves Guild handle this. Endon promises both his loyalty and some of his wealth in exchange for returning the invaluable mold.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Enter Pinewatch

Journey to the remote farmhouse known as Pinewatch in the middle of the pine forest, and pick the lock of the door (Average). Step inside, and your objective updates.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Recover Endon's Silver Mold

◆ TARGET: Inside the Pinewatch Bandit's Sanctuary, in Pinewatch

The lone farmhouse is deceptively small. Head to the cellar and locate (or wake up) Rhorlak. To progress further, try one of the following:

Choose to kill him. Search the cellar, find the note on the table and read it, and locate the secret trigger button.

(Bribe) Offer to loosen his tongue with money. He mentions a secret trigger button in the cellar wall.

Or simply ignore Rhorlak (the cheapest, nonviolent option) and simply find the button in the wall, with or without reading the note.

Or find the note tacked onto the wall with a dagger, by the door to the wilderness.

Across from the cellar fireplace is a suspiciously empty shelving cabinet. Check to the right of it for a button, above a basket. Press it. The cabinet swings out, revealing a tunnel behind it.

► Note to Rhorlak

Cross the wooden bridges and through the roughly hewn connecting tunnels, as Pinewatch's underground maze opens up before you. Bandits are guarding this area, so approach each chamber with your armaments at the ready. Continue past a large collection of barrels, down the craggy path, and fight more bandits to reach a door leading to the Pinewatch Bandit's Sanctuary.

In the first Sanctuary chamber, use the stacked barrels as cover when fighting off (or sneaking past) another group of bandits. Look for the opening in the upper western wall. Go past the cage room and up the stone steps to a wooden door and a small crypt room. The dead Draugr inform you that bandits are farther inside these catacombs; travel into the makeshift camp where you'll encounter more fighting. Head into the chamber with the hanging bone chimes; brush into them if you wish to alert Rigel Strong-Arm, the leader of this motley crew. Search (or pickpocket) her for the necessary keys to enter all additional chambers.

► Pinewatch Key

► Pinewatch Treasure Room Key

At the next wooden door, pick the lock (Very Hard) or use the Pinewatch Treasure Room Key. Just beyond is an iron door leading across a precarious pair of wooden beams with dart traps on either side. Sprint across, open another wooden door, and watch for two trigger stones in the floor; they both release traps—swinging blades and a battering ram, respectively—as you progress to the main crypt. You're greeted with a mace trap to the face, so take a step back and duck into the chamber. Sitting in the despoiled sarcophagus is the unique item you've been tasked to find. Take it, any coin, and the Silver Candlestick (which you can fence back at the Ragged Flagon). The treasure chest is worth prying open, too!

► Endon's Silver Mold

► Silver Candlestick

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Endon

◆ TARGET: Endon, in Markarth

TIP Pinewatch is not locked prior to this quest, and you can actually obtain the Silver Mold at any time, carrying it with you throughout your adventures until this quest begins. In this event, you can immediately give the item to Endon when you first meet him, completing the quest almost immediately.

Quest Conclusion

Open the door with the bar on it, which is a shortcut back to the cellar and out into Skyrim. Travel back to Markarth, and speak with Endon. He takes the mold and is now an influential ally in Markarth and a Fence in the city if you wish to sell stolen goods.

► Fence: Endon

► Leveled Enchanted Light Armor

PREREQUISITES: Complete Thieves Guild Quests: Additional Jobs in Solitude (5)

INTERSECTING QUESTS: All further Thieves Guild Quests

LOCATIONS: The Dainty Sload, East Empire Company Warehouse, Red Wave, Riften, Ratway, Cistern, The Ragged Flagon, Solitude, Blue Palace, Erikur's House

CHARACTERS: Delvin Mallory, Erikur, Sabine Nytte

ENEMIES: First Mate, Sailor

◆ OBJECTIVES: Speak to Erikur, Acquire Balmora Blue, Plant the Balmora Blue, Return to Erikur

◆ Erikur's Devious Delivery

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Erikur

◆ TARGET: Erikur, in Solitude

After completing 5 (or more) Additional Jobs in Solitude, Delvin Mallory informs you about a matter regarding Erikur, a businessman in Solitude. Find this Thane in the Blue Palace or near his impressive home. Whether it is by hook or by crook, as long as his business affairs flourish, Erikur is not afraid to get a little dirty. Recently, Captain Volf of the cargo ship The Dainty Sload has defaulted on a trade agreement he had with the Thane. The details of the agreement aren't clear, but whatever happened, Erikur stands to lose quite a bit of money.

This, and the Captain's stubbornness, have made Erikur decide to contact the Thieves Guild for assistance on the matter.

The Guild has worked with Erikur before, and matters usually ended mutually beneficial for both parties. Trying to resolve the matters through legal channels would prove difficult, as the Captain of the vessel has covered his bases. To this end, Erikur has requested that you plant a substance known as "Balmora Blue" aboard the ship, framing the Captain as a smuggler. You'll find the source of the contraband close to a second vessel, the Red Wave, moored in the harbor below Solitude.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Acquire Balmora Blue

◆ TARGET: Sabine Nytte, on the Red Wave, East Empire Company Warehouse

Your contact is a deckhand named Sabine Nytte. Travel to the East Empire Company Warehouse, and look for a large ship moored off the jetty outside the East Empire store. Board the ship and speak to Sabine (she'll always be up on deck during this quest). She has the merchandise you require, but it's going to cost you! You can:

(1,500 gold) Pay Sabine a large amount of gold and receive the Balmora Blue immediately.

Ask if there's another way to earn it. There isn't.

(Pickpocket) Oh, but there is! Carefully pick her pockets and obtain the key.

Protest at the price. Sabine isn't budging, and she isn't stupid. She isn't carrying the contraband for you to steal!

(Sneak, Pickpocket) Or, you can find a second key on Sabine, pickpocket it, and then head into the bowels of the Red Wave to a safe. Inside the safe is a note pinpointing the location of the Balmora Blue Chest. Execute this plan if you've annoyed Sabine to the point of her refusing to speak to you or if you prefer a stealthy route to reach this objective.

Or you can ignore Sabine completely and use this guide to pinpoint the hidden footlocker, swim down, and save yourself some coin!

Once you pay the money, Sabine hands you a key and explains where the stash is located: underwater, and close by.

➤ Sabine's Footlocker Key ➤ Sabine's Red Wave Key

Sabine's contraband is sealed inside a footlocker below the jetty adjacent to the Red Wave. Dive down and locate the chest, using either Lockpick (Hard) or your key to open it.

➤ Balmora Blue

◆ OBJECTIVE: Plant the Balmora Blue

◆ TARGET: Captain's Chest, below deck aboard the Dainty Sload

Journey to the Dainty Sload and attempt to sneak aboard, or utilize your magic to enter the hold. The sailors stationed here will attack on sight. Sprint past the sailors as you head counterclockwise through the ship's interior to the hold stairs. Or simply use Invisibility and Pacify. Once inside the hold, cross to the opposite side, pass the first mate, and drop the Balmora Blue into the Captain's Chest after you first unlock it (Average).

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Erikur

◆ TARGET: Erikur, in Solitude

Quest Conclusion

When you return to Erikur to announce your success, he has already heard about it. He gives you something for your troubles and is now happy to reopen any doors the Guild needs in the city of Solitude. You receive the following from him:

➤ Spell Tome (Leveled)

PREREQUISITES: Complete Thieves Guild Quests: Additional Jobs in Whiterun (5)

INTERSECTING QUESTS: All further Thieves Guild Quests

LOCATIONS: Riften, Ratway, Cistern, The Ragged Flagon, Whiterun, Dragonsreach, Dragonsreach Jarl's Quarters

CHARACTERS: Irileth, Olfrid Battle-Born

ENEMIES: None

◆ OBJECTIVES: Speak to Olfrid Battle-Born, Steal the letter incriminating Arn, Forge the prison registry, Return to Olfrid Battle-Born

Head northwest from the great hall's entrance stairs. Go down the side steps and into the Dragonsreach Jarl's Quarters. The prison registry is on a table in the corner of a bedroom on the other side.

Letter of Intent

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Olfrid Battle-Born

◆ TARGET: Olfrid Battle-Born, in Whiterun

After finishing 5 (or more) successful Additional Jobs in Whiterun, Delvin Mallory receives an urgent missive from Olfrid Battle-Born, a wealthy Nord residing in Whiterun. It appears that Arn, an old friend of Olfrid, was incarcerated inside Whiterun's prison for a serious crime he committed in Solitude, a crime that will result in his execution. Fortunately, the Whiterun authorities are not aware of his friend's identity; he was arrested on the simple charge of drunken and lewd behavior.

The problem is that the authorities in Solitude recently dispatched a letter to the Jarl of Whiterun, outlining criminals for whom they are searching. If the Jarl reads the letter and makes the connection with Olfrid's friend, he'll be sent to his death. Olfrid proposes that you infiltrate the Jarl's private quarters in Whiterun and steal the letter. While you're at it, you might as well make a change in the prison logbook with his friend's identity written inside.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Steal the letter incriminating Arn

◆ TARGET: Bedroom, in the Dragonsreach Jarl's Quarters

◆ OBJECTIVE: Forge the prison registry

◆ TARGET: Study, in the Dragonsreach Jarl's Quarters

Continue through the Jarl's personal chambers, heading in a roughly southwest direction until you open the doors into the Jarl's study. On the table is a letter from Solitude. Grab that, and then flee the area, ideally without being spotted or murdering anyone.

Letter from Solitude

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Olfrid Battle-Born

◆ TARGET: Olfrid Battle-Born, in Whiterun

Such a brazen act of trespass won't be tolerated by the leaders of Whiterun, so be sure you're carrying the proper cloaking attire or magical accoutrements to make your infiltration successful. After some additional conversation with Olfrid to pinpoint the letter's location (and other, optional information), head into the imposing Dragonsreach.

Once inside, if you're simply wandering around in full view of the guards, Irileth usually stops you. Simply mention that you want to see the Jarl, and you're given a very temporary reprieve. If the guards or other dwellers turn hostile, do not engage them in battle, as killing those you seek to win the influence of is a terrible idea.

CAUTION You're taking your life into your own hands thinking you'll better the sheer number of guards and tough folks roaming these parts; it is better to remain with weapons sheathed, and exit without combat.

Quest Conclusion

Scour the streets of Whiterun for Olfrid Battle-Born, who may be wandering about or hanging inside a dwelling. Although he keeps quiet about Arn, he's happy to receive the letter and tells you to let Delvin know the Guild will be "quite pleased" with what Olfrid can do to influence the powers that run this city. You are also given the an Enchanted Ring.

Enchanted Ring (Leveled)

PREREQUISITES: Complete Thieves Guild Quests: Additional Jobs in Windhelm (5)

INTERSECTING QUESTS: All further Thieves Guild Quests

LOCATIONS: Riften, Ratway, Cistern, The Ragged Flagon, Uttering Hills Caves, Windhelm, House of Clan Cruel-Sea

CHARACTERS: Fjotli, Niranye, Torsten Cruel-Sea

ENEMIES: Linwe, Summerset Shadow

- ◆ OBJECTIVES: Speak to Torsten Cruel-Sea, Speak to Niranye, (Optional) Discover leverage to sway Niranye, Travel to Uttering Hills Cave, Recover Fjotli's Silver Locket, (Optional) Destroy the Summerset Shadow's Banner, Return to Torsten Cruel-Sea

Snuffing out a Rival Sect

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Torsten Cruel-Sea
- ◆ TARGET: Torsten Cruel-Sea, in Windhelm

After wrapping up 5 (or more) successful Additional Jobs in Windhelm, Delvin Mallory has information from a wealthy merchant farmer named Torsten Cruel-Sea, who resides in Windhelm. Travel to Windhelm and find the merchant in the area near the House of Clan Cruel-Sea. Torsten has been lamenting the murder of his jewelry adorned daughter Fjotli, whose body was left without a sentimental Silver Locket. Through detective work, the potential culprit has been tracked down, an Altmer (High Elf) named Niranye. Strangely, Torsten's sources say Niranye is part of a rival Thieves Guild, which Delvin Mallory has denied his part in to Torsten. You are to hunt down this locket—a Cruel-Sea family heirloom—and he suggests searching Niranye's house first.

You now have two possible locations to search: the market stall in the southwest corner of Windhelm where Niranye plies her wares (usually during the daytime) or her house in the southeast corner of town.

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Niranye
- ◆ TARGET: Niranye, in Windhelm

Niranye herself: Whether you meet her in her house or within the walls of Windhelm, Niranye tries to pretend she's still shocked by Fjotli's death, until you tell her to drop the act. You can:

(Persuade) Comment on her awful acting abilities.

(Intimidate) Threaten a similar ending to Fjotli's.

Or just kill her for wasting your time, which yields the note to Uttering Hills Cave.

If you're unable to intimidate or persuade her, you can simply respond "My mistake." This opens the following objective:

- ◆ (OPTIONAL) OBJECTIVE: Discover leverage to sway Niranye

In the safe in her hidden basement is a note you can use as leverage. Show it to Niranye after she's clammed up, and she'll start to talk, clearing the objective. Unless there are no other witnesses, the third option (to kill her) may be problematic. If you use verbal sparring, Niranye speaks about a small group of Altmer thieves who call themselves the "Summerset Shadows" and have a base inside the Uttering Hills Caves. She warns you about the craziness of their leader, Linwe, who is infamous for robbing the dead of their valuables.

- Second Letter from Linwe
- Niranye's House Key

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Travel to Uttering Hills Cave
- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Recover Fjotli's Silver Locket
- ◆ TARGET: Linwe, inside Uttering Hills Cave

Journey across the snow-laden ground toward the Uttering Hills Cave, and prepare for a violent welcome from two Summerset Shadow guards close to the campfire and the entrance embedded into the mountain.

Once you're inside, the objective updates and you must find the locket. Head through the snowy tunnel, passing or attacking additional Summerset Shadow thieves, until you reach a circular stone tower staircase. Head down a connecting corridor at the tower's base and into the Shadows' sanctum. There's a banner in the largest of the rooms, where the thieves gather to eat.

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: (Optional) Destroy the Summerset Shadows' Banner

Before you investigate any further, light the burner underneath the banner until it begins to burn; snuffing out any trace of a rival Thieves Guild should be of utmost importance! Locate Linwe, the pretender thief master himself, in an adjacent room. The very fact that he's wearing the garb of a Thief should be cause enough to cut him down! Defeat this charlatan and claim the following from his corpse:

- Fjotli's Silver Locket
- Linwe's Gauntlets
- Linwe's Armor
- Linwe's Helmet
- Linwe's Boots

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Torsten Cruel-Sea
- ◆ TARGET: Torsten Cruel-Sea, in Windhelm

Quest Conclusion

Return to Windhelm and find Torsten Cruel-Sea. Return the locket, and Torsten is most pleased, even a little envious of your adventuring life. But he makes sure you know that he is a trusted ally in this city. He isn't the only one; Niranye becomes a helpful Fence in this city, assuming you didn't kill her.

- Vendor (Fence): Niranye
- Enchanted Jewelry (Amulet, Ring, or Necklace; Leveled; if you burned the banner)
- Leveled gold pieces

Stages of Influence

Building the Thieves Guild's influence across Skyrim is the key to continued success and wealth. This can be measured, based in stages. The following table shows how each of the stages are triggered:

✓ STAGE NUMBER	CITY INFLUENCE QUESTS COMPLETED (OUT OF 4)
<input type="checkbox"/> Stage 0	None: Only Riften is influenced
<input type="checkbox"/> Stage 1	Riften + one City Influence Quest
<input type="checkbox"/> Stage 2	Riften + two City Influence Quests
<input type="checkbox"/> Stage 3	Riften + three City Influence Quests
<input type="checkbox"/> Stage 4†	Riften + all four City Influence Quests

NOTE † This is one prerequisite to becoming Thieves Guild Master.

Reward 1: Additional Visitors and Vendors

As your influence grows, additional visitors appear (they offer little more than conversation), and vendors take up residence in the niches across from the Ragged Flagon, plying a variety of special or themed wares. Be sure to inspect, barter, and purchase from them. The following table shows who turns up, and when.

✓ STAGE NUMBER	VISITOR	VENDOR
<input type="checkbox"/> Stage 1	None	Syndus; Wood Elf Fletcher
<input type="checkbox"/> Stage 2	None	Arnskar Ember-Master; Nord Blacksmith
<input type="checkbox"/> Stage 3	Garthar	Herluin Lothaire; Breton Apothecary
<input type="checkbox"/> Stage 4	Ravyn Imyan	Vanryth Gatharian; Dark Elf Light Armorsmith

Reward 2: Guild Fence Gold

As you should be aware, Tonila—and every other Fence you bring into the cause—fences any items you may have “appropriated” from across Skyrim, as most other merchants don't touch stolen goods. The amount of available gold they offer for items you wish to fence increased depending on your City Influence stage, as shown:

✓ STAGE NUMBER	AVAILABLE GOLD
<input type="checkbox"/> Stage 0	1,000 gold pieces
<input type="checkbox"/> Stage 1	1,500 gold pieces
<input type="checkbox"/> Stage 2	2,250 gold pieces
<input type="checkbox"/> Stage 3	3,000 gold pieces
<input type="checkbox"/> Stage 4	4,000 gold pieces

Reward 3: Crime Amnesty

When you enter one of the Holds that has a completed City Influence Quest—The Rift (Riften), The Reach (Markarth), Haafingar (Solitude), Whiterun (Whiterun), and Eastmarch (Windhelm)—and a guard from one of those cities attempts to arrest you for a crime you've caused, you have two additional options:

1. You can pay the guard to overlook the crime this once. This won't work on violent crimes (murder), but it's a great way to prevent getting arrested for theft when you have a bag full of stolen loot you'd hate to lose. This only works on a given guard once per day. Also note that the bounty on your head remains in place; nothing is cleared. Therefore, if you reengage another guard in dialogue, they might just try and arrest you again.
2. If your pockets are brimming with gold, you can immediately pay off your bounty for that Hold, regardless of the crime. This will also allow the guard to overlook the crime. The amount of gold required to pay off the crime is equal to half your bounty.

The advantage to either option above is twofold:

1. You aren't moved to the Keep (unless you were trespassing—then you are still moved to the Keep) as if you were released from jail.
2. Best of all, none of your stolen loot is confiscated. Normally, when you're arrested, all stolen loot is completely stripped, never to return. In these instances, the thief can avoid that inconvenience!

Reward 4: Guild Growth

For every stage that the Thieves Guild attains, it visibly changes: You should start to notice more containers that can be looted, more expensive and lavish furnishings, and of course, the arrival of the aforementioned vendors. Their “shops” now appear in the Ragged Flagon area, in one of the wall niches across from the bar.

Reward 5: Thief Caches

When you complete a City Influence Quest, “Thief Caches” appear in that Hold's Capital City. These are wooden barrels emblazoned with the “Thieves' Cache” Shadowmark. Each city has three such barrels hidden somewhere within the city walls. The chart below reveals their locations:

SOLITUDE THIEF CACHES

✓ CACHE	LOCATION
<input type="checkbox"/> 1	Amid the barrels to the right of the entrance to Erikur's house.
<input type="checkbox"/> 2	Behind Vittoria Vici's House, tucked into an alcove.
<input type="checkbox"/> 3	At the end of the alley between the Winking Skeeever and Angeline's Aromatics, behind the pine shrubs.

MARKARTH THIEF CACHES

✓ CACHE	LOCATION
<input type="checkbox"/> 1	Where the water from Ghorza Gra-Bagol's Blacksmith shop cascades into the river, half submerged.
<input type="checkbox"/> 2	In a plain, covered walkway in the city's northwest corner; follow the walkway west from Nepos's front door.
<input type="checkbox"/> 3	On the landing, just outside Vlindrel Hall.

WHITERUN THIEF CACHES

✓ CACHE	LOCATION
<input type="checkbox"/> 1	Behind Carlotta Valentin's house
<input type="checkbox"/> 2	South of House Gray-Mane in the corner of the city's wall (next to the gate connecting the Plains to the Wind Districts)
<input type="checkbox"/> 3	Tucked up against the rear exterior wall of the Bannerman's Mane.

WINDHELM THIEF CACHES

✓ CACHE	LOCATION
<input type="checkbox"/> 1	In the small courtyard on the side of Niranye's house.
<input type="checkbox"/> 2	Right next to the door to Sadri's used wares.
<input type="checkbox"/> 3	Tucked at the end of a tiny alley to the left of Hjerim's entrance

RIFTEN THIEF CACHES

✓ CACHE	LOCATION
<input type="checkbox"/> 1	On the lower walkway along the canal, almost directly across from Valindor's house.
<input type="checkbox"/> 2	In a corner on the balcony walkway overlooking the training grounds at Mistveil Keep.
<input type="checkbox"/> 3	In the garden area of Honeyside, against the city wall.

These caches are occasionally restocked, so they are well worth checking out: A cache always contains a random number of lockpicks and arrows and may contain the following (randomly, and leveled):

Potions Gems Enchanted Weapon, Light Armor, or Bow

PREREQUISITES: Complete Thieves

Guild Quests: Additional Jobs in all Holds (20), Complete Thieves Guild Quests: City Influence Quests in all Holds (4), Complete Thieves Guild Quest: Darkness Returns

- ◆ OBJECTIVES: Speak to Brynjolf about becoming the Guild Master, Proceed to the center of Cistern, Become Guild Master for the Thieves Guild, Speak to Brynjolf about being Guild Master, Retrieve your Guild Leader Armor from Tonilia

 MINOR SPOILERS

▶ A Real Honor Among Thieves

This is likely to be the final quest during your time at the Thieves Guild, as the prerequisites are lengthy: You need to have finished all of the Additional Jobs necessary to trigger the four City Influence Quests and have completed those quests too. In addition, you must have finished all of the Critical Path Quests and finished Thieves Guild Quest: Darkness Returns.

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Brynjolf about becoming the Guild Master

Move into the Cistern and converse with your old friend and mentor. Brynjolf is in the training area, and he tells you that the time has come for you to lead this merry band of ne'er-do-wells based on your continuous hard work and impressive performances. He wishes you to head to the Cistern so the ceremony can begin.

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Proceed to the center of Cistern

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Become Guild Master for the Thieves Guild

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Brynjolf about being Guild Master

You receive a full welcome from all of the main Thieves Guild members (except Mercer Frey of course), including Maven Black-Briar. The ceremony begins, and your virtues are extolled, with Delvin, Vex, and Karliah all agreeing that you'd make an excellent leader. With the new honor bestowed upon you, speak to Brynjolf again. After further congratulations, he hands over a couple of prized possessions, as tradition dictates. Then he recommends you speak to Tonilia, who has a special gift for you.

- ▶ Amulet of Articulation ▶ Tribute Chest Key

NOTE The Amulet of Articulation has two functions: First, it has a Speech enchantment, ranging from 5 to 25 percent (leveled to when you receive it). Second, when you wear the Amulet, your Persuade will succeed almost every time, regardless of difficulty. Although there are a few select Persuade Checks that won't work, these are few and far between. However, the vast majority of the time, you can persuade anyone to do your bidding, including guards when talking your way out of nonviolent crimes!

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Retrieve your Guild Leader Armor from Tonilia

Quest Conclusion

Your status-raising ceremony concludes with a full set of Guild Leader Armor. Take these from Tonilia and wear them as you wish. The Tribute Chest contains gold and gems (leveled). Keep checking it, as it is sometimes replenished. At this point, some of your crew may refer to you as "boss."

- ▶ Guild Leader Armor ▶ Guild Leader Gloves
▶ Guild Leader Boots ▶ Guild Leader Hood

THE DARK BROTHERHOOD QUESTS

OVERVIEW

Interaction with the Dark Brotherhood is never explicitly felt. You may hear rumors about the Brotherhood and may even encounter an assassin who has in their possession a mysterious contract to kill you. But to experience as much of the Dark Brotherhood as you can, begin your investigations by locating the broken cart with the odd little jester, close to the Loreius Farm, on the road north of Whiterun.

Dark Brotherhood Sanctuary

The Black Door, approached from the fetid pond.

Sanctuary interior, inside the grotto area.

The Dark Brotherhood Sanctuary is located off the road, in an eerie area of woodland within the southern Pine Forest of Falkreath Hold. The Black Door is not visible to travelers; only those inquisitive enough to venture off the beaten path will see it. The Black Door guards the Dark Brotherhood sanctuary and is magically sealed from intruders. It asks visitors for a passphrase, which they must already know in order to enter.

The initial area houses Astrid's study and bedroom and a secret door (that will open later). Down the main stairs is the grotto cavern, containing Arnbjorn's forge, an area for combat practice, and a waterfall pool with a Word Wall where you'll learn an impressive Shout called Marked for Death.

Farther into the linked cave tunnels are the various bedrooms of the Dark Brotherhood Family, a dining chamber, and a laboratory that connects back to the grotto. In addition, Cicero's room and a chapel—home to a strange little man and an odd sarcophagus—are also available to explore.

➤ Word of Power: Marked for Death

Important Characters

The Night Mother

Existing in the physical realm as an emaciated corpse drained and half-mummified, resting inside an iron sarcophagus, the Night Mother was brought to Skyrim by her keeper, Cicero. During the Dark Brotherhood's prime, the Listener had the honored ability to hear her frightening voice as fragmented snippets. She receives the call of the Black Sacrament, and disperses the information to her "Children."

Leader: Astrid

Astrid is the loving and caring leader of the Skyrim Sanctuary. She is very open about her feelings, and she will be loyal to the Dark Brotherhood until her dying breath. Astrid is married to Arnbjorn, and the two have as healthy a relationship as two Dark Brotherhood assassins can. She is the primary quest-giver.

Assassin: Festus Krex

Krex is old, cranky, and completely unsociable. He is also the one member of the Sanctuary who prefers to use spells over cold steel. Impressively unapproachable, the rest of the Dark Brotherhood accept him as an especially touchy member of the Family and do their best to shrug off his curmudgeonly nature. He does keep an ear to the ground about interesting happenings across Skyrim, which he very occasionally shares.

Assassin: Nazir

Nazir is a Redguard who wields a giant scimitar. He is older than many of the other assassins and serves as a father figure to them. He is noble, humorous, and tactical in his thinking and actions. He always ponders decisions before making them. He is also extremely talented in the Light Armor skill, and hands out minor contracts when the Black Sacrament has been completed somewhere in Skyrim. Check with Nazir for these side contracts when Astrid doesn't have anything available.

➤ Trainer (Light Armor): Nazir

Assassin: Gabriella

Gabriella is a quiet, mysterious member of the Dark Brotherhood, who much prefers the company of her pet Frostbite Spider. After you complete a contract to kill Gaius Maro (and complete the bonus objective), you receive a token from Gabriella to have your fortune read by her dear friend Olava in Whiterun.

Assassin: Babette

A happy and accommodating ten-year-old girl and an obviously respected member, Babette is also obsessed with Alchemy, which she will sell to you, along with many other useful items. She seems wise well beyond her years, due to the fact she is actually a nearly two-hundred-year-old vampire. She is extremely adept at Alchemy magic.

➤ Trainer (Alchemy): Babette

➤ Vendor (Potions): Babette

The Elder Scrolls V

SKYRIM

QUESTS: THE DARK BROTHERHOOD QUESTS

Keeper: Cicero

Cicero, the "Fool of Hearts," is a psychotic, singsong speaking, knife-wielding jester. He is also the Keeper of the Night Mother and arrives at the Sanctuary with her body. Overly paranoid, he constantly speaks with "Mother" and furiously protects her. If he ever hears of a threat to the Brotherhood, he acts quickly and impulsively.

Shadowscale: Veezara

Veezara is a Shadowscale, an Argonian born under the sign of the Shadow. For years he served the king of High Marsh. When he was honorably released from service, he wandered Tamriel and eventually made his way to the Sanctuary in Skyrim. He is friendly and somewhat quiet, but extremely skilled.

Assassin and Blacksmith: Arnbjorn

Arnbjorn is a boisterous Nordic barbarian and husband to Astrid, who's been the only one to tame him—since he also happens to be a werewolf. His loyalty to her is unwavering and unquestioning. He was once a Companion, but his barbaric ways and eagerness for killing made it an uneasy association. After wandering the paths of Skyrim, he found this shadowy organization a much better fit for him. He sometimes works the forge inside the Sanctuary.

► Blacksmith: Arnbjorn

Familiar: Lis

More of a pet than a familiar, Gabriella's Frostbite Spider, Lis, is a permanent resident and unofficial mascot of the Dark Brotherhood Sanctuary. Don't confuse this with a wild spider; it is friendly to members, and it would be a shame if someone slew it out of spite or perverse amusement...especially as all the other Dark Brotherhood members turn hostile if you're foolish enough to slay such a fine and furry beast!

ASSASSINATIONS: A TACTICAL OVERVIEW

Assassination Effects

Before you enter the world of clandestine murder, check the targets you are terminating. Some of them may have other quest-related objectives that change or disappear completely after you assassinate them. Although this never prevents you from completing essential quests, checking the Atlas and the Index prior to taking a victim down is worthwhile.

Skills to Learn

Entering buildings, finding a target, quietly slaying them, and leaving without raising the alarm (or even being seen) requires proficiency in the following skills, which you should think about improving through training and constant use:

One-Handed: for daggers and stealth attacks

Archery: for removing foes from long range without causing a ruckus

Light Armor: so you can sneak and still take damage

Sneak: arguably the most important skill if you're taking a clandestine approach to assassinations

Lockpicking: helpful when trespassing in a locked a building

Illusion spells: such as Invisibility to help you sneak, and Fear or Pacify for an easier getaway

Alchemy: for creating poisons to tip your weapons with Occasional other spells: such as Detect Life when you're looking for foes, friends, or targets

The Assassination Itself

The following are some overall tactics that are worth thinking about employing:

The basic kill: Find the target. Produce your preferred melee weapon. Hit the target with it until he or she expires. Then fight or flee out of the location (if you're spotted), and damn the consequences!

The ranged kill: If you prefer longer-ranged magic or bows, utilize them when attacking the target. If you can fire from cover and without being seen (crouch to check), so much the better.

The stealth kill: Increase your Sneak using augmentations to decrease your visibility, attack in the dead of night and from behind, and then merge back into the shadows if you're spotted.

The poison kill: When culling your target, you obviously want to complete the task as quickly as possible, so coat your assassination weapon in poison so your target dies with one swipe.

TRAINING

In addition to a comfy bed and like-minded attitudes, the main members of this assassin guild are dazzlingly proficient in a particular skill. Speak to each of them, and increase the chosen skill by a point. If you have the gold, you can complete this numerous times:

SKILL	RANK	TRAINER

<input type="checkbox"/> Alchemy	Master	Bobbette

AVAILABLE QUESTS AND TASKS

There are 37 different quests available with the Dark Brotherhood. Thirteen of these are Critical Path Quests (plus an additional introductory quest involving Cicero). Twelve are Side Contract Quests. The remaining 11 are additional quests.

Critical Path Quests

Simply referred to as "quests," these are the main missions you attempt for the Dark Brotherhood. All but the first quest have one or more prerequisites, as shown in the following table:

INTERSECTING QUESTS: Dark Brotherhood Quest: Innocence Lost

LOCATIONS: Loreius Farm

CHARACTERS: Cicero, Curwe, Roadside Guard, Vantus Loreius

ENEMIES: None

◆ OBJECTIVES: Convince Loreius to fix the wheel, Convince Loreius OR report Cicero, Talk to Cicero, OR talk to Loreius

TIP It is recommended you complete this quest before beginning Dark Brotherhood Quest: With Friends Like These... and joining the Dark Brotherhood, as Cicero has some additional words for you, depending on your actions during this quest. You may also gain additional flavor depending on your actions here.

Surely You Jest

The road north of Whiterun is sometimes treacherous. Should you follow this path north from the city or visit Shimmermist Cave and journey due northwest from that location, you encounter a strange little man dressed as a jester, standing by a horse-drawn cart. Inspect the cart, and you'll see one of its wheels has detached from the axle. On the cart is a hefty-looking wooden crate.

The jester is named Cicero. He seems to be a little crazy but does need some help. He says the crate contains the body of his dear, departed mother. They were on their way from Cyrodill to her new resting place, but the wheel on the cart broke. Although the farmer nearby must have proper tools to repair the cart, he refuses to, likely because of Cicero's strange demeanor and dress. Cicero asks you to speak with Vantus Loreius the farmer on his behalf. There's coin in it for you, too.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Convince Loreius to fix the wheel

◆ TARGET: Vantus Loreius, in Loreius Farm

Head roughly west toward the Loreius Farm and locate the farmer and his wife, Curwe. Speak with Vantus Loreius and explain Cicero's predicament. Loreius is extremely suspicious of Cicero, from his outfit to the contents of the crate he insists is his mother, and he doesn't want to be caught up in anything. You can steer the conversation toward siding with Loreius or talking him into helping Cicero. As the conversation progresses, you realize you have two choices: convincing Loreius or reporting Cicero.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Convince Loreius OR report Cicero

◆ TARGET: Vantus Loreius, OR Roadside Guard

Convincing Loreius: Vantus Loreius is easily convinced that his suspicions are unfounded and that Cicero is simply an unfortunate character in need of his wheelwright prowess. Be sure Loreius agrees to this, and then return to Cicero to tell him the good news.

Reporting Cicero: If Loreius has convinced you that Cicero is a suspicious character, head back down to the road and locate the Roadside Guard patrolling close by. Speak to the guard and make up any tall tale that is detrimental to Cicero's character. The guard promptly strides off to arrest Cicero, and you can return to Loreius to celebrate framing a weird (but possibly innocent) man.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Cicero, OR Talk to Loreius

Quest Conclusion

You receive gold as a reward no matter who you side with.

➤ 50 gold pieces

Postquest Activities

If you side with Loreius and inform the guard, once you join the Dark Brotherhood and return to see Vantus Loreius and his wife again, you'll find them murdered on their farm. The culprit is unknown, although you have your suspicions....

INTERSECTING QUESTS: Dark Brotherhood Quest: With Friends Like These...

LOCATIONS: Riften, Honorhall Orphanage, Windhelm, Aretino Residence

CHARACTERS: Aventus Aretino, Constance Michel, Francois Beaufort, Grimvar Cruel-Sea, Hroar, Idesa Sadri, Runa Fair-Shield, Samuel

ENEMIES: Grelod the Kind

◆ OBJECTIVES: Talk to Aventus Aretino, Kill Grelod the Kind, Tell Aventus Aretino that Grelod is dead

The Black Sacrament Enacted

Begin this quest in a number of different ways:

1. You can hear a rumor that mentions a boy named Aventus Aretino if you visit any of the inns or taverns across Skyrim. The nearest to your starting location in Helgen is the Sleeping Giant Inn in Riverwood. The one closest to this quest is Candlehearth Hall in Windhelm. Keep asking about rumors until Aventus's name is mentioned; then follow up on this information.

2. Or, you can visit the Honorhall Orphanage in Riften. Enter the premises and watch as Grelod the Kind doesn't live up to her name. Once the harriidan has ordered her children to bed, speak with any of the "guttersnipes." Francois Beaufort, Samuel, Runa Fair-Shield, or Hroar all point you in the direction of the escaped orphan, Aventus Aretino, and his location in Windhelm.

3. Or, if you're already in Windhelm, the first city guard you speak to mentions something about the ritual going on in a building inside this settlement. If you're close to the Aretino Residence, you can witness a conversation between Grimvar Cruel-Sea and Idesa Sadri; speak to them about this "cursed" child who some have heard reciting the "Black Sacrament." As the house is close by, you can easily check whether these stories hold weight.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Aventus Aretino

◆ TARGET: Aretino Residence, in Windhelm

The Sadist Headmistress Redacted

It appears the rumors are true; Aventus Aretino, a recently orphaned child, has fled from Riften and headed back to his family home.

(Lockpick [Novice])

The only way into the dwelling is to pick the lock. Once inside, you find Aventus in a trancelike state, reciting the Black Sacrament—the means by which those wishing revenge are said to contact the Dark Brotherhood. Aventus isn't concerned that you've found him out; in fact, he's thrilled that a Dark Brotherhood assassin has come to arrange a murder! Even if this wasn't your intention, Aventus doesn't listen; he wants the cruel and sadistic headmistress of the Honorhall Orphanage dead, mainly to save the other children from her violence and so her more compassionate subordinate, Constance Michel, can take over.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Kill Grelod the Kind

◆ TARGET: Honorhall Orphanage, in Riften

Travel to the Honorhall Orphanage and speak with Grelod the Kind. You may reveal as little or as much of your plan as you want. Immediately afterward, you must kill her for her crimes against children.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Tell Aventus Aretino that Grelod is dead

◆ TARGET: Aretino Residence, in Windhelm

Beware that once you murder Grelod the Kind, your bounty level in this Hold is raised significantly if anyone witnessed this dark deed.

CAUTION

(Sneak) Just like any murder you commit as part of the Dark Brotherhood, slaying your target while remaining stealthy is preferred so nobody witnesses the crime. With Grelod, this can involve waiting until she's sleeping. However, Grelod will scream when she dies, alerting the children and Constance, and everyone becomes suspicious of you, even if your Bounty hasn't increased in the Rift.

Quest Conclusion

Travel back to Aventus and inform him that the assassination is complete. He is thrilled and rewards you with a fancy family trinket. It appears this quest is over.

► Aretino Family Heirloom

Postquest Activities

An odd occurrence gives you pause. Once you leave Windhelm and enter any other city in Skyrim, a courier approaches you (assuming you don't run past him). He was told to deliver a message. Examine the black handprint and the words inside that state simply, "We know." The commencement of Dark Brotherhood Quest: With Friends Like These... will follow.

TIP You don't have to wait for a courier to appear for the next quest to commence: Simply find a bed to sleep in (outside Windhelm) and have your dreams interrupted by an assassin named Astrid.

INTERSECTING QUESTS: Dark Brotherhood Quest: Innocence Lost, Dark Brotherhood Quest: Sanctuary

LOCATIONS: Abandoned Shack, Dark Brotherhood Sanctuary

CHARACTERS: Alea Quintus, Astrid, Fulheim the Fearless, Nazir, Vasha

ENEMIES: None

◆ OBJECTIVES: Kill one of the captives, Enter the Dark Brotherhood Sanctuary

◆ A Waking Nightmare

This quest begins once you complete Dark Brotherhood Quest: Innocence Lost.

The Dark Brotherhood has their eye on you. You cannot flee from their gaze, a fact that becomes increasingly obvious the next time you decide to sleep. Instead of waking up where you were, you appear inside a strange shack in the northern reaches of Skyrim. Your only option is to converse with a mysterious veiled figure in black.

The woman introduces herself as Astrid, representative for the Dark Brotherhood. Although you've demonstrated an aptitude for deathcraft and would be an asset to the Brotherhood, you've created a problem. The person you slew—Grelod the Kind—was one of the Brotherhood's legitimate targets. Therefore, you owe the Dark Brotherhood a kill.

Astrid tells you there are three bound captives in this shack. One of them has a contract on their life. You're tasked with figuring out which one and then slaying them. Only after the bloodshed will Astrid give you the necessary key to unlock the Abandoned Shack, allowing you to leave.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Kill one of the captives

◆ TARGET: Any captive in Abandoned Shack

As soon as Astrid finishes her speech, you can attack and kill her, obtaining the Shack Key and fleeing the scene; however, you won't be able to continue any further down this line of quests. This begins a new task: Dark Brotherhood Quest: Destroy the Dark Brotherhood! Consult page 338 for more information.

CAUTION

(Intimidate; Persuade) With each captive, you have a possible Intimidate or Persuade check you can make. Then make your choice and kill the captive you think is guilty:

Captive 1: Fulheim the Fearless. This giant Nord warrior becomes more of a sniveling coward the more you question him.

Captive 2: Alea Quintus. This mother of six children has certain anger issues. She'd kill you with her bare hands if given the chance.

Captive 3: Vasha: A Khajiit crime lord who utilizes both threats and negotiation in order to win his release.

◆ Guilt. Innocence. Right. Wrong. Irrelevant?

Spoiler Alert: Return to Astrid after killing the captive, and she's impressed by your deductions. But the guilt of the victim you chose wasn't important—after all, each captive was innocent. It was the loyalty and unquestioning nature of your kill that has repaid your debt. You are free to leave. But why part ways? Astrid officially extends an invitation to join her family and gives you a passphrase to use to enter the Dark Brotherhood's Sanctuary.

➤ Abandoned Shack Key

◆ OBJECTIVE: Enter the Dark Brotherhood Sanctuary

Quest Conclusion

Journey south to the Pine Forest and locate the door marked with the skull. When prompted, reply with, "Silence, my brother." The door unlocks, allowing you under the road and into the Sanctuary. Astrid welcomes you as part of the Family and hands you the Shrouded Armor. She is preparing a target for you, as well as the arrival of the Night Mother, but for now Nazir has some side missions to undertake for fun and profit. Head deeper into the Sanctuary and meet your new brethren. You can listen in on a conversation where the Family members share some of their exploits.

➤ Shrouded Armor

➤ Shrouded Boots

➤ Shrouded Gloves

➤ Shrouded Helmet

Postquest Activities

Dark Brotherhood Quest: Sanctuary begins immediately.

TIP Shrouded Armor: This is arguably the ultimate attire for an assassin, as it has enchantments that boost those murderous skills you'll be using. There's some ancient Shrouded Armor (which is even more impressive) available in Hag's End, but you'll have to complete more missions for this organization before you can attempt to find it. See Dark Brotherhood Quest: The Feeble Fortune* on page 341 for more information.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Receive the first set of contracts from Nazir

MEETING THE BROTHERHOOD

In addition to Astrid and Nazir, you can converse with (and inquire about) other Brotherhood members—Arnbjorn, Babette, Cicero, Festus Krex, Gabriella, Nazir, the Night Mother, and Veezara—who offer you advice on any future quest related to this faction (speak to each between Dark Brotherhood Quests). For more information on these Dark Brotherhood members, check the “Overview” section at the start of this chapter.

NOTE At this point, the Dark Brotherhood Quest: Side Contracts also begin. They are given by Nazir. Consult the “Dark Brotherhood Radiant Quests” and “Dark Brotherhood Quest: Side Contracts” sections of this chapter. These detail every contract and how to obtain them.

Your Brotherhood Brethren

This quest begins once you complete Dark Brotherhood Quest: With Friends Like These....

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak with Nazir

Heed Astrid's instructions, and venture deeper into the Dark Brotherhood's Sanctuary, where Nazir and the rest of the Brotherhood are talking about their clandestine activities with an air of mirth. You can speak to the other members, but your only critical contact is Nazir. This man has some side contracts you may be interested in fulfilling. Nazir is also a Trainer and can teach you how to be more effective when wearing Light Armor.

➤ Trainer (Light Armor): Nazir

Quest Conclusion

After completing one or more of Nazir's side contracts, when you return to the Dark Brotherhood Sanctuary and move into the grotto area, there's a flurry of activity as Cicero has arrived with his mother; check the next quest for all of the details. After speaking with Astrid, head to Nazir if you're collecting payment for any of the first three contracts.

Postquest Activities

You usually return to Nazir once Dark Brotherhood Quest: Mourning Never Comes has already begun.

MOURNING NEVER COMES

PREREQUISITES: Complete Dark Brotherhood Quest: Sanctuary

INTERSECTING QUESTS: Dark Brotherhood Quest: Sanctuary, Dark Brotherhood Quest: Whispers in the Dark

LOCATIONS: Dark Brotherhood Sanctuary, Markarth, The Hag's Cure, Raldbthar, Raldbthar Consortium, Windhelm, The White Phial, Blacksmith Quarters

CHARACTERS: Arnbjorn, Astrid, Babette, Cicero, Festus Krex, Gabriella, Muiri, Nazir, The Night Mother, Veezara

ENEMIES: Alain Dufont, Bandits, Nilsine Shatter-Shield

◆ OBJECTIVES: Talk to Muiri, Kill Alain Dufont, (Optional) Kill Nilsine Shatter-Shield, Talk to Muiri, Report back to Astrid

Clowning Around

This quest begins once you complete Dark Brotherhood Quest: Sanctuary.

After returning from your first side contract (or later), it appears the Dark Brotherhood are welcoming a new visitor. Cicero and his oversized coffin have arrived; you'll find them in the grotto. Cicero is engaged in a slightly tense conversation with Arnbjorn. Astrid isn't overly fond of the jester but still welcomes him into the fold, along with his cargo. Ask Astrid about a contract, and she gives you instructions. An Apothecary's Apprentice over in Markarth has completed the Black Sacrament. Find her and follow her wishes. You can ask Astrid about the Night Mother (the corpse Cicero has hauled in with him), advice on the contracts, and other rules to follow if you desire.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Muiri

◆ TARGET: The Hag's Cure, in Markarth

Cicero is a psychotic, knife-wielding jester. He is also the Keeper of the Night Mother. He is grateful if you helped convince Vantus Loreius to fix his wagon during Dark Brotherhood Quest: Delayed Burial but is most put out if you didn't. You can ask him about himself, the Night Mother, and a variety of other topics, but you may wish to watch this fellow; he could be unpredictable.

CAUTION

The Hag's Helper

Journey to Markarth and seek out Muiri, who may be hanging around inside the Silver-Blood Inn, walking nearby, or heading toward the Hag's Cure apothecary shop (or already inside). Tell her that you've come, and she speaks conspiratorially about her problem: While visiting the wealthy Shatter-Shield family in Windhelm—who were old and dear friends and recently lost their daughter to a murderer—Muiri went to the local tavern to drown her sorrows; there she fell in love with a dashing stranger named Alain Dufont. What Muiri didn't know at the time was that Alain was actually using her so he could infiltrate the family and rob them blind. Alain, who turned out to be a local bandit leader, made off with an impressive haul.

The Shatter-Shields blame Muiri, and the family matriarch (who once viewed Muiri as another daughter) now wants nothing more to do with her. So, not only has Muiri been betrayed by the man she thought loved her, but she's also been disowned by the Shatter-Shields. What does Muiri want? Revenge. Twice over! She wants you to travel to where Alain and his bandits are held up and kill the thieving liar. But she also offers you an optional objective: to kill Nilsine Shatter-Shield. With both of her real daughters now dead, family matriarch Tova will surely accept Muiri once more as her surrogate daughter. Or so her addled mind believes. Before you go, Muiri offers you some doses of a particularly potent poison, which you can use on your targets if you wish.

➤ Lotus Extract (2)

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Kill Alain Dufont
- ◆ TARGET: Alain Dufont, in Raldbthar
- ◆ OBJECTIVE: (Optional) Kill Nilsine Shatter-Shield
- ◆ TARGET: Nilsine Shatter-Shield, in Windhelm

NOTE The following two assassinations may occur in whichever order you wish.

Contract: Alain Dufont

Plod through the snow until you reach the spectacular carved dwarven stronghold. If you aren't being particularly sneaky (and you don't need to be), prepare for bandit attacks as you ascend the outer stairs. Deal with these light threats and open the door leading to Raldbthar Consortium.

Enter the Consortium level. Cut down the bandits you see as you navigate the fire trap and head down the sloping corridor to a giant chamber of crumbling columns. Alain Dufont's bandit clan are having a conference. A single arrow dipped in Lotus Extract is a professional method of taking Alain out, or you can wade in with your favored offensive spells or melee weapons. Don't forget to poison your weapon before it strikes Alain to drop him in a single strike. Afterward, take his unique weapon, Aegisbane, before you depart. This weapon is the stolen family symbol of Clan Shatter-Shield. You can:

Continue to explore this stronghold (consult the Atlas starting on page 685 for more details)

Journey back to Muiri

Or continue your assassinations by tackling the optional target, Nilsine Shatter-Shield.

➤ Unique Weapon: Aegisbane

Nilsine Shatter-Shield (Optional)

Set off to Windhelm and search out the location of Nilsine, who is usually in the market area between the White Phial and the Blacksmith Quarters. You can speak to her about the recent death of her twin sister, but that isn't the reason you're here. You're here to kill her (ideally after coating your blade or arrow with a dose of Lotus Extract). If you're spotted, it is usually better to flee than be overwhelmed by the city guard.

TIP In the Shadows: It is safer to wait until nightfall and follow Nilsine to a secluded location, such as her home or an area en route to her house with no other onlookers, before completing the despicable deed.

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Muiri
- ◆ TARGET: The Hag's Cure, in Markarth

Quest Conclusion

Trek back to Markarth and explain to Muiri who you've killed. She is pleased with the demise of Alain Dufont and is ecstatic if you also carried out her optional wishes. She rewards you accordingly:

- 50 gold pieces (Alain Dufont)
- Muiri's Ring (Nilsine Shatter-Shield)

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Report back to Astrid
- ◆ TARGET: Dark Brotherhood Sanctuary

Postquest Activities

Return to the Dark Brotherhood Sanctuary and locate Astrid. She is happy that you finished your contract, but she needs your help with a matter of a more personal nature. Although she may be paranoid, you're sure that jester is part of it! Dark Brotherhood Quest: Whispers in the Dark now begins.

INTERSECTING QUESTS: Dark Brotherhood Quest: Mourning Never Comes, Dark Brotherhood Quest: Side Contract: Kill Hern, Dark Brotherhood Quest: Side Contract: Kill Lurbuk, Dark Brotherhood Quest: The Silence Has Been Broken

ENEMIES: None

◆ OBJECTIVES: Hide in the Night Mother's coffin, Talk to Cicero, Talk to Astrid, Receive a side contract from Nazir

Listen to Your Mother

This quest begins once you complete Dark Brotherhood Quest: Mourning Never Comes.

Back at the Dark Brotherhood Sanctuary, Astrid tells you about a personal matter she's worried about: It seems Cicero is acting erratically, locking himself inside the chamber where the Night Mother is stored, and she hears whispering voices. She fears a conspiracy, but who is he talking to? Feel free to ask more questions after you agree to eavesdrop from the most secure location in the room: inside the Night Mother's coffin!

◆ OBJECTIVE: Hide in the Night Mother's coffin

◆ TARGET: Dark Brotherhood Sanctuary

The coffin is now out of its carrying crate and is installed just behind the circular stained-glass window. Unlock it and step inside; there's just enough room between you and the Night Mother's remains. With the doors shut behind you, you can hear Cicero engaged in conversation with the corpse. There's no conspiracy talk here, just one-sided chatter from the jester about keeping the Night Mother safe and finding the "Listener." Then something odd happens; the face of the Night Mother begins to glow, and a voice appears inside your head! She informs you that "you're the one," and the coffin doors swing open.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Cicero

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Astrid

MEETING THE BROTHERHOOD

The Night Mother

In the physical realm, the Night Mother exists as a mummified corpse, resting inside a large sarcophagus. Her Keeper, Cicero, brought her here. She exists as a voice inside your head; at first it's just fragmented snippets, but later you receive more structured communications.

"Defiler!" Cicero stops short of an all-out attack but is alarmed at your subterfuge. However, as you relate what the Night Mother has told you, the jester's anger dissipates and is replaced with excitement that he's found "the Listener." After you convince Cicero, Astrid enters the chamber, wanting to know what the commotion is about. You relay the events and the Night Mother's request that you speak with someone named Amaund Motierre in Volunruud. Astrid needs time to think about this possible contract from a long-dead matriarch and instructs you to attempt other work in the meantime.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Receive a side contract from Nazir

NOTE You can visit Amaund in Volunruud before speaking to Astrid, and receive the items you need to hand over to her, but you must speak with Astrid eventually (during the next Quest).

You may tell Nazir about the recent occurrences, but be sure to ask about some additional work. You must finish the previous three side contracts before receiving information on two more targets for you to swiftly dispatch: a fearsome vampire named Hern and a bard called Lurbuk. Tackle either target in any order you wish.

NOTE Consult the "Dark Brotherhood Radiant Quests" and "Dark Brotherhood Quest: Side Contracts" sections of this chapter. These detail every contract and how to obtain them.

Quest Conclusion

Return to the Dark Brotherhood Sanctuary. After a conversation with Astrid (detailed in the next quest), locate Nazir to collect any additional payments for side contracts you've finished. You may wish to finish any outstanding assassinations at this point, too.

Postquest Activities

You usually return to Nazir once Dark Brotherhood Quest: The Silence Has Been Broken begins.

Dark Machinations

This quest begins once you complete Dark Brotherhood Quest: Whispers in the Dark and the two side contracts, and after you speak with Astrid.

The next time you visit the Dark Brotherhood Sanctuary, Astrid stops you to talk. Although she isn't sure what's happening with you and the voices inside your head, she feels it would be beneficial for you to complete the liaison with the contact the Night Mother mentioned to you. You're to set off for Volunruud, a crypt to the northeast, at your earliest convenience. Afterward, conclude any business you may have with your side contracts by visiting Nazir. Talk to the Brotherhood members about this quest if you wish, and then set off.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak with Amaund Motierre

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Rexus

◆ TARGET: Inside Volunruud

Travel to the earthen mound with the entrance over the embankment guarded by standing stones, and ready your weapon for a small altercation with Draugr warriors. Although there are many rooms and tunnels throughout this complex, you need only reach the bottom of the first set of stairs, turn left, and walk southwest to a small antechamber with Draugr corpses among the ferns. In the room beyond is Amaund Motierre and his bodyguard, Rexus. Motierre's revelations are astonishing; he wishes to hire the Dark Brotherhood to remove several people, culminating with an assassination of the Emperor of Tamriel! He ends his diatribe by motioning to Rexus, who strides forward to hand over the following items:

➤ Sealed Letter

➤ Jeweled Amulet

◆ OBJECTIVE: Deliver the letter and amulet to Astrid

◆ TARGET: Dark Brotherhood Sanctuary

Motierre explains the Amulet can be used for purchasing necessities for the forthcoming contracts, and the Sealed Letter is an agreement with the Dark Brotherhood; both are for Astrid. Optionally investigate further into Volunruud, then exit and return to Astrid. She's understandably incredulous. Show her the items, and she begins to believe. Surely the Night Mother wouldn't misdirect the Brotherhood....

For the moment, Astrid will take the letter, while you journey to Riften and locate a fence and friend of the Brotherhood called Delvin Mallory, who should be able to appraise the Amulet. He's a trusted ally and is holed up in the underbelly of the town.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Show the amulet to Delvin Mallory

◆ TARGET: The Ragged Flagon, inside the Ratway in Riften

On the Fence

Trek to Riften and find the entrance to the Ratway, by the water's edge underneath the Scorched Hammer. Navigate the maze of sewer tunnels until you find the door into the Ragged Flagon, and then tell Delvin Mallory that the Dark Brotherhood requires his services. He asks how Astrid is, and then you hand over the Jeweled Amulet (via conversation rather than inventory access). Mallory inspects the Amulet and identifies it as belonging to the Emperor's Elder Council. Although worried about who the Brotherhood had to murder to obtain it, when you ask him to purchase it, he eagerly hands over a letter of credit to cover any expenses Astrid requires.

➤ Letter of Credit

NOTE You may already be familiar with Delvin Mallory if you're engaged in the Thieves Guild Faction Quests. He has some additional dialogue if you're partway through those missions.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Report back to Astrid

◆ TARGET: The Dark Brotherhood Sanctuary

Quest Rewards

Back in the Sanctuary, once you explain the credit Delvin Mallory just opened, your only reward from Astrid are the beginnings of Amaund Motierre's most devious of plans, which are now being put into action: She hopes you have something fancy to wear; you're going to a wedding....

NOTE Astrid reprimands you at this point if you broke the seal to read the letter, which contains a list of forthcoming targets, but this doesn't have a lasting effect on your relationship.

Postquest Activities

Dark Brotherhood Quest: Bound Until Death begins immediately. In addition, more side contracts are now available from Nazir.

PREREQUISITES: Complete Dark Brotherhood Quest: The Silence Has Been Broken

INTERSECTING QUESTS: Dark Brotherhood Quest: The Silence Has Been Broken, Dark Brotherhood Quest: Breaching Security

LOCATIONS: Dark Brotherhood Sanctuary, Solitude, Temple of the Divines

CHARACTERS: Alexia Vici, Asgeir Snow-Shod, Astrid, Babette, Gabriella, Jarl Elisif the Fair, Kayd, Lodi, Noster Eagle-Eye, Nura Snow-Shod, Pantea Ateia, Veezara, Vivienne Onis, Vuwulf Snow-Shod

ENEMIES: Vittoria Vici

◆ OBJECTIVES: Kill Vittoria Vici, Report back to Astrid

◆ A Marriage of Inconvenience

This quest begins once you complete Dark Brotherhood Quest: The Silence Has Been Broken.

Upon completion of your previous Dark Brotherhood Quest, a rendezvous with Astrid reveals more about the first of Amaund Motierre's list of targets: Vittoria Vici, an Imperial with pro-Empire sentiments. She is set to be married to her Nord fiancé, Asgeir Snow-Shod, who has strong ties to the Stormcloaks. Although invited, the Emperor respectfully declined. But no matter; his family will be directly affected, for Vittoria Vici is the Emperor's first cousin. The current animosity in the region means that the assassination of the Emperor's cousin will force him into involvement in the Civil War.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Kill Vittoria Vici

◆ TARGET: Vittoria Vici, Temple of the Divines, in Solitude

TIP Converse with Astrid, Babette, and Gabriella. Astrid insists that this assassination must be a daring public display, messy and loud. There is no hiding in the shadows on this occasion! Babette and Gabriella mention two different ways you can slay Vittoria. Consult the next section for more information.

◆ Divines Retribution

Locate the imposing rock fortress of Solitude and enter the city. Pass through the outer bailey of market shops and houses and into the large inner courtyard to the northeast, which is adjacent to the Temple of the Divines. Step through either archway, and you'll see the ceremony reception is already under way. You can chat with any number of guests: Noster Eagle-Eye, Vivienne Onis, Vuwulf Snow-Shod, Kayd, Alexia Vici, Nura Snow-Shod, Jarl Elisif the Fair, Pantea

Ateia, and Lodi. You may even wish to give your regards to the bride and groom for flavor and fun.

TIP Consult the map of Solitude in the Atlas (page 692), and trace a route back to an exit. Run back there once or twice before you make the kill so you know exactly where to escape.

With the ceremony under way, you have numerous methods of removing Vittoria Vici:

Fire from afar: Take to the battlements via the stone steps in the adjacent courtyard, working your way up and around to the crenellations above the temple and then striking Vittoria with a well-aimed arrow or magical attack (dip an arrow in Lotus Extract to ensure a one-hit kill). This allows you to escape more easily.

Babette's advice: She mentions an old statue that rests rather precariously over the balcony where Vittoria will be giving her speech. Take one of the side doors or the crenellations to the statue and push it off so it lands on Vittoria's head.

Gabriella's advice: She tells you of a small parapet (accessed via a side door near the reception courtyard) directly across from the balcony where the speech will be given. She's already left a present: arrows and a special enchanted bow named Firiniel's End. Locate the parapet, and use this bow instead of your own.

A more messy death: Of course, you can run her through with your pointy weapon, bludgeon her to death with a warhammer, or attack her from close quarters. This has few advantages other than seeing your victim die in close proximity to you.

TIP Remember to time your killing so that Vittoria collapses during her speech, where the assembled throng is at its most attentive: There's a bonus in it for you.

➤ Firiniel's End

◆ OBJECTIVE: Report back to Astrid

◆ TARGET: Dark Brotherhood Sanctuary

As you might expect, your bounty in Haafingar has risen considerably. Expect all guards to be hostile as you flee Solitude. CAUTION

◆ Escaping Solitude

Now that the marriage is over and the reception ruined, you must make good your escape. Along the way, you may run into Veezara, who Astrid has sent to keep an eye on you. He tells you to run while he holds off the enemy. Oblige him rather than sticking around to face overwhelming odds; Veezara can take care of himself. Rush to an exit, flee the city, and continue into the countryside until you aren't chased anymore. Fast-Travel (or trek) back to the Dark Brotherhood Sanctuary.

Quest Conclusion

Rendezvous with Astrid, and once you confirm the bride's demise, Astrid seems quite excited at the path you've trodden and rewards you with an impressive spell. If you killed Vittoria as she addressed the crowd, you are given additional gold pieces. Then Astrid requests you go speak to Gabriella; she has some information on your next quest.

- Summon Spectral Assassin (Power)
- Gold pieces (bonus)

Postquest Activities

Dark Brotherhood Quest: Breaching Security begins immediately.

TIP A Ghost of LaChance: The Spectral Assassin you're now able to conjure from the afterlife is none other than Lucien LaChance, the Dark Brotherhood speaker from Oblivion! Not only will he fight by your side (summon him once per day), but also you can converse with him. He'll offer advice on your current quest or the location you're visiting. Be sure to meet this legend!

Eyes on the Penitus Oculatus

This quest begins once you complete Dark Brotherhood Quest: Bound Until Death.

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak with Gabriella

After your talk with Astrid, she recommends you speak with Gabriella, who was also working on the details of the next contract while you were away. Optionally pass by Veezara (who you can speak with regarding his help during the escape from Solitude); then converse with Gabriella, who tells you your next target, a man named Gaius Maro—apparently an agent of the Emperor's security force known as the Penitus Oculatus. Gaius's superior officer (and father)—Commander Maro—has given his son instructions to check the security of every major settlement in Skyrim, in preparation for the Emperor's visit.

Your task is to implicate him in a plot to kill the Emperor by dispatching him and planting an incriminating letter on his corpse. This should distract Commander Maro and make the Penitus Oculatus think the only threat to the Emperor has been quashed. Gaius Maro is also the only man who knows the identity of the "Gourmet," a famous chef scheduled to cook for the Emperor at a private dinner. Gabriella also reveals the possibility of a travel schedule, allowing you to kill Gaius while he is away from the garrison town of Dragon Bridge and earn a bonus. Speak to her for a little more information.

- Incriminating Letter

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Kill Gaius Maro
- ◆ OBJECTIVE: (Optional) Steal Gaius Maro's travel schedule
- ◆ TARGET: Gaius Maro, in Dragon Bridge (or various locations)

NOTE At this point, there are two plans to try. The first is easier but does not net you a bonus. The second is longer, requires some waiting, and could take multiple days to accomplish, but it is more rewarding. In either plan, you must travel to Dragon Bridge. Note that the "quest target" on your in-game compass and map appears differently depending on your actions: If you steal the travel schedule, you can see where Gaius Maro is, wherever you are. If you haven't, his quest target marker appears only when you're in his general vicinity.

Plan A: Death at Dragon Bridge

When you reach the spectacular carved bridge over the Karth River, stop and survey the settlement. If you journeyed here from the Dark Brotherhood Sanctuary, Gaius Maro is usually on the main thoroughfare, talking with his father, Commander Maro, and then his "love," Faida. He then sets off on foot. Simply plant an arrow or melee strike into him, poison-tipped or not. Then promptly flee the scene. You don't need the travel schedule if you aren't interested in the bonus.

THE SCHEDULE OF GAIVS MARO

Snagging the schedule allows you to plan an assassination based on the day of the week and your other active quests. Use the list below to see the general time and location of Gaius Maro:

DAY OF THE WEEK	LOCATION	BUILDING NAME
Morndas	Solitude	The Emperor's Tower
Morndas evening	Solitude	Castle Dour (food and sleep)
Tirdas	Windhelm	The Palace of the Kings
Tirdas evening	Windhelm	Barracks (food and sleep)
Middas	Riften	Mistveil Keep
Turdas	Whiterun	Dragonsreach
Turdas evening	Whiterun	The Bannereed Mare (food and sleep)
Fredas	Markarth	Understone Keep
Fredas evening	Markarth	Guard Tower (food and sleep)
Loredas and Sundas	Riften	The Bee and Barb

Plan B: The Stalking Assassin

Your first task is to try locating the travel schedule, which is on a table inside the Penitus Oculatus Outpost. You can sneak in there; the guards will say you are in the wrong place but won't attack you. Be sure to read and take the schedule so you can refer to it during your stalking of Maro.

► Gaius Maro's Schedule

TIP When you rest or sleep, the Rest menu displays the exact day, time, and date. Figure out when to strike based off this information. For the exact locations of each structure within a city, consult this guide's Atlas (page 685).

With the schedule in hand, you can now time your arrival at any of the major cities in Skyrim to coincide with Gaius's visit. You may, for example, wish to complete other quests or business, or simply wait (or sleep) until the appropriate day and time. When you finally wish to face Gaius, there are a few matters to bear in mind:

To gain the bonus, do not kill Gaius Maro in Dragon Bridge or on the road as he travels between cities.

The various assassination techniques listed when you started the side contracts during Dark Brotherhood Quest: Sanctuary apply here, too. Check that section for possible execution plans.

Find the unlocked chamber where Gaius is, and then murder him while he sleeps. This is one reason why nighttime assassinations are recommended. Or, use simple combat followed by placing the letter and then fleeing from authorities.

Finally, you can head to Dragon Bridge and follow him at a discreet distance as he walks to a Hold City. To be sure of claiming your bonus, wait until he enters the city to kill him. You may be able to kill him just outside the gates... but if he runs, you'll lose credit for the bonus.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Plant the Incriminating Letter on Gaius Maro's body

No matter where Gaius finally rests, be sure you stop to place on his body the Incriminating Letter that Gabriella gave you.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Report back to Gabriella

◆ TARGET: Gabriella, in Dark Brotherhood Sanctuary

Quest Conclusion

Gabriella is anxiously awaiting your return. She already knows you did the deed and quickly rewards you accordingly. Then she immediately informs you of a more pressing matter. There has been an "incident" involving Cicero. Astrid will explain.

► 100 gold pieces

The Savagery of Cicero

This quest begins once you complete Dark Brotherhood Quest: Breaching Security.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Astrid

Inside the main grotto chamber of the Sanctuary, the Dark Brotherhood are gathered around Veezara, who was bleeding from a deep wound. Speak to Astrid, and she reveals that Cicero has gone mad. She says the maniac didn't like some remarks Astrid had made regarding the Night Mother and attempted to kill her. Veezara stopped him but was wounded. Cicero fled into the forest. Arnbjorn gave chase and hasn't been seen since. Astrid is worried for her husband's safety. She is also calling on you to kill Cicero for this treachery! She suggests you find evidence in Cicero's chamber.

NOTE Although this may not seem like the most opportune time to start some side contracts, all the remaining targets are now available. There are three active targets, followed by one, then another two, and then the final assassination. Advice on these seven tasks are listed after Cicero has been dealt with, in the "Dark Brotherhood Quest: Side Contracts" section.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Search Cicero's Room

Search the Sanctuary until you find Cicero's chamber and the Journal on top of the barrel. Pick up the Journal to read about Cicero's exploits upon his arrival in Skyrim and his knowledge of another, older Sanctuary near Dawnstar. The book also has the passphrase to enter the Sanctuary and some evidence of what (and who) resides inside. Also revealed is Cicero's distaste for Astrid and her "new ways."

➤ Cicero's Journal, Final Volume

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Astrid

Return to Astrid, and she orders you to the Dawnstar Sanctuary as quickly as possible; in fact, she has secured a steed named Shadowmere to quicken your progress to your destination if you wish.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Behold Shadowmere

◆ TARGET: Fetid pond, outside Dawnstar Sanctuary

◆ OBJECTIVE: Locate Arnbjorn

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Arnbjorn

◆ TARGET: Dawnstar Sanctuary

Race, by foot, horse, or Fast-Travel to Dawnstar, to the Black Door cut into the beachside cliffs. Just outside you'll find the crumpled form of Arnbjorn. It seems the jester is a deft hand with his "butter knife," as Arnbjorn calls it, indicating the nasty wound. Arnbjorn reckons he wounded Cicero, too, judging by the trail of blood the fool left behind as he entered the Dawnstar Sanctuary. Arnbjorn would have followed but couldn't open the Black Door. Convince Arnbjorn to return to Astrid, while you follow the blood.

Puzzle Solution: At the Black Door, when it asks, "What is life's greatest illusion?" answer "Innocence, by Brother." You'll know this if you read Cicero's Journal.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Enter the Dawnstar Sanctuary

◆ OBJECTIVE: Kill Cicero

◆ A Fool's Errand

Head down the stairs, and you can hear Cicero deeper in the maze of connecting chambers, saying that Astrid has "sent the best" to defeat him. He is hurt; notice the intermittent puddles and drops of blood on the floor and walls. Follow the trail to Cicero. Draw your weapons as you move through the rooms; there are Sanctuary Guardians to kill as you continue deeper down. Note the gold haul you usually find in their remains. Then ready yourself for the traps:

Spear Trapped Bridge: Approach this bridge carefully; three spears shoot out from the right. You should also strike the hanging oil lamps either side of the bridge to lessen the severity of a trap in the oil room directly below.

Oil Room: Set fire to the oil on the floor before you enter this room, or the oil lamps on either side of the bridge drop and roast you alive. Deal with the Sanctuary Guardians from a distance, coaxing them into frying in the room.

Bear Traps: Pass through the broken circular window into the ice tunnels, but watch yourself by the dead goat; there are bear traps to maneuver over or around.

Udefrykte: The beast Cicero wrote about in his journal waits for you inside the ice tunnels. Slay this demented troll with a mixture of ranged attacks, swipes, and dodges around the narrow cave with the chest in it.

Sanctuary Crypt: Retract the vertical spears by using the pull chain. Head down the stairs and face more Sanctuary Guardians as Cicero asks whether you'll let bygones be bygones. Then climb the stairs opposite, lift the door bar so you can easily exit the Sanctuary after facing Cicero, then open the door to the torture room.

◆ Keeper of the Old Ways

Flanked by two dead skeletons, Cicero awaits your fury. You can immediately attack or remain silent and let Cicero explain himself; after all, you are the Listener. While lacking in clarity, Cicero tells you Astrid is a "pretender" who had no right to "blaspheme" the Night Mother; he was simply compelled through his sense of duty as the Keeper. Or this could be the rambling nonsense of a Fool of Hearts. You have a choice to make: kill him or leave the Sanctuary.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Kill Cicero, or leave the Sanctuary

Choose to slay this battle-hardened fool, who isn't quite as wounded as he may have let on; you have a real fight on your hands! Or, follow Cicero's advice and leave the Sanctuary, lifting the door bar and exiting quickly via the central chamber. As you step out onto the beach, your quest updates.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Report back to Astrid

Quest Conclusion

Back at the first Sanctuary, Astrid is anxious about the news of Cicero's demise. You let her know the jester is dead, either telling her the truth (if you killed him) or lying (if you left him alone). Leave Cicero alive, and an additional quest, Cicero's Return, can occur at the end of this series of quests. For now, there are other matters to attend to and important fellows to murder. Consult with Festus Krex for further details.

Postquest Activities

Dark Brotherhood Quest: Recipe for Disaster begins immediately. Your remaining side contracts are also available, and it is wise to attempt as many of these as you wish as early as possible.

PREREQUISITES: Complete Dark Brotherhood Quest: The Cure for Madness

INTERSECTING QUESTS: Dark Brotherhood Quest: The Cure for Madness, Dark Brotherhood Side Contract Quests, Dark Brotherhood Quest: To Kill an Empire, Side Quest: No One Escapes Cidhna Mine, Thane of the Reach

LOCATIONS: Dark Brotherhood Sanctuary, Markarth, Understone Keep, Nightgate Inn, Nightgate Inn Cellar

CHARACTERS: Astrid, Festus Krex

ENEMIES: Anton Virane, Balagog gro-Nolob, Markarth Guard

◆ OBJECTIVES: Report to Festus Krex, Question Anton Virane, Kill Anton Virane, Kill Balagog gro-Nolob, (Optional) Drag Balagog's body to a hiding place, Report back to Festus Krex

When you speak with Anton (you must pry information from him before the murder), he insists he's a Breton; he's been previously accused of being a Reachman—and with the Forsworn activity in this Hold, this isn't the highest of compliments. But no matter; you're here to ask Anton who and where the Gourmet is.

After initially refusing to divulge this information, Anton changes his tune after you intimidate him and he realizes who you work for. He reveals the Gourmet is an Orc named Balagog gro-Nolob, who is staying at the Nightgate Inn. Then Anton nervously asks that you let him go. You can lie and tell him he's safe, or begin the execution right away. The only reason to lie is if you aren't quite prepared to assassinate Anton or if you want to mess with him.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Kill Anton Virane

Draw your blade and plunge it into Anton. Don't stop until he's dead. Do this only after he imparts the necessary information. You may use any weapon you wish (including magic or Shouts), and from your previous assassination experience, you should be aware that this attack is going to cause you problems within Markarth's walls. You can get around this by completing one of the following:

Kill Anton and then flee the city. Keep going until you outrun the guards. However, your bounty will still be high, and Markarth's guards will remember you if you return.

Become Thane of Markarth by completing the Thane Quest at this Capital City (detailed later in this guide). After the murder, you can explain to the guard who you are, and they let you off with a warning.

Elect to pay off your debts or give yourself up, since killing every guard in Markarth is impossible.

Or, you can rely on your trusted Sneak, attacking from behind or waiting and attacking him while he sleeps or when he's on his own.

◆ NOTE For further details on committing murder in a Hold City, consult the Crime and Punishment section of this guide (page 64).

◆ OBJECTIVE: Kill Balagog gro-Nolob

◆ TARGET: Balagog gro-Nolob, Nightgate Inn Cellar

Carving the Cook

This quest begins once you complete Dark Brotherhood Quest: The Cure for Madness.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Report to Festus Krex

Astrid mentions there is one more target for you before the strike against the Emperor; she asks if you've heard of the "Gourmet," a chef and author of a realm-famous cookbook. The Gourmet is scheduled to cook for the Emperor. But not after you kill him, steal his Writ of Passage, and assume his role of master chef. Follow Astrid's advice and talk to Festus Krex for further details. When you visit Krex deeper in the Sanctuary, he tells you the mission is slightly more tricky than a simple slice-and-dice; the Dark Brotherhood don't actually know who the Gourmet is.

Krex then shows you a cookbook signed by the Gourmet; it is signed to a man named Anton Virane, who has been tracked to the keep in Markarth. Virane is the cook there. You are to find Virane, have him tell you who and where the Gourmet really is, and then tie up any "loose ends": You'll be assassinating two cooks for this task. After you kill the Gourmet, Krex hopes that you'll hide the body so any authorities take longer to reveal the Gourmet's identity and what you've done. You can ask any additional questions you wish (more about the Gourmet, the cookbook, or the Gourmet's location in Skyrim) before departing.

► Uncommon Taste—Signed

◆ OBJECTIVE: Question Anton Virane

◆ TARGET: Anton Virane, Understone Keep, in Markarth

◆ NOTE Technically, you can head to the Gourmet's hiding place right away and kill him. However, when you return to Festus Krex, he still requires you to assassinate Anton Virane, so attempting this in order is recommended.

Travel to Markarth, enter the canyon city, and scale the precarious stone steps to the Understone Keep. Head west, between the two guards, and turn left before you reach the stairs to the Jarl's chamber. Enter the kitchens to the south, where Anton Virane and his two helpers are located.

Needs More Assault

Offering pristine views of Yorgrim Lake to the west of Windhelm, Nightgate Inn is a perfect spot for a reclusive chef to write his books. Or for an assassin to commit murder. Journey to this out-of-the-way spot and search the side of the building for a trapdoor. Open it and drop into the Nightgate Inn Cellar. Balagrog gro-Nolob is usually sitting in the bedroom down here, close to the mead barrels.

Frighten him with a flourish of prose or cut him down without conversation. Whatever you choose, your fight ends with Balagrog gro-Nolob dying on the stone cellar floor. With no one else about, this murder is far easier to commit than that of Anton Virane. Pocket the Writ of Passage when you search his corpse. Balagrog also goes outside and stands by the lake, so you can kill him outside as well. Do that, and the hiding place for the body is the lake.

► Gourmet's Writ of Passage

◆ OBJECTIVE: (Optional) Drag Balagrog's body to a hiding place

◆ TARGET: Hiding place, Nightgate Inn Cellar

behind a mead barrel or in an alcove. Your objective updates after you place it in a correct spot, of which there are plenty.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Report back to Festus Krex

◆ TARGET: Festus Krex, Dark Brotherhood Sanctuary

Quest Conclusion

Return to Festus Krex at the Dark Brotherhood Sanctuary, and inform him the deed has been done. Depending on your actions, he is impressed by your competence (if you killed both cooks and hid Balagrog's corpse), and a little less so if Balagrog's body is still lying where you killed him. Festus offers you a reward: gold for completing the quest, and the bonus of a ring if you hid the corpse. Then he suggests you see Astrid to commence the final stage of this grand and glorious operation.

► 300 gold pieces

► Nightweaver's Band (Bonus only)

INTERSECTING QUESTS: Dark Brotherhood Quest: Recipe for Disaster, Dark Brotherhood Side Contract Quests, Dark Brotherhood Quest: Death Incarnate, Thane of Haafingar

LOCATIONS: Dark Brotherhood Sanctuary, Solitude, Castle Dour, Castle Dour, Emperor's Tower

CHARACTERS: Astrid, Festus Krex, Gianna, Nobleman

ENEMIES: Commander Maro, Emperor Titus Mede II, Penitus Oculatus Agent, Solitude Guard

◆ OBJECTIVES: Report to Astrid, Report to Commander Maro, Report to Gianna, Report to Gianna while wearing a chef's hat, Make the Potage le Magnifique, Follow Gianna to the dining room, Kill the Emperor, Escape the Tower!, Return to the Sanctuary

Astrid realizes what you've accomplished and prepares you for the honor of assassinating the Emperor. You're to head to Castle Dour in Solitude and present the Gourmet's Writ of Passage to the officer in charge, Commander Maro. Astrid then tells you that you're going to prepare a special meal for the Emperor, with an extra ingredient that she hands you. Before you depart, you can ask for more details on Jarrin Root and other information. (Astrid tells you one taste of Jarrin Root is deadly, and she means it. Go to your inventory and eat it, and you'll drop dead.)

► Jarrin Root

◆ OBJECTIVE: Report to Commander Maro

◆ TARGET: Castle Dour courtyard, in Solitude

Journey to Solitude and locate the sprawling Castle Dour atop the hill. Step into the large courtyard and find Commander Maro waiting by the tower entrance. He certainly isn't going to let anyone in with the Emperor staying. There's no need to use violence or sneaking; instead, speak to Maro and show him the Gourmet's Writ of Passage. Maro reads the missive and is promptly most apologetic, realizing you're the "Gourmet." He allows you into the Emperor's Tower and requests you meet the castle chef, Gianna. Outside you can also eavesdrop on a conversation between two Penitus Oculatus Agents, talking about Commander Maro and his state of mind, now that his son is not only dead, but also apparently a traitor.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Report to Gianna

◆ TARGET: Castle Dour kitchens, in Solitude

The Last Supper

This quest begins once you complete Dark Brotherhood Quest: Recipe for Disaster.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Report to Astrid

TIP Don't forget to wear the Nightweaver's Band if you acquired it during the previous quest!

◆ This Soup Is to Die For

Enter the tower. Head left (east) and then right along (south) the corridor to reach the kitchens. Gianna is busily preparing the banquet feast and mistakes you for a delivery person. She is extremely apologetic when you reveal that you are the "Gourmet"! She requests that you don the proper attire; you can't very well cook without a chef's hat.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Report to Gianna while wearing a chef's hat

The shelves with the hanging garlic to your left (east) have a selection of chef's hats you can wear. Take one, and then replace your current headgear with it. Then speak to Gianna again. She would be honored to prepare your signature dish, the Potage le Magnifique, to your exacting specifications. Gianna now asks you for a series of ingredients you can add to the base broth.

► Chef's Hat

◆ OBJECTIVE: Make the Potage le Magnifique

Begin to choose the ingredients. You can:

Answer with expected ingredients, such as carrots, a splash of mead, Nirnroot, or diced Horker meat.

Answer with more "esoteric" ingredients, such as a sweetroll, Vampire Dust, a Giant Toe, or a septim.

Or remain silent and let Gianna figure out what she would add, as a "test" for her.

You can add as many expected or odd ingredients as you wish. When she asks whether the soup is done, tell her there is one final ingredient and hand over the Jarrin Root. Although she's unsure, your "special ingredient" makes it into the broth. She takes the soup in a stew pot to the dining room.

◆ TIP You may elect not to poison the soup and plan a (usually) more violent method of slaying the Emperor, once the soup is served.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Follow Gianna to the dining room

Follow Gianna across the throne room, up the stairs, and along to the dining room, where you can hear Emperor Titus Mede II talking to three noble guests and taking a rather blasé attitude toward the murder of his cousin, Vittoria Vici. After Gianna takes a deep breath and prepares to present the Potage, you have this opportunity to strike.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Kill the Emperor

The Emperor prepares to have the first taste of the Potage le Magnifique, takes a few slurps, comments on its deliciousness, and then keels over dead. The same effect can be achieved if you quickly attack him. Either way, your bounty suddenly skyrockets, the Penitus Oculatus Agent yells for some help, and general pandemonium breaks out. If you've poisoned the Potage, when the Emperor dies, one of the Penitus Oculatus Agents yells that you and the cook have done the dirty deed, and poor Gianna is also attacked in the confusion. Fortunately, this can serve as a distraction while you escape.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Escape the Tower!

◆ TARGET: Tower battlements, above Solitude

◆ Dupe le Magnifique

In the midst of the commotion, dodge any of the guests milling about and disappear out of the entrance to the south, which is only a few steps away. You appear on the Tower battlements, where a cluster of guards and a greeting from Commander Maro stops you. Instead of fury, Maro greets you with a contemptible glee. It appears you've killed a decoy of the Emperor; a member of your "Family" tipped off Maro about the operation! You were traded for the Dark Brotherhood's continued well-being, but Maro has grown tired of this little operation and now vows to butcher all of your clan—starting with you.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to the Sanctuary

◆ TARGET: Dark Brotherhood Sanctuary

To flee Solitude, you can simply dash past the Penitus Oculatus on the stairs, and then quickly descend the tower's spiral stairs to the ground level (don't exit into Solitude itself, unless you're trying to hide and blend in with the population, or you're using a spell or Sneak to obscure yourself). Continue down the stairs until you reach a lower exit out into Skyrim and the harbor under the gigantic stone arch.

Quest Conclusion

The Brotherhood Sanctuary has disappeared from your world map, making a direct Fast-Travel impossible. Instead, Fast-Travel to Falkreath and head along the road until you spot Penitus Oculatus carts on the road. Or, sneak through the backwoods for a stealthier approach. This quest concludes as you approach the hidden entrance. You hear the sounds of fighting, and Imperials swarm the area. Has the Sanctuary been compromised?

◆ NOTE Remember that the Penitus Oculatus is a separate and distinct faction from the Imperial Legion. Your dealings with the Penitus Oculatus will not harm your standing with the Legion if you're siding with them during the Civil War.

Arcturus, one of Maro's henchmen, is attempting to murder Nazir, so bound over to Nazir's location and help him dispatch this Imperial swine. Show no mercy! Next, kill any other agents who are near to either of you; then quickly stop to tell Nazir about the setup. Nazir had already figured this out. There's little time for chitchatting; you need to flee the Sanctuary before you're roasted alive!

◆ OBJECTIVE: Escape the Sanctuary

◆ OBJECTIVE: Embrace the Night Mother

The Brotherhood Burns

This quest begins once you complete Dark Brotherhood Quest: To Kill an Empire.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Enter the Sanctuary

Commander Maro's men have found your secret sanctuary and are currently ransacking it. This terrible sight becomes all-too real as you enter the road close by the Sanctuary entrance, where at least four Penitus Oculatus Agents are milling about. You can:

Engage them in furious and brutal combat, slaying them all where they stand for desecrating your home.

(Sneak) Or, you can sneak to the Sanctuary entrance without being spotted, ignoring the enemy so you can save your fury for the foes inside the Sanctuary. Head for the Black Door and quickly enter your home.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Search for survivors

There is a thick sheen to the air. Force (or sneak) your way down to where you usually meet Astrid. Here, you'll face two Penitus Oculatus Agents. If you're silent, you can overhear them talking about the spreading fire inside the Sanctuary and how an agent named Arcturus led some men deeper into the Sanctuary. Kill the foes quickly, and watch out when you're using fire-based attacks; the area is awash in spilled oil. The only way is down, into the flaming grotto, with more fighting against agents. You'll see the last moments of Arnbjorn's life; now in werewolf form, he tears into two agents before being felled by arrows. There is nothing you can do to save him. Quickly locate the dining hall, where Nazir (the only remaining Dark Brotherhood member you've found alive so far) is battling with more agents.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Kill Nazir's attacker!

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak with Nazir

Follow Nazir to the southeast, into the connecting corridor above the stained-glass window. Amid the turmoil and flames, the Night Mother calls to you. She tells you to embrace her, as she is your only salvation. Cut down any foes on your way to opening the iron door to the south, and enter the Night Mother's chamber. Open her sarcophagus, step inside, and fall asleep. The Night Mother causes her coffin to fall through the window. You survive in the coffin, and that gives Nazir a way out. It appears Nazir and Babette are maneuvering the coffin into an upright position. Just before the doors open, the Night Mother tells you to speak with Astrid, here in the Sanctuary.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Astrid

The Dread Lord Beckons

As you step out of the coffin, Nazir tells you to slow down. You can reply in whatever way you wish, but moments later, you should move out of the grotto and up the stone stairs to the south, past the charred remains of the entrance chamber. Turn right (west) and head north, where Astrid is waiting. Or more accurately, burned beyond recognition, surrounded by a flickering candle configuration used in the Black Sacrament. Astrid is almost unrecognizable but has much to say, and only moments left to say it. She betrayed you to the Penitus Oculatus, in return for their promise to spare the Dark Brotherhood.

You may react with seething rage, pity, or silence. Astrid knows what she has done was an unforgiveable mistake, and the Dread Lord Sithis shall judge her accordingly. She also knows that there is still a chance, that you could rebuild the Dark Brotherhood and start over again. She enacted a Black Sacrament and prayed for a contract. You lead this family now. Her Blade of Woe is yours, to see through the transfer of power, which is achieved by killing her.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Kill Astrid

◆ OBJECTIVE: (Optional) Retrieve the Blade of Woe

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to the Night Mother

Quest Conclusion

Step over to Astrid's ruined form and swiftly end her life. Although she wishes you to take the Blade of Woe, it isn't necessary to kill her with it (but the weapon is well worth using from this point on). Once Astrid has found redemption in the Void, return to the Night Mother's sarcophagus. Your rebuilding of the Dark Brotherhood begins now.

Death to the Emperor

This quest begins once you complete Dark Brotherhood Quest: Death Incarnate.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Nazir

Only Nazir and Babette remain, as you come to grips with your Family's slaughter. Babette will follow Nazir's lead, so speak with him; he dejectedly believes this is the end for the Dark Brotherhood. But tell him the Night Mother has spoken to you again, and the original contract must be carried out. You're to speak with Amaund Motierre, and the true Emperor must be assassinated. While you muster a second attempt at regicide, Nazir recommends moving the Dark Brotherhood's Sanctuary to the one near Dawnstar, where you followed Cicero. You'll meet Nazir there afterward, ideally with a barrel full of gold.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Amaund Motierre

◆ TARGET: Amaund Motierre, Bannerman's, in Whiterun

Amaund Motierre has taken up residence in the Bannerman's, over in Whiterun. Travel there, and open the door to the room at the rear of the tavern. He's more than a little startled at your arrival, considering the news about the sacking of the Sanctuary. He babbles about having nothing to do with the violence to your Family and still wants the Emperor dead. You are here to honor your contract, so ask him where the Emperor is. Amaund tells you he's aboard his ship, the Katariah, now moored in the Solitude inlet. Upon your return after a successful assassination, Amaund will reveal the location of the dead drop that holds your payment. Ask him additional questions (about security and getting aboard the ship) if you wish. Demanding to know where Commander Maro is nets you an optional objective.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Board the Katariah

◆ TARGET: Katariah ship, Solitude inlet

◆ OBJECTIVE: (Optional) Kill Commander Maro

◆ TARGET: Wharf of Solitude docks, near East Empire Company Warehouse

(Optional) Additional Executions I

NOTE You may optionally kill Commander Maro at any point before the end of this quest, ideally before or after you assassinate the real Emperor.

Travel to Solitude's docks, close to the East Empire Company Warehouse, and search the wharf for the Commander. There's no time or point in talking; simply approach and kill him with a charge, sneak attack, long-range magic, or bow fire. Expect the nearby Solitude Guards to try and stop you. Fleeing the scene is usually the best option if you're spotted; the alternatives are to give up and go to jail or raise your bounty in this Hold considerably.

Bringing Down an Empire

Travel to Solitude's inlet, under the giant arch that the city rests upon, and locate the impressive galleon moored in the waters here. Swim alongside the vessel, dipping down underwater as you search for the anchor chain. Grab this, and haul yourself aboard the Katariah. You actually load into the cargo hold; don't climb the chain to the deck.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Kill the Emperor!

◆ TARGET: Emperor Titus Mede II, Emperor's Quarters, on the Katariah

TIP The Katariah is anchored in the Solitude inlet when this quest began and remains here for the rest of your adventure. You may wish to give the ship a thorough search for valuable items. Consult the Atlas for the important areas to check.

You clamber into the hold of the Katariah, and your quest updates. At this point, your usual infiltration plans commence. You may explore this ship using magical augmentations that make you harder to see or the enemies less alert. You can also sneak (see below) or simply wade through and clobber anyone who gets in your way.

You don't need to return to this ship, so inspect every chamber for items you may wish to claim. Work your way south along the lower deck, into the large central dining galley. Climb the steps and expect more enemies as you reach the jail area. You're attacking both sailors and Penitus Oculatus Agents. This floor also has a small armory and dormitories; additional foes and items can be found here.

Your first critical foe to face is Captain Avidius, who is usually in his cabin by the storeroom and ladder. Kill (or pickpocket) them, and secure the Katariah Master Key from his corpse; this makes navigating the locked doors much more straightforward. Otherwise, you'll need extremely impressive Lockpick abilities.

➤ Katariah Master Key

The ladder up to the deck isn't necessary; instead, move north to the gold door that was locked previously (Expert), and open it—either with your Lockpick ability or the Key. Repel the foes in this dormitory area, and sneak past or destroy Lieutenant Salvarus, who is stationed behind the gold door at the northern end of this floor. Climb up the nearby steps, and you're a room away from meeting the Emperor. The real one this time!

TIP Sneaking to the Emperor's Quarters: From the initial room, follow the sailor as he meets his friend and wanders into the galley. When they enter, wait for another sailor to exit from the barracks at the hall's end, and head into the galley as well. Now wait for the guard to move away from the bar, and then sneak around to the chamber's right side. The bard with the flute moves out of the way, allowing a clear path to the stairs. At the top of the stairs, pick the locked door (Expert). You don't have to deal with the captain or the two soldiers in the central room!

TIP Further Fighting: If you're in the mood for more combat, use the ladder up to the trapdoor near Captain Avidius's cabin, or the gold door opposite the door to the Emperor's Quarters. Exit out onto the Katariah's exterior deck. Here, you can slice into the Emperor's agents if you wish. This is one option as an escape route, too. If you want to avoid fighting the captain, you can sneak across the deck. It's much harder (try it at night), but you can go this way if you want to.

Approach the door to the Emperor's Quarters (Master). This requires an impressive Lockpick or the use of the Katariah Master Key. (If you didn't get it from the captain, Lieutenant Salvarus downstairs has another.) Step forward, and the Emperor greets you: Not with a blade or a string of curses but with a well-mannered speech. He knew Commander Maro to be a fool; one cannot stop the Dark Brotherhood!

You can:

Execute the Emperor immediately.

Or speak with him and give him a moment to say a few words before you run him through. He asks for a favor. Not as part of a Black Sacrament, but as an old man's dying wish. There is one who set this assassination forth, and the Emperor wants him punished for his treachery. You are to kill that person. You need not commit to this deed. Now the Emperor turns and waits for death. Oblige him.

➤ Emperor's Robes ➤ Katariah Master Key

◆ OBJECTIVE: Report to Amaund Motierre

◆ TARGET: Amaund Motierre, Bannered Mare, in Whiterun

Ransack the Emperor's Quarters for any books or other items you wish; the Emperor's chest in his bedroom has some good loot. Leave via the door in the northeast wall that leads to an exterior balcony, allowing you to dive into the waters and swim to safety, or backtrack and enter the deck, if you want more fighting. Whatever your route, travel back to Whiterun, enter the Bannered Mare once again. Speak with Amaund, and inform him that Titus Mede II lies dead. Amaund has just heard this information himself and is extremely pleased: As you shall be; there is a considerable payment inside an urn, in the chamber where you first met, back in Volunruud. Amaund wants you to leave now and never cross paths with him again.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Retrieve the payment

◆ TARGET: Urn, in Volunruud

◆ OBJECTIVE: (Optional) Kill Amaund Motierre

(Optional) Additional Executions II

If you wish to kill Amaund and honor the Emperor's wishes, you can tell him there's just one more matter to clear up and then tell him you're doing a favor for an honorable man. Or, you can choose to answer him differently (or remain silent) and attack him anyway! Turn your blade into him and dispatch this aloof traitor (grab his pocketful of gems). Your bounty in Whiterun skyrockets, so expect Guards to confront you moments after the murder.

Quest Conclusion

Amaund Motierre lived up to his part of the bargain; travel to Volunruud, dismantle any skeletal foes that greet you, and search the initial room where you met previously. Inside the urn is a considerable sum of gold!

➤ 20,000 gold pieces

◆ OBJECTIVE: Report to Nazir

◆ TARGET: Nazir, Dawnstar Sanctuary

Now journey to the Dawnstar Sanctuary and approach the Black Door. The door opens, allowing you down into the main chamber with the smashed circular window and large fireplace.

Nazir is waiting for word on the Emperor. Inform him that you've done the deed, and tell him how much gold you were paid as a reward. You can be truthful or lie (it doesn't matter). Nazir recommends you go to Riften and search out a man named Delvin Mallory, someone Astrid already had you visit previously. This time, though, the "obtainer of goods" will refit this Sanctuary, using the money you earned, and make a true home for this Family once again.

Postquest Activities

Dark Brotherhood Quest: Where You Hang Your Enemy's Head... begins immediately, along with additional quests.

DARK BROTHERHOOD QUEST: SIDE CONTRACTS

The following 12 Side Contract Quests occur throughout the critical Dark Brotherhood Quests, and offer you several targets to assassinate. Some are accessible earlier than others, and all have a limited window of opportunity. For a complete list of how to unlock each Side Contract Quest, consult the Introduction to the Dark Brotherhood Quests, at the start of this chapter.

Side Contracts: Overview

The contracts Nazir gives you are the first in a long line of assassinations you can (and should) elect to attempt in the name of the Dark Brotherhood. Each requires you to seek out the targets, kill them, and then report back to Nazir (either in between or after completing any other quests). Although each assassination takes place in a different locale, the overall tactics detailed in the introduction to these quests on page 315 are worth employing.

TIP Consult the section called Crime and Punishment on page 64 for a complete overview of how crimes, bounty, and assassinations work.

SIDE CONTRACTS: PART 1

Contract: Narfi

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Kill Narfi
- ◆ TARGET: Narfi, in Ivarstead

Narfi is a beggar with unpaid debts. When you reach Ivarstead, cross by the rapids (or sneak around via the base of the mountain on the river's opposite side), and deliver a swift death to this unfortunate soul. You're out in the open and easily spotted, so be careful (or fleet of foot).

Contract: Beitild

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Kill Beitild
- ◆ TARGET: Beitild, in Dawnstar

Beitild is in Darkstar, either inside her house or on the thoroughfare. The guards don't take kindly to a massacre on their doorstep, so be careful (or run quickly afterward). Slay Beitild and take her house key; ransack the residence if you wish (mainly for the gold), and then leave.

➤ Key to Beitild's House

Contract: Ennodius Papius

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Kill Ennodius Papius
- ◆ TARGET: Ennodius Papius, at Anga's Mill

Ennodius is usually found outside the settlement of Anga's Mill, near or inside a small tent close to the stream. You may converse with the paranoid layabout or simply end his life. Then check his corpse and possessions for items of interest, and depart.

Quest Conclusions

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Report back to Nazir

When you return to the Dark Brotherhood Sanctuary, move into the grotto area. Find Nazir to collect your payment for the first three contracts. Nazir is often in the banquet hall but could be anywhere in the Sanctuary.

- Leveled gold (Narfi)
- Leveled gold (Beitild)
- Leveled gold (Ennodius Papius)

Postquest Activities

You usually return to Nazir once Dark Brotherhood Quest: Mourning Never Comes begins.

SIDE CONTRACTS: PART 2

Contract: Hern

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Kill Hern
- ◆ TARGET: Hern, at Half-Moon Mill

Journey to Half-Moon Mill and scout the small cluster of buildings for one with the vampire Hern in or outside it. Then deliver a quick and killing blow (ideally using any remaining Lotus Extract) for a one-strike death. Beware of Hern's vampire wife, Hert, as she fights to the death, too. Optionally ransack the Mill afterward.

TIP Attacking during the day is helpful, as vampires are more powerful at night. Try to slay at least one of these bloodsuckers while they sleep, which usually requires sneaking rather than mayhem! For more information on vampirism (including a possible cure), consult the information on page 56 of the Training section of this guide.

Contract: Lurbuk

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Kill Lurbuk
- ◆ TARGET: Lurbuk, in Morthal

Set off toward the town of Morthal, on the edge of the Karth River delta. Investigate the buildings until you reach the Moorside Inn, a known location where Lurbuk has sung before. When you find him, you can optionally request a "song of fear and death" before you run him through with an implement of your choosing.

Quest Conclusions

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Report back to Nazir

Return to the Dark Brotherhood Sanctuary and locate Nazir. Collect your additional payments for side contracts four and five.

- Leveled gold (Hern)
- Leveled gold (Lurbuk)

Postquest Activities

You usually return to Nazir after Dark Brotherhood Quest: The Silence Has Been Broken begins.

SIDE CONTRACTS: PART 3

Contract: Deekus

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Kill Deekus
- ◆ TARGET: Deekus, by Hela's Folly

Deekus left his old life and spends his time eking out an existence at a small camp with scattered stolen trinkets, close to the shipwreck Hela's Folly (which is near Yngvild), and braving the frigid waters of the Northern Coast. There isn't anyone near to hear Deekus's screams; this is an easy kill. Loot both the possessions, and the contents of Hela's Folly afterward, if you wish.

Contract: Ma'randru-jo

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Kill Ma'randru-jo
- ◆ TARGET: Ma'randru-jo, near Solitude

This Khajiit is a member of Ri'saad's caravan, so the two are friends and will react accordingly if you attack. Ma'randru-jo is always found traveling with the caravan itself. Expect nearby friends of Ma'randru-jo to defend him when you pounce; longer-range assassinations are safe in this case.

Contract: Anoriath

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Kill Anoriath
- ◆ TARGET: Anoriath, in Whiterun

Anoriath and his brother Elrindir, have made a successful archery business in Whiterun, and they have a market store selling fresh venison. He's likely to be either hanging out at the Drunken Huntsman or selling at the marketplace close to the Bannerman's Mare. Although it may be fitting to kill him using your bow, melee strikes or other takedowns work, too. Beware of combat in cities; prepare to run once your bounty rises!

◆ OBJECTIVE: Report back to Nazir

Nazir's Rewards

Once you have fulfilled these three side contracts, return to Nazir and receive your payment. Then ask about any other contracts, and Nazir tells you about Agnis, your next kill.

- Leveled gold (Deekus)
- Leveled gold (Ma'randru-jo)
- Leveled gold (Anoriath)

SIDE CONTRACTS: PART 4

Contract: Agnis

◆ OBJECTIVE: Kill Agnis

◆ TARGET: Agnis, in Fort Greymoor

Set off for Fort Greymoor and assault this stronghold, which is initially teeming with bandits. Although sneaking is an option, your hunt usually degenerates into combat pretty quickly. Slay the bandits (or other enemies, should this location have been taken over) as you progress through the prison until you reach Agnis the cleaning servant, who is easily cut down.

TIP If you are ensconced in the ongoing turmoil of the Civil War Quests, this fortification is a key location. Instead of bandits, there are soldiers of the faction that controls Whiterun Hold (which starts in Imperial hands). If you're on the same side as the soldiers, you need not fight them, making this task a lot easier!

◆ OBJECTIVE: Report back to Nazir

Nazir's Rewards

Agnis is a single side contract; you must return to Nazir and inform him of your success before he offers you the next two contracts. Don't forget to train in Light Armor with him, if you have the coin.

- Leveled gold (Agnis)

SIDE CONTRACTS: PART 5

Contract: Maluril

◆ OBJECTIVE: Kill Maluril

◆ TARGET: Maluril, in Mzinchaleft

Prepare for a dungeon crawl and set off for the ancient and spectacular Mzinchaleft, introducing the assorted bandits to your style of combat and entering the giant underground structure. Battle down to a locked door and a guard outside. Search the guard for a key if you're having trouble opening the door.

(Lockpick [Average]) Use your prowess to open it, confront Maluril as he pours over Dwemer artifacts, and kill the wizard.

Contract: Helvard

◆ OBJECTIVE: Kill Helvard

◆ TARGET: Helvard, in Falkreath

Helvard is the Housecarl in the service of the Jarl of Falkreath. He is either striding about town or planning actions inside the Jarl's Longhouse with Siddgeir. Helvard doesn't feel Siddgeir is up to the task, which is probably why you're here. It may be wise to coat your blade in poison, as Helvard's quick death means you can flee without slaughtering the high-ranking town officials. Unless you want to.

TIP The Jarl cannot be killed, and the only way to survive this with your integrity (and equipment) intact is to complete the assassination. And then run!

◆ OBJECTIVE: Report back to Nazir

Nazir's Rewards

Back at the Dark Brotherhood Sanctuary, Nazir is rapidly running out of targets for you to cull. But he has one last assassination, that of a formidable pirate known as Safia.

- Leveled gold (Maluril)
- Leveled gold (Helvard)

SIDE CONTRACTS: PART 6

Contract: Safia

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Kill Safia
- ◆ TARGET: Safia, moored near the East Empire Company Warehouse

Journey to the East Empire Company Warehouse and look for the Red Wave, a pirate ship docked on the main jetty.

[Lockpick [Novice]] Pick the lock and enter the vessel after boarding it. Safia is in the hold at the ship's bottom. She seems to have predicted your arrival (if you speak with her) and prepares for a fight, with intermittent fleeing. Cut her down!

- Leveled weapon

◆ OBJECTIVE: Report back to Nazir

Quest Rewards

With the cutthroat defeated, you may return to Nazir and receive the final payment for your last side contract.

- Leveled gold (Safia)

Postquest Activities

This concludes Nazir's business for now, although once Dark Brotherhood Quest: Hail Sithis! has been completed, you may receive further work...just not from Nazir.

DESTROY THE DARK BROTHERHOOD!

PREREQUISITES: Commencement of Dark Brotherhood Quest: With Friends Like These...

INTERSECTING QUESTS: Dark Brotherhood Quest: With Friends Like These...

LOCATIONS: Abandoned Shack, Dark Brotherhood Sanctuary, Dragon Bridge, Penitus Oculatus Outpost

CHARACTERS: Alea Quintus, Commander Maro, Fultheim the Fearless, Vasha

ENEMIES: Arnbjorn, Astrid, Festus Krex, Gabriella, Lis, Nazir, Veezara

- ◆ OBJECTIVES: Report Astrid's death to a guard, Speak with Commander Maro, Kill everyone in the Sanctuary!, Report back to Commander Maro

Fail, Sithis!

NOTE This quest begins only after you start Dark Brotherhood Quest: With Friends Like These...

Completing this quest will make any remaining Dark Brotherhood Quests inaccessible to you.

CAUTION

When Astrid first captures you and forces you to kill one of the three hostages in the Abandoned Shack, she notes that "someone isn't leaving here alive." That "someone" doesn't need to be pleading for their life with a bag on their head. Instead of spilling innocent blood, you can turn and attack Astrid. She is very strong, so ensure you get as many attacks in as possible before she drops from her perch and begins attacking you. When Astrid drops dead, gurgling "well done" as she falls, search her for the items listed here. Before you leave, you have the option to untie the three prisoners.

- Abandoned Shack Key
- Blade of Woe

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Report Astrid's death to a guard
- ◆ TARGET: Any Guard

Step out of the Abandoned Shack, situate yourself after your kidnap, and then decide where to journey to find a guard. One easy example is to head to Solitude and speak to any guard there. Or, if you don't want to travel, simply go to Dragon Bridge. Inform a guard that you killed the leader of the Dark Brotherhood, and they are stunned. You're told to report this action to Commander Maro immediately.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak with Commander Maro

◆ TARGET: Command Maro, inside the Penitus Oculatus Outpost, in Dragon Bridge

Journey to the Imperial settlement of Dragon Bridge and find the straw-roofed dwelling with Imperial banners out front, used as a Penitus Oculatus Outpost. Once inside, speak to Commander Maro, who is ecstatic at this turn of events and realizes it's time to strike against the Dark Brotherhood. He wants you to pay them a visit. Use the passphrase "Silence, my brother," and murder every assassin in that hole! Return to Maro afterward and expect considerable compensation.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Kill everyone in the Sanctuary!

◆ TARGET: All assassins, Dark Brotherhood Sanctuary

Mass Murder in the Sanctuary

Journey to the Dark Brotherhood Sanctuary in Falkreath, and step up to the Black Door. Answer the question "What is the music of life?" with the passphrase you just learned from Maro. If Maro hasn't told you the passphrase yet, this isn't available as an answer. Head down the steps into the Sanctuary, and begin the first of a series of fraught battles with each member of the Dark Brotherhood (Babette does not fight and is nowhere to be found). They instantly recognize you as an intruder and begin to attack.

These toughened assassins are specialized fighters, and you won't just cut through them. Running through the Sanctuary is like signing your own death warrant. If you beckon more than one attacker at a time, you'll run into a large amount of trouble. Face them one at a time!

CAUTION

You meet the Dark Brotherhood in the following order:

Arnbjorn is in his chamber, prior to entering the grotto. He carries an enchanted warhammer and attacks with the ferocity of a wolf man.

Veezara is in the main grotto area and wields two weapons with amazing dexterity. He is a force to be reckoned with and should be approached with caution.

Gabriella (and Lis the spider) are in the laboratory area. Both are formidable foes. At this point, you can backtrack to the previously explored areas for a breather, if necessary.

Nazir carries a scimitar and isn't afraid to stick it between your ribs. He's holed up in the dining room chamber, which can be difficult to maneuver through.

Festus is the final member of the Dark Brotherhood to fall to your might. He guards the Chapel and has several nasty spells he doesn't mind casting on you.

Eventually, when the last assassin falls or between combat altercations, you may search the dead Brotherhood and ransack their hideout for more Shrouded outfits, weapons, and other common items.

➤ Potions (various)

➤ Enchanted and Leveled Weapons

➤ Leveled Armor and Outfits

You can't waltz into the Sanctuary and carve up the Dark Brotherhood once you finish Dark Brotherhood Quest:

With Friends Like These... The Dark Brotherhood simply murder you if you try an assassination within the ranks.

CAUTION

TIP Is this wanton carnage too much for you? Then you can flee the Sanctuary, only to return and finish the job at your leisure.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Report back to Commander Maro

Quest Conclusion

Head back to Dragon Bridge and inform Commander Maro of your penchant for assassination. He congratulates you on striking a blow against the Dark Brotherhood, which they aren't likely to recover from. Accept your blood money.

➤ 3,000 gold pieces

Postquest Activities

All the remaining Dark Brotherhood Quests are now inaccessible to you.

WHERE YOU HANG YOUR ENEMY'S HEAD...

PREREQUISITES: Complete Dark Brotherhood Quest: Hail Sithis!

INTERSECTING QUESTS: Dark Brotherhood Quest: Hail Sithis!

LOCATIONS: Dawnstar Sanctuary, Riften, The Ratway, The Ragged Flagon

CHARACTERS: Babette, Cicero, Delvin Mallory, Nazir

ENEMIES: None

◆ OBJECTIVE: Employ Delvin Mallory's services

That's Your Home

This quest begins once you complete Dark Brotherhood Quest: Hail Sithis!

◆ OBJECTIVE: Employ Delvin Mallory's services

Nazir says that you can use the large haul of gold you received from your previous quest to modify the Dawnstar Sanctuary. If you spend the funds on this place rather than on yourself and your inventory, set off to Riften and follow the Ratway to the Ragged Flagon, where the Thieves Guild members reside.

NOTE You may run into Cicero as you exit the Dawnstar Sanctuary for the first time after Nazir and Babette move there. Consult the Dark Brotherhood Radiant Quests: Cicero's Return for more details.

A Poisoner's Nook, along with an allotment of deadly plant-life.

Secret Entrance, shown from the exterior, overlooking Dawnstar.

The Listener's Bedroom, where clandestine and cunning plans are hatched.

Before Delvin's handiwork: The main chamber needs some attention.

Afterwards: New banners and stained-glass windows are installed.

Find Delvin and ask if he can repair and refit the Dawnstar Sanctuary. He says it will cost you, but he can help. Spruce up the place with any of the possible repairs:

IMPROVEMENT	DESCRIPTION	COST
New Banners	The black hand of the Dark Brotherhood now adorns many a wall.	1,000 gold pieces
Poisoner's Nook	An Alchemy Lab, complete with potions and special plants (that regrow and can be used in poisons) is installed near the tiny plant allotment upstairs.	5,000 gold pieces
Torture Chamber	Four prisoners hang here, shackled and ready to reveal the locations of their hidden caches.	5,000 gold pieces
Secret Entrance	Travel to and from the rocky ground above the sanctuary. The exterior entrance is next to the Dawnstar Fast-Travel marker, which makes it even easier to get in and out of the Sanctuary.	5,000 gold pieces
Master Bedroom	In addition to a place to hang your weapons and sleep, you gain some special items fit for a Listener.	3,000 gold pieces
Total:		19,000 gold pieces

Quest Conclusion

The next time you return to the Dawnstar Sanctuary, any improvements will be made, which you can inspect.

Postquest Activities

Your critical quests are now over. As the leader of the Dark Brotherhood, there are Radiant Quests to complete from this point and an old friend to possibly meet up with....

The Elder Scrolls V

SKYRIM

QUESTS: THE DARK BROTHERHOOD QUESTS

DARK BROTHERHOOD RADIANT QUESTS

In addition to the Dark Brotherhood Contract Quests, the following jobs or quests occur throughout (and between) the critical Dark Brotherhood Quests and offer you a variety of objectives to accomplish. Some are accessible earlier than others. For a complete list of how each additional quest is unlocked, consult the Introduction to the Dark Brotherhood Quests at the start of this chapter.

NOTE Task names marked with an asterisk (*) do not appear in your Quest menu list, although objectives may.

HONOR THY FAMILY

Have you slighted a member of the Dark Brotherhood Family? They aren't concerned with you stealing anything from the Sanctuary, but they draw the line at violence. This objective triggers if you strike (accidentally or otherwise) any Family member once and then sheath your weapon. This is important; continue to brandish your weapon, and the whole Family turns hostile! After you calm down, you are instructed to speak with Nazir and pay the fine imposed for your behavior. Return with 500 gold pieces, and you may continue working with the Dark Brotherhood.

THE FEEBLE FORTUNE*

PREREQUISITES: Complete Dark Brotherhood Quest: Breaching Security (with bonus)

INTERSECTING QUESTS: Dark Brotherhood Quest: Breaching Security, Dark Brotherhood Quest: The Cure for Madness

LOCATIONS: Dark Brotherhood Sanctuary, Deepwood Redoubt, Deepwood Vale, Hag's End, Whiterun, Olava the Feeble's House

CHARACTERS: Dark Brotherhood Assassin, Gabriella, Olava the Feeble

ENEMIES: Forsworn, Frostbite Spider, Hagraven, Witch

◆ OBJECTIVES: Receive a reading from Olava the Feeble, Locate the assassin of old

◆ OBJECTIVE: Locate the assassin of old

◆ TARGET: Dark Brotherhood Assassin (dead), behind rock panel inside Hag's End

Danger at Deepwood

Trek to the mountains west of Dragon Bridge, using any path to the north of Hag's End. The path disappears, forcing you to hike to the perimeter, which is flanked by a few large snow-capped stones. Head up the stairs and find the illuminated iron door in the southeast overhang dug into the mountains. There's a campfire to your left and an altar to your right. Forsworn instantly attack if they spot you. The iron door leads to Deepwood Redoubt's interior.

A Token Gesture

Assuming you've killed Gaius Maro by following Gabriella's instructions to the letter and securing the bonus, when you speak to her at the Dark Brotherhood Sanctuary, she hands you a token, mentions a fortune-teller named Olava, and suggests you visit her for a reading. She quickly tells you about the problems that occur at the start of Dark Brotherhood Quest: The Cure for Madness. When you have a spare moment, head to see Olava.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Receive a reading from Olava the Feeble

◆ TARGET: Olava the Feeble's House, in Whiterun

Journey to Whiterun and locate Olava the Feeble's House, off the main path in the southern part of the city. Tell her you have a token for her, and she shakes off her bad mood, realizes you're a friend of Gabriella's, and agrees to give you a reading. She sees a Sanctuary but with snow and lit by the star of dawn. There are other shadowy figures she spies in the ether, and before you are Family, she sees a great spillage of blood. But before that, she sees a ruin ripe for the plunder—Deepwood Redoubt. Through there is a place named Hag's End, where an assassin of old bequeaths his ancient earthly possessions to you!

Pass a few tomb corpses and head through a gate and up some stairs, watching out for a dart trap (check the floor and step over the trigger plate). Turn left (southeast) and begin fighting through more Forsworn. There are bowmen on the bridge, so head right, through an old Nord crypt entrance (watching for swinging axes, which you can switch off using the lever at the end) and into a ruined embalming room. There is an iron door here and three Rune Traps. The iron door is locked (Expert); unlock it using your Lockpick skill or the key you find on the corpse of the Forsworn you must fight in the adjacent bedroom.

TIP For such Rune Traps, try to avoid them or try to trigger them by coaxing an enemy onto them, dragging a body onto them, or summoning a creature onto them. In this example, the Forsworn in the bedroom is an excellent victim to lure onto the runes.

► Deepwood Redoubt Key

Once through the door, check the floor for a trigger plate to avoid getting hit by a wall trap, open the iron door, and cross the bridge you saw earlier. Head northeast. Move up the stairs to a larger iron door. This brings you into Deepwood Vale.

This hidden vale is a large, multileveled entrance to Hag's End. You'll probably face around ten Forsworn on the various balconies, turrets, and upper ledges as you progress. You may systematically check everywhere while fighting through these foes, race for the entrance to Hag's End, or take a more long-range approach, sneaking along the sides and firing your bow from range. There are wooden steps below a slightly sunken arch; use those, climb up the arch span instead, or use the stone steps farther south. Deal with the Forsworn boss on the upper level, then continue up and locate the iron door leading into Hag's End.

TIP A frontal assault is highly dangerous, and the main entrance is a death trap. You're likely to be mobbed by four or five Forsworn, but this is an option for those with a thirst for blood (and health potions).

Heading right, picking the lock of the lower door on the right tower, and sneaking in from the side allows you to sneak (or dash) to the stairs. Combat is safer on this side of the vale.

Heading left, hop across the cliffs around the left tower and enter from this side. Although you must fight across the whole camp, the way the enemies meet you means you're in less danger than running up the middle with a sword and a death wish.

Open the double doors to the northeast and enter a witches' banqueting hall. To continue, dispatch three witches and a Hagraven. When you damage or pass the Hagraven, she will teleport away; you'll have to fight her again later. Open the door at the hall's opposite end; this leads to a dead-end room with more ice traps.

Look right (southeast) and climb the stairs, watching out for a trigger plate that launches a battering ram from the left. Disarm the hinge trigger to open the chest on the shelf in this area. Turn right (southwest), and battle your way through two more witches and the Hagraven in the alcove throne room. Ignore the raised bridge for the moment, and check for a handle on the wall behind the throne. Pull that, and a section of wall opens, revealing a hidden alcove. This is where the slain Dark Brotherhood Assassin lies. Take whatever treasure you wish from the corpse and nearby chest. The assassin's outfit is of particular interest.

- Ancient Shrouded Armor
- Ancient Shrouded Boots
- Ancient Shrouded Gloves
- Ancient Shrouded Helmet

You can't simply wander to this secret rock panel and use the handle to open it. The handle doesn't appear until Olava has read your fortune.

CAUTION

NOTE At this point, you can finish your exploration of Hag's End or retrace your steps.

Assuming you wish to complete your investigation of Hag's End, use the lever next to the bridge to lower it. Cross and fight a witch, then ascend more stairs to a junction with a gate (Master) leading to a treasure chest and fire trap. Open this using the Hag's End Key, located on the mantel in the Hagraven's bedroom (in this hall) or on the Hagraven once you kill her.

On your right (northeast) is a handle. Pull it, and three portcullises open. Wait for the spear traps to recede before moving into a circular chamber with spilled oil. Treat the Hagraven and two witches to a burning (there's an oil lamp in the dragon statue's teeth), before yanking the chain attached to the statue, opening another portcullis, and exiting up into a grand hall, where the Nordic voices call you to a Word Wall!

- Word of Power: Slow Time

Conclusion

With a new Shout learned, open the door to Deepwood Vale. You emerge on a high ledge overlooking the exterior area. Your final Hagraven battle occurs here; watch for her "pets"—Skeevers, Frostbite Spiders, or even Trolls—that you must tackle before you can cut the old crone down. Inspect the Hagraven, as she carries the Hag's End Key, which can open the gate you saw earlier. Also check the sacrificed witch on the altar; here you'll find the impressive Bloodthorn dagger. Then face the waterfall, drop to the Hag's End entrance, and retrace your steps back into the wilds of Skyrim.

TIP Wait! From the upper platform atop Hag's End, look for a little valley from which the waterfalls descend. Employ a Whirlwind Sprint Shout to reach this valley, and locate the chest with a pair of Unique boots.

- Hag's End Key
- Predator's Grace Boots
- Bloodthorn

WELCOME TO THE BROTHERHOOD*

NOTE This objective becomes available as soon as Dark Brotherhood Quest: Hail Sithis! concludes.

When you return to the Dawnstar Sanctuary, ideally after refurbishment, Nazir has managed to attract two Dark Brotherhood Initiates. You can select either of them to accompany you on your adventures; it would be an honor for them to serve the Listener. Further Initiates arrive if any are slain during the course of a more hectic exploration.

➤ Follower: Dark Brotherhood Initiate

CICERO'S RETURN*

NOTE Previously, you've had at least two opportunities to fight Cicero, most prominently during Dark Brotherhood Quest: Delayed Burial and The Cure for Madness. If you didn't defeat him during the latter quest, this is active.

If you kept Cicero alive (even if that meant lying to Astrid), he usually gives you a startling greeting outside Dawnstar Sanctuary the first time you leave the premises. After one more jest, Cicero says he's here to serve the Night

Mother. From this point on, you'll find him inside the Sanctuary, where you can ignore or speak to him. You may keep him alive for the hilarity, or you may bring him on an adventure. Whether he returns from that adventure, of course, depends on what you equip him with and how helpful you are during a combat situation....

➤ Follower: Cicero

NOTE Cicero has a particular prowess at melee fighting. You can give him orders, and he comments when you visit certain locations and sings songs to himself.

THE DARK BROTHERHOOD FOREVER!

◆ OBJECTIVES: Approach the Night Mother, Speak with the contact, Kill the target

▶ Murder for Mother

◆ OBJECTIVE: Approach the Night Mother

When you reach the newly claimed Dawnstar Sanctuary, the Night Mother tells you to approach her. Do as she asks, and she informs you that somewhere in Skyrim, the Black Sacrament has been completed, and someone wishes to pay the Dark Brotherhood for their services. You are to meet them and gain further information on that target.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak with the contact

◆ TARGET: Random person. Random location.

Travel to the location where the contact wishes to speak to you. They quickly hand over a payment, along with instructions on how to find their target and kill them. This is a simple assassination, and one that pays.

➤ Levelled gold pieces

◆ OBJECTIVE: Kill the target

◆ TARGET: Random person. Random location.

The contacts and targets are randomly chosen from the following lists (they won't be the same each time):

Contacts

- A nervous patron at Candlehearth Hall in Windhelm
- A wary outlaw at the Bee and Barb in Riften
- A corrupt agent at the Penitus Oculatus Outpost in Dragon Bridge
- A scheming servant at the Keep in Markarth
- A desperate gambler at the Barracks in Windhelm
- A blasphemous priest at the Temple of Kynareth in Whiterun
- A dishonored skald at the Bards College in Solitude
- An indolent farmer at the Vilemyr Inn in Ivarstead
- An grief-stricken chef at the Windpeak Inn, here in Dawnstar
- An unemployed laborer at the Frostfruit Inn in Rorikstead

Targets

- A visiting noble at Dragonsreach in Whiterun
- A big laborer at Katla's Farm
- An itinerant lumberjack in Morthal, at the logging camp
- A reckless mage in the Frozen Hearth Inn in Winterhold.
- A seasoned hunter, just outside Falkreath

A poor fishwife, on the Riften Docks

A grim shieldmaiden walking the streets of Markarth

A traveling dignitary in Solitude

A coldhearted gravedigger, who tends to work in the Hall of the Dead in Windhelm

A beautiful barbarian, in Ivarstead

Conclusion

Approach your target, who is usually within the walls of a city or other highly populated location, and quickly dispatch them. To deal with any guards or others who see you, use the same techniques you did in previous Dark Brotherhood missions.

Postquest Activities

Once the target is dead, this objective automatically starts again. Return to the Night Mother and locate your next contact.

THE TORTURER'S TREASURE: PARTS I, II, III, IV*

Visit your newly constructed torture chamber, and you'll discover that Nazir has clamped four torture victims to the stone walls. If you speak to one of them, they give a variety of angry or frightened answers. Continue talking to the victim, and they eventually let you know of a hidden stash of treasure. Leave your victim to hang, and progress to your next victim, repeating this process until all four victims have revealed where each of their caches lie.

◇ MISCELLANEOUS: Take the hidden treasure

TIP There are four treasure stashes, so it's better to interrogate all four victims and collect each of the four stashes once, rather than interrogating one at a time. This treasure is accessible only after this is active.

Conclusion

NOTE Consult your Miscellaneous Quest menu and flag all four objectives so they are shown on the map. Then journey to each of them and uncover a Hollowed-Out Rock or Hollowed-Out Tree Stump at the specified location. Search this and pry out a sizable cache of gold, usually between 1,000 to 2,000 gold pieces per stash. This typically pays for the torture chamber's construction and leaves you with an extra 1,000 to 1,200 gold pieces after all four caches are cleared.

➤ 1,000 to 2,000 gold pieces (4)

The Elder Scrolls V

SKYRIM

QUESTS: THE DARK BROTHERHOOD QUESTS

CIVIL WAR QUESTS

GENERAL OVERVIEW

The Civil War Quests automatically begin the moment you meet your ally during the escape from Helgen. From this point, you begin to make important choices with ramifications across Skyrim. You may choose to side with either the Imperial Legion or the Stormcloak Rebellion and complete quests for your chosen faction. Main Quests: The Fallen and Season Unending are affected by your actions within the Civil War; consult those quests for more information.

Picking a Side

Choosing a side can be done quickly or delayed until the very last moment. You can work with the person you escaped Helgen with—either Hadvar (Imperials) or Ralof (Stormcloaks). However, you haven't officially picked a side until you've visited the stronghold of your chosen faction and sworn an oath to the Imperials (in Solitude) or Stormcloaks (in Windhelm).

There is a last-minute change you can make after that: At the very end of Civil War Quest: The Jagged Crown, you can decide to bring the Crown itself to the enemy leader. At this point, there is no turning back!

NOTE Cross-Referencing: Do you want to see maps and learn more about the traps, non-quest-related items, collectibles, crafting areas, and other important rooms of note in every location during these quests? Then cross-reference the location you travel to with the information on that location contained in this guide's Atlas.

MAP LEGEND

This shows the important tactical locations of Skyrim and who controls them at the start of the Civil War.

OVERVIEW: IMPERIAL LEGION

Imperial Headquarters: Castle Dour, in Solitude

Castle Dour, on approach from Solitude interior.

A strategic planning session.

Solitude is the capital of Skyrim (and Haafingar Hold) and is the one, true cosmopolitan city of Skyrim. Dominating the city's northern district is Castle Dour. Thick-walled and imposing, it protected its inhabitants from invaders. As the city grew, walls were added to surround the other, newer buildings. During a long period of peace, a palace was built for the Jarl. Castle Dour was converted into the Imperial Garrison, and the Jarl moved to the Blue Palace in the south of the city.

Important Characters: Imperial Legion

General Tullius

Tullius is a no-nonsense military man, impatient with politicians and compromise. He believes the best solution is to crush the rebellion ruthlessly. Although historically competent, his recent tactics have inflamed the tensions after he allowed the Thalmor to begin enforcing the terms of the hated White-Gold Concordat. He is practical and dedicated, but he lacks imagination and is impatient.

Legate Rikke

Rikke is widely respected by the Skyrim legions she commands and is strictly loyal to Tullius's orders even when she disagrees with them. Although from Nordic stock, she is a true believer in the rightness of the Imperial cause. She is both loyal and disciplined.

Hadvar

A loyal, brave, and enthusiastic Imperial soldier who befriends you during the escape from Helgen. He is related to Alvor the Blacksmith, in Riverwood.

Stormcloak Sanctuary: Palace of the Kings, in Windhelm

Windhelm sits on the northern bank of the White River and is an imposing sight. The Palace of the Kings (also known historically as the Palace of Ysgramor) is an ancient stone fortress and the city's main keep. These days, the palace serves as the headquarters of the Stormcloaks, under the leadership of Jarl Ulfric Stormcloak, who sits upon the ancient Throne of Ysgramor. And so the Palace of the Kings is, as such, the center of the pro-Nord war effort in the Civil War.

Important Characters: Stormcloak Rebellion

Jarl Ulfric Stormcloak

Ulfric fought in the Imperial Legions during the Great War against the Aldmeri Dominion. Disillusioned over the Markarth incident, he founded the Stormcloaks as an underground group centered around now-proscribed worship of Talos. After killing the High

King of Skyrim in the throne room of Solitude after declaring him a lackey of the Empire, he was arrested in surprisingly swift time, possibly aided by Thalmor agents. Only recently has he escaped the chopping block at Helgen. He is fiery and impetuous and a born leader, but he lacks the cool head of a strategist.

Galmar Stone-Fist

Galmar may be old, but he is still hale. A very experienced Nord warrior, he is also Ulfric's right-hand man and Housecarl. He served Ulfric's father and is more concerned with winning the war than the politics behind it. He is Ulfric's most trusted ally and acts as his field commander. He is a firm believer in the old ways of Talos, and distrusts High Elves. A grizzled bear of a man, he is imposing and gruff, but fair.

Ralof

A loyal, brave, and enthusiastic Stormcloak soldier who befriends you during the escape from Helgen. He is related to Gerdur the lumber mill owner, in Riverwood.

Reconnaissance: Preliminary Planning

Halt! Before beginning a Civil War Quest that involves attacking a fortification, you may wish to employ some smart reconnaissance, visiting the any fort you'll be assaulting later in the Civil War and inspecting the exterior battlements, learning where the stairs and upper crenellations are. However, remember the following advice and caveats:

- ◇ Once you've accepted the quest that sends you to a Hold, a reconnaissance is too late; enemy soldiers attack if you approach the fort. However, if you arrive before you receive the particular quest to assault the fort, you can walk around. The soldiers will call you out as a trespasser, but they probably won't attack you on sight. For best results, sneak.
- ◇ You can visit any or all of the forts before the Civil War starts. This will give you a chance to inspect them and collect some loot from the enemies (usually warlocks or bandits) who occupy them before the soldiers move in.
- ◇ Finally, the "real" attack on the fortification doesn't start until the specific quest is running. If you arrived here earlier and tried to take out the garrison all by yourself, the enemy will be back up to full strength when the proper attack begins.

There is one matter to be careful of: If you've been here before, you'll have a map marker to the fort. If you Fast-Travel there, the soldiers usually spot you immediately, and the battle starts early, and without your side backing you up! Therefore, it is always better to Fast-Travel to an adjacent location and meet up with your men first.

CAUTION

NOTE As always, study the Atlas section for each location.

Attacking Forts: A Fighting Chance

Whenever you're outside a fortified structure, attempting to get in, raze the place, and cut down the enemy guards inside, there are a few general strategies you should employ:

- ◇ Your main goal is to lead and support your soldiers. While you can attack from another entrance, you risk getting overwhelmed. You're likely better off if you stay with your men unless you're trying to achieve some tactical goal.
- ◇ Don't head into an interior part of the structure. Stay with your allies and give yourself room to maneuver.
- ◇ There's usually more than one entrance. Check the exterior walls for gaps, fallen sections you can leap over, or other debris for infiltration purposes.
- ◇ Move carefully and deliberately. If you get out too far ahead of your troops, the enemy may surround you.
- ◇ You have two basic choices: you can move through the fort and fight soldiers as you go, or find and secure one position and let the enemy come to you.
- ◇ Most entrances to strongholds are bolstered by barricades. Destroy these with magic or melee weapons if you want your allies to storm the area.

- ◇ Need a rest? Then back away and administer magic or potions before returning into the fray.
- ◇ Gain height. It is always advantageous to gain the highest ground, whether it is a turret or battlements section.
- ◇ Use any walls as cover, and attack foes grouped together with area-of-effect weapons. However, these same area-of-effect weapons can damage your own forces. Be very aware of who you're fighting!
- ◇ Stormcloaks are clad in dark blue. Those folks in red? Imperials! Make sure you know which side you're on!
- ◇ You can fight with long-range arrows or magic, or rush in with a melee or a combination of both. As long as you're killing foes, you aren't penalized for the way you're dispatching them.
- ◇ (Melee) Keep an eye out for archers on the walls. If you see one of your men fighting the enemy, help them—the enemy can't block both of your attacks at once.
- ◇ (Ranged) Find a good sniping spot, somewhere you can maximize your damage and have good sight lines. Ideally, shadow some of your soldiers so if your position is attacked, they can deal with the enemy while you back away and continue to strike from range.

Your mission is complete when the enemy garrison is all but wiped out. A few stragglers may remain, but these are optional kills.

JOINING THE LEGION

PREREQUISITES: None

INTERSECTING QUESTS: None

LOCATIONS: Fort Hraggstad, Fort Hraggstad Prison, Helgen (Location), Solitude, Castle Dour

CHARACTERS: Beirand, General Tullius, Hadvar, Legate Rikke

ENEMIES: Bandit, Bandit Chief

- ◆ OBJECTIVES: Miscellaneous: Join the Imperial Legion, Clear out Fort Hraggstad, Report to Legate Rikke, Take the oath, Miscellaneous: Get Imperial gear from Beirand

Before the Undying Loyalty, Unwavering Obedience

NOTE The following quest assumes you pick a side in the Civil War and stick with them. Consult the introduction to these quests to see when you can switch sides (the last possible moment is at the end of Civil War Quest: The Jagged Crown). If you side with the Stormcloak Rebellion, consult the Civil War Quest: Joining the Stormcloaks, on page 364. Although the Civil War rages on, it only affects your adventure if you let it by completing this series of quests.

After escaping from underneath the battlements of the burning town of Helgen, and watching the dragon responsible for disrupting your execution, speak with Hadvar. He says he's headed to Riverwood and asks if you want to accompany him. As you progress down the hillside, he recommends you go to Solitude and join the Imperial Legion.

◆ MISCELLANEOUS OBJECTIVE: Join the Imperial Legion

◆ TARGET: Castle Dour, in Solitude

TIP Did you miss Hadvar's invitation? Then greet any Imperial Soldier (clad in red tunics) or visit any Imperial Camp in Skyrim, and you'll almost always receive an offer to join up.

Journey to the main stronghold of the Imperials in Skyrim—the sprawling city of Solitude, perched on a gigantic arch. As you enter, an execution is under way. A traitor named Roggvir is being put to the ax for aiding in the escape of Ulfric Stormcloak after he murdered the previous Jarl, High King Torygg. You may watch the execution or continue up to Castle Dour, within Solitude's walls. Head west into the strategy planning room, where General Tullius and his Legate Rikke are talking about the war effort. Rikke's scouts are telling her the Stormcloaks are conscripting more men than the Imperials had hoped, and Riften, Dawnstar, and Winterhold are all showing support for the rebellion.

Tullius grows tired of Jarl Balgruuf of Whiterun. The leader of this key strategic Hold City refuses to garrison Imperial troops there, and he refuses to acknowledge Ulfric's claim. After more planning, Tullius asks you why you're here. Answer how you wish, although you gain Tullius's trust faster if you mention you helped Hadvar escape. He hands you over to Legate Rikke, who is also impressed you escaped Helgen alive. Rikke has a good feeling about you and has a test for you to complete so you can prove you're worthy of joining the Legion. You're to clear out Fort Hraggstad. Survive, and you pass this test. This quest officially begins now.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Clear out Fort Hraggstad

◆ TARGET: All bandits, in Fort Hraggstad

Testing Metal and Mettle

In the Haafingar Hold, on the mountains overlooking the Sea of Ghosts northeast of Solitude, is the fort Legate Rikke wishes to use as a garrison. It is currently a bandit lair; expect around eight of them patrolling the exterior battlements. You can fight them either from range or with melee strikes. Watch for (and kill) the bowmen atop the central tower and along the crenellations. Then enter Fort Hraggstad, striking down two bandits and their chief. Back out and enter the prison, where you can slay the final three bandits. Pick any items you wish once the massacre is over.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Report to Legate Rikke

◆ OBJECTIVE: Take the oath

Quest Conclusion

Journey back to Castle Dour in Solitude, and Legate Rikke welcomes you back when you speak with her. She sends a garrison to fortify Hraggstad and tells you it is time for you to officially join the Legion. Turn to General Tullius and agree to recite this oath:

"Upon my honor I do swear undying loyalty to the Emperor, and unwavering obedience to the officers of his great Empire.

May those above judge me, and those below take me, if I fail in my duty.

Long live the Emperor! Long live the Empire!"

◆ MISCELLANEOUS OBJECTIVE: Get Imperial gear from Beirand

NOTE If you forgo this oath, you can journey to Windhelm instead and complete Civil War Quest: Joining the Stormcloaks as well. Do this if you're still unsure where your allegiance lies.

Postquest Activities

You are now "Auxiliary" status within the ranks of the Imperials. You may now visit Beirand over by Solitude Forge. He outfits you with proper Imperial warrior attire (see the equipment listed below). Remember you can choose light, medium, or heavy, depending on how maneuverable you want to be and on your play style. Legate Rikke also has your next assignment: Civil War Quest: The Jagged Crown.

➤ Imperial Boots

➤ Imperial Bracers

➤ Imperial Shield

PREREQUISITES: Complete Civil War Quest: Joining the Legion

INTERSECTING QUESTS: Civil War Quest: Joining the Legion, Civil War Quest: Message to Whiterun

LOCATIONS: Korvanjund, Korvanjund Crypt, Korvanjund Halls, Korvanjund Temple, Solitude, Castle Dour

CHARACTERS: General Tullius, Hadvar, Imperial Soldier, Legate Rikke

ENEMIES: Draugr, Stormcloak Soldier

◆ OBJECTIVES: Talk to Legate Rikke, Meet Legate Rikke outside Korvanjund, Retrieve the Jagged Crown, Deliver the crown to General Tullius

What Real Soldiers Look Like

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Legate Rikke

Speak with Legate Rikke in Castle Dour. She tells you that Ulfric's right-hand man, Galmar Stone-Fist, has located the final resting place of the Jagged Crown. You're going to claim it before the Stormcloaks do. Rikke is already assembling her men outside of Korvanjund. You should join them immediately. Ask her for more information on the Jagged Crown and the tomb of Korvanjund before you leave.

◆ TIP Visit Beirand for your complementary Imperial armor (you don't need to wear it, so sell it if you don't want it).

◆ OBJECTIVE: Meet Legate Rikke outside Korvanjund

Northeast of Whiterun, in the lower foothills where the ground first turns from tundra to snow, is a depression in the ground—the remains of a large cairn and the entrance to these ancient Nordic temple ruins and Jarl's tomb. Of course, you can barge toward the entrance on your own, but a more measured (and recommended) plan is to meet Legate Rikke and her quartet of men on the slopes outside the entrance. The troops include Hadvar, the man you met at Helgen. She curses the damned rebels, who got here first, and asks you to move out. This occurs once you confirm you're ready. As you walk up the hill, Legate Rikke finishes her stirring speech. These foes may be known to you, but their allegiance means they are enemies now. Charge!

If you're using melee weapons, it is recommended that you lead the charge, sprinting down the steps and up the other side to engage the bowmen, while the rest of your troops fight in the lower ground.

If you're using bows or projectile spells, stay on the edge of the depression and rain missile attacks down upon the enemy.

As there are only around four Stormcloaks guarding this entrance, combat is swift and straightforward. Meet Legate Rikke atop the steps by the interior entrance. She issues another warning before heading into Korvanjund Temple. Follow her at once.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Retrieve the Jagged Crown

◆ TARGET: Bone Crown, on Draugr Leader, in Korvanjund Crypt

During combat throughout this tomb, and any time you're engaged in battle, your wild weapon swings or area-of-effect weapons may strike your comrades. If this occurs more than once, they may turn hostile. It is most important you minimize the area of your murdering, and use weapons that are accurate (arrows or spells such as Firebolt). Take more care when using melee weapons. Moving around to attack enemies from the opposite side from your friends, dashing forward to engage foes your allies aren't attacking, and even leaving your friends to finish off foes helps, too.

CAUTION

◆ TIP You can follow Legate Rikke (which is safer) or head off and explore on your own (which is fine, as you can complete this quest without any help or conversations).

Carnage in the Crypt

Rush into the crypt entrance chamber, which is wide and contains a small contingent of foes. Slaughter them quickly, after which Legate Rikke posts two of her detachment to guard this entrance. Head down the steps to the north, before turning right (east) and slaying a trio of Stormcloaks prowling the ledge surrounding this sunken hall. It is usually best to head in first to avoid pushing past friends to reach the foes. After the battle, you can reconvene near Legate Rikke at the northern side of the lower hall near the massive cave-in that dominates the middle of this chamber. Rikke looks down the tunnel steps ahead and guesses there's a group of foes waiting for you on the other side. She's hoping you can find a different way in. You can:

Ignore the warning and plow straight down the stairs and into a fight with around four to six Stormcloaks in the bridge chamber beyond.

Or, head around the hallway's upper ledge, to an entrance directly above where Rikke is waiting. This brings you into the same bridge chamber, but on the upper bridge. It is easier to sneak, fire long-range attacks, or race along the bridge and around the upper balcony area, tackling foes one at a time.

Your comrades attack the enemies from the lower level, so taking down the enemy from two directions is safer and splits the enemy's targets. When the bridge chamber is dripping Stormcloak blood, check the main stepped area for treasure (near the open chest), and then find the upper exit passage to the west. Legate Rikke and her remaining soldiers are clustered around the corpse of a Draugr. It is the first time they've seen such a corpse. Rikke bolsters their courage, and the infiltration continues, down to the iron door leading into the Korvanjund Halls.

Enter the first chamber, climbing to the balcony and slaughtering two foes before venturing north along an upper passage that leads to steps leading down. Along the way is a side tunnel with a swinging blade trap; this leads to some treasure and a lever that stops the axes. Venture into the Nordic Hall of Stories, with or without the Legate. At the hall's far end is a Nordic Puzzle Door and two dead soldiers. Take the Ebony Claw they were carrying. This holds the key to opening this puzzle.

► Ebony Claw

Puzzle Solution: The door consists of three “rings” that rotate when you activate them. Each has three animals plated into the structure. You unlock the central keyhole with the Ebony Claw. This puzzle is inaccessible without it. The puzzle solution is on the palm of the Ebony Claw; rotate it in your inventory to see the three circular petroglyph carvings on the Claw’s palm. Move the rings so the Wolf, Moth, and Dragon appear on the outer, middle, and inner rings, respectively. Then insert the Ebony Claw into the keyhole.

Venture through the rumbling door and through connecting corridors into the guardian hall chamber. To the west is a portcullis preventing you from reaching the exit door. Simply head to the chamber’s northwest corner, into the passage that winds up, past an Iron Dagger on a plinth. Cross a stone bridge to a balcony with a chest. Of more importance is the handle on the northwest corner of this balcony, overlooking the chamber below. Pull the handle to raise the portcullis, and then drop down to aid the Legate as four or five Draugr clamber out of their tombs to stop you. Now enter the crypt.

After a few more winding passages, you find Korvanjund’s deepest chamber—the ceremonial crypt of a long-dead Jarl. Approach the slumped Draugr sitting on the throne in the middle of the chamber. Two guardians climb out of the tombs that flank the throne, prompting a vicious battle between the Imperials and Draugr.

When the combat ends, pry the crown off the Draugr that sat on the throne. With the Bone Crown in your inventory, you can return to General Tullius. Before you leave, continue past the throne, heading south to a Word Wall, and absorb another Word of Power! Then climb the steps to the east, back into the temple. Remove the door bar, and exit Korvanjund by this quicker route. Leave the Legate to finish her search, and head back to Solitude.

► Bone Crown ► Word of Power: Slow Time

◆ OBJECTIVE: Deliver the crown to General Tullius
◆ TARGET: General Tullius, inside Castle Dour, in Solitude

Quest Conclusion

Enter Castle Dour and locate General Tullius, who is weighing his options regarding a possible attack on Winterhold. Inform him that you have the Jagged Crown. You can ask him about the war as well. The General then wonders if there’s someone he can trust to deliver a message of great import to Jarl Balgruuf of Whiterun.

Postquest Activities

This prompts the immediate start of Civil War Quest: Message to Whiterun.

MESSAGE TO WHITERUN

PREREQUISITES: Complete Civil War Quest: The Jagged Crown

INTERSECTING QUESTS: Civil War Quest: The Jagged Crown, Main Quest: Bleak Falls Barrow, Main Quest: Dragon Rising, Civil War Quest: Defense of Whiterun

LOCATIONS: Solitude, Castle Dour, Whiterun, Dragonsreach, Windhelm, Palace of the Kings

CHARACTERS: General Tullius, Hrongar, Imperial Soldier, Irileth, Jarl Balgruuf the Greater, Legate Quentin Cypius, Lydia, Proventus Avenicci, Jarl Ulfric Stormcloak, Galmar Stone-Fist

ENEMIES: None

◆ OBJECTIVES: Deliver message to the Jarl of Whiterun, Assist Jarl Balgruuf with the dragon threat, Wait for the Jarl’s response, Deliver axe to Jarl Ulfric, Return to Whiterun and warn the Jarl, Report to Legate Quentin Cypius

Make your way past the Whiterun Stables and then up the long, slow climb, over the drawbridge, and to the main Whiterun gate. As you approach, a guard stops you; the city is closed, with the news of the dragons spreading faster than you can travel. You can:

Tell the guard that Riverwood calls for the Jarl’s aid. This is the optimal plan and is available only if Main Quest: Before the Storm is active.

(Persuade) Or you can tell the guard you have news from Helgen about the dragon attack.

(Bribe) Or bribe the guard with a proportion of your collected gold.

(Intimidate) Or order the guard to stand aside.

Once you’re inside the walls of Whiterun, head north, to the top of the hill on which the city sits, past the Gildergreen tree and the Shrine to Talos. Climb the stone steps to discover Dragonsreach, home of the Jarl. Walk toward the huge central fire on either side of the banqueting tables. Irileth, Jarl Balgruuf’s Housecarl, meets you. Explain that you have a message from General Tullius, and she immediately lets you past. You can converse with her at length if you wish, or offer other responses with the Main Quest active, but mentioning the General’s name allows you to progress more quickly.

► Dilemma at Whiterun

Immediately after congratulating you on locating the Bone Crown, General Tullius explains that reports indicate Ulfric Stormcloak has raised enough men to attack the city of Whiterun. However, the headstrong Jarl is refusing Imperial support. Tullius hands you a missive, with information that ought to convince the Jarl to receive Imperial help. He requests that you don’t read the missive but hand it over to the Jarl as soon as possible.

► Imperial Documents

◆ OBJECTIVE: Deliver message to the Jarl of Whiterun

◆ TARGET: Jarl Balgruuf of Whiterun, in Dragonsreach

Approach the Jarl and inform him that you have a message from General Tullius. His responses are dictated by the current situation regarding the dragons returning to Skyrim and how far through the Main Quest you have progressed.

At this point, you must have completed both Main Quest: Bleak Falls Barrow and Main Quest: Dragon Rising, then returned to the Jarl, heard the call of the Greybeards, and received your Housecarl, Lydia.

If you have not completed these two quests, you must do so. Refer to the Main Quest for all relevant information.

You can deliver the Imperial Documents before beginning Main Quest: Bleak Falls Barrow. The Jarl pockets the documents and ponders them while you finish your Main Quests.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Assist Jarl Balgruuf with the dragon threat

Once the joviality over the dragon's defeat at the Western Watchtower has subsided, approach the Jarl and ask him about the message from the General. He asks for his steward, Proventus Avenicci, and his Housecarl, Irileth, to comment on these matters.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Wait for the Jarl's response

Avenicci recommends a wait-and-see approach to the perceived threat of Ulfric. Irileth believes it is time to act, while the Jarl wishes to challenge Ulfric to face him as a man and declare his intentions. Avenicci favors a garrison of Imperials, while Irileth deems this to be cowardly. You can interrupt this back-and-forth or let the Jarl conclude. The results are the same: The Jarl has a message for you to deliver to the Jarl of Windhelm, Ulfric Stormcloak. He gives you an axe. Ulfric will get the symbology, although you can ask the Jarl for more information.

► Balgruuf's War Axe

◆ OBJECTIVE: Deliver axe to Jarl Ulfric

◆ TARGET: Ulfric Stormcloak, Palace of the Kings, in Windhelm

◆ Axed

Journey east to the magnificent stone city of Windhelm, the stronghold for the Stormcloaks. Enter the massive city gates and head north to the Palace of the Kings. Pass the huge banquet table and find Ulfric Stormcloak.

He is usually sitting on his throne or strategizing in his war room (to the west) with his trusted brethren Galmar Stone-Fist. Tell Ulfric you bring a message from the Jarl of Whiterun. You have many other conversations you can attempt with Ulfric that bring you up to speed with the Stormcloaks' plans and wishes for the Civil War. But more important is Ulfric's response. He deems you brave to carry such a message and says it is a pity you've chosen the wrong side. You are to return to the Jarl of Whiterun and tell him to prepare to entertain...visitors.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Whiterun and warn the Jarl

Assassinating Ulfric: While this may sound like a good idea, it is extremely bad in practice, as the man cannot be killed by your hands at the moment, and combat in Windhelm provokes an overwhelming and hostile response. Exercise diplomacy before the hated Stormcloaks receive a taste of your blade! CAUTION

Atop the steps behind the Jarl's throne is a conference of war planning. A second Legate, named Quentin Cypius, has received information from a soldier that the enemy has catapults and intends to arm them with fire and take the city with the walls intact. As you approach the Jarl, he suspected Ulfric's response and sent word to General Tullius, who lent a detachment of troops and Legate Cypius. The Jarl turns you over to the Legion for your next orders.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Report to Legate Quentin Cypius

Quest Conclusion

Speak with Legate Cypius. The forces of both Imperials and Stormcloaks are gathering at the gates. You are to move there and hold this city!

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Meet with Legate Rikke

- ◆ TARGET: Legate Rikke, main entrance gate of Whiterun

Legate Quentin Cippius tells you to get down to Whiterun's main gate and repel those filthy Stormcloak attackers! Your rendezvous is with Legate Rikke, whom you should seek out immediately. You find her watching over the main gate to the city, giving a stirring speech to the assembled troops on the path below. She tells you this is an important day for the Empire and for all of Skyrim. You now have one important task: the defense of Whiterun!

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Defend the barricades

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Destroy attackers

Defensive Stratagems: Defend and Destroy!

You are now engaged in an all-out siege of Whiterun. This battle is lengthy and confusing, and you can easily become a casualty rather than a champion of this war. However, the following tactics should help minimize your risks as you become embroiled in this skirmish.

Ally: Imperial Soldier

Ally: Whiterun Guard

Enemy: Stormcloak Soldier

Know Your Enemy: In the midst of battle, it sometimes becomes confusing who you should be fighting. There are three distinctive forces fighting for control of Whiterun. You are sided with the Imperials, who are clad in armor with red tunics and carry mainly swords. Also present are Whiterun Guards, who are allies, wear orange tunics, and carry the sign of the horse on their shields. The enemy are clad in dark blue and are more prone to use axes.

The Defensive Area: This battle takes place between the outer gate (atop which Legate Rikke was standing), the middle drawbridge (which cannot be raised), and the inner gate (the last line of defense). Focus your attacks on and around the cobblestone path running from the outer gate and around to the drawbridge. There is no need to retreat farther into the fortifications than this.

Falling Back: Even with the most proficient defense of the outer gate, expect the fierce enemies to break through the wooden barricades and start pouring into the cobblestone area. Hold your ground here. Fleeing around the bend to the drawbridge means you can't see the enemies coming and thwart them, leaving your brethren to do all the proper fighting. You're Dragonborn, not Skeeveborn, right?

NOTE Technically, you can run away. Whether you're just watching or you're running for the hills, when the battle is over, the Imperials are still victorious. However, don't expect any rewards from General Tullius for your cowardice!

Call to Action: Your first task is to stop the enemy from breaking through the barricade at the outer gate. Achieve this by employing one or more of the following melee or ranged techniques:

Melee: Stand at the barricade, leaping over it to engage the enemy and leaping back again.

Melee: Standing in cover to the left (east) between the outer wall and rocks and ambushing foes who reach the barricade.

Melee: Standing atop the wall and dropping down to engage the enemy who roam the area just in front of the barricade.

Ranged: Firing down from the left (east) corner atop the outer wall, by the gap.

Ranged: Firing down from the gap in the middle of the outer wall.

Ranged: Firing down from the right (west) wooden guard tower.

Ranged: Firing from ground level, behind the barricades.

Ranged: Firing from cover at the edge of Pelagia Farm to the south, which offers a good view of the main path.

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Defend the drawbridge

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Defend the main gate

- ◆ TARGET: Occurs if you fail to defend the barricades

Last Line of Defense: When and if the enemy breaks through, you must fall back to the cobblestone path with the stream running across it, prior to the winding corner and drawbridge. The enemy now appears at the outer gate, both on and under it. Try the following attacks:

Melee: Strike the foes as they pass through the outer gate, standing to either side of the gate, on ground level.

Melee: Stand at the bridge over the stream; the foes are funneled into this area as they race up the path.

Ranged: From the outer gate, above the foes as they run below, on any part of the gate or west wooden guard tower.

Ranged: Retreat to and fire from the northwestern guard tower; this offers excellent views of the path.

Ranged: From the rocky path above and north of the cobblestones, allowing you to hit foes across the entire defensive area.

Ranged: From the wooden and stone walkway above the stream.

Ranged: From the upper parapets directly above the wooden and stone walkway, near the drawbridge.

TIP Stormcloak forces are sneaky and may appear behind or above you, despite a solid defense of the outer gate. Clear these stragglers as you spot them. Also, don't worry about hitting every single foe; just continuously hit enemies, charging (or firing) at them and dispatching them. The percentage of enemy forces eventually drops to zero.

Unsound Tactics: You are behind a defensive wall and barricades for a reason; only the most foolhardy warriors would leave these defenses to engage the enemy out in the open, in the Whiterun Stables area, unless absolutely necessary. Let the enemy come to you; that way you minimize the foes passing you by and cut down on stamina-sapping chases.

CAUTION

Your offensive measures against the enemy may be dangerous for your allies if you rely too heavily on area-of-effect magic or wild swinging of weapons (particularly of the two-handed variety). Watch your collateral damage!

Continue the battle until the main threat of Stormcloaks has abated. There may be a few remaining enemies, and you can dispatch them if you wish, but this isn't necessary.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Report to the Jarl of Whiterun

◆ TARGET: Jarl of Whiterun, at the main gate in Whiterun

Quest Conclusion

The Jarl is speaking to the surviving forces from the parapets of the successfully defended Whiterun. You must revel in your victory today! But as you celebrate, know that Ulfric will continue to strike out against any true Nord, sowing discord and chaos wherever he can. As for your role in this? General Tullius requires your presence for further battles. The Jarl will reward you for your exceptional and continued heroism in defense of Whiterun.

The Empire Rewards Excellence

◆ OBJECTIVE: Report to General Tullius

◆ TARGET: General Tullius, in Castle Dour in Solitude

Return to Castle Dour in Solitude and speak with General Tullius. Due to the actions at Whiterun, the Jarl has solidified his allegiance to the Imperials. For your actions, the General promotes you to the title of Quaestor. He also awards you with an impressive weapon. Ask what your orders are, and the General tells you to head to a hidden camp within the Pale. Legate Rikke has important tasks for you there as the General makes plans to reclaim the Hold capital.

► Levelled Sword

◆ REUNIFICATION OF SKYRIM BEGINS

◆ OBJECTIVE: Regain the Pale

◆ TARGET: Legate Rikke, Pale Imperial Camp

NOTE You could have stumbled upon this camp during your exploration of Skyrim. All Imperial Camps across Skyrim are now revealed and are indicated by the dragon crest icon on your world map.

Journey to the Pale Imperial Camp, in the snow-laden hills to the west of Dawnstar. Aside from a Quartermaster and a Grindstone to help augment your weaponry, there's an Alchemy Lab near the hospital tent, and troops to speak to.

However, the Legate's tent is the place to visit, where Rikke is pouring over the current Civil War map. She may have her disagreements with the General, but she believes he's the best hope for both the Empire and Skyrim. Report for duty, and she says she needs you to deliver some false orders to the Stormcloak commander in Dawnstar. Before that happens, though, forgeries must be made, so you must get your hands on some rebel orders. Rikke informs you that the Candlehearth Hall and Nightgate Inn are frequent stops for Stormcloak runners. Head to one of those places and convince the innkeeper to help you.

◆ A FALSE FRONT BEGINS

◆ OBJECTIVE: Find the Stormcloak Courier

◆ TARGET: Barkeep of Nightgate Inn or Candlehearth Hall

◆ Interception and Deception

There are two inns that Legate Rikke mentioned: The Nightgate Inn is along the road to the west of Windhelm and is operated by Hadrung. The Candlehearth Hall is inside Windhelm and has an innkeeper named Elda Early-Dawn. Journey to either of these locations and ask the innkeeper if they've seen any Stormcloak Couriers. After an evasive response, you can:

(Persuade) Warn that the courier's life is in danger.

(Bribe) Offer some gold for the information.

(Intimidate) Mention that you can get rough if you need to.

Or, wait around in the inn.

If you succeed in any of the first three options, the barkeep tells you that the courier just left and that you can probably still catch him. Or, you can wait in the inn for the courier to return. The courier is halfway between both the inns on the main road. Even if you're unsuccessful, you can still run after or wait for the courier (the only difference is the objective won't update); either way, you must visit one of the inns before finding the courier.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Retrieve the Stormcloak Courier's package

◆ TARGET: Courier, inside or between either inn

The courier travels to and from each inn. He loiters at the inn for an hour, sleeps there for an hour, and then heads back to the other inn. He then repeats this route until you intercept him, either by waiting inside the inn or finding him on the road. At this point, you have a three options:

(Pickpocket) Pickpocket the documents while the courier is unaware.

Or, speak to the courier, demanding the documents. He refuses and you must kill him.

Or, simply kill the courier and loot the corpse for the documents.

Watch out! Killing the courier when he's inside Windhelm or the Candlehearth Hall or watched by Windhelm Guards results in you being discovered. If you're trying violence, meet him on the road, where his death doesn't arouse suspicion, or inside the Nightgate Inn, where Hadrung is less concerned about such slaughter.

CAUTION

► Stormcloak Documents

◆ OBJECTIVE: Bring the documents to Legate Rikke

◆ TARGET: Legate Rikke, Hidden Imperial Camp in the Pale

After returning to Legate Rikke, she reads the documents, noting the Stormcloaks know more about the Imperial plans than was expected. She "corrects" the documents with false information and orders you to present them to the Stormcloak Commander in Dawnstar, throwing him off the trail.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Bring the forged documents to Forkmar Banner-Torn

◆ TARGET: Forkmar Banner-Torn, Dawnstar Barracks in Dawnstar

Quest Conclusion

You'll usually find the Commander inside Dawnstar Barracks, inside the Hold City of Dawnstar, although he sometimes walks the paths around the city. Present some important documents to him. He reads over them, noting the troop movements (which are false) and rewarding you with a little gold for a drink at the Windpeak Inn for your troubles. This quest now concludes.

► 5 gold pieces

TIP There's no need to change from your Imperial garb when you meet Forkmar; you quickly make up a verbal ruse that it's easier to "sneak past the enemy" clad in their colors.

◆ REUNIFICATION OF SKYRIM CONTINUES

◆ TARGET: Legate Rikke, Pale Imperial Camp

NOTE Civil War Quest: Reunification of Skyrim continues throughout the remaining Civil War Quests. Within the Reunification Quest is a series of concurrent quests that build to complete the reunification as you take over a series of Stormcloak Holds. This quest is available immediately after Civil War Quest: A False Front ends.

Travel to the Pale Imperial Camp, where Legate Rikke congratulates you, giving you a reward of gold. Report for duty, and she says your next objective is Fort Dunstad. You are to meet the soldiers preparing for the attack, and then wipe out the rebel garrison. Agree to the task, and the quest commences.

► 150 gold pieces

◆ THE BATTLE FOR FORT DUNSTAD BEGINS

◆ OBJECTIVE: Join the men attacking Fort Dunstad

◆ TARGET: On the road, southeast of Fort Dunstad

Fort Dunstad is in the snowy Pale Mountains south of Dawnstar. Legate Rikke's men are on the path to the fort's southeast, so approaching from the northwest can fail this objective (although this has no effect on the quest). Circle around and join the detachment of Imperial forces stationed close to the fortification. After checking the Atlas entry of this place (page 755) and speaking to the leader of the forces, begin the attack from either side.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Take over Fort Dunstad by killing the enemy

Assault the fortification and help eliminate all the Stormcloak Soldiers. Enter from one of the following weak points or fortified positions:

North wall: The wooden bailey and guard tower is weak, as the gates are open.

Pour in through here. The guard towers north and south are good for long-range attacks.

North walkways and palisades: These are a great way to gain access to the fort's upper areas. Stay close to the wall here; this gives you cover from the enemy archers as you ascend.

East wall: You can leap atop the low wooden post by the snowbank and tree, allowing you to climb over. The large rocky outcrops that dwarf the fort are an excellent place from which to fire long-range attacks (as shown above).

Walkways and run-down tavern: Head to these locations if you need to retreat and rest or heal from battle before attacking again.

South wall: The wooden bailey and guard tower is weak, as the gates are open. Head in through here and up onto the main crenellations via the wooden steps or through the archway.

West wall: This curved stone wall is completely impenetrable, except for a missing top-wall section to the northwest; however, even this is almost impossible to breach.

An archer's attack: Attempt to quickly reach the top of the Commander's quarters on the fort's southwestern edge; it provides the optimal high ground with excellent views of most of the fort.

Prison tower: The top of this tower is another great place to snipe from but is a little too high above the action to provide adequate support.

When you've won the battle and humiliated the enemies, the Imperial forces remain to garrison this location. Meanwhile, you have other plans.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Report to General Tullius

◆ TARGET: General Tullius, Castle Dour in Solitude

Quest Conclusion

Return to Castle Dour and inform Tullius of your victory. This captures the Hold of the Pale and gives the Imperial Legion control of another port. Your prowess has impressed the General, and he raises your title to that of Praefect. Take the earned weapon as a gift and symbol of this new rank. You're instructed to meet Legate Rikke again; she's planning some surprises for Ulfric in the Rift.

NOTE This title may change if you ran away from Whiterun or gained a Hold from a peace treaty during Main Quest: Season Unending.

LOCATIONS: Riften, Mistveil Keep, Rift Imperial Camp, Shor's Watchtower

CHARACTERS: Anuriel, Hadvar, Imperial Soldier, Jarl Laila Law-Giver, Legate Rikke, Quartermaster, Riften Guard, Unmid Snow-Shod

ENEMIES: Stormcloak Soldier (Enemy)

◆ OBJECTIVES: Reunification of Skyrim: Regain the Rift, Compelling Tribute: Find evidence, Compelling Tribute: Blackmail Anuriel, Compelling Tribute: Report to Legate Rikke, Compelling Tribute: Meet the Men, Compelling Tribute: Follow Hadvar and ambush enemy scout, Compelling Tribute: Take over the caravan, Compelling Tribute: Report to Hadvar

Approach the Jarl. Unmid Snow-Shod immediately requests that you maintain a respectable distance from the Jarl. If you're simply wandering the Keep, it is not necessary to speak with those surrounding the Jarl, including Anuriel or Laila Law-Giver. Finding evidence is your top priority.

Watch out for a patrolling guard en route to Anuriel's room. He calls you out as a trespasser if he spots you. Time his patrol so you avoid him.

CAUTION

◆ Anuriel's Gold

◆ OBJECTIVE: Regain the Rift

◆ TARGET: Legate Rikke, Rift Imperial Camp

Legate Rikke has set up a hidden Imperial Camp on the southwestern edge of the Rift (below the snowline), which has the same benefits as the one in the Pale, including one, two, or three wounded soldiers inside the hospital tent.

Report in with Legate Rikke, and she orders you to Riften. Her spies are reporting that the Jarl's Steward, Anuriel, has arrangements with the Thieves Guild that could be embarrassing if they were made public. You must try to find evidence of this and present it to her, using it to gain cooperation. This requires both stealth and discretion.

◆ CIVIL WAR QUEST: Compelling Tribute begins

◆ OBJECTIVE: Find evidence

◆ TARGET: Anuriel's bedroom, inside Mistveil Keep in Riften

Journey to Riften and locate the mighty Mistveil Keep at the city's southern end. Step through the front doors into the Jarl's chamber, complete with a splendid banqueting table and a variety of foodstuffs.

The evidence is located in Anuriel's bedroom, which is behind the Jarl's throne and to the right (northeast). The doors are unlocked, and the information is hidden inside a dresser. You can reach this area without drawing attention to yourself in a few different ways:

(Sneak) You can sneak into the chamber, preferably after dark when the banqueting hall is empty.

(Spells) You can cast Invisibility, or some other spell that diminishes the chances of you being seen.

Or you can slowly, and without weapons drawn, enter the banqueting hall and head immediately to Anuriel's bedroom.

Once you reach the dresser, extricate the following:

► Incriminating Letter

◆ OBJECTIVE: Blackmail Anuriel

Locate Anuriel within the Keep, and show her the incriminating letter. She quickly requests that you meet her in private. Stay close to her so the guards don't stop you. She takes you into her chamber, where she asks what kind of extortion racket you're running. Ask her what would happen if the letter was made public, and Anuriel folds, explaining Jarl Laila is a simple and easily manipulatable woman, and she can't risk the backlash. She asks to come to some agreement, wondering if both of you could prosper. Ask her what agreement she has in mind, and she mentions a large shipment of gold and weapons the Stormcloaks are transporting. You can:

(Persuade) Ask about receiving some additional payment for yourself.

Agree to the deal and ask where this shipment is.

If your persuasion works, you receive a large purse of coins. Either way, you must confirm the agreement. She reveals the Stormcloaks are taking this booty by wagon to Windhelm. If you hurry, you can catch them before they get too far.

► Levelled gold pieces

◆ OBJECTIVE: Report to Legate Rikke

◆ TARGET: Legate Rikke, Rift Imperial Camp

Head back to the hidden camp and tell Rikke about the shipment of coin. Coincidentally, she already has a small group of scouts on the same road that the enemy caravan is traveling. You are to meet up with them and try to overpower the wagon's guards.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Meet the men

◆ TARGET: On the road close to Shor's Watchtower, the Rift

Hadvar's Heroes

Judging by your world map, the scouts are waiting on the road just below Shor's Watchtower, in the Rift's northeast corner. Travel there, watching out if you're approaching from the north, or you'll run into the Stormcloak caravan without any help from the scouts. Approach along the road from the south, heading north past Shor's Stone. Meet an old friend as the path winds through the trees. Hadvar greets you. At this point, you have two choices to make.

Plan A: Hadvar's Help

Chat with Hadvar, answering any way you wish. Steer the conversation back to your mission and explain the enemy wagon loaded with coin and weapons is farther down this slope. As luck would have it, Hadvar has been tracking the wagon, which has lost an axle and is stranded. Although you're outnumbered (there are six foes), Hadvar has a plan: His troops will remove the enemy sentry, then situate themselves overlooking the camp. Afterward, you'll infiltrate their position, gain their attention, and Hadvar's troops will unleash a volley of arrows, winning the day tactically. Agree to this plan.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Follow Hadvar and ambush enemy scout

◆ OBJECTIVE: Take over the caravan

Crouch and follow Hadvar, watching as his bowmen drop the enemy scout. Wait for them to reach the rise overlooking the broken-down caravan below, and then walk toward the enemies. Sneaking, firing from range, or rushing to attack are all excellent ideas, while your brethren shoot arrows down on them from above.

Plan B: Hadvar's a Hindrance

Chat with Hadvar, then either refuse to go along with his plan or ignore him altogether.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Take over the caravan

Head down the hill and begin to battle the six Stormcloaks guarding the caravan of gold. Begin with the sentry atop the rocks overlooking the caravan. Then rain death from above with ranged attacks, or swarm the foes with melee weapons. A couple of enemy soldiers may be sleeping, so carve them up before they fully wake.

◆ TIP If this fight starts to overwhelm you, flee up the hill toward Hadvar, and his men help by mopping up any enemies giving chase. Then rest and return to tackle any stragglers.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Report to Hadvar

Quest Conclusion

With the caravan's guards removed, Hadvar remains here to guard the gold. Speak to him to end the quest. Loot any weapons and gold you wish from the wagon.

Travel to the Rift Imperial Camp, and you're congratulated by Legate Rikke. Report for duty, and she says your next objective is Fort Greenwall. You are to meet the soldiers waiting near the fort for the attack orders, and then wipe out the Stormcloaks inside. Agree to the task and the quest commences.

➤ 150 gold pieces

◆ THE BATTLE FOR FORT GREENWALL BEGINS

◆ OBJECTIVE: Join the men attacking Fort Greenwall

◆ TARGET: On the road, northwest of Fort Greenwall

Fort Greenwall is in the leafy woodland north of Riften. Legate Rikke's men are on the path to the fort's northwest, so approaching from the southeast can fail this objective (but not the quest). Join the detachment of Imperial forces stationed close to the fortification. After studying the Atlas entry of this place (page 958) and conversing with the leader, commence the battle, attacking from either side.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Take over Fort Greenwall by killing the enemy

Assault the fortification and help eliminate all the Stormcloak Soldiers. Enter from one of the following weak points or fortified positions, and note the impenetrable parts of the outer walls:

Southeast long

wall: Southern end has a collapsed wall section that you can easily leap through. The middle entrance (on the road) is heavily guarded with barricades; you can maneuver easily around it.

Northwest long wall: The middle entrance (on the road) has numerous barricades, which are easily navigated around.

Southwest edge: Completely impenetrable.

Northeast edge: Completely impenetrable.

Whirlwind Sprint: If you've learned this Shout during Main Quest: The Way of the Voice, you can actually dash into this structure from the hills next to the western wall.

Greenwall Cave: Access this from under the rocky outcrop just northeast of the fort. This brings you up into the center of the fort's exterior, past the battlements, and is a good way to sneak in. Although this route allows you to slip past the enemy before your troops arrive, allowing you to bring down the barricades immediately, it is risky. Try running across the courtyard to the stairs next to the stable to gain the high ground, as you'll be right in the middle of the enemy!

Heading higher: The small courtyard on the ground is easily clustered and jammed with the influx of friends and foes. Escape this danger by heading east or west right away to the fort's higher edges. However, if you're a mage with area-effect spells, this courtyard is the place to lay waste to the enemy!

When you are victorious and the enemies routed, the Imperial forces remain to garrison this location. Meanwhile, you have other tasks to complete.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Report to General Tullius

◆ TARGET: General Tullius, Castle Dour in Solitude

Quest Conclusion

Return to Castle Dour and inform Tullius of your victory. This captures the Hold of the Rift and gives Ulfric reason to be concerned, what with the Empire so close to his doorstep. Head up the rugged terrain of rocks and snow (Fast-Traveling from Nightgate Inn or Windhelm and then sprinting to meet your men are quick options, but without getting close enough to alert the enemy). You'll encounter a small team of four men. One of them is your old friend Hadvar, who has already had a reconnoiter of Fort Kastav, which appears particularly large and well defended in the distance, partly due to the mountain slopes keeping raiders away from the walls. However, there is a grate on the outside of the wall. It used to be buried in snow, and Hadvar reckons the enemy doesn't even know it's there. You must sneak in there, free the prisoners, and kill anyone you meet. Hadvar will wait to rush the fort as soon as they hear fighting, and you'll rendezvous in the courtyard. At this point, inform Hadvar that you're on it and begin the sneak.

A Hard Fort Struggle

◆ REUNIFICATION OF SKYRIM CONTINUES

◆ OBJECTIVE: Regain Winterhold Hold

◆ TARGET: Legate Rikke, Winterhold Imperial Camp

TIP Stop! Before you return to Legate Rikke and begin this quest, study the Atlas entry for Fort Kastav (page 793).

Journey to Legate Rikke's newly established forward-operating base, just to the west of Dawnstar on the edge of Winterhold Hold. This camp has the same benefits as the one in the Rift. Report in with Legate Rikke, and she has your orders. You must infiltrate Fort Kastav, as the rebels are keeping some Imperial soldiers prisoner there. She aims to turn that into an advantage by using your cunning to find a way inside, free the men, and liberate the fort. This is an attack from the inside!

◆ CIVIL WAR QUEST: Rescue from Fort Kastav begins

◆ OBJECTIVE: Meet the men near Fort Kastav

◆ TARGET: Mountains southwest of Fort Kastav

◆ OBJECTIVE: Sneak into the fort

Or, tell Hadvar you aren't interested in sneaking. At this point, you can take a direct (and more dangerous) approach: assault the fort via the main entrance and battle down to the prisoners inside. This is possible but isn't recommended, as it's slightly more risky.

CAUTION

The Enemy Within

Instead, crouch and begin heading along the snow-filled gully toward the fortification. You may wish to wait until after nightfall to minimize the enemy spotting you. Travel the gully's right (south) side, navigate easily around the barricades, pass the base of the stone tower, and follow the earthen bank until you spot a slope you can climb up, near three planks of snow-covered wood. Turn right, step over another small wooden bridge, and open the trapdoor leading to Fort Kastav Prison.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Free the prisoners

The Elder Scrolls V

SKYRIM

QUESTS: CIVIL WAR QUESTS: IMPERIAL

Head east, open the wooden door, turn right (south), and pass the barrels. Turn left and enter a two-floor entrance hall with steps to the north. Ignore the stairs and continue heading east, through another door to the cobwebbed staircase. Bring down a Stormcloak Soldier quickly (or sneak past them). The prison is at the bottom of the stairs, and another Stormcloak Soldier is patrolling this area. The Imperial Soldiers inform you that the guard has the key. If your Lockpick skill isn't to be tested, inspect the Stormcloak Soldier's corpse, or search one of the tables near the jail cells for it. Head to each of the cells and unlock the door (Novice). The freed men quickly don their armor and follow your lead.

► Fort Kastav Prison Key

◆ OBJECTIVE: Take over the fort

◆ TARGET: All remaining Stormcloak Soldiers

Sprint north up the steps, and once back in the entrance hall, drop any Stormcloaks who seek to thwart you. Head up the steps to the door that leads into the exterior courtyard. Begin slaughtering the additional forces guarding the outside of the fort. They usually stream in from the upper slopes to the northeast. The numerous gaps in the walls allows you to hide and dart out if you're engaging in longer ranged attacks or needing to rest between Stamina exertions.

Don't forget the enemies on the guard tower to the northeast. When everyone wearing dark blue is dead, report back to Hadvar. You're to report to General Tullius while he remains here to tidy up the mess.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Report to General Tullius

◆ TARGET: General Tullius, Castle Dour in Solitude

Quest Conclusion

Trek back to Castle Dour and inform Tullius of your victory. Now that Winterhold's main fortress is in Imperial control, the General can garrison some troops until he's ready to march on Windhelm. General Tullius has come to rely heavily upon you and elevates your rank in the Legion to that of Legate. Along with this, you receive a leveled weapon. Ask the General what the next plan is. ◆ OBJECTIVE: Regain Eastmarch

◆ TARGET: Legate Rikke, Eastmarch Imperial Camp

Trek to the rocky pine forests on Eastmarch's eastern edge, at the foot of the Velothi Mountains, just north of Stony Creek Cave. Head into the Legate's tent and speak with her. She says your objective is an enemy-held fort. You are to meet the soldiers waiting nearby for the attack orders, and then wipe out the Stormcloaks inside. Agree to the task, and the quest commences.

◆ THE BATTLE FOR FORT AMOL BEGINS

◆ OBJECTIVE: Join the men attacking Fort Amol

◆ TARGET: On the road, west of Fort Amol

Fort Amol is in a clearing adjacent to the main road on three sides. Darkwater River is to the east. If you approach the fort from the northeast, you may attract the enemy's attention and commence the battle before your friends can mount an attack with you. Instead, take the road from Morthal and meet up with your fellow conscripts on the ridge south of the fort. If you want help with the assault, join the Imperial Soldiers creeping up on the fort. After studying the Atlas entry of this place (page 889) and conversing with the leader, commence the battle.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Take over Fort Amol by killing the enemy

Charge the fortification, and help eliminate all the Stormcloak Soldiers. Enter from one of the following weak points or fortified positions:

North Wall: Rocky terrain and high buttressed walls offer no access points.

East Wall: There's a gaping hole just north of the tower, offering easy access into the center of the fort.

South Wall: You can climb the crumbling wall area to the southwest and can breach the outer defenses.

West Wall: The main road into the fort has barricades and a main archway. This is where your allies usually break through.

Tower Trouble: When you enter the fort, you may elect to fire down on foes from above by scaling either of the towers and sniping from this vantage point.

Quest Conclusion

When the fort falls to the Imperials, your forces remain to garrison this location.

◆ REUNIFICATION OF SKYRIM CONTINUES

◆ OBJECTIVE: Regain Eastmarch

◆ TARGET: Legate Rikke, Eastmarch Imperial Camp

Postquest Activities

Civil War Quest: Reunification of Skyrim is almost over. Civil War Quest: Battle for Windhelm begins shortly.

Return to the Eastmarch Imperial Camp and speak with Legate Rikke. She is extremely pleased with your progress and rewards you accordingly. Then she tells you that a detachment from the Imperial Army is gathering to attack Windhelm, and you're part of it!

➤ 150 gold pieces

◆ BATTLE FOR WINDHELM BEGINS

◆ OBJECTIVE: Get your orders from General Tullius

◆ TARGET: Great gate of Windhelm

Travel to the bridge spanning the confluence of the Darkwater and Yorgim rivers; this leads to the great gate of Windhelm. The flame catapults are already bombarding the embattled city in huge gobs of fire, and the air is thick with smoke and panic. Rush north through the wreckage to the towering gate, where General Tullius is yelling words of encouragement to his forces. This is the time to deliver the final blow to the Stormcloak Rebellion! Expect an enemy both fierce and crafty. For the Empire! For the Legion!

◆ OBJECTIVE: Take over Windhelm by killing the enemy

The Windhelm Scream

◆ REUNIFICATION OF SKYRIM CONTINUES

Confirming Metal and Mettle

Off the edge of Winterhold Hold, within the frigid waters of the Sea of Ghosts north of Windhelm and northwest of the Wreck of the Pride of Tel Vos, is the eerie calm of countless ice and rock formations. Among them is Serpentstone Isle.

Wade to the north side for easier access up to the cluster of standing stones, guarded by an Ice Wraith. Engage this vicious beast in combat, killing it with your preferred weapon. Search it, as its essence is valuable. Then check the sign of the Serpent if you want its ranged paralyzing poison attribute in place of your current blessing (assuming you have one).

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to Galmar

◆ OBJECTIVE: Take the oath

Quest Conclusion

Head back to the Palace of the Kings, where Galmar tells judges that you're definitely Stormcloak material. He says that it is time to officially join the Stormcloak Rebellion. Tell Galmar you're ready and agree to recite this oath:

"I do swear my blood and honor to the service of Ulfric Stormcloak, Jarl of Windhelm and true High King of Skyrim. As Talos is my witness, may this oath bind me to death and beyond, even to my lord as to my fellow brothers and sisters in arms. All hail the Stormcloaks, the true sons and daughters of Skyrim!"

◆ NOTE If you forgo this oath, you can journey to Solitude instead and complete Civil War Quest: Joining the Legion as well. Do this if you're unsure where your allegiance yet lies.

Postquest Activities

You are now one of the Stormcloaks, given the title Unblooded, and are ready to prove your worth to Galmar and Ulfric. Galmar Stone-Fist hands you the proper attire, which you can wear, discard, or sell as you please. He also has your next assignment: Civil War Quest: The Jagged Crown.

➤ Footwraps

➤ Hide Helmet

➤ Stormcloak

➤ Fur Boots

➤ Stormcloak Cuirass

Before the Rebellion: Unending Brotherhood

◆ NOTE The following quest assumes you pick a side in the Civil War and stick with them. Consult the introduction to these quests to see when you can switch sides (the last possible moment is at the end of Civil War Quest: The Jagged Crown). If you side with the Imperial Legion, consult the Civil War Quest: Joining the Legion, on page 349. Although the Civil War rages on, it affects your adventure only if you let it by completing this series of quests.

After escaping from underneath the battlements of the burning town of Helgen and watching the dragon responsible for disrupting your execution, talk to Ralof. He tells you he's headed to Riverwood and asks if you want to accompany him. As you progress down the hillside, he recommends you head to Windhelm and join the Stormcloaks.

◆ MISCELLANEOUS OBJECTIVE: Join the Stormcloak Rebellion

◆ TARGET: Palace of the Kings, in Windhelm

◆ TIP Did you miss Ralof's request? Then greet any Stormcloak Soldier (clad in dark blue tunics), or visit any Stormcloak Camp in Skyrim, and you'll usually receive an offer to join the cause.

Trek to the main fortification of the Stormcloaks in Skyrim—the stone city of Windhelm perched by a confluence of rivers. As you enter, racial tensions are bubbling under the surface, with Nords and Dark Elves living an uneasy existence close to each other. Continue into Windhelm, past the Candlehearth Hall, and step into the impressive courtyard. Beyond lies the Palace of the Kings, within Windhelm's walls. Check the throne at the far end of the huge banqueting table, or head west into the strategy planning room, where Jarl Ulfric Stormcloak and Galmar Stone-Fist are shouting about the war effort. Galmar is telling Ulfric that the Empire is putting great pressure on the Hold City of Whiterun.

Ulfric grows weary of Jarl Balgruuf of Whiterun. The leader of this key strategic Hold City has not chosen a side in this war, and Ulfric wishes to send a stronger message. Tell Ulfric you were at Helgen; quicken his trust by saying Ralof said he'd vouch for you. Ulfric is always looking for able fighters, and Galmar has a test for you after you answer why you wish to fight for Skyrim. You're to head to Serpentstone Island. Survive, and you pass this test. This quest officially begins now.

The stronghold for the Stormcloaks is ablaze, and the chaos of fighting Ulfric's remaining men and navigating the various barriers can be somewhat confusing. Be sure you learn the various locations you must fight through:

Candlehearth Hall: The initial entrance courtyard and Candlehearth Hall are places you can take cover, step out and defeat foes, and fight a continuous battle.

Southwest Market: You can traverse the narrow streets to the southwest, maneuver around or demolish the barriers, and attack the soldiers from this area. Fewer enemies are in these parts, but you're less likely to be surrounded or accidentally strike your own men. Or you can battle down the side street directly to the graveyard and miss the market area completely.

Graveyard: The only way forward is through the graveyard near the Hall of the Dead. Expect foes here, both atop and at the bottom of the stairs.

Northwest Pathways: Crush the barriers with attacks, and continue to battle the enemy along the winding streets that bring you back to the main courtyard in the city's center. Remember that you can always retreat, but this is the only route to take.

Palace Courtyard: The eventual fight continues into the flaming courtyard outside the Palace of the Kings.

The flow of enemy soldiers does not stop! It is imperative you reach the Palace of the Kings as quickly as possible!

CAUTION

◆ OBJECTIVE: Force Ulfric Stormcloak to surrender

Stormcloaks to Sovngarde

Push through into the Palace of the Kings with General Tullius and Legate Rikke in tow. Tullius informs Ulfric that he is guilty of insurrection, murder, and the assassination of King Torgg—essentially high treason against the Empire. Galmar Stone-Fist steps in front of Ulfric, brandishing his axe. Legate Rikke attempts to reason with Galmar, but the argument escalates into a pitched battle. Attack Galmar and Ulfric, choosing the foe your allies aren't fighting so you can bring the Stormcloaks to their knees more proficiently. Step back if you're being pulverized.

With Galmar dead and Ulfric on his knees, General Tullius stands over and gloats while Legate Rikke briefly looks mournful. Ulfric wants you to execute him; it'll make for a better bard's song. You can:

Agree, and plunge your favored weapon into the bowed form of Ulfric Stormcloak.

Or refuse, leaving Tullius to do the job.

Quest Conclusion

With the Stormcloaks firmly routed and their leadership bleeding across the palace floor, Tullius tells Legate Rikke that Brunwulf Free-Winter will likely be the next Jarl of Windhelm. He has a final gift for you as a tribute to your valor; you may keep the General's sword.

► Leveled Weapon

Postquest Activities

The General and Legate leave the palace to address the troops. After the troops are satiated, the General turns to you if you ask him for any other tasks, and he tells you to watch for any remaining Stormcloak camps across Skyrim. Defeat the remnants of the insurrection as you please. The power of the Empire is once more restored...with the Thalmor looking on from the shadows.

NOTE If you wait a couple of days, Windhelm begins to return to normal. Brunwulf Free-Winter is the Jarl, and he's already a firm friend of yours.

PREREQUISITES: Complete Civil War Quest: Joining the Stormcloaks

INTERSECTING QUESTS: Civil War Quest: Joining the Stormcloaks, Civil War Quest: Message to Whiterun

LOCATIONS: Korvanjund, Korvanjund Crypt, Korvanjund Halls, Korvanjund Temple, Windhelm, Palace of the Kings

CHARACTERS: Engar, Galmar Stone-Fist, Greta, Jarl Ulfric Stormcloak, Ralof, Stormcloak Soldier

ENEMIES: Draugr, Imperial Soldier

◆ OBJECTIVES: Talk to Galmar, Meet Galmar outside Korvanjund, Retrieve the Jagged Crown, Deliver the crown to Ulfric Stormcloak

During combat throughout this tomb, and any time you're engaged in battle, your wild weapon swings or area-of-effect weapons may strike your comrades. If this occurs more than once, they may turn hostile. Minimize the area of your murdering, use weapons that are accurate (arrows or spells such as Firebolt), and take care when using melee weapons. Moving around to attack enemies from the opposite side from your friends, dashing forward to engage foes your allies aren't attacking, and even leaving your friends to finish off foes helps, too.

CAUTION

TIP You can elect to follow Galmar (which is safer) or head off to explore on your own (which is fine, as you can complete this quest without any help or conversations).

Claiming an Old King's Crown

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Galmar

Continue your conversation with Galmar Stone-Fist. Ask him what the mission is, and he says that he's located the final resting place of the Jagged Crown, in the assumed burial place of old King Borgas. Galmar is already assembling his men outside of Korvanjund. You should join them immediately. Before you leave, ask him for more information on the Jagged Crown and the tomb of Korvanjund.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Meet Galmar outside Korvanjund

Northeast of Whiterun, in the lower foothills where the ground first turns from tundra to snow, is a depression in the ground. This marks a large cairn and the entrance to these ancient Nordic temple ruins and Jarl's tomb. You can charge toward the entrance on your own, but a more measured (and recommended) plan is to meet up with Galmar Stone-Fist and his quartet of men on the slopes outside the entrance. The troops include Ralof, the man you met at Helgen. Galmar listens as a soldier informs him that Imperials are roaming the place, keeping themselves comfortable. Galmar intends to spill some Imperial blood for Skyrim and send these red-clothed fiends to their graves. Confirm you're ready as Galmar finishes his speech, and you advance upon the cairn. Attack!

If you're employing melee weapons, it is recommended that you lead the charge, sprinting down the steps and up the other side to engage the bowmen, while the rest of your troops fight in the lower ground.

If you're employing bows or projectile spells, stay on the edge of the depression and rain missile attacks down upon the enemy.

As there are only about four Imperials guarding this entrance, combat is both swift and straightforward. Meet Galmar at the top of the steps by the interior entrance. He issues another warning before heading into Korvanjund Temple. Follow him at once.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Retrieve the Jagged Crown

◆ TARGET: Bone Crown, on Draugr Leader, in Korvanjund Crypt

Combat in the Cairn

Dash into the crypt entrance chamber, which is wide and contains a small contingent of foes. Slaughter them quickly, after which Galmar posts Greta and Engar to guard this entrance. Head down the steps to the north, then turn right

(east) and slay a trio of Imperials prowling the ledge surrounding this sunken hall. It is usually best to head in first, to avoid pushing past friends to reach the foes. After the battle, you can reconvene near Galmar at the northern side of the lower hall, near the massive cave-in that dominates the middle of this chamber. Galmar guesses there's a group of foes waiting for you on the other side of the tunnel steps. He's hoping you can find a different way in. You can:

Ignore the warning and plow straight down the stairs into the bridge chamber beyond, where you fight around four to six Imperials.

Or, head up and around the hallway's upper ledge, to an entrance directly above where Galmar is waiting. This brings you out into the same bridge chamber but on the upper bridge. It is easier to sneak, fire long-range attacks, or race along the bridge and around the upper balcony area, tackling foes one at a time.

Your comrades attack the enemies from the lower level, so taking down the enemy from two directions is safer and splits the Imperials' targets. When the bridge chamber is dripping with Legion blood, check the main stepped area for treasure (near the open chest). Afterward, find the upper exit passage to the west. Galmar and his remaining soldiers are clustered around the corpse of a Draugr. It is the first time they've seen such a corpse. Galmar bolsters their courage, and the infiltration continues, down to the iron door leading into the Korvanjund Halls.

Enter the first chamber, climbing to the balcony and slaughtering two foes along the way. Venture north along an upper passage to steps leading down. Along the way is a side tunnel with a swinging blade trap; there is treasure here and a lever that stops the axes. Venture into the Nordic Hall of Stories, with or without Galma. At the hall's far end is a Nordic Puzzle Door and two dead soldiers. Take the Ebony Claw they were carrying. This holds the key to opening this puzzle.

➤ Ebony Claw

Puzzle Solution: The door consists of three "rings" that rotate when you activate them. Each of them has three animals plated into the structure, while you unlock the central keyhole using the Ebony Claw. The puzzle solution is on the palm of the Ebony Claw; rotate it in your inventory to see the three circular petroglyph carvings. Move the rings so the Wolf, Moth, and Dragon appear on the outer, middle, and inner rings, respectively. Then insert the Ebony Claw into the keyhole.

Venture through the rumbling door and through connecting corridors into the guardian hall chamber. To the west is a portcullis preventing you from reaching the exit door. Simply head to the chamber's northwest corner, into the passage that winds up, past an Iron Dagger on a plinth. Cross a stone bridge to a balcony with a chest. Of more importance is the handle on the northwest corner of this balcony. Pull the handle to raise the portcullis and then drop down to aid Galmar as four or five Draugr clamber out of their tombs to stop you. Now enter the crypt itself.

After a few more winding passages, Korvanjund reveals its deepest chamber: the ceremonial crypt of a long-dead Jarl. Approach the slumped Draugr sitting on the throne in the middle of the chamber. Two guardians clamber out of the tombs that flank the throne, prompting a vicious battle between the Stormcloaks and Draugr. When the combat ends, pry the crown off the Draugr who sat on the throne. With the Bone Crown in your inventory, you can return to Ulfric Stormcloak. Before you leave, head south to a Word Wall and absorb another Word of Power! Then climb the steps to the east, heading up the steps, back into the temple. Remove the door bar, and exit Korvanjund by this quicker route. Leave Galmar to finish his search, and head back to Windhelm.

➤ Bone Crown ➤ Word of Power: Slow Time

◆ OBJECTIVE: Deliver the crown to Ulfric Stormcloak
◆ TARGET: Ulfric Stormcloak, inside the Palace of the Kings in Windhelm

Quest Conclusion

Return to the Palace of the Kings and locate Ulfric Stormcloak, who is surprised that Galmar was correct about the crown. You can ask him about the war and his role in deposing the old High King of Skyrim. But more importantly, Ulfric has a message he needs delivered to the Jarl of Whiterun.

Postquest Activities

This prompts the immediate start of Civil War Quest: Message to Whiterun.

MESSAGE TO WHITERUN

PREREQUISITES: Complete Civil War Quest: The Jagged Crown

INTERSECTING QUESTS: Civil War Quest: The Jagged Crown, Main Quest: Bleak Falls Barrow, Main Quest: Dragon Rising, Civil War Quest: Battle for Whiterun

LOCATIONS: Whiterun, Dragonsreach, Windhelm, Palace of the Kings

CHARACTERS: Galmar Stone-Fist, Hrongar, Irileth, Jarl Balgruuf the Greater, Jarl Ulfric Stormcloak, Lydia, Proventus Avenicci

◆ OBJECTIVES: Get new orders, Deliver axe to the Jarl of Whiterun, Assist Jarl Balgruuf with the dragon threat, Wait for the Jarl's response, Deliver axe to Jarl Ulfric, Wait for orders from Jarl Ulfric

Head past the Whiterun Stables and start the long, slow climb. Go over the drawbridge and to the main Whiterun gate. As you approach, a guard stops you; the city is closed with the news of the dragons spreading faster than you can travel. You can:

Tell the guard that Riverwood calls for the Jarl's aid. This is the optimal plan and is available only if Main Quest: Before the Storm is active.

(Persuade) Or you can tell the guard you have news from Helgen about the dragon attack.

(Bribe) Or bribe the guard with a proportion of your collected gold.

(Intimidate) Or order the guard to stand aside.

Once you're inside the walls of Whiterun, head north, to the hilltop on which the city sits. Go past the Gildergreen tree and the Shrine to Talos. Climb the stone steps to discover Dragonsreach, home of the Jarl. Walk toward the huge central fire on either side of the banqueting tables. You are met by Irileth, Jarl Balgruuf's Housecarl. Explain to her that you have a message from Ulfric Stormcloak, and she immediately lets you past. You can converse with her at length if you wish, or offer other responses with the Main Quest active, but mentioning Ulfric's name allows you to progress more quickly.

Decisions at Whiterun

◆ OBJECTIVE: Get new orders

Immediately after congratulating you on locating the Bone Crown, Jarl Ulfric Stormcloak explains that he has a message he needs delivered to the Jarl of Whiterun. Inquire why he's handing you an axe as the message, and Ulfric explains that if the Jarl keeps the axe, Ulfric will bide his time. If the axe is returned, it means war.

➤ Ulfric's War Axe

◆ OBJECTIVE: Deliver axe to the Jarl of Whiterun

◆ TARGET: Jarl Balgruuf of Whiterun, in Dragonsreach

Approach the Jarl and inform him that you have a message from Ulfric Stormcloak. His responses are dictated by the current situation regarding the dragons returning to Skyrim, and how far through the Main Quest you have progressed.

At this point, you must have completed both Main Quest: Bleak Falls Barrow and Main Quest: Dragon Rising, then returned to the Jarl, heard the call of the Greybeards, and received your Housecarl, Lydia.

If these two quests have not yet been completed, you must do so. Refer to the Main Quest for all relevant information.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Assist Jarl Balgruuf with the dragon threat

Once the excitement over the defeat of the dragon at the Western Watchtower has subsided, approach the Jarl and tell him that Jarl Ulfric Stormcloak asked you to deliver an axe to him. He asks for his steward, Proventus Avenicci, and his Housecarl, Irileth, to comment on these matters.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Wait for the Jarl's response

Avenicci recommends a wait-and-see approach to Ulfric's threat. Irileth believes it is time to act, while the Jarl wishes to challenge Ulfric to face him as a man and declare his intentions. Avenicci favors a garrison of Imperials, while Irileth deems this to be cowardly. You can interrupt this back-and-forth, or let the Jarl conclude. The results are the same: The Jarl has the answer to your message. He returns the axe.

► Ulfric's War Axe

◆ OBJECTIVE: Deliver axe to Jarl Ulfric

◆ TARGET: Ulfric Stormcloak, Palace of the Kings in Windhelm

▶ This Means War

Journey back to Windhelm and seek Ulfric Stormcloak's council. Tell him that the axe has been returned. Ulfric sees that he was wrong about the Jarl.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Wait for orders from Jarl Ulfric

Quest Conclusion

Ulfric tells Galmar he was correct. Galmar informs him that he's toured the Stormcloak camps, and his forces are ready for an attack on Whiterun. The decision to send so many men to their deaths weighs heavily on Ulfric. Galmar is certain the men and women of Skyrim want this insurrection, and there is no turning back now. Ulfric agrees; a new day is dawning and the sun rises over Whiterun. And the Sons of Skyrim will greet that dawn with teeth and swords flashing! Ulfric wants you on the front lines. Fight well or die well. Talos be with you!

▶ Burning Skies at the Fall of Whiterun

TIP You may wish to explore the Hold City of Whiterun more thoroughly prior to the commencement of this quest to fully learn the layout and the weak areas the enemy may wish to exploit.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Get your orders from Galmar Stone-Fist

◆ TARGET: Galmar Stone-Fist, Whiterun Military Camp

Leave the solid stone walls of Windhelm and journey to the Whiterun Military Camp where Galmar is amassing his troops for the assault on Whiterun. The camp is just south of the city's main winding road that leads up through an outer gate, past a drawbridge, and to the inner gate and the city. As you arrive, the air becomes thick with the smoke from countless fire-catapult barrages. Ulfric hopes to take this city without destroying too much of the defensive wall. Locate Galmar as he addresses the assembled troops standing ready to attack. He tells you the fight is for the Sons and Daughters of Skyrim. You now have one important task: the attack and capture of Whiterun!

◆ OBJECTIVE: Break through the enemy barricade

⬠ Attacking Stratagems: Assault and Overrun!

You are now engaged in an all-out siege of Whiterun. This battle is lengthy and confusing, and you can easily become a casualty rather than a champion of this war. However, the following tactics should help you minimize your risks as you become embroiled in this skirmish.

Ally: Stormcloak Soldier

Enemy: Whiterun Guard

Enemy: Imperial Soldier

Know your enemy: In the midst of battle, it sometimes becomes confusing to know exactly who you should be fighting. There are three distinctive forces battling for control of Whiterun. You are sided with the Stormcloaks, who are clad in armor with dark blue tunics and typically carry axes. Also present are Whiterun Guards, who are the enemy. They wear orange tunics and carry shields with the sign of the horse. The Imperial Soldiers are clad in red and tend to use swords.

The Offensive Area:

This battle takes place between the outer gate (which the barricade is blocking), the middle drawbridge (which must be lowered once you're through the barricade), and the inner gate (the last line of defense). You should focus your attacks on each area one at a time. Use the cobblestone path running from the outer gate; then get onto the scaffolding that runs along the northern wall to reach the lever and drop the drawbridge. There is no need to maneuver elsewhere.

Enemy Emplacements: The enemy is stationed along the cobblestone road that winds around in a right-turn semicircle to reach the drawbridge. As you gain entry through the outer gate, expect foes to be atop the outer gate, on the wooden guard towers, on the path above the cobblestone road, and on the stone battlements to your right, close to the drawbridge. Know where your attacks are coming from so you can stop them!

Call to Action: Your first job is to remove the enemy barricade on the cobblestone path at the entrance to the outer gate. Achieve this by employing one or more of the following techniques:

Melee: Standing at the barricade, smashing it with your melee weapons until it breaks and shrugging off enemy attacks.

Melee: Standing at the barricade, attempting to leap over the center section (which is possible), and bashing it from the other side.

Ranged: Blasting it (ideally with fire-based magic) from a defensive position. Such locations include:

1. The right (east) corner to the side of the outer gate, using the wall or nearby rocks as cover.
2. The cover at the edge of Pelagia Farm to the south, which offers a good view of the main path.

⬠ OBJECTIVE: Open the drawbridge

⬠ TARGET: Occurs once you break through the barricade

Last Line of Defense:

When you break through, the enemy falls back to the cobblestone path with the stream running across it, prior to the drawbridge. Make reaching the drawbridge your focus, rather than fighting. Try the following routes:

Route 1: Race directly up the cobblestone road to the guard tower to the northeast. Head up the wooden ramp, then turn right (east). Run around the dirt path above the road, over two more ramps and onto the drawbridge's top.

Route 2: Race directly up the cobblestone road to the ruined section of wall on the inside bend in the road. Leap onto the wall and scramble to a wooden lookout adjacent to the top of the drawbridge.

Route 3: Race directly up the cobblestone road, fixing your view on the stream to the northeast. Scramble up the fallen masonry before you reach the stream. Turn right and leap up to the battlements just below the drawbridge. Run south and to the upper crenellations, where you can access the drawbridge.

Unwise Routes: Ignore the archway the stream runs out of; this leads to the gap in the cobblestones along the stream, but there's no way up. The archway farther up the east wall leads to a small antechamber with no way out. Good for hiding but not for completing objectives.

Unsound Tactics: Standing and fighting is unwise when you have specific objectives to complete. Don't worry about hitting every foe; it is much more important to lower Whiterun's defenses before engaging in combat.

CAUTION

Your offensive measures against the enemy may be dangerous for your allies if you rely too heavily on area-of-effect magic or wild swinging of weapons (particularly of the two-handed variety). Watch your collateral damage!

TIP However, hitting every foe and delaying objectives does allow you to increase your skill points, so figure out how long you can battle before your health is in danger, and lengthen your attacks to maximize your skill increases.

Continue the battle until you've nullified the enemy forces outside the main gate. There may be a few remaining enemies, but you have a greater objective to complete:

⬠ OBJECTIVE: Force Jarl Balgruuf the Greater to surrender

⬠ TARGET: Jarl of Whiterun, inside Dragonsreach in Whiterun

⬠ Hail to the Gray-Manes

Open the main gates as soon as the drawbridge is lowered. Stormcloak troops pour into Whiterun's city streets. The enemy guards are here; strike down each one so they don't hit you with arrows as you run past them. Race east toward the Bannered Mare and turn left (north). Sprint up the steps with the canal chutes on either side and to an inner barricade. Remove that using the same techniques you utilized earlier. Then race past the Gildergreen tree and the Shrine to Talos. Climb the stone steps to a third barricade before racing into Dragonsreach.

While Ralof waters the ground with a Whiterun Guard's blood, you must storm into Dragonsreach and seek out the Jarl. "Surrendering" isn't a verbal commitment to end hostilities; the Nords require you to bow before the victor. This means focusing your attacks on the Jarl, fighting him until he falls to his knees. You may need to finish off a few Whiterun Guards first. Fortunately, you have the might (and the axes) of Galmar Stone-Fist and Ralof to help you.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Accept Jarl Balgruuf the Greater's surrender

Quest Conclusion

The Jarl staggers to his feet and orders his remaining troops (if there are any) to stand down. The Jarl notices Vignar Gray-Mane walking into the corpse-strewn hall, and they begin to argue about the Empire. Galmar stops this argument. The Jarl has some unkind parting words for you before Galmar orders you back to Windhelm. Ulfric must be informed of the victory here.

Journey to the Falkreath Stormcloak Camp east of Helgen, just above the snow line in the foothills of the Throat of the World.

Aside from a Quartermaster and a Grindstone to help augment your weaponry, there's an alchemy table near the hospital tents and troops to speak to. However, Galmar's tent is the place to visit, where the Nord is pouring over the current Civil War map. Report for duty, and he wants you to head to Fort Neugrad. You are to infiltrate the fort, as the Legion are holding some Stormcloaks prisoner there. He aims to use your cunning to find a way inside, free the men, and liberate the fort. This is an attack from the inside!

The Brotherhood Rewards Risk-Takers

◆ LIBERATION OF SKYRIM NOW BEGINS

◆ OBJECTIVE: Report to Ulfric Stormcloak

◆ TARGET: Ulfric Stormcloak, in Palace of the Kings in Windhelm

Return to the Palace of the Kings in Windhelm, and speak with Ulfric Stormcloak. Due in part to your actions at Whiterun, the Imperials have been driven out of that Hold, and Ulfric controls the middle of Skyrim. For your service, Ulfric has a new Nordic name for you: Ice-Veins, for the thick blood of his land has seeped into your heart. He also has an Imperial officer's sword to give you, a fitting blade with which to kill the enemy. Ask what the next move is, and Ulfric tells you to head to a hidden camp within Falkreath Hold. Galmar Stone-Fist has important tasks for you there.

➤ Levelled Weapon

◆ LIBERATION OF SKYRIM BEGINS

◆ OBJECTIVE: Liberate Falkreath Hold

◆ TARGET: Galmar Stone-Fist, Falkreath Stormcloak Camp

Trek down the rugged terrain to the main road west of the fort (Fast-Traveling from Helgen and then sprinting to meet your men is a quick option). As there are two roads in this area, if you head straight toward Fort Neugrad (without sneaking), the enemy soldiers recognize you as a Stormcloak and raise the alarm. You can fight on anyway, but until Ralof and his men figure out something is amiss and catch up with you, you're alone against the entire Imperial garrison! This is not recommended.

Instead, walk or Fast-Travel to Helgen, and take the road south from there (the one you traveled during the opening moments of your adventure). This brings you to the rendezvous point without alerting the enemy.

You soon encounter a small team of four men. One of them is your old friend Ralof, who has already reconnoitered Fort Neugrad. It appears particularly large and well defended over the brow of the hill, partly due to the mountain slopes keeping raiders away from the walls. However, there is an underwater cave entrance in the lake behind the fort, and Ralof reckons it goes straight into the prison. The plan is to sneak in there, free the prisoners, and kill anyone you meet. Ralof will rush the fort when they hear fighting, and you'll rendezvous in the courtyard. At this point, inform Ralof that you've agreed to the plan and begin the sneak.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Sneak into the fort

Or, tell Ralof you aren't interested in sneaking. At this point, you can take a direct (and far more dangerous) approach: assault the fort via the main entrance and battle down to the prisoners inside. This is possible but it's significantly riskier, because you don't have the aid of additional soldiers from the prison.

TIP Ralof recommends attempting the assault in the evening, as it will be easier to sneak past the guard patrolling outside. This is true; whether you take his advice is up to you!

◆ Lakeside Infiltration

Continue up the road until you see the fort. Wait for nightfall, when the guards change shifts and the patrols become lighter. Take advantage of any stealthy gear or spells you have (Muffle and Invisibility make this infiltration a breeze).

Then crouch and move in. Head to the small jetty and lake to the fort's east, and then dive into the murky lake. Turn left (west) and look for the underwater cave entrance. Swim into the underground flooded cave. You are now in Fort Neugrad Prison.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Free the prisoners

Climb out of the water, head north through the narrow tunnel and northwest through a barrel-storage cellar, and go up some steps. There are two guards in this area, a jailor and a soldier on patrol. Wait until the jailor is alone and seated on his chair. Then use a well-placed arrow to remove him quickly. Swiftly take the key from his body and release the prisoners before the other soldier can investigate. The jailbreak is on! The freed men quickly don their armor and follow your lead.

► Fort Neugrad Prison Key

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Take over the fort
- ◆ TARGET: All remaining Imperial Soldiers
- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Report back to Ralof

Sprint up the spiral stone steps to the fort's entrance hall and fireplace. Move west to the exterior door, into the outside courtyard, and begin slaughtering the half-dozen soldiers guarding the outside of the fort. They usually stream in from all angles, but Ralof arrives with his men to help your team out. The numerous gaps in the walls allow you to hide and dart out if you're engaging in longer-ranged attacks or needing to rest between Stamina exertions. Don't forget the enemies by the wooden side building and campfire to the southwest.

Move with your men—they are tough in single combat, but if your whole group concentrates on one target at a time, you can take your foes down quickly. Methodically head to the fort's front, where Ralof's men are fighting their way in. With your combined forces, you have no trouble taking out the remaining defenders.

Once the courtyard is clear, the other soldiers remain outside to secure it. Your next step is to crush the remaining stragglers inside the keep. With Ralof's help, head inside. The interior of Fort Neugrad is a circular path, allowing you to move quickly left or right (as the main chamber is open to attack from all sides) and begin a sweep of the keep. Your most dangerous adversary is the fort's commander, who is in his room on the upper floor's east side.

When everyone wearing red is dead, find Ralof and report back to him. You're to report back to Ulfric while he remains here to tidy up the mess.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Report to Ulfric Stormcloak

◆ TARGET: Ulfric Stormcloak, in Palace of the Kings in Windhelm

Civil War Quest: Rescue from Fort Neugrad may have finished, but the Liberation of Skyrim continues.

Quest Conclusion

Trek back to the Palace of the Kings and let Ulfric know of your victory. Falkreath's main fortress is in Stormcloak hands, so the heart and soul of Skyrim is now the domain of the Nords. Ulfric Stormcloak has come to enjoy your ferocity and determination. Some brothers have taken to calling you Bone-Breaker. Ulfric calls you that too. Along with this, you receive a new weapon and the ability to purchase a home in Windhelm. Consult with Jorleif, Ulfric's Steward. Ask what the next move is, and Ulfric tells you to report to Galmar at the Stormcloak camp in the Reach.

Raerek's Silver

◆ LIBERATION OF SKYRIM CONTINUES

◆ OBJECTIVE: Liberate the Reach

◆ TARGET: Galmar Stone-Fist, Reach Stormcloak Camp

Galmar Stone-Fist has set up a hidden Stormcloak Camp in the rocky mountainous region northeast of Karthwasten, which has the same benefits as the one in Falkreath, although this has a few Stormcloak casualties from the ongoing hostilities. Report to Galmar, and he orders you to Markarth. Rumor has it that the Jarl's Steward, Raerek, is a faithful Talos worshipper but not a true Son of Skyrim—he still supports the Empire, after all. If you confront him with his belief, you might be able to "persuade" him to aid the cause. This requires both stealth and discretion.

◆ CIVIL WAR QUEST: Compelling Tribute begins

◆ OBJECTIVE: Find evidence

◆ TARGET: Raerek's quarters, inside Understone Keep, in Markarth

Head to Markarth, sheath your weapons, and enter the mighty Understone Keep hewn into the rock to the city's southwest. Head west into the keep, toward the Jarl's impressive throne room. You may pass Faleen, the Jarl's Housecarl, who looks at you suspiciously. If you're simply wandering the keep, it's not necessary to speak with those surrounding the Jarl, including Raerek or Raerek's nephew Igmund. In fact, you need not meet Jarl Igmund, as Raerek's quarters are to the right (north) of this chamber. Figuring out where some evidence is located is your top priority.

Watch out for a patrolling guard on your way to Raerek's room, as he calls you out as a trespasser if he spots you. Time his patrol so you avoid him.

CAUTION

The evidence is located in Raerek's quarters, which is north and west of the Jarl's throne room. Watch for patrolling Markarth Guards witnessing your trespassing, as this clandestine robbery cannot escalate into hostilities! Reach this area without being detected by doing one of the following:

(Sneak) You can sneak into the chamber, preferably after dark when the keep has fewer folk awake.

(Spells) You can cast Invisibility or some other helpful spell that diminishes the chances of you being seen.

Or you can slowly, and without weapons drawn, enter the keep and head immediately to Raerek's bedroom.

Enter (he is either sleeping here or wandering the keep, usually close to the throne room) and search the dresser for the Amulet.

➤ Raerek's Inscribed Amulet of Talos

◆ OBJECTIVE: Blackmail Raerek

Locate Raerek within the keep, and show him the Amulet by speaking to him. He asks what kind of extortion racket you're running. Reply that he should be worshipping Talos out in the open, but Raerek is fearful that the Thalmor would make an example of him. He is the Jarl's uncle, and they both swore oaths to the Empire to abandon Talos in return for presiding over Markarth again. He is loyal to them over his own beliefs. You ask to come to some agreement, wondering whether both of you could prosper. He mentions a large shipment of silver and weapons the Imperials are transporting. You can:

(Persuade) Ask about receiving some of it for yourself.

Agree to the deal and ask where this shipment is.

If your persuasion works, you receive a sizable purse of coins. Either way, you must confirm the agreement. He reveals the Imperials are taking this booty by wagon to Solitude. If you hurry, you can catch them before they get too far.

➤ Leveled gold pieces

◆ OBJECTIVE: Report to Galmar Stone-Fist

◆ TARGET: Galmar Stone-Fist, Reach Stormcloak Camp

Head back to the hidden camp and report to Galmar, telling him about the shipment of coin. Coincidentally, he already has a small group of scouts on the same road that the enemy caravan is traveling along. You are to meet up with them and try to overpower the wagon's guards.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Meet the Men

◆ TARGET: On the road close to Broken Tower Redoubt, the Reach

Ralof's Rebels

Judging by your world map, the scouts are waiting on the road to the east of Broken Tower Redoubt, in the eastern part of the Reach. Travel there. Beware if you're approaching from the east—you'll run into the Imperial caravan without any help from the scouts. Approach along the road from the west, heading east, and meet up with an old friend as the path crosses the top of a rocky hillside. Ralof greets you when you speak with him. At this point, you have two choices to make:

Plan A: Ralof's Reasoning

Chat with Ralof, answering any way you wish. Steer the conversation back to your mission and explain the enemy wagon loaded with coin and weapons is farther down this slope. As luck would have it, Ralof has been tracking the wagon, which has lost an axle and is stranded. Although you're outnumbered (there are six foes), Ralof has a plan: His troops will remove the enemy sentry, then situate themselves overlooking the camp. Afterward, you'll infiltrate their position, gain their attention, and Ralof's troops will unleash a volley of arrows, winning the day tactically. Agree to this plan.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Follow Ralof and ambush enemy scout

◆ OBJECTIVE: Take over the caravan

◆ TIP Before moving in, wait until nightfall, as your stealthiness is much more likely to succeed.

Crouch and follow Ralof, watching as his bowmen drop the enemy scout. Wait for them to reach the rocks overlooking the broken-down caravan, and then walk toward the enemies. Sneaking, firing from range, or rushing to attack are all excellent ideas, while your brethren shoot arrows down on them from above and around the path.

Plan B: Good Riddance to Ralof

Chat with Ralof, then either refuse to go along with his plan or ignore him altogether.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Take over the caravan

Head down the path to the southeast and begin to battle the six Imperials guarding the caravan of silver. You can begin with the sentry atop the rocks overlooking the caravan. Then rain death from above with ranged attacks, or swarm the foes with melee weapons. A couple of enemy soldiers may be sleeping, so carve them up before they fully wake up.

◆ TIP If this fight overwhelms you, flee up the path toward Ralof, and his men help by mopping up any enemies giving chase. Then rest and return to tackle the stragglers.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Report to Ralof

Quest Conclusion

With the caravan's guards removed, Ralof remains here to guard the silver. Speak to him to end the quest.

➤ 150 gold pieces

◆ THE BATTLE FOR FORT SUNGARD BEGINS

◆ OBJECTIVE: Join the men attacking Fort Sungard

◆ TARGET: On the hill, northeast of Fort Sungard

Fort Sungard is nestled in the southern part of the Drudach Mountains, close to the border of Whiterun Hold. Galmar's men are on the craggy hillside to the fort's northeast, so approaching from the southwest can fail this objective (but not the quest; this just starts the battle prematurely). Instead, you may wish to circle around and join the detachment of Stormcloak forces stationed close to the fortification. After studying the Atlas entry of this place (page 835) and speaking to the leader of the forces, begin the attack.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Take over Fort Sungard by killing the enemy

Assault the fortification and help eliminate all the Imperial Soldiers. Enter from one of the following weak points or fortified positions:

North wall: This is both impenetrable and treacherous, being close to extremely steep and rocky ground. However, you can scale the jagged rocks to the northeast and attack from here (ranged weapons only).

East wall: In the northeast corner, the battlements have fallen, allowing you to leap atop them. There is an often-overlooked entrance arch, too, which is perfect for a surprise attack!

Tower entrance: Located outside the walls on the fort's southeast corner, close to the oubliette tower. Enter this door and scale the spiral stairs to the tower's top. You can rain down ranged fire almost with impunity!

Oubliette tower: This isn't worth ascending, as your view isn't good for soldier dispatching.

South wall: The terrain is steep and unforgiving, but there is a fire pit balcony with an easily assaulted archway entrance here.

Southwest muster: The southwest corner wall has an exterior pipe leading into the Muster. From here you can sneak or rush through and up onto the exterior battlements.

West wall: The main entrance where your brethren usually attack from. It is the most problematic location because of the barricades and because you're fighting uphill, but it leads through an archway and eventually onto the battlements.

After you win the battle, the Stormcloak forces remain to garrison this location. Meanwhile, you have other plans.

◆ LIBERATION OF SKYRIM CONTINUES

◆ OBJECTIVE: Report to Ulfric Stormcloak

◆ TARGET: Ulfric Stormcloak, in Palace of the Kings in Windhelm

Quest Conclusion

Return to the Palace of the Kings and inform Ulfric of your victory. This captures the Hold of the Reach and stopped the raping of her silver mines. For your valor and battle prowess, you are named Ice-Hammer. Take the earned weapon as a gift and symbol of this new rank. You're instructed to meet Galmar again; he's planning some surprises for General Tullius in Hjaalmarch.

Journey to Galmar's newly established forward-operating base, to the west and slightly north of Morthal, on the Hold's edge. This camp has the same benefits as the one in the Reach. Report in with Galmar, who has your orders. You are to deliver some false orders to the Imperial Legate in Morthal. But to make that happen, Galmar needs to get his hands on some Imperial orders to make forgeries. Fortunately, Imperial runners make frequent stops at the inns in Dragon Bridge and Rorikstead. Head to one of those places and convince the innkeeper to help you.

◆ Delivering the Doctored Documents

◆ LIBERATION OF SKYRIM CONTINUES

◆ OBJECTIVE: Liberate Hjaalmarch

◆ TARGET: Galmar Stone-Fist, Hjaalmarch Stormcloak Camp

◆ A FALSE FRONT BEGINS

◆ OBJECTIVE: Find the Imperial Courier

◆ TARGET: Barkeep of Four Shields Tavern or Frostfruit Inn

There are two inns at the locations Galmar mentioned: The Four Shields Tavern is in Dragon Bridge, along the main road to the west of Solitude and operated by Faida. The Frostfruit Inn is one of the prominent structures of Rorikstead and has an innkeeper named Mralki. Journey to either of these locations and speak to the innkeeper, asking whether they've seen any Imperial Couriers. After an evasive response, you can:

(Persuade) Warn that the courier's life is in danger.

(Bribe) Offer some gold for the information.

(Intimidate) Mention that you can get rough if you need to.

Or wait around in the inn.

If you succeed using any of the first three options, the barkeep tells you that the courier just left and that you can probably catch him. Or you can wait in the inn for the courier to return. The courier is halfway between both the inns on the main road. Even if you're unsuccessful, you can elect to run after or wait for the courier (the only difference is the objective won't update). You must visit one of the inns before finding the courier.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Retrieve the Imperial Courier's package

◆ TARGET: Courier, inside or between either inn

The courier travels to and from each inn. He loiters at the inn for an hour, sleeps there for an hour, and then heads back to the other inn. He repeats this route until you intercept him, either by waiting inside the inn or finding him on the road. At this point, you have a three options:

(Pickpocket) Pickpocket the documents while the courier is unaware.

Speak to the courier, demanding the documents. He refuses and you must kill him.

Simply kill the courier and loot the corpse for the documents.

Watch out! Killing the courier in either town is a crime. In Dragon Bridge, you may have to contend with both the guards and the elite Penitus Oculatus. In Rorikstead, Stormcloak Guards have taken the town, and may even kill the courier if they spot him. If you prefer to do the deed yourself, meet him on the road, where his death won't arouse suspicion.

CAUTION

► Imperial Documents

◆ OBJECTIVE: Bring the documents to Galmar Stone-Fist

◆ TARGET: Galmar Stone-Fist, Hjaalmarch Stormcloak Camp

After returning to Galmar, he reads the documents, noting the Imperials know more about the Stormcloak plans than was expected. He "corrects" the documents with false information and orders you to present them to the Imperial Legate in Morthal, throwing him off the trail.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Bring the forged documents to Legate Taurinus Duilis

◆ TARGET: Legate Taurinus Duilis, Highmoon Hall, in Morthal

Quest Conclusion

You'll usually find the Legate inside Highmoon Hall, the Jarl's residence inside the Hold City of Morthal, although he sometimes walks the pathways around the city. Present some important documents to him. He reads over them, noting the troop movements (false) and rewarding you with a little gold for a drink at the Moorside Inn for your troubles. This quest now concludes.

► 5 gold pieces

TIP There's no need to change from your Stormcloak garb when you meet Taurinus; you quickly make up a verbal ruse that it's easier to "sneak past the enemy" clad in their colors.

You are to meet your Brothers waiting nearby for the attack orders and then wipe out the Legion inside. Agree to the task, and the quest commences.

◆ THE BATTLE FOR FORT SNOWHAWK BEGINS

◆ OBJECTIVE: Join the men attacking Fort Snowhawk

◆ TARGET: On the road, southwest of Fort Snowhawk

Fort Snowhawk is atop a shallow hill just west of Morthal, close to craggy peaks to the southwest. This is where your band of Brothers are coming from. If you approach the fort from the northeast, you may attract the enemy's attention and commence the battle too soon. Instead, take the road from Morthal and meet up with your Brothers on the ridge south of the fort. After studying the Atlas entry of this place (on page 730) and conversing with the leader, commence the battle.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Take over Fort Snowhawk by killing the enemy

Assault the fortification and help eliminate all the Imperial Soldiers in the garrison. Enter from one of the following weak points or fortified positions:

Southwest wall: This is dominated by two turrets and a main entrance from the road. It is the usual place to assault and has multiple barricades to crush or dodge. It is also where the battle is fiercest. If you're specializing in melee weapons, take out those barricades and clear a path. If you're using ranged weapons, pick off foes on the walls to help your men advance.

Northwest wall: You can navigate the crumbling wall to the west by the turret

if you jump precisely, and there are numerous low or ruined sections along the wall you can easily head across. This area is extremely easy to penetrate.

Northeast wall: The crumbling eastern wall has several places from which you can infiltrate. Although there's a cave into Fort Snowhawk Prison by the shallow lake, this leads to a ledge that's too high to climb onto; this is only an exit. Ignore this cave completely; you must focus on the fort's exterior and assault.

Southeast wall: There's a gap in the southeast wall at the end of the wooden fencing.

Central tower: Rush the southwest entrance and head for the door, sprinting up the interior spiral steps and taking the ladder to the exterior top of the central tower. This offers exceptional sniping views all around you.

Staying outside: Although the central tower is worth climbing if you're stealthy, the rest of the keep is highly dangerous. Don't waste time fighting foes on your own!

Upper roof: This has some excellent lines of sight and relatively few soldiers to attack you. To reach this position, head for the southeast courtyard, climbing the stairs there and heading across the walls.

When you are victorious and the enemies routed, the Stormcloak forces remain to garrison this location. Meanwhile, you have other tasks to complete.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Report to Ulfric Stormcloak

◆ TARGET: Ulfric Stormcloak, Palace of the Kings in Windhelm

Quest Conclusion

Return to the Palace of the Kings and inform Ulfric of your victory. This captures the Hold of Hjaalmarch, which makes Tullius nervous. As soon as the Stormcloaks are able, the march on Solitude will begin. Your savagery and dedication has earned Ulfric's respect, and he numbers you among his kin. You shall now be known as Stormblade. You are handed a special weapon on behalf of the Sons and Daughters of Skyrim. Then you're told to meet Galmar Stone-Fist again; he's finished setting up camp in Haafingar Hold.

Agree to the task, and the quest commences.

◆ THE BATTLE FOR FORT HRAGGSTAD BEGINS

◆ OBJECTIVE: Join the men attacking Fort Hraggstad

◆ TARGET: On the road, east of Fort Hraggstad

Fort Hraggstad is perched on a snowy mountain overlooking the Sea of Ghosts, with a sheer cliff to the north. Galmar's brothers are on the flat rocks just southeast of the fortification, so approaching from the west may fail this objective (but not the ongoing quest). Join the Stormcloak Soldiers creeping up on the fort if you don't wish to assault it alone. After studying the Atlas entry of this place (page 703) and conversing with the leader, commence the battle.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Take over Fort Hraggstad by killing the enemy

Charge the fortification and help eliminate all of the Imperial Soldiers. Enter from one of the following weak points or fortified positions:

Northeast wall: This is mostly impenetrable, but there is a gap just east of the northern tower turret that allows easy access into the grounds.

Southeast wall:

The main road and entrance (dotted with barricades) are the usual swarm points for your forces but are heavily guarded.

Southwest wall: This wall section from tower to tower is impressively impenetrable.

Northwest wall: The dangerous rocky terrain and cliff edge make this impenetrable wall well worth ignoring.

Advantage point: The cluster of rocks to the west overlooks the fort and is excellent for long-range attacks. Another option is the tall fort tower in the fort's northern section, although that requires battling to reach.

Quest Conclusion

When the enemy finally succumbs to your might and the fort falls to the Stormcloaks, your forces remain to garrison this location.

◆ TARGET: Galmar Stone-Fist, Haafingar Stormcloak Camp

TIP Stop! Before mounting a final assault on Solitude, consider studying the streets, uncovering routes from the main gates to Castle Dour, using the route that passes by the Hall of the Dead, so you're completely familiar with the street layout. It is wise to add any helpful inventory equipment (such as Magicka-, Health-, or Stamina-augmenting items) before commencing this quest.

Maneuver back to the Haafingar Stormcloak Camp and speak with Galmar Stone-Fist. He is extremely proud of your accomplishments and rewards you accordingly. Then he tells you that the Brothers of Skyrim are gathering to attack Solitude, and you're part of it!

➤ 150 gold pieces

◆ BATTLE FOR SOLITUDE BEGINS

◆ OBJECTIVE: Get your orders from Ulfric Stormcloak

◆ TARGET: Great gate of Solitude

Travel up the road toward the large entrance gate to Solitude, which the Stormcloaks have already razed. The flame catapults are bombarding the embattled city in great plumes of flame, and the air is thick with smoke and Imperial fear.

Rush forward (east) through the wreckage, to the towering gate, where Ulfric Stormcloak is yelling words of encouragement to his forces. This is the time to deliver the final blow to the hated Imperials! Fear neither pain nor darkness, for Sovngarde awaits those who die with weapons in their hands and courage in their hearts!

◆ OBJECTIVE: Take over Solitude by killing the enemy

The stronghold for the Imperials is on fire, and the chaos of fighting General Tullius's remaining men and navigating the various barriers can be confusing. Learn the various locations you must fight through:

Initial courtyard: The Winking Skeever and other merchant stores are closed, and the ground is littered with fire. Push forward on either side of the flaming obstacles.

East to market: The stone ramp up to the forge area is blocked by debris, forcing you to head east, passing the market stalls to your right and heading for a barricade under the arched parapet bridge.

The Hall of the Dead: You can scramble along the rocks to the left, or hack the barricade and head along the left side of the Hall of the Dead building. Debris and enemy troops are everywhere.

Castle courtyard: The eventual fight continues with a left (north) turn up the main avenue and into the flaming courtyard outside Castle Dour.

The flow of enemy soldiers does not stop! Therefore, it is imperative you reach Castle Dour as quickly as possible.

CAUTION

◆ OBJECTIVE: Force General Tullius to surrender

◆ A Little More Than a Rebellion

Push into Castle Dour with Galmar Stone-Fist and Ulfric Stormcloak. Both General Tullius and Legate Rikke are cornered in this castle. Ulfric turns to his old friend and tells you war always comes down to a single truth-laden moment. Rikke won't stand down, so you're forced to kill her. Race forward and begin attacking Tullius or Rikke, choosing the foe your allies aren't fighting so you can bring the Imperial leaders to their knees more quickly. Step back if you're being wounded too severely.

Tullius splutters through mouthfuls of blood that the Thalmor are to blame; they stirred up the trouble here and forced him to divert resources, quelling this rebellion. Galmar and Ulfric smile, as this is more than a rebellion now! Before Galmar runs Tullius through, Ulfric stops him and asks you to execute the General; it'll make for a better story. You can:

Agree, and plunge Ulfric's sword into the bowed form of General Tullius. Equip the sword first if you wish.

Or refuse, leaving Galmar to do the job.

◆ Quest Conclusion

With the Imperials firmly routed and their leadership bleeding across the Castle floor, Ulfric tells Galmar that he'll step out and give a speech to his surviving Brothers and Sisters and will take care of Jarl Elisif. He has a final gift for you as a tribute to your valor; you may keep his sword.

➤ Leveled Weapon

◆ Postquest Activities

Ulfric and Galmar leave the castle to address the troops to raucous cheers. Afterward, if you ask Ulfric for any other tasks, he tells you to watch for remaining Imperial camps across Skyrim. Defeat the remnants of the Empire in Skyrim as you please. The Sons and Daughters of Skyrim will rejoice once more...with the Thalmor looking on from the shadows....

NOTE If you wait a couple of days, Solitude begins to return to normal. Elisif the Fair remains as Jarl and has sworn fealty to Ulfric. Stormcloaks are stationed throughout the city, in case the Imperials send additional troops to attack (and to keep Elisif from thinking twice about where her loyalties lie).

DAEDRIC QUESTS

OVERVIEW

The Daedric Quests are unrelated to one another. Each has its own requirements, and some can only be started later in your adventure. There is no ideal time to begin one; simply seek out the ones that interest you, or complete the ones that you come across.

NOTE Cross-Referencing: If you want to see maps and learn more about the traps, non-quest-related items, collectibles, crafting areas, and other important rooms of note in every location during these quests, then cross-reference the location you travel to with the information on that location contained in this guide's Atlas.

PREREQUISITES: None.

INTERSECTING QUESTS:

Miscellaneous Objectives: Innkeepers

LOCATIONS: The College of Winterhold, Ilinalta's Deep, Shrine of Azura, Winterhold, The Frozen Hearth Inn, Azura's Star

CHARACTERS: Aranea lenith, Azura, Colette, Dagur, Drevis, Faralda, Mirabelle, Nelacar, Nirya, Phinis, Sergius, Tolfdir

ENEMIES: Dremora, Malyn Varen, Necromancer, Skeleton

- ◆ OBJECTIVES: Miscellaneous Objective: Visit the Shrine of Azura, Find the elven mage from Aranea's vision, Speak to Nelacar, Find Azura's Star, Bring the Star to Aranea or bring the Star to Nelacar, Tell Azura you're ready to enter the Star, Tell Nelacar you're ready to enter the Star, Destroy Malyn Varen's soul

MINOR SPOILERS

Descend into Winterhold, and start talking to the townsfolk. Speak with Colette, Dagur, Drevis, Faralda, Mirabelle, Nirya, Phinis, Tolfdir, or Sergius; they all point to an elderly elven wizard who lives inside the Frozen Hearth Inn. Enter the building, and attempt the following:

(Persuade) Inform him that a priestess of Azura sent you.

(Bribe) Pay him for his information.

(Intimidate) Pressure

him into talking. When you reach Level 6 or higher, this is an easy test to complete.

When you're successful, Nelacar begins to explain about Azura's Star. Unlike a regular Soul Gem, the Star allows any number of souls to pass through it. Nelacar discovered this the hard way while working for his master, Malyn Varen, who was experimenting with the artifact in the hope of preserving his soul and allowing him to escape his disease-ridden body. The power of the Star slowly made Malyn paranoid and impulsive (although Nelacar believes Azura was responsible for that), resulting in the deaths of several students and Malyn's banishment from the College to a place called Ilinalta's Deep.

The Lure of Azura

On your journey throughout Skyrim, you can speak to many a barkeep (such as Hulda in Whiterun) and gain much from their scuttlebutt (Miscellaneous Objective: Innkeepers). Ask for rumors until you're told of the Shrine of Azura; the Dark Elves are said to have built it after they fled from Morrowind. It's certainly a sight to see. Check your map marker now.

◆ MISCELLANEOUS OBJECTIVE: Visit the Shrine of Azura

◆ TARGET: Shrine of Azura

At the top of the snow-covered steps under the Shrine of Azura, a single Dunmer priestess named Aranea is praying. Speak to her, and she says your visit here was destined. Agree to help, and Aranea gives you a rather cryptic message: You're to find an elven man who came to her in a vision, one who can "turn the brightest star as black as night." She suggests you look for this enchanter in Winterhold.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Find the elven mage from Aranea's vision

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Nelacar

◆ TARGET: Nelacar, the Frozen Hearth Inn, in Winterhold

◆ OBJECTIVE: Find Azura's Star

◆ TARGET: Ilinalta's Deep

Deep in Undeath

Locate the ruined fort known as Ilinalta's Deep, and enter via the trapdoor at the top of the sunken turret. Begin trekking through the soggy interior catacombs, brandishing your best skeleton-culling weapons. You face intermittent attacks from necromancers—the remnants of Malyn's students. Follow the waterlogged corridors and gloomy altars and alcoves until you reach a large spiral staircase.

TIP Consult the Atlas on page 908 for all the loot you can remove from this dungeon, which involves some underwater searching.

Climb the spiral stairs to the final resting place of Malyn Varen. Among the gold and grimoires, locate Azura's Star, which appears to be broken. Escape the Deep via the ladder in Varen's death chamber.

➤ Broken Azura's Star

◆ OBJECTIVE: Bring the Star to Aranea

◆ TARGET: Shrine of Azura

OR

◆ OBJECTIVE: Bring the Star to Nelacar

◆ TARGET: The Frozen Hearth Inn, in Winterhold

▶ A Star of Dark or Brightness

The quest now has two possible conclusions: A communion with Azura or a chat with an old elf enchanter.

A Communion with Azura

You can journey back to the Shrine of Azura and speak with Aranea. When the Star is placed on the altar, the daedra speaks, congratulating you on locating it but warning that the artifact is useless until Malyn Varen's soul has been purged from it. Azura offers to send you into the Star to deal with Malyn directly.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Tell Azura you're ready to enter the Star

◆ TARGET: The Star of Azura

Chat with an Old Elf Enchanter

Or you can journey back to the Frozen Hearth Inn and speak to Nelacar. After examining the Star, Nelacar discovers that Malyn Varen's soul is trapped inside. He says he can repair the Star, transforming it into a vessel that stores black souls. But first, Malyn must be purged from the device; you must be soul-trapped to deal with Malyn directly.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Tell Nelacar you're ready to enter the Star

◆ TARGET: The Star of Azura

NOTE "Black souls" refer to human souls (from townsfolk, the Forsworn, or bandits) that can't ordinarily be stored in standard Soul Gems. These are used for Enchanting purposes.

No matter which of the two paths you choose, your personage is spirited away into the strange ethereal otherworld of the Star.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Destroy Malyn Varen's soul

◆ TARGET: Malyn Varen, inside the Star of Azura

After telling Malyn that he cannot escape his fate, run after him. He conjures up to three Dremora and attacks with lightning from his potent staff. Quickly nullify the enemies, and then strike down Malyn. As Malyn crumples, your spirit is transported back to Skyrim.

Malyn Varen's soul has been consigned to Oblivion. You are ready to receive an offering from either Lady Azura or Nelacar. In addition, if you're at the Shrine of Azura, you may speak with Aranea lenith again. With her guardianship at an end, she offers to accompany you as a Follower, if you'll agree to it.

Quest Conclusion (Azura)

➤ Follower: Aranea lenith

➤ Azura's Star

Quest Conclusion (Nelacar)

➤ The Black Star

Postquest Activities

The person (Nelacar or Aranea) you didn't side with has some harsh words with you, if you meet up with them again. Aranea obviously won't become your Follower if you side with Nelacar.

TIP Aranea is a very competent wizard: She has a Magic Staff of Frostbite and has focused her abilities on Conjuration and Destruction magic.

PREREQUISITES: You must be Level 30 or higher.

MINOR SPOILERS

INTERSECTING QUESTS: None

LOCATIONS: Sacellum of Boethiah, Knifepoint Mine, Knifepoint Ridge

CHARACTERS: Boethiah

ENEMIES: Bandit, Boethiah Cultist, Champion of Boethiah, Frost Troll, Priestess of Boethiah

- ◆ OBJECTIVES: Find the shrine of Boethiah, Find the cult of Boethiah, Lead someone to become trapped by the shrine and slay them, Speak to Boethiah's Conduit, Slay the other cultists, Slay everyone at Knifepoint Ridge stealthily, Retrieve and equip the Ebony Mail

◆ Congealing an Empty Vapor

Once you're an experienced adventurer (Level 32 or higher), you can join the cult of the fabled Boethiah, the Prince of Plots and original god-ancestor of the Dark Elves. This is triggered via one of the following antics:

During your searching, you (randomly) uncover a book named Boethiah's Proving and read it.

During your travels, you (randomly) encounter a Boethiah Cultist, who attacks you. Slay the cultist, search the corpse, and uncover the book. Then read it.

Or, you can simply stumble upon the Sacellum of Boethiah (although you won't have the map marker to guide you, and the location is deserted until you reach Level 32).

◆ OBJECTIVE: Find the shrine of Boethiah

◆ OBJECTIVE: Find the cult of Boethiah

◆ TARGET: Sacellum of Boethiah

Brave the Frost Trolls, or other weathered adversaries, as you trek up the snowy mountains east of Windhelm. Among the rocks and snow is a rudimentary arena, where those seeking the gaze of Boethiah are engaged in bloody combat. Confront a Priestess of Boethiah without resorting to combat (yet). She explains that you are an "empty vapor," unworthy of Boethiah's attention. Tell her you're not afraid of her, and you learn about Boethiah, who only cares for those who care for themselves. You are to prove that you can lie; you must find someone, gain their trust, lead them to the shrine above, and instruct your thrall to touch the Pillar of Sacrifice. This stalls your victim, who you must slay with a ceremonial dagger. If your will is strong, Boethiah will stir and you will be one of them!

➤ Blade of Sacrifice

◆ OBJECTIVE: Lead someone to become trapped by the shrine and slay them

◆ TARGET: Any Follower, at the Sacellum of Boethiah

◆ Enthraling a Willing Thrall

Leave this place of violence and ponder for a moment: Which Follower is worth sacrificing to Boethiah? One who has accompanied you on many of your adventures or one who is waiting patiently for your return? You may choose any Follower you've met during your travels. Remember the following:

If your morals prevent you from sacrificing just anyone, then choose a Follower who has annoyed you or you don't like. This doesn't affect your standing in Skyrim; it just makes you feel better about leading a friend to their death!

You must sacrifice someone to complete this quest. If your morals prevent this, perhaps the Prince of Plots isn't right for you....

If you don't suffer from this guilt or don't care who you wish to sacrifice, then anyone stupid enough to blindly follow you will do! This can be anyone you've befriended, a hireling in your service or a Housecarl appointed to you by a Jarl.

TIP For a complete list of Followers, consult the Training chapter. This quest involves human sacrifice and an unwilling subject. To minimize any regrets you may have about leading someone to their death, simply complete the Dark Brotherhood Quests, obtain an initiate, and sacrifice one of them.

Bring your unwitting victim back to the Sacellum of Boethiah. To avoid them dying during the trek, you may wish to Fast-Travel here. Climb up the steps to the Pillar of Sacrifice, and instruct your victim to activate it. As your Follower inspects the pillar, he is trapped by magical energy. Arm yourself with the Blade of Sacrifice (given by the Priestess), and don't finish slashing until your Follower collapses in a pool of blood. Your murder soon yields results: Boethiah possesses the bloody corpse!

TIP Remember! It is more fitting to murder your Follower using the Blade of Sacrifice, but any weapon will do. Point your Follower to interact with the Pillar of Sacrifice so they are standing in the correct spot before the slaying begins.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Boethiah's Conduit

◆ TARGET: Your slain Follower, at the Sacellum of Boethiah

Boethiah enters the flesh of the recently culled. Make your answers more insulting rather than sycophantic to earn a modicum of her respect. She then addresses you and the cultists who have gathered to witness your commune. She has a special task for the one who exceeds the rest—the one who is left standing. With that, she leaves your Follower's corpse, and mayhem ensues!

◆ OBJECTIVE: Slay the other cultists

Draw your preferred weapon, head down to the fighting pit, and begin killing the cultists. Let the shrine be bathed in blood! There are usually around five cultists to slay. You can wade in or hang back and let your fellow cultists fight among themselves before you move in to finish the wounded. Once all are dead, Boethiah possesses the last one to die and congratulates you on your ferocity in combat. If you're able to cast aside your honor, Boethiah has one more task. Her previous champion displeases her, and she wishes him replaced in the traditional fashion: You are to kill everyone at Knifepoint Ridge, as quickly and as invisibly as possible. You are but an instrument of Boethiah; showing yourself too frequently will displease her.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Slay everyone at Knifepoint Ridge stealthily

◆ OBJECTIVE: Retrieve and equip the Ebony Mail

◆ TARGET: All enemies and Champion of Boethiah at Knifepoint Ridge

NOTE The area of Knifepoint Ridge where the Champion lurks is inaccessible prior to this quest's start, so you can't attempt an early reconnoiter of the area. Slaying foes before the start of this quest doesn't affect the number of enemies you face, either.

◆ As You Will It, So It Shall Be

Knifepoint Ridge, in the southern hills equidistant between Markarth and Whiterun, is where you prove yourself to Boethiah. Approach the small collection of huts, tents, and guard towers and slay the bandits quickly and effectively. Don't charge in but try to remain hidden, although rampaging through here is still possible. Be sure no one is left on the surface before locating and opening the entrance to Knifepoint Mine.

TIP Wait for nightfall, and use the Invisibility and Muffle spells to increase your stealthiness. Instead of taking the main road to the camp's front entrance, climb the steep slope to the southeast. Work your way around and behind the guard tower (bypassing the rock trap); this route to the Blacksmith's shed is easier. Now shoot the Champion of Boethiah through a hole in the wall!

TIP If you take the side hallway that ramps down, locate a hidden path underneath the scaffolding, immediately on your left. If you sneak through here, you'll have access to a passage on the opposite side of the large chamber that winds around and exits right next to the Champion's shack. This allows you to bypass all the enemies in this area.

Once inside the mine, try the stealthy plans mentioned, sneaking and knifing foes using, for example, Sneak attacks from bows at a distance or Invisibility. There are several bottles of poison you can use, and there's an Alchemy Table in the area caged off from the large chamber; use this to make your attacks more potent or your movement more stealthy. When you reach the Champion of Boethiah, use the fire-through-the-hole tactic or approach and strike him down from behind, if you can.

Quest Conclusion

Ransack the corpse of the slain Champion for your prizes. Equip the Ebony Mail to conclude this quest. Boethiah speaks to you, exclaiming her satisfaction at the blood you spilled in her honor. Your name is to be written on Boethiah's tablet of absolute darkness, and you receive her blessing.

MINOR SPOILERS

INTERSECTING QUESTS: None

LOCATIONS: Falkreath, Lod's House, Haemar's Shame, Haemar's Cavern, Rimerock Burrow

CHARACTERS: Barbas, Clavicus Vile, Imperial Soldier, Lod

ENEMIES: Atronach, Frostbite Spider, Sebastian Lort, Vampire, Vampire's Thrall

- ◆ OBJECTIVES: Miscellaneous: Speak to Lod, Miscellaneous: Find the dog outside Falkreath, Travel with Barbas to the shrine of Clavicus Vile, Retrieve the Rueful Axe with Barbas, Return to the shrine of Clavicus Vile with Barbas and the Rueful Axe, Give the Rueful Axe to Clavicus Vile OR Kill Barbas with the Rueful Axe

◆ OBJECTIVE: Find the dog outside Falkreath

◆ TARGET: Barbas, on the road close to Falkreath

Speak to the dog named Barbas. Unexpectedly, the dog speaks back! The dog introduces himself as Barbas, and he has a problem you can help him with: He recently got into an argument with his master, which got a little heated, and he needs you to settle the disagreement. After his banishment, Barbas and his master can only manifest close to a shrine, and he requests you meet him there. He finishes by warning you not to trust anything his master says.

➤ Follower: Barbas

A Shaggy Dog Story

You may begin this quest once you reach Level 10. Enter the town of Falkreath and speak to an Imperial Soldier at the entrance. He asks whether you've seen a dog. Whatever your answer, he points you toward the town's Blacksmith, Lod, who has been asking about the hound. You may also go straight to Lod to begin the quest.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Miscellaneous Objective: Speak to Lod

◆ TARGET: Lod, in Falkreath

Locate Lod either inside or outside his Blacksmith's shop, and he asks whether you'd be interested in coaxing a dog that he's seen. He spotted it on the road close to town and wants to befriend it. You can:

Agree to find the creature, and Lod gives you some meat to help you gain the dog's interest.

(Persuade) Or you can agree to find the creature...for a price. If you're successful, Lod agrees, gives you half a payment and the meat.

Then exit Falkreath and locate the wolfhound with the strange bark, a dog named Barbas. You should begin the main Daedric Quest from this point, rather than returning the dog to Lod. Otherwise, Barbas won't follow you, although you can mention to Lod that the dog was more trouble than he was worth (and receive a small reward of gold).

➤ 25 gold pieces

➤ Mammoth Snout

◆ OBJECTIVE: Travel with Barbas to the shrine of Clavicus Vile

◆ TARGET: Shrine to Clavicus Vile, inside Haemar's Shame

You and your new best friend don't have to journey to Haemar's Shrine immediately: You can commence other adventuring tasks; Barbas heads to Haemar's Shame to wait for you. Once you decide to continue this quest, trek to Haemar's Shame and enter Haemar's Cavern.

Expect a cold reception once you step into the cavern; vampires and their thralls are holed up in this maze of rock and snow. Fight or sneak your way past these creatures, until you reach a larger chamber with wooden fencing around a central hole. Head down the ramp into the hole, where you find a tunnel leading toward Haemar's Shame. Deliver a killing blow to the Frostbite Spider in the next room of jagged rocks before following lanterns and torches down a tunnel, past a room of bloodied cages, and around to a subterranean stream.

Continue up a connecting tunnel and into the main shrine chamber, where you encounter several vampires of differing strengths. Deal with them. When the area is devoid of bloodsuckers, approach the statue of Clavicus Vile, stepping over the dead offering, and activate the statue.

Vile is pleased to see you. He says that in killing his vampiric followers, you've already helped him fulfill a set of wishes—that his worshippers be cured. Mention that you're here to reunite Vile with Barbas, and the Daedric Prince's jovial nature changes. Apparently, he's sick of that "insufferable pup" but continues to listen to you, as he really doesn't want to be confined to this backwater shrine. There is a way Barbas can earn a place back at Vile's side: An incredibly powerful axe is residing somewhere deep inside Rimerock Burrow. Bring this back, and Vile insists he will grant you a reward, with "no strings attached." Agree, use the pull chain to access the exit tunnel, and exit Haemar's Shame via the quick exit.

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Retrieve the Rueful Axe with Barbas
- ◆ TARGET: Rueful Axe, in Rimerock Burrow

▶ A Deal with a Daedric Prince

Across the mountains, east of Solitude, is a high and precarious path carved into the side of the rocky terrain. Cross the small bridge and enter Rimerock Burrow. Draw your weapon and prepare to fight Sebastian Lort and his conjurations, who are using this remote grotto as a base. The mage and his Atronach aren't of much importance, but the Rueful Axe lying on the altar to the rear of the Burrow most certainly is. Grab it, along with any other treasure you deem valuable, and leave.

▶ Rueful Axe

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to the shrine of Clavicus Vile with Barbas and the Rueful Axe
- ◆ TARGET: Shrine to Clavicus Vile, inside Haemar's Shame

Return to Haemar's Shame, and work your way through the chambers, polishing off any vampires you may have missed during your first exploration. Activate Clavicus Vile's shrine, and the Daedric Prince congratulates you on your accomplishment and your new loyal friend Barbas. Vile then says he could be persuaded to let you keep the Rueful Axe...if you use the weapon to strike Barbas down!

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Give the Rueful Axe to Clavicus Vile OR Kill Barbas with the Rueful Axe

Quest Conclusion

At this point, you have a choice to make: give Vile the axe or kill Barbas. If you give Vile the axe, the deity is disappointed at your loyalty and at the fact that he now faces an eternity with Barbas. The dog waylays Vile's threats to turn you into a worm and insists that Vile keep his end of the bargain. He grants you his boon, as previously agreed. Barbas and his master are intertwined for an eternity.

▶ Masque of Clavicus Vile

If you give Barbas the axe right between his furry eyes, the deity is most pleased with your double-crossing and the fact that he doesn't have to spend an eternity with Barbas. He leaves you to use the Daedra-harming Rueful Axe.

▶ Rueful Axe

Postquest Activities

You can return to Lod and explain that Barbas was more trouble than he was worth, after which you're given a small reward for your time.

▶ Leveled gold pieces

DISCERNING THE TRANSMUNDANE

PREREQUISITES: You must be Level

15 or higher to begin the second half of this quest, flagged as "Blood Harvest" in the guide.

INTERSECTING QUESTS: College of Winterhold Quest: First Lessons, Main Quest: Elder Knowledge, Main Quest: Alduin's Bane

LOCATIONS: Alftand, Blackreach, College of Winterhold, Arcanaeum, Hall of the Elements, Septimus Signus's Outpost, Tower of Mzark, Oculory

CHARACTERS: Septimus Signus, Urag gro-Shub, Wretched Abyss (Hermaeus Mora)

ENEMIES: Dwarven Centurion, Dwarven Sphere, Dwarven Spider, Falmer

- ◆ OBJECTIVES: Ask Urag about the insane book, Find Septimus Signus, Transcribe the Lexicon, Give the Lexicon to Septimus, Harvest High Elf blood, Harvest Wood Elf blood, Harvest Dark Elf blood, Harvest Falmer blood, Harvest Orc blood, Bring blood to Septimus, Take the Oghma Infinium

▶ Acute Occult Ruminations

There are two ways you can begin this quest:

1. During Main Quest: Elder Knowledge, you are sent to the College of Winterhold in search of an Elder Scroll. Approach the entrance and speak to Faralda about gaining admittance.
2. Otherwise, you must locate Septimus Signus's Outpost on your own. Skip to the section marked 'Puppet of the Abyss' instead.

Enter the College and head into the Arcanaeum. Look for the Orc Mage named Urag gro-Shub, who runs the Arcanaeum. Although you can ask to assist him in College business (which allows you to accomplish several College-related tasks unrelated to this quest) and ask about the library, you're here to talk about the Elder Scroll. Urag isn't too happy with you offhandedly asking about such a powerful artifact. You may listen to an overview of the Scrolls before asking if there's an Elder Scroll you could use. Urag laughs at this question; he wouldn't show it to the likes of you, even if he obtained one. Ask if he at least has any information on them. He agrees to locate a couple of arcane tomes that may have some clues. But mostly they contain ravings leavened with rumor and conjecture.

Urag gro-Shub locates and places two tomes on the nearby desk: Effects of the Elder Scrolls and Ruminations on the Elder Scrolls. After reading both books (which you may keep or leave on the desk), you find that the Ruminations tome is the work of a madman. Daedric Quest: Discerning the Transmundane now begins, and your objective updates:

► Effects of the Elder Scrolls ► Ruminations on the Elder Scrolls

◆ OBJECTIVE: Ask Urag about the insane book

Tell Urag that the Ruminations book is incomprehensible. He doesn't seem surprised; after all, this book was the work of Septimus Signus. Although Signus was a master on the nature of Elder Scrolls, Urag tells you that he's "been gone for a long while." You suspect he means both mentally and physically. Signus currently resides north of the College in the treacherous Ice Fields.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Find Septimus Signus

◆ TARGET: Septimus Signus's Outpost

▶ Puppet of the Abyss

The giant chunks of ice floating off the Sea of Ghosts are your next destination. Exit the College and run to the frigid waters. Hop across the floating ice, making your way north. Expect to slice into a few wild animals along the way.

Septimus Signus's Outpost is an odd little door cut into a hill-sized iceberg, close to a moored rowboat. Climb down the ladder and the slope to reach a lone mage in a chamber of ice, alone with his books and thoughts. He appears to be studying some kind of Dwemer box about the size of a house.

Ask Septimus about the Elder Scrolls if you want him to deliver a rapid-fire barrage of knowledge on the subject. Ask where the Scroll is again, and after receiving moderately useless information, ask once more (either pleasantly or with a more threatening tone). Septimus agrees to tell you, but in return, you must venture into Blackreach, a giant underground Dwemer city that lies below several Dwarven ruins hidden across Skyrim. Ask about getting into Blackreach, and Septimus keeps up his riddle-based prattling and hands you two items: The first is an odd-edged lexicon, used by the Dwemer for inscribing. The second is an Attunement Sphere, which apparently "sings" when you near an important Dwemer door. Once these are in your grasp, your Main Quest updates. Stay and speak further with Septimus if your sanity can stand it.

► Attunement Sphere ► Blank Lexicon

◆ OBJECTIVE: Transcribe the Lexicon

◆ TARGET: Daedric Quest, in Blackreach

◆ MAIN QUEST OBJECTIVE: Recover the Elder Scroll

◆ TARGET: Tower of Mzark

NOTE This quest continues only after you enter the gargantuan subterranean Dwemer city of Blackreach. The optimal path to reach this sprawling cavern is detailed in Main Quest: Elder Knowledge. These both require you to secure the Attunement Sphere from Septimus, which is the only way to access Blackreach.

After you secure the Attunement Sphere and Blank Lexicon from Septimus, locate Alftand on the glacial mountains southwest of Winterhold. Enter and head through the Alftand Glacial Ruins, battling Dwarven Spheres and Dwarven

Spiders. Maneuver through the tower and connecting chambers of the Alftand Animunculory (opening the elevator back to the Glacial Ruins as you go), and battle the Dwarven Centurion in the Alftand Cathedral to reach an elevator (opening the exit back up to the surface first). Descend back into the cathedral and use the Attunement Sphere to activate the Dwarven Mechanism to access the hidden entrance to Blackreach.

TIP Alftand is only one of several entrances to Blackreach. Consult the Atlas to see all of the ways to enter this subterranean citadel and the Tower of Mzark.

Enter Blackreach and keep a steady pace along the cobblestone pathways, heading in a westerly direction. You're looking for a massive vertical stone elevator shaft that pierces the roof of this massive underground complex. When you find it, pull the lever and head into the Tower of Mzark. Venture into a gigantic, circular Aedrome chamber, which is dominated by a huge sphere. This appears to be some kind of massive Oculory, with a variety of focusing lenses and other golden machinery attached.

Head to the cluster of controls on the platform above the Oculory. The controls are comprised of five cylindrical devices: a Lexicon Receptacle and four positioning buttons embedded in pedestals. There is a knack to using these devices to produce something hidden in one of the lenses.

Puzzle solution: Activate the Lexicon Receptacle, so the Blank Lexicon rests on top of it. The two pedestals to the Receptacle's right—the only ones currently active—open and close the Oculory lenses. Press the taller of the two pedestals (right of the middle one with the lens chart on it) three or four times, until the pedestal with the blue button to the left of the middle one starts to glow. Move to this new pedestal. At this point, the Blank Lexicon will also be glowing blue. The two pedestals to the Receptacle's left—the taller of which is now active—control the ceiling lens array. Press the button of the taller, left pedestal twice, until the button on the far-left smaller pedestal begins to glow. Now press that button, and a large set of lens crystals descends from the ceiling, stops, and the main crystal rotates and splits apart to reveal some kind of tubelike carrying device.

Drop from the balcony controls, and approach the open lens crystal. Take the Elder Scroll from its elaborate compartment. Once you've taken the Elder Scroll, your path diverges, but only if Main Quest: Elder Knowledge is currently active. If it is, Main Quest: Alduin's Bane begins, and your next plan is to take the Scroll to the summit of the Throat of the World, and read it there. However, for this quest, Septimus is more concerned with the transcription etched onto the Lexicon. Retrieve the Lexicon from the receptacle; don't leave without it!

► Elder Scroll ► Runed Lexicon

◆ OBJECTIVE: Give the Lexicon to Septimus

Blood Harvest

Leave the Tower of Mzark by the elevator at the end of the corridor under the pedestals, which ascends to Skyrim's surface. Trek back to the Sea of Ghosts and enter Septimus Signus's Outpost. Septimus is still happily talking to himself; interrupt so he talks to you, and tell him you've inscribed the Lexicon. Apparently, the sealing structure interlocks in the tiniest fractals. That obviously means something to Signus, who needs Dwemer blood to loosen these interlocking hooks. However, as the Dwemer are long dead, your next task is to search for a panoply of their brethren. Septimus wants blood! He hands you an Extractor and lists the races related to the Dwemer of which he requires blood. Before you leave, you may ask him further questions about the giant box he paces beside.

Essence Extractor

- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Harvest High Elf blood
- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Harvest Wood Elf blood
- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Harvest Dark Elf blood
- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Harvest Falmer blood
- ◆ OBJECTIVE: Harvest Orc blood

As you reach the Outpost exit, you see a strange mist that quickly congeals into a frightening void. This is the Wretched Abyss, and it coaxes you forward, wanting you to bask in its presence. When you ask what it is, it replies that it is but an aspect of Hermaeus Mora, who has been watching you. He tells you that once the giant Dwemer lockbox has been opened, Septimus will have outlived his usefulness. When that time comes, you may take his place as Hermaeus Mora's emissary. You can agree or refuse. Either way, you won't need to choose until after you open the box. The Abyss retracts, allowing you to leave.

At this point, you may wish to continue other quests; finding all this blood is an adventure unto itself, and one that is much easier once you realize where you can harvest with impunity! Obviously, the danger comes with slaughtering an innocent in broad daylight, and usually within a Hold City's walls, which isn't recommended at all. For this reason, there are other possible places look:

✓	RACE	OPTIMAL LOCATIONS	NOTES
<input type="checkbox"/>	High Elf	Hob's Fall Cave, Yngvild, world encounters, any Warlock lair	High Elves appear as Warlocks, so slay enemies rather than townsfolk.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Dark Elf	Hob's Fall Cave, Yngvild, world encounters, any Warlock lair	Dark Elves appear as Warlocks, so slay enemies rather than townsfolk.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Wood Elf	Pinepeak Cavern or any hunter camp	You can find a dead Wood Elf lying on the rocks just outside the entrance to Pinepeak Cavern, across the bridge from Ivarstead. When assaulting a hunter camp, one in four hunters is a Wood Elf.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Falmer	Blackreach, Falmer Hives, any Dwarven Ruins	You can return to Blackreach easily, making this blood simple to spill.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Orc	Cracked Tusk Keep, Rift Watchtower, or any bandit camp	Slay the hostile Orcs in these locations, rather than the friendly Orcs in Strongholds.

TIP Double-check every figure you meet during wilderness treks, and slay them if they're one of the races mentioned.

OBJECTIVE: Bring blood to Septimus

Once your blood-siphoning trek is complete, return to the iceberg on the Sea of Ghosts, and revisit Septimus once more. Inform him that you have the blood samples he requires. He takes them and quickly mixes them up before approaching the massive Dwemer box. It rotates, and telescopes open into an otherworldly passage. Septimus races up this corridor, into a chamber of circles, and approaches an odd book. He reaches out to take it but suddenly disintegrates into a pile of ash.

OBJECTIVE: Take the Oghma Infinium

Quest Conclusion

Step into the chamber and take the book. You are instantly bombarded with a knowledge intake that could hemorrhage the brains of lesser mortals. You may look into this unspeakable tome and live, or choose to close the book. Your knowledge is increased by an impressive amount, and this translates into skill increases for associated abilities. Here's how this breaks down:

Elect not to read: No benefits.

Read the Path of Might: +5 in all skills of this path (Smithing, Heavy Armor, Block, Two-Handed, One-Handed, Archery)

Read the Path of Shadow: +5 in all skills of this path (Light Armor, Sneak, Lockpicking, Pickpocket, Speech, Alchemy)

Read the Path of Magic: +5 in all skills of this path (Illusion, Conjuration, Destruction, Restoration, Alteration, Enchanting)

As you try to leave the box, the Wretched Abyss appears. You can elect to work wonders together as Hermaeus Mora's champion or disavow any agreement with the Daedric Prince.

Postquest Activities

You can embrace Hermaeus Mora, or deny him all you want; you are still doing his will.

CHARACTERS: Aspect of Hircine, Hircine, Hunters of Hircine, Indara Caerelia, Mathies Caerelia, Sinding

ENEMIES: Hunters of Hircine, Sinding, White Stag

- ◆ OBJECTIVES: Speak to Sinding, Kill the great beast, Begin the hunt, Hunt or Spare Sinding, Skin Sinding, Speak to Hircine, Kill the Hunters, Talk to Sinding

MINOR SPOILERS

Visit the Falkreath Barracks and locate Sinding in the jail. The man explains he suffers from lycanthropy and was in werewolf form during the attack. He is remorseful about his murderous infanticide. He tells you he lost control and needed to be restrained. He blames this on a cursed ring he acquired. It belongs to Hircine (the Daedric Lord of the Hunt). Sinding was told it could help him control his transformations, but instead it caused them to occur sporadically and at the most inopportune times. Sinding seeks to appease Hircine by returning the ring. He says legend holds that Hircine will appear to any who can slay a legendary beast that roams these woods. The beast in question is close by. Agree to take the ring to Hircine.

The Curse of Falkreath

For such a modest town, Falkreath has a sizable cemetery. As you enter this location, a burial ceremony is under way for a young girl. Instead of marching right in and interrogating everyone, you may listen to the townsfolk and gain some insight. Speak to the parents of the slain child—Indara Caerelia or her husband, Mathies. Either will tell you that their daughter was ripped apart by a man named Sinding, a laborer passing through this Hold. If you can stand to look upon him, you're told where he is. If you miss the burial, find Mathies or his wife tending to crops near their home.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Sinding

◆ TARGET: Sinding, inside Falkreath Barracks

Ring of Hircine (Cursed)

◆ OBJECTIVE: Kill the great beast

◆ TARGET: The White Stag, in the woods close to Falkreath

Beware the power of Hircine! With the ring in your possession, it cannot be removed. It is both powerful and cursed. If you are already a werewolf (as part of the Companions Quests) and you're outside a dungeon or city, every minute there is a 10 percent chance you will turn into your wolf form.

CAUTION

The Lord of the Hunt Smiles on You

The great beast of the forest is usually close to the path in the woods surrounding Peak's Shade Tower, but it moves constantly. Long-range weapons, such as magic or a bow, are an obvious advantage. Pursue the White Stag, and hunt it until your shots bring it down. Approach the slain animal, and a manifestation of Hircine appears. Speak to the Aspect of Hircine, and he recognizes the ring you carry. Hircine tells you Sinding has fled and gone into hiding, and a Great Hunt has been called to slay him. Hircine charges you to find this rogue shifter, tear the skin from his body, and bring it as an offering to him. He mentions there is a spot of competition to win Hircine's favor, and there's no time to dillydally.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Begin the hunt

◆ TARGET: Bloat Man's Grotto

Sinding has fled to Bloating Man's Grotto, a cave on the southern rim of the Tundra, just north of Lake Ilinalta. Journey there, and enter the grounds of this interior forest. The sky is blooded and swirled with clouds. The Bloodmoon looms overhead. Hircine's power is focused on this place. As the entrance cave opens up, you spot a campsite where a group of hunters lie in pools of blood. A Khajiit named J'Kier greet you as a fellow hunter. Though badly lacerated, he explains that the prey is too strong, but more hunters have come to slay the monster and gain Hircine's favor. J'Kier then passes. You can check on Batum gra-Bar, Ma'tasarr, and Hoddreid, but the rest of the hunting party has died. Sinding is a considerable force in this forest.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Hunt or Spare Sinding

◆ TARGET: Sinding, in Bloating Man's Grotto

The path to the left has been blocked by some fallen trees, so continue down the path past the pond. You hear a roar from up ahead and turn a corner to see Sinding standing atop a rocky outcrop. He doesn't attack you immediately. You can:

Charge in, ignoring any conversation Sinding attempts to have with you. This begins Path 1.

Ignore any conversation topics and attempt to kill Sinding, as Hircine has requested. This also begins Path 1.

Or, tell Sinding you've been sent to kill him. While he understands he can't stop you, he promises not to return to civilization to inadvertently murder anyone else. Spare his life (which begins Path 2), or kill him for defying Hircine (which also begins Path 1).

Path 1: Ending the Sins of Sinding

If you tell Sinding that he has to die or attack him at any time, you are fulfilling Hircine's request. Sinding flees to the ruins atop the hill, leaving you to give chase. The hunt is now on! Stalk your furry prey, using any means at your disposal. Quicken your pace by utilizing the Slow Time and Whirlwind Sprint Shouts, or you can simply run to Sinding instead (supplement your sprint with some Fortify or Restore Stamina potions). If you're only relying on your nonaugmented sprinting, you'll barely match Sinding's pace.

Continue to track and keep pace with Sinding as he clears the ruins, drops down, and slaughters two hunters in the first clearing. You may catch him here if you're swift and engage in a brief combat, but he flees after a few strikes. Pursue the beast into a second clearing, where three more hunters wait, and then into a third clearing where you find an additional three hunters. Attempt combat in all three locations.

TIP They don't stand a chance against Sinding, but if you hold his attention, the damage the hunters deal can help whittle down Sinding's considerable constitution. Any hunters that survive combat when Sinding moves on will follow you into the next clearing.

In the third clearing, Sinding finally stands his ground. With the help of any surviving hunters, bring down your quarry.

TIP Is Sinding becoming a problem to slay? Are you being pulverized by his sharp claws? Then check the terrain; Bloating Man's Grotto has numerous cliffs, and Sinding doesn't have any ranged attacks. If you can clamber up to the mountainous area (particularly the promontory) in the center of this grotto, you can run along the top of the cliffs, sniping Sinding to death. Which is hardly sporting, but very effective!

◆ OBJECTIVE: Skin Sinding

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Hircine

After you tear the skin from Sinding's body, Hircine appears in Sinding's form and thanks you for your offering. Satisfied that Sinding has been cast from this world, the Lord of the Hunt transforms the skin into his legendary artifact, the Savior's Hide, and gives it to you as a reward.

► Sinding's Skin

Path 2: Taking the Side of Sinding

◆ OBJECTIVE: Kill the Hunters

Inform Sinding that you will spare his life: Sinding is thankful, but there is little time to lose; more hunters have appeared and must be defeated. Sinding waits for you on the promontory. Head up the stairs on your right and join forces with him, then head through the ruins to reach the first group of hunters. There are two in the first clearing, three in the second, and three more in the third.

TIP If you side with Sinding but attack him at any time later on, Path 1 is your only option. Devious, underhanded scoundrels may wish to time their betrayal of Sinding at just the right moment—when he's badly wounded by hunters! This is far less work for you but displays appalling sportsmanship!

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Sinding

Speak with Sinding, and he is grateful for your help. But when you leave the Grotto, you find yourself face to face with Hircine once more. No matter your answers, he is satisfied by the hunt, and removes the curse on the ring.

Quest Conclusion

If you sided with Hircine, you receive the Savior's Hide.

► Savior's Hide

If you sided with Sinding, you keep Hircine's ring.

► Ring of Hircine

Postquest Activities

If you obtained the Savior's Hide, the ring is removed. If you sided with Sinding, you keep the ring, which is no longer cursed. It grants you an additional werewolf transformation per day (but only if you're a werewolf), and you don't need to worry about uncontrollable transformations!

MINOR SPOILERS

INTERSECTING QUESTS: None

LOCATIONS: Fallowstone Cave, Giant's Grove, Largashbur

CHARACTERS: Atub, Chief Yamarz, Gularzob, Malacath, Ugor

ENEMIES: Cave Bear, Giant

- ◆ OBJECTIVES: Bring Troll Fat and a Daedra Heart to Atub, Observe Atub's ritual, Speak with Yamarz, Meet Yamarz at Fallowstone Cave, Protect Yamarz, Defeat the giant, Take Shagrol's Warhammer back to Largashbur, Place Shagrol's Warhammer on the shrine in Largashbur

Keeper of Oaths, Master of Curses

Largashbur is a stronghold in the southwestern corner of the Rift and is home to a tribe of distrustful Orcs. As you approach, the Orcs are engaged in a battle with a giant. You can watch as they eventually take the giant down or step in and help (but be very careful you don't target the Orcs fighting). After the skirmish, Ugor—one of the gate guards—demands that you leave at once. Her anger is tempered by the slightly more levelheaded Atub, who you should speak with. Ask her what is going on, and she quickly (and uncharacteristically) reveals that her tribe is suffering and needs help.

It seems the tribe's once-powerful chief, Yamarz, is now stricken and cursed. This weakens the tribe, and the giants sense this: The stronghold has suffered from constant giant attacks. Yamarz has demanded the tribe remain within the walls of Largashbur, and Atub wishes to petition Malacath to lift this curse. As she cannot travel to the shrine, the ritual must be performed within Largashbur, but Atub lacks some materials needed; in particular she requires Troll Fat and a Daedra Heart.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Bring Troll Fat and a Daedra Heart to Atub

Troll Fat Finding: This is a relatively easy material to find. Simply locate an area where trolls (regular or Frost) roam, defeat one, and then search the corpse for the Troll Fat you need. There are always a couple of these powerful beasts roaming the exterior of Labyrinthian.

► Troll Fat

Daedra Heart Hunting: This is harder. Plunging your hand into a dead Dremora is the easy part; finding one is not. Try the following places:

During Daedric Quests: The Black Star and Pieces of the Past.

These occasionally show up in a vendor's list.

Enthir in the College of Winterhold always has one or two for sale, but at an inflated price.

If stealing appeals to you, find one in Kodlak's room in Jorrvaskr (Whiterun).

Or, steal one from the altar in the Hall of the Vigilant (in the Pale Hold).

Or, steal one from the Alchemy Room of the Nightcaller Temple (during Daedric Quest: Waking Nightmare).

► Daedra Heart

◆ OBJECTIVE: Observe Atub's ritual

Once you return with both materials for the ritual, Atub thanks you and beckons you into Largashbur. An enraged Ugor yells at Atub for bringing an outsider into the stronghold, but Atub calms her, allowing you safe passage into the settlement. She walks across the dirt yard and into the longhouse. Chief Yamarz is usually inside and takes an immediate disliking to you. Speak with him, and he keeps the insults flowing and complains about his cursed lack of sleep. Atub approaches and tells him it is time for the ritual to begin.

After Atub commences the ritual, Malacath's booming voice soon resonates around the camp. Most of the Daedric Prince's venom is directed at Yamarz, who is called weak, small, and an embarrassment. Furthermore, the Orcs have let giants overrun Malacath's shrine. This is an outrage! Yamarz is ordered to bring back the leader's club as an offering. Only then will Malacath consider lifting the curse. The ritual concludes, and Yamarz agrees to this task. But first, he wants a word with you.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak with Yamarz

Blaming you for Malacath's task, Yamarz demands that you help him. You're to act as his bodyguard, ensuring he doesn't have any trouble reaching the giant. And just so you're clear, he'll definitely be killing the giant's leader himself; he just wants you to handle any attackers along the way. He agrees to make it worth your while. Whether you agree or not is immaterial; you are to meet Yamarz at the entrance to the giants' lair, which leads to Malacath's shrine.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Meet Yamarz at Fallowstone Cave cave entrance and wait for Yamarz to appear. Your chaperoning begins after you enter the cave.

Fallowstone Cave is nestled in the foothills of the Velothi Mountains, northeast of Riften. You may trek there with Chief Yamarz, fending off any attacks as you cross the thick forest of birch and pine trees, or you can Fast-Travel (or ride) to the ◆ OBJECTIVE: Protect Yamarz

◆ TARGET: Chief Yamarz, throughout Fallowstone Cave

Enter the cave. Yamarz reluctantly sets off down the tunnel. Follow a few paces or two behind him as the tunnel opens into a gloriously immense subterranean cavern, complete with a waterfall to your left and a series of large, natural steps down to a lower lake area. Follow Yamarz over the small natural bridge and down the steps. Continue to the grotto floor. At the grotto's far end is a campfire and a giant wandering the area. Yamarz avoids the area, and heads along the rushing stream, into a connecting tunnel.

TIP There's no need to confront the giant; if you wish to slay one, wait until this objective completes and backtrack to fight them, rather than risk Yamarz's health.

Head down the stream into a smaller grotto lagoon, where you see a second giant. Avoid it unless it charges you both, and then follow the cave tunnel on the southeastern wall. Enter and scramble up the dirt tunnel, to a confrontation with a couple of wild animals (usually cave bears). The bears are roaming an area of corpses and half-digested food at the entrance to a gap in the southwest tunnel wall. Follow Yamarz up here and into Giant's Grove.

Move alongside Yamarz, following a path of skeletal remains and bloodstains in the snow, until he stops and turns to you, telling you he's ready to kill the giant—that is, of course, unless you want to make some extra gold.

Yamarz has a proposition for you: If you face the giant and kill it, he'll simply return to the tribe and tell them he was responsible. They'll be none the wiser, and you'll be all the richer. You can:

Refuse, telling Yamarz that he is the one who is supposed to kill the giant to lift the curse. He reluctantly agrees and rushes toward the campfire and the giant guarding a large shrine statue of Malacath. Moments later, Yamarz is caught by the giant's club and is crushed, sprawled dead on the snow. You now need to face the giant yourself.

Agree, and rush toward the large campfire and the giant with your weapons drawn.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Defeat the giant

Kill the giant using the same techniques you've used countless times before. Remember to use the landscape to your advantage, finding cover so your Stamina recharges. After you destroy this giant leader, search the corpse for a massive hammer. This is the weapon Malacath ordered Yamarz to return to Largashbur.

➤ Shagrol's Warhammer

◆ OBJECTIVE: Take Shagrol's Warhammer back to Largashbur

Head back toward the exit of Giant's Grove. If you agreed to kill the giant for Chief Yamarz, he is here, ready to welch on his agreement. He can't have the likes of you usurping his authority and mentioning you were responsible for the giant's death. Yamarz attacks and must be killed.

Either way, when both Chief Yamarz and the giant leader are dead, Malacath speaks to you from his shrine effigy, impressed by your fighting prowess.

Atub greets you at the gate to Largashbur. She asks what happened to Yamarz. You can tell the truth or give a slightly skewed account of events in which Yamarz was a brave fighter instead of the sniveling backstabber he actually was. Either way, Atub walks toward the shrine, Malacath's voice ringing around the camp. The Daedric Prince is willing to give this motley band of Orcs a chance and appoints Gularzob (Yamarz's son) as chief. Malacath finally insists that you place the hammer on the shrine.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Place Shagrol's Warhammer on the shrine in Largashbur

Quest Conclusion

Approach the skull on the trunk and place the hammer on its antlers. Malacath is satisfied and replaces the hammer with an exceptional weapon named Volendrung, which you can wield!

➤ Volendrung

Postquest Activities

Volendrung is a massive warhammer with an Absorb Stamina enchantment. This allows you to inflict power attacks without stopping for as long as it has a charge! As Malacath's champion, you can take this. Malacath then names Gularzob as the new chief, and all the remaining Orcs are now friendly toward you. As Malacath's champion, you are also blood-kin to the other Orcs as well and don't have to complete Side Quest: Forgemaster's Fingers to gain acceptance in any Orc stronghold.

Dead Oaths on Dead Lips

When you reach Level 20, visit any city in Skyrim; Riverwood is a fine example. When you reach the city, a courier approaches and delivers a message regarding the opening of a new museum up in Dawnstar. The owner is handing out invitations; you can visit at your earliest convenience. This doesn't begin the quest yet, just a Miscellaneous Objective that piques your interest.

◆ MISCELLANEOUS OBJECTIVE: Visit the museum in Dawnstar

◆ TARGET: Silus Vesuius's House, in Dawnstar

As you near Silus Vesuius's House in Dawnstar, he is out on the porch having a heated discussion with Dawnstar's Court Wizard, Madena. The argument centers around Silus refusing to bury his family's legacy. Madena eventually gives up talking to him and leaves, allowing you to greet Silus and visit the Museum of the Mythic Dawn. You can ask him more about it, and he reveals it contains artifacts from a group that once toppled an Empire. Silus also has a job you'd be perfect for. This quest now officially begins.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Silus inside his house

◆ TARGET: The Museum of the Mythic Dawn, in Dawnstar

The museum takes up about two-thirds of Silus's house. You are free to peruse the cabinets before speaking to Silus; he offers commentary as you inspect each display case. You discover the tapestries were hung in hideouts where the mysterious Mythic Dawn would meet and plot. The scabbard has Oblivion Gate iconography etched into it, a key symbol of Mehrunes Dagon, the patron Daedra. The case of books are commentaries on the Mysterium Xarxes, written by the cult's leader, Mankar Camoran. The burned paper is all that remains of the fabled Mysterium Xarxes, the blasphemous book written by Mehrunes Dagon. Finally, the robes were worn during the Mythic Dawn's secret meetings, where they plotted to bring Dagon into Tamriel.

With the tour over, you can speak with Silus about the Mythic Dawn and the museum. But asking about the job is the most important question. Silus tells you that after the Oblivion Crisis, groups began to appear that were dedicated to wiping out what was left of the Mythic Dawn. One of these groups found Mehrunes' Razor, the artifact of Dagon. After splitting this razor into three fragments, the pieces were dispersed. Silus wants the pieces reunited. You're here to remove the fragments from their current owners—two dangerous marauders named Ghunzul and Drascua and a resident of Morthal named Jorgen. Silus hands you notes about each of them and will gladly pay for any pieces you bring back to him.

Daedric Defragmentation

TIP You may have already explored these main locations and found a fragment. If you investigate the areas and the fragment isn't there, check your inventory.

Part 1: Drascua's Pommel

Far to the west, just southwest of Markarth, is Hag Rock Redoubt. Begin the long ascension, passing under a couple of buttress overhangs while tackling the Forsworn that are swarming this location. Continue up the slopes, passing under two stone arches with carved heads atop each side; beware of cave bears in these parts. At this point, you can:

Proceed directly to Dead Crone Rock by weaving through the exterior Forsworn Camp.

Or you can follow the pathway up to an old ceremonial crypt and sacrificial area sunk into the side of the mountain, and enter the iron door into Hag Rock Redoubt Ruin. Inside, the Forsworn have erected sharpened wood spikes and attack viciously when you maneuver into their eating area. Clear this place of foes (or sneak by) before using the spiral stairs to reach an upper corridor and a circular storage room containing a Forsworn Briarheart. Then head southwest, around the corridor to the ruin's exit.

You arrive on the roof of the interior ruin. This stone plateau is dominated by steps to ascend and a small Forsworn camp to raze or ignore. Climb the steps until you reach the exterior of Dead Crone Rock, a granite fortification toward the slope's top. Head up the stairs to the first level, which consists of a corridor, more Forsworn, and spiral stairs up to the main floor. A circular chamber atop the spiral stairs has its main exit (to the southwest) blocked by a portcullis. Raise it by fighting through a chamber with a long, bloody sacrificial table and into a connecting room with a lever. Pull the lever to raise the portcullis before leaving by the now-open exit that ends in a wooden door.

You appear at the base of more steps. These lead to the top of Dead Crone Rock, where the Hagraven Drascua resides. Attack with your preferred weapons until she yields. Search her corpse for the pommel and the Dead Crone Rock Key, which opens the locked gate in the previous interior fortification you climbed through. Also, absorb another Word of Power from the nearby Word Wall.

Beware of magic traps in this general area; fire shoots from Soul Gems on pedestals; rush and grab the gem to stop the fire or flee past.

CAUTION

- Word of Power: Dismaying Shout

◆ OBJECTIVE: Bring the pommel stone to Silus
◆ TARGET: Silus Vesuius's House, in Dawnstar

Part 2: Ghunzul's Blade Shards

Journey into Falkreath Hold and approach Cracked Tusk Keep. There are usually two Orcs standing guard on the watchtowers. Pick them off with arrows or spells from a distance to soften up the Keep's defenses. Then climb over the dilapidated fortifications, or use the front gate for a less-subtle entry if you aren't concerned about stealth. Expect a trio of Orc hunters and bandits on guard here. These shouldn't prove too difficult to overcome. Your main access point into the Keep is the door to the southwest, in the middle of the main inner Keep wall. An alternate entrance to the right (west) is locked (Adept) and allows you to avoid the confrontation with Ghunzul.

Once inside, prepare to attack more Orc enemies in the two-floor storage and dining area, with a door in the southeastern wall. This leads to a fireplace and bedroom, Ghunzul's usual location (although he may be wandering the Keep's interior). He's brandishing a particularly impressive two-handed weapon, so prepare for intense combat in a confined space. Continue fighting until you beat Ghunzul to death. Alternatively, you can try pickpocketing the Orc if your Sneak skills are truly impressive. Either way, Ghunzul is carrying an important key on him.

➤ Cracked Tusk Vault Key

TIP If you just want the Shards and can unlock the Expert-locked cage on your own, you can avoid Ghunzul completely. Or, defeat Ghunzul to make the unlocking a lot easier!

Return to the raised dining room. This time take the door on the lower level to the northwest, which leads down into a small barrel-storing cellar and passage. Ignore the door leading back outside (this is the western entrance from the exterior), and inspect the cage, which is blocking your path to the southwest. Use the Vault Key (or an exceptional Lockpick [Expert]) to unlock the cage, releasing the vertical spike bars. When the spikes recede, descend to and open the door to Cracked Tusk Vaults.

Head down the stairs and into the slightly soggy underground vault. The way ahead is blocked by several spear bars. Pull the two levers to either side of the passage to release both sets of spears. Then carefully walk forward, cutting instead of triggering the two trip wires that release darts up and into you. Or, run through and step to the side. Now approach the pedestal with the blade shards on it, and grab them before moving backward quickly, thus avoiding a flurry of additional darts. Now retrace your steps back out into Skyrim.

TIP If you stop after breaking each trip wire, the darts fire harmlessly in front of you. Avoid the dart traps entirely by sidestepping left just inside the door, but watch for a trip wire to the side that triggers a wall trap.

QUESTS: DAEDRIC QUESTS

PRIMA OFFICIAL GAME GUIDE

WWW.PRIMAGAMES.COM

Part 3: Jorgen's Hilt

The hilt of the Razor is the easiest to obtain. It involves traveling to Morthal and locating Jorgen, who runs the mill. He doesn't have time to talk but stops when you tell him what you're looking for. He plays dumb until you mention Silus's name. He tells you he's not about to let that Razor out of his locked house after his family spent eight generations keeping it safe. At this point, you can:

(Persuade) Tell him he won't miss it.

(Bribe) Pay a large amount of gold for securing it.

(Intimidate) Or demand the hilt, before matters take a turn for the worse. This is easy once you reach Level 26 or higher. If you fail, you'll need to brawl until he agrees. That's "brawl," not "kill"!

(Lockpick) Or you can find Jorgen's house without his help and pick any locks needed to reach the hilt.

Succeed in any of the first three options, and you're hastily given the keys to the chest in Jorgen's house and told not to hurt his family.

➤ Key to Jorgen and Lami's House ➤ Key to Jorgen's Chest

Whether you have Jorgen's keys or not, the next stop is Jorgen's house, which is opposite the sawmill. Pick the lock (Novice) or use one of the keys, and step inside, ignoring Lami. Inspect and open Jorgen's Chest (Adept) at the end of his bed using Lockpick or the second key. You may elect to clear out all his valuables, or just the hilt.

➤ Hilt of Mehrunes' Razor

◆ OBJECTIVE: Bring the hilt to Silus

◆ TARGET: Silus Vesuius's House, in Dawnstar

◆ Dagon's New Dawn

Return with all three fragments of Mehrunes' Razor, and revisit Silus Vesuius's House in Dawnstar. The slightly mad mage is extremely impressed with your collecting abilities and gives you a sizable reward. When all three fragments are back in his hands, Silus lets you in on a little secret: The scabbard in the display case is actually the fourth piece of the blade. What's more, if you both take all the pieces to Dagon's shrine, you could contact the Prince of Destruction directly and ask him to make Mehrunes' Razor whole again. This may appeal or be a terrible idea; either way, Silus will meet you at the shrine!

➤ Levelled gold pieces

◆ OBJECTIVE: Meet Silus at the Shrine of Mehrunes Dagon

◆ TARGET: Shrine of Mehrunes Dagon

On the summit of the mountains that lie south and west of Dawnstar, and south and east of Morthal, sits the ominous shrine to Mehrunes Dagon.

Trek there, and optionally slay any animal predators lurking at the base of the precarious ceremonial steps that lead to the giant carved statue of the Daedric Prince of Destruction. Silus places the blade fragments on the altar and begs for the blade's full glory! Nothing happens; it falls to you to commune with Mehrunes Dagon.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Mehrunes Dagon

Approach the altar, and a deep, booming voice fills the air and your head. Mehrunes Dagon has deemed you worth speaking to, but Silus has fulfilled his purpose. You are instructed to kill him. At this point, you can:

Agree to Lord Dagon's command.

Inform Lord Dagon that Silus deserves to live.

Neither makes any difference, as Lord Dagon has decided Silus's fate.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Kill Silus

Silus is quick to tell you there is another way to end this that doesn't involve him getting gutted. He can take the pieces back to the museum and seal them in the display case. You can either agree to this or begin your murder of Silus Vesuius.

Quest Conclusion 1: Silus Dies

Strike Silus down, optionally scavenging the rare clothing he wears. Then approach the altar again and begin to serve Mehrunes Dagon.

➤ Mythic Dawn Boots

➤ Mythic Dawn Gloves ➤ Mythic Dawn Robes

◆ OBJECTIVE: Reforge Mehrunes' Razor

◆ OBJECTIVE: Claim Mehrunes' Razor

The power of Mehrunes Dagon is still impressive, as the Lord raises the pieces of the blade and fuses them together like new. Take the weapon from the air. As Dagon's voice fades, he gives you one final challenge. The shrine doors swing open, and two Dremora rush out to kill you. Return the favor, plunging Mehrunes' Razor deep or using your own favored weapons. Remember to take the Dremora's Daedra Heart, a rare ingredient that may come in handy for your concoctions.

➤ Mehrunes' Razor ➤ Daedra Heart (2)

Quest Conclusion 2: Silus Flees

If you speak with Silus and agree to his plan, he hands you some gold and attempts to flee. Mehrunes Dagon's wrath is incurred, and the doors to his shrine swing open, releasing two Dremora.

Use your favored weapons to defeat them, and remember to take the Dremora's Daedra Heart, an uncommon ingredient that you can utilize in your dark crafting. At this point, you can follow Silus through the wilderness, back to his museum (after which he thanks you for helping him escape), or leave him to fend for himself. Either way, you don't receive Mehrunes' Razor.

➤ Levelled gold pieces ➤ Daedra Heart (2)

Postquest Activities

Be warned: If you let Silus go, you can never claim the Razor and the quest will end! Either way, ensure you enter the interior of Mehrunes Dagon's shrine and gather all the available (and impressive) loot inside!

PREREQUISITES: You must be Level 20 or higher. Complete Main Quest: Dragon Rising

INTERSECTING QUESTS: None

LOCATIONS: Whiterun, Dragonsreach, Dragonsreach Jarl's Quarters

CHARACTERS: Dagny, Farengar, Frothar, Mephala (The Webspinner), Nelkir

◆ OBJECTIVES: Find out what's wrong with Nelkir, Listen to the whispering door, Speak to Nelkir, Obtain the key to the whispering door, Open the whispering door, Retrieve the Ebony Blade

Murmurs at the Whispering Door

Once you're an experienced adventurer (and reached Level 20 or higher), and you've helped Jarl Balgruuf the Greater of Whiterun during Main Quest: Dragon Rising, speak to the Innkeeper at the Bannerman's Mare in Whiterun. Rumor has it that the Jarl is having some trouble with his children. Ask him about this, and Balgruuf tells you Nelkir has become brooding and is prone to violence. He asks whether you could speak to him and ask why he's acting the way he is.

NOTE Have you sided with the Stormcloaks and ousted Jarl Balgruuf the Greater from Whiterun? Then this quest is still available, although Balgruuf has fled to Solitude. Find him and his family inside the Blue Palace. Aside from moving back and forth between Hold capitals, this quest remains unchanged. The following is written assuming you encounter Balgruuf and his children in Dragonsreach.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Find out what's wrong with Nelkir

◆ TARGET: Nelkir, inside Dragonsreach, in Whiterun

Nelkir is wandering somewhere inside Dragonsreach, usually near the great hall or the war room atop the steps, or in the Jarl's quarters. When you greet Nelkir, he's suitably petulant. Once you've faced the verbal abuse, Nelkir mentions that he knows more about his father than anyone thinks he does. Ask him to clarify, and he says his father still worships Talos and hates the Thalmor almost as much as the Stormcloaks do. Ask how he knows this, and he mentions a place where he overhears murmuring: Nelkir listens to Lady of Whispers from the locked door in the basement. She talks to him. She'll probably talk to you, too.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Listen to the whispering door

◆ TARGET: Nelkir, inside Dragonsreach, in Whiterun

Head northwest through the great hall and down the steps close to the large fireplace. Open the basement door, and enter the tiny storage room with a locked door in the far left (eastern) corner. Listen at the door, and a strange woman's voice echoes through the keyhole. Regrettably, the voice cannot reveal itself in this plane directly, and few hear the words of Mephala, the Lady of Whispers. She expects you to take an active role in sussing out secrets. This starts with you opening the locked door, as a piece of her power has been locked away behind it. The dark child Nelkir holds knowledge that will further your new cause.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Nelkir

When you meet Nelkir again, he already knows you've met the Whispering Lady. Speak to him, and he tells you that only two people can open the door: Balgruuf and Farengar Secret-Fire the court wizard. You must decide who to interact with and take the key from them.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Obtain the key to the whispering door

This leaves two possible keyholders to choose. You can:

Pickpocket Balgruuf: Wait until Balgruuf moves from his throne and you aren't being watched, then sneak up and pickpocket him. He can be asleep or simply facing away from you.

Kill Farengar: Wait until Farengar retires to his quarters, ideally moving into his adjacent bedroom, and then kill him while he sleeps. This isn't that wise, unless you've purchased all the spells you need to from him.

Pickpocket Farengar: Wait until Farengar retires to his quarters, and then sneak up and pickpocket him. He can be asleep or simply facing away from you.

Once one of these plans works, you manage to obtain a prized key.

➤ Whispering Door Key

◆ OBJECTIVE: Open the whispering door

◆ OBJECTIVE: Retrieve the Ebony Blade

Quest Conclusion

Head back down into the storage cellar, to the door at which you listened to Mephala, and open it with the key. Inside is a simple storage room. On the wooden table rests a long Ebony Blade and an admonition against it. The book tells you to resist the temptation of taking this indestructible, madness-inducing, cursed sword. When you pick up the blade, the whisper in your head congratulates you, but then informs you that the blade must be returned to its past glory. The blood of deceit must be drunk! You are now bound to the will of Mephala!

➤ Admonition Against Ebony

➤ Ebony Blade

Postquest Activities

This powerful Daedric weapon is currently underwhelming and lacks power. However, for every friend (i.e., someone you've completed a favor for, completed a task for, or won over during any type of quest) that you kill with it, the blade becomes more and more powerful, as it absorbs life from its victims.

PREREQUISITES: You must be Level 12 or higher.

INTERSECTING QUESTS: None

LOCATIONS: Statue to Meridia and Kilcreath Ruins, Kilcreath Balcony, Kilcreath Catacombs, Kilcreath Ruins, Kilcreath Temple

CHARACTERS: Meridia

ENEMIES: Imperial Soldier (Ghost), Malkoran, Stormcloak Soldier (Ghost)

- ◆ OBJECTIVES: Bring Meridia's beacon to Mount Kilcreath, Replace the beacon, Guide Meridia's Light through the temple, Destroy Malkoran, Retrieve Dawnbreaker

Beholding the Beacon of Light

Once you reach Level 12, you may discover this strange gem in one of the large and ornate treasure chests you open. This gem occurs randomly; it's not in any fixed location.

Meridia's Beacon

Take this Beacon, and as you exit the interior location, and every day thereafter, you hear a voice inside your head. It becomes increasingly alarmed at your lack of interest in helping the Solar Daughter, Meridia. When you wish to start this quest (if only to rid yourself of Meridia's alarming cranial lurking), find the Statue to Meridia.

The other way this quest can start is if you trek to Mount Kilcreath, in the mountain range west of Solitude. Try to spot a prominent statue of a woman with her arms raised to the sky, on the southern slopes just above Dragon Bridge. As you approach, you hear a voice commanding you to find and return with her beacon. Locate the object, and return to begin this quest.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Bring Meridia's Beacon to Mount Kilcreath

◆ OBJECTIVE: Replace the beacon

◆ TARGET: Statue to Meridia

Once you set the Beacon on the cupped arms of the small statues at the feet of Meridia's effigy, you are caught and whisked into the clouds. An aspect of Meridia appears. She tells you that a necromancer named Malkoran is planning to raise the dead of Skyrim's Civil War and wage open war on the living, using the energy of a powerful artifact in her shadow-filled shrine. You are to enter her shrine and shine the brilliant beam of light throughout the dungeon; it will open the way to the inner sanctum, where Malkoran is defiling her Daedric artifact, the Dawnbreaker.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Guide Meridia's Light through the temple

◆ TARGET: Kilcreath Temple, below Statue of Meridia

Shining Light in the Dark Temple

You descend back to earth. Locate the Iron Door below the statue plinth and descend into the temple. In the first large chamber, approach the pedestal in the center, which has a beam of light hitting it. Activate it. A beacon gem rises from the pedestal, ricocheting the light up and into a second gem contained in the mouth of a carved dragon. Then exit via the doorway underneath, into a second chamber where the ghosts of Imperial and Stormcloak Soldiers, controlled by Malkoran, attack you. Retaliate (and search the remains, as there's usually gold to be scavenged), and then activate the pedestal on the central steps.

The wooden doors atop the main steps lead to a blocked area, so head south, along a side tunnel, where the beam pierces the wall. Engage in more ghostly combat, before heading to a third main chamber, where you encounter more soldiers. Climb the wooden steps, and go to the upper stone bridge leading to the next pedestal. Activate it, and head south to the door leading to Kilcreath Balcony.

This balcony is outside, overlooking the forested valley below. Cross the bridge, fighting more ghostly foes, and quickly enter the door on the opposite side, leading into Kilcreath Ruins. At the main chamber, you face more spectral foes. Head up the steps (as the doors on the ground are sealed), and activate the pedestal at the top. Then navigate the corridors on the eastern side of the upper area, investigating any chests and urns you wish. Enter the caged bridge, then jump to the upper pedestal on the raised island. Head west through a previously sealed door.

This leads to another open chamber. Dispatch the ghosts before climbing the side wooden steps on the chamber's eastern side and following the corridor around and back to the room with the caged bridge. You are now above the bridge and can access the third pedestal, which unlocks the double doors in the south wall. Open them, and head down into the Kilcreath Catacombs.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Destroy Malkoran

You are close now; descend and enter an antechamber with the draped corpses of soldiers and a pedestal surrounded by candles. Activate the pedestal, which opens the double doors. Then descend to the main altar chamber, where Malkoran and a ghostly quartet of soldiers are ready to expel intruders. Attack these foes; consider backing up the corridor and steps you just descended so you aren't surrounded. Then fend off the attacks from Malkoran, bringing him down with superior combat and cunning.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Retrieve Dawnbreaker

Quest Conclusion

Approach the pedestal that holds the defiled Dawnbreaker, and wrench the sword free. Your view fills with light, and you ascend toward the heavens where Meridia is pleased that you've brought light to the realm of Skyrim. The dead shall remain at rest, and you are to keep Dawnbreaker and use it to purge corruption from the dark corners of the world. Wield it in her name (or agree to simply keep the weapon).

➤ Word of Power: Elemental Fury ➤ Dawnbreaker

Postquest Activities

Carry Dawnbreaker and wield it for Meridia, whether you told her to find someone else to spread her religion or whether you're a firm believer.

THE HOUSE OF HORRORS

PREREQUISITES: Leave Markarth and return again

● MINOR SPOILERS

INTERSECTING QUESTS: None

LOCATIONS: Markarth, Abandoned House

CHARACTERS: Logrolf the Willful, Molag Bal, Vigilant Tyranus, Yngvar

ENEMIES: Random

◆ OBJECTIVES: Search the Abandoned House, Find your reward, Find the priest of Boethiah, Free Logrolf, Go to the abandoned house, Beat Logrolf into submission, Kill Logrolf, Speak to Molag Bal

◆ OBJECTIVE: Search the Abandoned House

◆ TARGET: Locked door, inside the Abandoned House

The house's interior is well lit. There is no rot on the furniture, and fresh food lies waiting to be prepared. Someone was here recently. Tyranus is startled by an odd sound and opens the door. You swear a basket rolls across the room in front of you both. There's both a faint moaning and a deep rumbling sound. A strange vapor hangs in the air. Tyranus is convinced something is amiss and heads down the stairs. He shouts for the entity to show itself. Candles illuminate the gloom. The voice in your head tells you to open another door; try it and it is sealed shut.

When various objects begin to fly around, Tyranus flees the area, vowing to find help: This is no ordinary Daedra. Tyranus reaches the entrance room and begins to slow down. Follow him, and you hear a growling voice telling you to crush Tyranus. You can:

Wait, hoping that Tyranus regains his composure. He doesn't and eventually, overcome by the strange presence, attacks you!

Follow the orders from the voice inside your head, and attack Tyranus. Keep this up until one of you is dead.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Find your reward

◆ TARGET: Altar, inside the Abandoned House

A Powerful Trickster

The first time you visit the canyon city of Markarth, you witness a brazen Forsworn attack on a market stall holder. Next time you enter the city, head along the right (north) side of the thoroughfare, along the canal, until you meet two men conversing outside a dwelling. A cowled priest named Vigilant Tyranus is asking a Nord called Yngvar whether he's seen any strange lights or unusual noises emanating from the house. Yngvar says he hasn't, and Tyranus turns to you, asking similar questions. Reply as you wish, and Vigilant Tyranus explains that he's a Vigilant of Stendarr; he finds areas believed to be used for Daedra worship and removes the presence. Ask if he needs help, and he says to follow him into the Abandoned House.

With Tyranus out of the way, you can claim the reward for your cold-blooded murder. Venture back into the depths of the dwelling, to the locked door. It has been mysteriously unlocked, and you swear the candles burn brighter as you turn the handle. The same voice beckons you into the bowels of the building. The chamber begins to tremble. Search behind the shelving for a hole in the (east) wall. This leads to an earthen tunnel and into a long-forgotten altar, upon which rests an ornate but rusty mace. Pick it up.

You briefly cower as a cage of onyx spikes springs up around you. Molag Bal, the Lord of Corruption, deems you foolish to think you would be rewarded so easily! Speak to Molag Bal and mention the altar or mace. There was a time when that mace dripped with the blood of the feeble and the worthless. But Molag Bal's rival Boethiah sent his priest here to desecrate this altar. It was left to decay. Until now. Molag Bal wants the priest responsible to willingly turn to his service and surrender his soul. Agree to help (as it's the only way to free yourself).

◆ OBJECTIVE: Find the priest of Boethiah

◆ TARGET: Logrolf the Willful, inside [a random location]

◆ A Willful Execution

Travel to the location indicated on your world map. Work your way through the dungeon that the priest is lurking in, until you find them. The priest is Logrolf the Willful, and he's usually tied up and helpless. It is worth killing any enemies in the chamber Logrolf is being held in so you can easily free him. Let him know you're here to rescue him. He's immediately suspicious, as nobody knew where he was when he was taken. He asks who sent you. You can:

(Persuade) Pretend his own master Boethiah sent you.

(Bribe: Gold, various amount) Ask why it matters, as there's gold to be had. Your gold.

(Intimidate: Level 13) Or tell him the truth to frighten him: Molag Bal sent you.

When one of these plans works, untie the binds. Logrolf has some other business to attend to. You needn't follow or chaperone him. Eventually, the subtle will of Molag Bal will play on Logrolf's mind, and he'll visit the Abandoned House.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Free Logrolf

◆ OBJECTIVE: Go to the Abandoned House

◆ TARGET: Abandoned House, in Markarth

Journey back to Markarth and enter the Abandoned House. Logrolf the Willful is already waiting inside and runs into the depths of the dwelling, around the shelving and through the hidden tunnel. He approaches the altar. Molag Bal springs the trap, and the onyx spikes surround Logrolf. The priest seems less perturbed, as he has bettered Molag Bal before. Molag Bal answers that he has a champion now and grants you use of his mace. Take it!

➤ Rusty Mace

◆ OBJECTIVE: Beat Logrolf into submission

Stand between the spikes, and bring the mace down repeatedly on Logrolf. He yells that he'll never submit. Eventually, you bludgeon him to death. Molag Bal laughs at the frail, limp, and pathetic bodies that mortals possess. He then resurrects Logrolf, ordering you to strike him again! After two more vicious swings, Logrolf can't take any more and submits to Molag Bal. He promises to pledge his soul, to forsake the weak and pitiful Boethiah. Molag Bal is satisfied. Once you kill him again.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Kill Logrolf

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Molag Bal

Quest Conclusion

Bring your Rusty Mace down hard on Logrolf's crippled form. When he's dead (again), speak to Molag Bal, who presents you with the true power of this mace. When your enemies lie broken and bloody, know that he will be watching. Then Molag Bal leaves this plane of existence...for the time being.

➤ Mace of Molag Bal

Postquest Activities

You can stay in this Abandoned House, using the bed, and take any items you wish (although this isn't classified as your home). In addition, if you carry Molag Bal's mace where there are city guards, they tend to comment on it.

MINOR SPOILERS

◆ MISCELLANEOUS OBJECTIVE: Investigate the Hall of the Dead

◆ TARGET: Hall of the Dead, in Markarth

TIP Alternatively, you can enter Markarth's Hall of the Dead by unlocking the door (Adept) and sneaking in there.

Travel southwest from Brother Verulus's location. Open the heavy gold doors and enter the Hall of the Dead. The eerie, mist-laden hall seems deserted, until you hear a voice speaking to you. It believes you are exhibiting the signs of temptation, that there is a hunger inside; you see the dead and your mouth waters. Continue this unnerving search of this giant tomb, until you stumble upon Eola. She refuses to talk about anything other than the deliciousness of human flesh. And the craving! Don't worry; you have a friend now. Although you can voice disgust as you speak with her, Eola is an emissary of Namira, the Lady of Decay. Namira has a place where you can sate your appetite without judgment. Ask where this place is, and Eola explains that it's inside Reachcliff Cave. However, the dead there have started to stir. Meet Eola there, and she vows to fight with you to Namira's embrace. This quest officially begins now.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Clear the Draugr from Reachcliff Cave

◆ TARGET: All Draugr, inside Reachcliff Cave

◆ MISCELLANEOUS OBJECTIVE: Tell Verulus the Hall of the Dead is safe

◆ TARGET: Brother Verulus, Understone Keep, in Markarth

▶ Prelude: Hunger in the Hall*

Kleppr and his wife, Frabbi, are a fountain of knowledge about rumors in and around Markarth. Visit them inside the Silver-Blood Inn, and ask around for rumors. Eventually, either of them lets you know that the Hall of the Dead in Markarth has been closed. They suggest you speak to Brother Verulus to find out more information about why this has happened.

◆ MISCELLANEOUS OBJECTIVE: Speak to Verulus about the Hall of the Dead

◆ TARGET: Brother Verulus, inside Understone Keep

Visit Understone Keep, dug into the western canyon side of Markarth. In the entrance hall, listen to Thongvor Silver-Blood arguing about access to the Hall of the Dead with Brother Verulus. After the conversation is over, step up and speak to Verulus, who tells you the Hall is not able to be visited. You can:

(Persuade) Tell him you're here to help. This is a novice challenge, and you always succeed in this.

(Bribe) Offer a small contribution to his causes.

(Intimidate) Or tell him you don't like being ignored. As Verulus cannot be intimidated, this challenge always fails.

Success in either of these options results in Brother Verulus agreeing to let you investigate the strange goings-on inside the Hall of the Dead. The Priesthood of Arkay will offer a reward if the odd activities in the Hall stop. You are given a key allowing you to enter, and another Miscellaneous Objective begins. Ask for more information on Arkay or the Hall before you part ways.

▶ Markarth Hall of the Dead Key

Before you commence Daedric Quest: The Taste of Death, head out of the Hall of the Dead, into Understone Keep, and find Brother Verulus again. With Eola now absent from the Hall, it has been cleared of any oddities. He is most pleased with this news and rewards you with his own Amulet. The Prelude (Miscellaneous) Quest now concludes.

▶ Amulet of Arkay

▶ Carnage at Reachcliff Cave

Cave. Eola is waiting here, ready to plunge her blade into a Draugr or 20. You may bring her along (she acts as a Follower during this time, helping you stave off enemy attacks), or you can tell her to wait here if you want to fight on your own (or with other Followers). Now venture into the cave.

▶ Follower: Eola

Journey east and slightly south of Markarth, along the goat trails of the Reach. Search among the rocky hills and furrows for a small procession of megalith arches leading to three standing stones at the entrance to Reachcliff

It takes only a stride forward to wake the dead from this location. Muster forth your best Draugr-fighting implements and start carving, burning, or blasting your way into them. Beware of the high-ranking Draugr clambering out of the first coffin you see. Head down the connecting tunnel into a wider passage with stairs and a Nordic face carved into a stone column. After more Draugr fighting, head to the blocked-off arch and turn right (west). At the far end is an open cavern and a crumbling bridge section. To the south is a second bridge section with a jump to a treasure chest. Choose either route, working your way southward and down.

Check a wall handle (which opens a wall section next to it) and a pull chain (which opens an exit route), and continue to the Iron Door. This leads into a ceremonial hall and a large shrine to Namira at the far end, where the remaining Draugr in this cave await. After you defeat them all, along with the powerful lead Draugr who rises from the head of the table, your Draugr-culling task is complete.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Eola

Although you can retreat into the adjoining corridor with the pull chain, which leads to a corridor that will hasten your exit back into the Reach, in this particular case it is worth taking the long route back, finding Eola along the way (if she didn't accompany you). Eola is happy to have her shrine back and wishes to prepare a grand feast to welcome you into Namira's coven. You have the honor of bringing a fresh kill for the main course: a priest with a taste for the easy life. Bribe him with the gold Eola gives you, coax him back here, and Namira will take care of the rest. Now follow the corridor to the north from the adjoining room, and return to Markarth.

➤ 100 gold pieces

◆ OBJECTIVE: Convince Verulus to follow you

◆ TARGET: Brother Verulus, inside Understone Keep

🔮 Coven of the Cannibals

Return to the Hall of the Dead (if you've cleared it), or explore Understone Keep until you find the priest. Tell him you require his services. You can:

(Persuade) Tell him about the treasure to share.

(Bribe) Pay him to accompany you.

(Intimidate) Or tell him it wasn't an invitation but an order.

Should any of these attempts succeed, Brother Verulus agrees to accompany you and becomes a temporary Follower. You need not assign him any equipment.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Lead Verulus to the Shrine of Namira

◆ TARGET: Shrine of Namira, inside Reachcliff Cave

➤ Follower: Brother Verulus

Head back to the Reachcliff Cave (Fast-Traveling is helpful here, although you and Brother Verulus can trek here on foot). Descend the empty caverns, and head back into the ceremonial hall in the deepest recess of the cave system. Check that Verulus is behind you and lead him in, where he greets the assembled clan with faint suspicion. Eola tries to allay his fears, telling him he's with friends. Verulus begins to speak a little more slowly, as if his feeble mind is beginning to be controlled by unknown forces. Verulus seems to think he's been invited for dinner. Eola tells him to lie down. Verulus agrees, as he's suddenly very tired, and clammers onto the sacrificial altar to Namira. Eola turns to you; the meal is on Namira's table, and you're going to be carving.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Kill Verulus

◆ OBJECTIVE: Feast on Verulus

Quest Conclusion

Strike Verulus while he sleeps, using any weapon you wish, ideally a melee one. This raises your Bounty in the Reach. Then search the fresh corpse. His still-warm body lies before you; leave it alone or consume a section of Verulus's blood and bile. Namira begins to speak with you. She is pleased by your consumption and grants you her ring. Wear it when you feast on the flesh of the dead, and her power will flow through you. You may thank or annoy Namira with your final response before this quest concludes, then speak to Eola again to take her as a Follower.

➤ Ring of Namira

➤ Follower: Eola

NOTE Alternatively, you can kill Eola before Verulus lies on the table, but you fail this quest. You receive a small reward from Verulus and a large uproar from the assembled guests.

Postquest Activities

You may speak to any of the assembled coven guests at the feast. Some sit quietly and have little to say (except a few respectful remarks between mouthfuls of monk). However, there are more prominent members of this coven too. They are:

Hogni Red-Arm, the meat trader from Markarth.

Banning, the dog trainer from Markarth.

Lisbet, the merchant of the Arnleif and Sons Trading Company, in Markarth.

All of these secret cannibals strike up a conversation if you speak with them at the feast. They also have a particular conversation (regarding aspects of the pendant for flesh) when you return to Markarth and find them again. Brother Verulus also mentions this near-fatal feast if you save him from becoming the main course.

In addition, whenever you kill a bipedal entity, you can feast on them (this is a benefit the Ring gives you only if you're wearing it) and search them. Finally, Eola can become a Follower if you speak to her after siding with her.

INTERSECTING QUESTS: None

LOCATIONS: Bthardamz, Bthardamz Arcanex, Bthardamz Dwelling, Bthardamz Lower District, Bthardamz Study, Bthardamz Upper District, Bthardamz Workshop, Shrine to Peryite

CHARACTERS: Kesh the Clean, Peryite

ENEMIES: Afflicted, Dwarven Centurion, Dwarven Sphere, Dwarven Spider, Orchendor, Vampire

◆ OBJECTIVES: Obtain some Vampire Dust, Obtain a Deathbell Flower, Obtain a Silver Ingot, Obtain a Flawless Ruby, Deliver the ingredients, Inhale the fumes, Kill Orchendor, Report Orchendor's death to Peryite

A Fine Fume

This quest becomes available once you reach Level 10. You may also hear about the Afflicted by stumbling upon Bthardamz or by randomly encountering an Afflicted in World Encounter: Peryite's Pilgrim.

On a wooded clifftop bluff in the Drudach Mountains above Karthwasten lies a Shrine to Peryite, the Bringer of Pestilence. As you approach, you see a single figure: a Khajiit named Kesh the Clean. He is tending to his Alchemy Lab and a large golden cauldron by the shrine. Approach Kesh, and he inquires whether you've come to commune with Peryite the Taskmaster. You may find out more about this Daedric entity and ask whether you may speak to Peryite. Kesh says that he likes you, but for the commune to begin, incense is needed. He lists the ingredients necessary to mix the incense and gives you very general hints about where to find them.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Obtain some Vampire Dust

◆ OBJECTIVE: Obtain a Deathbell Flower

◆ OBJECTIVE: Obtain a Silver Ingot

◆ OBJECTIVE: Obtain a Flawless Ruby

Vampire Dust

You find Vampire Dust when you search the corpse of a vampire you've killed. Vampire Dust is also occasionally found in dungeons and is sold by merchants. Here are the easiest locations to look:

Any alchemy shop in a town that has one, or Court Wizard Quarters in a Hold capital city

If you have your own house, one of the Alchemy Lab upgrades comes with Vampire Dust

Seek out a vampire lair, such as Shriekwind Bastion or Broken Fang Cave

► Vampire Dust

Deathbell Flower

Deathbell Flowers are found in the frozen Tundra in Hjaalmarch Hold, scattered about the landscape, and in some dungeons. They are also available from the odd apothecary. Here are the easiest locations to look:

Anise's Cabin, on the other side of the river close to Riverwood

The vampire lair known as Bloodlet Throne

Any alchemy shop, Fort Snowhawk, or Fort Amol

► Deathbell Flower

Silver Ingot

To get Silver Ingots, you either need to mine and smelt silver ore, or find it already refined. Silver Ingots are sometimes sold by vendors as well, and you can sometimes steal it. Here are the easiest locations to look:

There are several Silver Ingots to steal in Dragonsreach (Whiterun).

There are a few to steal from the vault inside the Treasury House in Markarth.

If you don't want to steal, try exploring the Forsaken Cave, just west of Windhelm.

Head inside a silver mine (such as Fenn's Gulch Mine in Karthwasten), mine a vein of silver ore, and use the smelter outside to turn the ore into ingots.

► Silver Ingot

Flawless Ruby

A flawless ruby can be found by mining, and it is sold by merchants in the bigger Hold Cities. Here are the easiest locations to look:

The vampire lair known as Shriekwind Bastion.

The throne room inside Korvanjund. Access this during the Civil War Quests; the ruby is in a bowl with a spell book on an upper ledge left of the throne.

The Emperor's ship the Katariah, which docks near Solitude. Access this during the last Dark Brotherhood Quest; the ruby is in a jewelry box at the foot of the Emperor's bed.

Otherwise, purchase it from any caravan or vendor in a large city.

► Flawless Ruby

◆ OBJECTIVE: Deliver the Ingredients

◆ OBJECTIVE: Inhale the fumes

Kesh the Clean won't entertain mixing up the incense until you have all four ingredients on your person. Only then should you return to the Shrine of Peryite. He takes the ingredients and deposits them into the golden cauldron, encouraging you to inhale the bubbling ichor deeply. Your vision clouds, and a purple mass forms in front of you. This aspect of Peryite speaks to you. He has watched you for some time, found you intriguing, and wondered whether you'd make a proper agent for a task.

When you ask about the task, Peryite tells you he sent a blessing, a wasting plague that infected a scattering of Breton villages. One of his monks, an elf named Orchendor, was tasked with gathering the Afflicted. He was last seen shepherding them into Bthardamz but has since lost his way. Betrayal cannot be tolerated; you are to find and kill Orchendor. You may ask the aspect of Peryite clarifying questions and receive an angry answer thanks to your impertinence. Ask what you'd gain, and Peryite says he will grant you a powerful token: a Dwemer shield.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Kill Orchendor

◆ TARGET: Orchendor, in the Bthardamz Arcanex

Assault on the Afflicted

Bthardamz Exterior: Before you begin the trek to Bthardamz, optionally speak with Kesh the Clean again. He provides further information on Orchendor and the Dwarven ruins of a vast underground city, which you can actually see from this vantage point if you look due west. Then head down the mountain and climb the stone entrance steps to the pavilion domes that ushered in the Afflicted. Some still guard the area and will attack on sight. They are powerful warriors but have a weak constitution thanks to the pox Peryite infected them with. Work your way through the pavilion, and into the main entrance, complete with buttress domes on each side (you'll use one to exit from this place).

For the moment, head down the steps with the blade trap slit down the middle. The first golden lever you see activates these blades. The second lever to the right of the doorway blocked by spears removes this obstacle, allowing you through into the Bthardamz Upper District.

Bthardamz Upper District: Head down the ramped passage and around the corner to the right (north). Either open the gate (Novice) or navigate around two sleeping areas with Afflicted to pulverize. Continue along the corridors past an open storage room and down another slope to a large piston chamber where the Afflicted have gathered to breathe in the vapors of a bubbling ichor. Defeat or sneak around them, and head west into the main Upper District courtyard.

Amid the pipes and stonework is a central platform with green ooze bubbling. Take out the enemies, head north, climb the stairs to the balcony, and activate the lever. Spear bars retract from the balcony opposite, allowing you to leave via a stone path. Open the gold door and enter a passage heading west that ends in a pipe room. Dwarven Spheres are activated here if you enter. Take the sloping corridor on your right (south) with the whirling blade trap. Journey down a cobblestone street to a carved stone arch opening. Slay the Afflicted guarding this door to Bthardamz Workshop.

Bthardamz Workshop and Upper District (2): Move around the pipes, checking the gate on your right and left (north and south) to reach sleeping quarters. The second bedroom has a note revealing the exact location of Orchendor; he is inside the Bthardamz Arcanex. Continue along the green-tinted corridors to a stairwell where you fight your first Dwarven Spiders. The staircase allows you to enter the Upper District; gaze across the small maze of stonework and open a small chest. You can drop down from here (to the southeast, or you'll have to retrace your steps), or you can to return to the Workshop and head south into a steam pipe room with Afflicted and a second entrance back into the Upper District. Back in the Upper District, head southeast toward a series of stone steps. Climb them to the top. Along the way, there's a balcony you can check, as well as a separate Bthardamz Dwelling to scavenge. The stairs continue around to the southwest. Go up stone ramps offering a spectacular view back down and a corridor ending at a door to Bthardamz Lower District.

➤ Afflicted's Note

Bthardamz Lower District:

Now in the Lower District, tread through the echoing gloom, past a gate (with a chest behind it), and through a gold door and Dwarven Spider attack. In a large, ruined coliseum is a central plinth on which rests a chest. The lever on the balcony activates a blade trap on the plinth. Battle the Afflicted here. The exit to the east leads to the main Lower District. Cross the curved courtyard, go through the open gate, and cross the two stone platforms that span a winding subterranean stream. Afflicted are active here.

Head through another open gate. Battle two Dwarven Spheres and a mass of Afflicted just after the arch with the lever on it. The lever drops a nasty spike just behind you; use it to skewer foes or stop them from following you. But it is better to sneak past or kill everyone. There are two sets of steps here. The ones to your left (north) lead to a circular platform; water pours from (currently inaccessible) upper walkways. The other staircase at the District's east end leads past Dwarven Spiders and into the Bthardamz Study.

Bthardamz Study: Through the gate to the east is a small study area. To your south is a golden door. Head through and go up the stairs (without setting off the pressure plate and activating the blade trap). Enter through a gate and into the Lower District once again.

Bthardamz Lower District (2): You're now on the upper walkways you could only see earlier. Head down the rooftop stone ramp. To your right (east) is a gate and a chest. To your left (west) is a large covered L-shaped walkway with a turret balcony in the middle. Expect combat with at least six Afflicted here, and watch your step; don't head off the platforms to a crushing fall below! Move through the second walkway heading south, and exit into the Bthardamz Arcanex.

NOTE Don't worry; the fumes you're inhaling aren't at dangerous levels. You may also spot some ballistas. These can be fired but not aimed (so you can't use them on Dwarven Centurions unless they step right in front of the bolt's trajectory, and you only have one firing opportunity).

Bthardamz Arcanex:

This is essentially a large watery grotto with Dwarven towers and platforms built inside it. Head along the platforms, preparing for combat with Dwarven Spheres. Climb the spiraling stone path to the upper corridor, at the end of which a Dwarven Centurion roars into life. You can try sprinting around him or backing up and tackling him from range. If you flee forward, you also meet Dwarven Spiders that can overwhelm you. Fight carefully, retreating if the Centurion becomes too much of a threat.

Once you flee from the mechanical foes or defeat them, climb the stairs beyond the Centurion and reach the upper balcony area. There are six more Dwarven Spiders to defeat before you sprint past a clanking pipe corridor that opens into a pipe-laden Arcanex chamber with two Dwarven Spheres. Defeat them before heading through the gap in the north wall to the rear of the Arcanex chamber, where you have a final confrontation with Orchendor.

Orchendor is in no mood to talk and attacks immediately. Use the scenery to your advantage. Use the gap in the wall or the stairs behind him to hide or fire from if necessary. Watch for his teleportation and for any Dwarven foes you haven't killed, as they tend to follow you into this combat. After you dispatch Orchendor, search him. Among his trinkets is a key allowing you to exit this place without having to retrace your steps.

➤ Key to Bthardamz Elevator

◆ OBJECTIVE: Report Orchendor's death to Peryite

◆ TARGET: Aspect of Peryite, Shrine to Peryite

Quest Conclusion

Head up the stairs at the Arcanex chamber's north end, using the key to reach the Bthardamz Elevator and activating the lever. Ride the elevator up to the exterior entrance. Run along the stone walkways and down to the pavilion to escape this Dwarven maze for good. Fast-Travel at any point or trek east, back to the shrine. Commune with Peryite by inhaling at the cauldron again. Peryite congratulates you, as your actions have sent Orchendor to roam the Pits; his betrayal will be punished and your obedience rewarded.

Spellbreaker is as impressive as it is unique. It generates a Ward when you're blocking, making it very useful when you're fighting against magical enemies. Also beware of (random) retribution: There's a chance World Encounter: The Afflicted versus You* will occur, and you'll face Afflicted wishing you harm after your massacre here.

blathering incoherently about marriage or a goat. Or indeed, losing your temper and throwing refuse across this sacred temple of Dibella. You can:

Ask about the man named Sam. This gets you nowhere until you've tidied up your mess.

(Persuade) You can apologize and tell her you don't remember how you got here.

(Bribe) You can ask how you got here and pay for any damages.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Find Sam Guevenne

◆ OBJECTIVE: Find the staff

◆ OBJECTIVE: Help clean up the Temple of Dibella

Begin tidying up the temple, collecting the rubbish listed below. Among the wine bottles is a note. Read it, and a list of three items are mentioned that can "repair the broken staff." The note is signed "Sam." You're fortunate that two of the three items on the list are among the trash you're clearing up! Now there's just the small matter of searching Skyrim for Sam. And the goat.

➤ Alto Wine

➤ Giant's Toe

➤ Repair Supplies Note

➤ Holy Water

◆ OBJECTIVE: Apologize to the priestesses of Dibella

If you didn't bribe or persuade Senna, return to her after the tidy-up and apologize. As Dibella preaches forgiveness, she grudgingly lets you leave and tells you that through your slurred ranting, you mentioned the town of Rorikstead.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Ask about Sam and the staff in Rorikstead

Drinking to Forget

Enter one of the many taverns in Skyrim. This could be the Bannered Mare in Whiterun or any of the other inns in any of the Hold Cities. Sometimes you're approached by a man wearing black robes named Sam Guevenne, who wonders if you'd like to play a drinking game in order to win a staff. If Sam isn't in the tavern, visit another watering hole; be patient until he appears. Sam produces some "special brew" and gets started immediately.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Participate in a drinking contest with Sam Guevenne

Sam downs a flagon and offers one to you. Swig it down. Sam brings out his flagon again and impressively downs another. Agree to the second drink. Sam tells you he's hit his limit and says that with one more drink, you'll win both the contest and the staff. You reply that you'll take that challenge. Down a third flagon. Sam tells you you're a fun person to drink with. He reckons you should join him at another place where the wine flows like water. You're about to respond when you black out.

The Day After: Recovery and Recollections

Part 1: Incoherently Blathering Drunken Blasphemer!

Your next memory is waking up to a tongue-lashing from a furious priestess. Unless you've remarkable knowledge of temple gods, you don't immediately realize where you are. Priestess Senna wonders why you don't remember

Part 2: Fermented Feed—Smelling Goat Rustler!

Exit the temple. You're in Markarth, in the Reach. Your next place to investigate is Rorikstead, to the east, on the edge of the Tundra plains. Wander into town and seek Ennis, who's tending to his vegetable patch or is locked behind closed doors (which you can pick, but it's better not to show clandestine behavior under these current conditions). Ennis angrily states you have a lot of nerve showing up here again. He proceeds to admonish you for stealing Gleda—his prized goat—and selling it to a giant. At this point, you can:

(Intimidate) Threaten Ennis to tell you everything so he doesn't end up like Gleda.

(Bribe) Ask him to help retrace your steps in return for some serious coin.

(Persuade) Tell him you need Sam and the staff to return Gleda.

Or ask what needs to be done. Ennis wants his prized goat back. Unharmful.

PRIMA OFFICIAL GAME GUIDE

Assuming you chose the last option, your goat hunt begins now. Head up the heath to the south of Rorikstead, where the wandering giant and his new companion are resting on the Tundra foothills. At this point, you can:

Interact with the goat so it follows you, and run from the giant with the goat trotting along behind you.

Or kill the giant and coax the goat into following you by approaching and interacting with it.

Bring the goat down the hillside and back to Ennis. In return for your goat-wrangling, Ennis mentions you left a note that had the words "Ysolda" and "Whiterun" on it.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Talk to Ysolda in Whiterun about the staff

Part 3: Ring-Stealing Hagraven-Loving Cheapskate!

Travel to Whiterun and locate Ysolda hanging out near her house or walking about town. She tells you she's been patient, but you still owe her. Naturally you can't remember why, so Ysolda explains that it isn't about the money; you were in love, and she gave you a wedding ring. If the wedding isn't occurring, you should give her back the ring. Alas, you don't have it, or any memory of becoming engaged. Ysolda is shocked that you've mislaid both the ring and your betrothed! Especially after you told her a sweet story of how you met in Witchmist Grove! At this point, you can:

(Persuade) Plead with Ysolda that you need to get to the wedding.

(Intimidate) Shout that you want to know what else you said.

(Bribe) Pay a considerable sum for the ring.

Or ask what needs to be done. Ysolda wants the ring back if you aren't getting married.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Find the wedding ring in Witchmist Grove

◆ OBJECTIVE: Take the wedding ring

South of Windhelm, deep in Eastmarch is a fog-filled pine glade with a lone cottage surrounded by spikes and various skewered animal heads. As you close in, a Hagraven named Moira bounds toward you, ready to consummate the love you have for each other! When you explain you want the ring back, the Hagraven hisses that she won't share you with Esmerelda (another Hagraven) and immediately attacks you. Kill your cackling fiancée, watching for her icy attacks, and claim the third ingredient from your list, as well as the Wedding Ring.

➤ Wedding Ring ➤ Hagraven Feathers

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return the wedding ring to Ysolda in Whiterun

Return to Ysolda and hand the ring back by speaking to her. She's sad that it didn't work out for you both, especially as you'd told her there would be a huge ceremony at Morvunskar. You even told her about a magic staff, too! That's the information you needed!

◆ OBJECTIVE: Head to Morvunskar

◆ OBJECTIVE: Search Morvunskar for Sam and the staff

◆ Sam's Special Delivery

The fort of Morvunskar is on the opposite bank of the White River, just southwest of Windhelm. Enter the battlements, and you're immediately assaulted by a variety of magicians: Expect combat with Fire Mages, Ice Mages, Storm Mages, pyromancers, conjurers, and necromancers. Open the main wooden door with the lantern hanging near it, in the middle of the upper wall to the west, and enter the fort. Battle (or sneak) southeast once you're inside. Go down the steps leading to a wooden door and a winding stone tunnel. This brings you out into a huge column-filled chamber with more mages to dispatch or flee from. Dash to the double set of stone steps and run to the upper northeast corner. As if by magic, a portal blinks open and you vanish.

You appear in the Misty Grove. There's a strange, immediate sensation of brooding fear tempered by an odd calmness. Fireflies flutter by. Lanterns light your way along an easy-to-follow path over a stream that leads to an outdoor tavern. That master trickster Sam Guevenne greets you by the mead barrel. Ask where you are, and he's not surprised you don't remember your previous trip here. But you've definitely earned the staff. Mention you have everything needed to repair it. None of that matters, you see...

Quest Conclusion

Sam—or Sanguine the Lord of Revelry, as he's known to his worshippers—simply needed you to go out into the world and spread merriment. Sanguine has chosen you, whether you like it or not. But you gain the staff as a partial benefit for your forgotten hijinks. A moment later, you're back in the tavern where you first met Sam, a little worse for wear but carrying an impressively potent staff.

➤ Sanguine's Rose

Postquest Activities

After this quest, there's a (random) chance that World Encounter: The Drunken Dare* occurs. You run into someone who states that you and Sam dared him to head into a bandit camp. He says he did the dare, and you owe him 10,000 gold! You can pay him, negotiate the price down to 750, or kill him (he'll attack if you fail either of the nonviolent plans).

♦ Taking Pity on an Old Madman

Wandering between the graveyard (just below the Hall of the Dead) and the Bard's College in Solitude is a strange man named Dervenin. As you approach, you see that he has two sunken black holes where his eyes once were. Agitated, he asks you to help him. He isn't the usual beggar you encounter in these Hold Cities. Ask what he needs and he tells you his master has abandoned him and doesn't want to see him anymore. His master doesn't want Dervenin interrupting his vacation. The last time Dervenin saw his master, he watched him visit the Blue Palace and snuck into the forbidden wing to "have tea" with an old friend. He hands you a Hip Bone; it's important you have that when entering the Pelagius Wing. You can ask this mad old coot more questions about his master before you leave.

► Pelagius's Hip Bone

♦ OBJECTIVE: Gain access to the Pelagius Wing of the Blue Palace

♦ TARGET: Falk Firebeard, Erdi, or Una, in the Blue Palace, in Solitude

NOTE Those with eagle eyes may recognize Dervenin as a High Priest of Mania in a place known as the Shivering Isles. The Hip Bone you're given may have some magical power. Or it could be an old bone you've been given by a lunatic. As this is a quest item that you can't drop, you can't tell for certain.

You need a key to enter the Pelagius Wing. Journey southeast along the main Solitude avenue and enter the majestic Blue Palace. If this is your first time visiting, head up either staircase to the throne room, where Jarl Elisif the Fair is listening to the fearful stories of a villager named Varnius (Side Quest: The Man Who Cried Wolf). Once the conversation is over, approach the person you're attempting to gain the key from. You can:

Talk to Falk Firebeard, and tell him you need to enter the Pelagius Wing. If you're friends with him (i.e., you've completed Side Quest: The Man Who Cried Wolf, or Miscellaneous Objective: Delivery*), you can then reassure him that you'll be careful, but he hands over the key warily and warns you not to return with anything from that part of the palace; too many dark deeds transpired in those halls....

(Persuade) Ask Erdi to give you the key.

Or speak to Una, who simply gives you the key without any problems.

► Pelagius Wing Key

♦ OBJECTIVE: Use the key to gain access to the Pelagius Wing

Head back down the stairs and locate the locked door to the southwest. Go into the accursed wing, stepping past the debris and cobwebbed tables, animal heads, and furniture. This entire chamber is suspiciously silent. Creep up the steps and head down the long hall...until you blink out of existence!

♦ Pelagius Has a Lot on His Mind

It's a slightly overcast day in this wooded glade. Pelagius the Mad refuses another cup of tea; it goes right through him, and he has a lot on his mind. Edge into this unknown realm, watching Pelagius converse with a gaunt but jovial fellow named Sheogorath. The banquet of cheese and mammoth trunk looks delectable. If you know your history, or witness the ongoing conversation between the crazies, you'll learn that Emperor Pelagius III was an old ruler of Solitude back in the Third Era, 400 hundred years ago. As the bone you're carrying is from Pelagius's corpse, it soon becomes clear you're not in Skyrim anymore. Or at least, any sane part of it. Sheogorath dismisses Pelagius from his table after a perceived slight about cheese, then turns his pupilless eyes on you.

Begin the conversation with Sheogorath, the Daedric Prince of Madness. You can satisfy your curiosity by asking other questions, but, you're here to deliver that message from Dervenin, telling Sheogorath to end his vacation.

You continue your conversations as Sheogorath's chatter becomes a little more sinister. He explains he is a shadow in your subconscious but brightens up considerably when he decides to finish his holiday here. Naturally, though, there is one condition: All you need to do is escape this mental maze, using all your wits and weaponry. Unfortunately, Sheogorath takes the latter away from you, swapping your inventory for a Wabbajack.

► Wabbajack

♦ OBJECTIVE: Use the Wabbajack to escape from Pelagius's Mind

♦ TARGET: Pelagius's three states of mind

The Wabbajack appears in your hand. It is the only weapon, aside from your fists, that you have, and punching a Daedric Prince gets you nowhere. Instead, begin the long, strange trip to extricate yourself from Pelagius's subconscious. The hedge stones on each avenue surrounding Sheogorath's feast are a path into a different part of Pelagius's psyche. Freeing the madness and doubt from each part shall set you free. Set off down any avenue you wish; complete the three parts in any order.

TIP What is the Wabbajack? This strange staff of chaotic randomness is both beneficial and damaging, effective and useless. Fire it, and a bolt of red light hits the target. A random effect usually occurs. The target could shrink, grow, disappear, or turn into anything from a mammoth trunk to a Greybeard. This isn't an offensive weapon; this is the cane of madness!

NOTE Strike Sheogorath with your fists, zap him with the Wabbajack, or eat his food, and he'll blithely ignore your pettiness. Take on those tasks, why don't you?

Path 1: Gaining Confidence

Trek southeast down this road to see a manifestation of Pelagius's Anger towering above a tiny man named Confidence. This fight is one-sided, and you witness Pelagius's deepest, keenest hatred for himself.

Puzzle Solution: Help even the fight by aiming the Wabbajack at Anger and hitting it with blasts. The first shrinks it to half its size. The second shrinks it to the same size as Confidence, but Anger then summons two ethereal axes to batter Confidence even more. Aim at Confidence now, and zap it with the Wabbajack. Continue this until Confidence becomes man-sized. Sheogorath congratulates you; Pelagius is finally ready to love himself, while hating everyone else. This task is now complete.

NOTE At this point, you can have a conversation with Sheogorath back at his tea party. But this is only critical to your progress once you journey down all three paths.

Path 2: Pulverizing Paranoia

Head northwest down this avenue to a small stone arena where Pelagius is displaying his paranoia in the arena of magic. His Stone, Frost, and Flame Thralls are receiving a drubbing as he fights himself, looking on from across the arena you cannot reach or enter.

Puzzle Solution: The thralls are merely an enticing diversion to the real problem: Pelagius the Suspicious is sitting on his throne, flanked by a Bodyguard on either side of him. The Bodyguards are the source of his paranoia, so shoot either of them. When you strike one, both turn into Wolves, turning on Pelagius and attacking him. His paranoia is vanquished.

Path 3: Neutralizing Night Terrors

Head northeast, and witness Pelagius the Tormented attempting to sleep on his bed. You need to wake him up and repel those particularly persistent night terrors.

Puzzle Solution: Pelagius the Tormented is asleep and continues to slumber throughout this literal nightmare. Zap him so the first of his night terrors, a Wolf, bounds into existence and turns on him (or you!). Use the Wabbajack and shoot the Wolf, getting rid of it. It turns into a goat. The goat isn't terrifying at all, so leave it alone and zap Pelagius again.

A Bandit Chief then comes screaming out of the ether. Zap it before it can attack Pelagius. The chief turns into Little Pelagius, the aspect of the child who had these nightmares. Leave Little Pelagius alone and shoot the Hagraven that has appeared to torment both Pelagius aspects. The old crone turns into a Sultry Maiden, much to Little Pelagius's delight. Don't shoot the Maiden; blast Pelagius the Tormented instead, conjuring a Flame Atronach nearby. Quickly shoot that, then Pelagius the Tormented once again. This conjures the final terror: a Dragon Priest. Shoot that, and it turns into a treasure chest, freeing Pelagius's mind from sleeping nightmares.

Quest Conclusion

After you've trekked all three paths successfully, return to the tea party and inform Sheogorath that you've fixed Pelagius's mind with your Wabbajack. He is forced to honor his end of the bargain. He hopes you'll stop in for a strawberry torte the next time you're in New Sheoth and blinks you out of Pelagius's mind. You return to the musty wing of the Blue Palace and can end this enforced holiday yourself.

Postquest Activities

After this quest, Dervenin has disappeared from Solitude. There's also a (random) chance that World Encounter: Ramblings of a Mad Woman* occurs. A crazed woman demands you use the Wabbajack on her. Oblige her if you wish!

CHARACTERS: Dawnstar Guard, Erandur, Fruki, Irgnir, Thoring, Vaermina

ENEMIES: Awakened, Brother Thorek, Brother Veren Duleri, Orcish Invader, Vaermina Devotee

❖ OBJECTIVES: Follow Erandur to Nightcaller Temple, Speak to Erandur, Follow Erandur, Follow Erandur to the Library, Speak to Erandur, Locate The Dreamstride, Speak to Erandur, Follow Erandur to the Laboratory, Speak to Erandur, Locate Vaermina's Torpor, Speak to Erandur, Drink Vaermina's Torpor, Release the Miasma, Disable the Magical Barrier, Speak to Erandur, Follow Erandur to the Skull of Corruption, Defeat Veren and Thorek, Speak to Erandur, Wait for Erandur to dispel the barrier, Murder Erandur, OR Allow Erandur to complete his ritual, Take the Skull of Corruption

Night Terrors

Dawnstar is the last port before Windhelm that is not icebound. The population of this Hold City seems a little preoccupied. When you walk the thoroughfares, Dawnstar Guards may comment on the nightmares the entire town is suffering from. More guards murmur the same rumor. To gain more solid information on what is going on, visit the town's tavern, the Windpeak Inn. The first time you enter, a group of locals are discussing the "curse" with a priest.

Listen in as Irgnir and Fruki argue with each other. Irgnir wants to move out of town, but her sister is telling her she's just having bad dreams and nothing more. Erandur the priest tries to placate Irgnir and agrees they aren't out of the ordinary. Thoring the barkeep pipes up as the sisters begin to chatter about why Irgnir is having the same dream every night. Erandur is looking into this oddity and asks the locals to put their trust into Lady Mara. The sisters reluctantly agree, allowing you to step in and ask Erandur what exactly is going on. Respond as you wish, after which Erandur reveals the truth: The dreams are manifestations created by the Daedric Lord Vaermína. She has a hunger for memories, leaving nightmares behind after consumption. Before the damage Vaermína is doing becomes permanent, Erandur needs to return to the source of the problem—the Nightcaller Temple. Can you help?

◆ OBJECTIVE: Follow Erandur to Nightcaller Temple

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Erandur

◆ OBJECTIVE: Follow Erandur

Erandur explains the history of the temple as you scale the hill above Dawnstar. It is now a ruin within a ruin. Erandur established a small shrine to Mara within the tower's entry hall, hoping to seek her guidance.

Once Erandur reaches the temple door, he waits for you to join him. Speak with him, and he warns you about the dangers within. Years ago, the temple was raided by Orcs seeking revenge for a similar nightmarish affliction. The priests of Vaermína knew they were outmatched and released a strange vapor they called "the Miasma." This caused the entire temple to fall into a magical sleep, suspended in time. When the temple is unsealed, Erandur fears the Miasma may dissipate and the Orcs and priests may wake up. Extended exposure to the Miasma leads to lunacy. Once you're informed of these potential unpleasant side effects, follow Erandur into the structure.

Once inside, Erandur passes the small shrine to Mara, and approaches an area of wall. He casts a spell and the wall illuminates, becoming semi-transparent and bathed in a strange hue. Erandur forces his way through the wall and into the previously inaccessible part of the temple. Follow him past a barred window overlooking the main altar to Vaermína, a strange skull that is shielded by magic. His revelations are shocking: The cause of the nightmares is the Skull of Corruption! Then he moves along the barrier. At the bottom of the stairs, Erandur inspects a doorway with energy blocking your way. Before you can inspect the door, two Orcish Invaders wake from their slumber. Attack them immediately!

TIP The enemies you face throughout this temple take a few moments to stand up, draw their weapon, and attack. Use this time to hit them as many times as you can, wounding them before they can counterattack.

With the Orcs dead, Erandur curses, telling you the priests must have activated the barrier when the Miasma was released. He believes there's a way to bypass the barrier to reach the tower's inner sanctum, but it involves checking the library for confirmation. When you ask how he knows so much about this place, Erandur finally reveals that he, too, was a priest of Vaermína. Your response can be accusatory or quizzical. Erandur quickly tells you he's been seeking redemption from Mara and living in regret.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Follow Erandur to the library

◆ Vaermína's Corruption

Head back up the stairs and wait for Erandur to open the wooden door to the east. He warns you that the Awakened are likely to be active. Sure enough, a Vaermína Devotee and Orcish Invader rise from the rubble of the library. Dispatch them before dropping to the ground floor and attacking two more Devotees on this level. Return to Erandur, as he has a task for you.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Erandur

Ask Erandur what you're looking for, and he describes a book of alchemical recipes called The Dreamstride. The cover bears a likeness of Vaermína.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Locate The Dreamstride

Begin thoroughly searching the library, which contains numerous interesting (but not quest-related) tomes. The Dreamstride is located on the upper ledge (accessed via a fallen column) of the library's top floor, in the eastern corner. Carefully head across and remove the book from its pedestal, between two bookcases.

► The Dreamstride

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Erandur

Inform Erandur that you've found the book, and he quickly thumbs through it. Praising Mara, he reads that there is indeed a way past the barrier, and it involves a liquid known as Vaermína's Torpor. Digesting this brew allows one to enter a "Dreamstride" state, using dreams to travel distances in the real world. As Erandur isn't going to drink it, this task will fall to you soon enough. Before following him, you can argue the dangers of attempting such a feat with Erandur. The temple's east wing has a laboratory that may contain a sample of the torpor.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Follow Erandur to the laboratory

Move through a small connecting corridor to a stone storage chamber with liquids and barrels lining a wooden platform. Kill the priest and Orc rising from their slumber, then head southwest, into the ruins of the laboratory.

Expect further attacks from Vaermína Devotees and more Orc Invaders. After everyone except Erandur is dead, halt your bloodletting.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Erandur

◆ OBJECTIVE: Locate Vaermína's Torpor

Erandur needs you to look around for a small bottle containing the Torpor. While he searches upstairs, head to the three wooden shelving cases below the Alchemy Lab, close to the laboratory exit. The Torpor is sitting on the middle set of shelves.

► Vaermina's Torpor

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Erandur

◆ OBJECTIVE: Drink Vaermina's Torpor

◆ Dreamstride: A Blast from the Past

Return to Erandur, letting him know you've secured the Torpor. He tells you to drink, as the fate of Dawnstar depends on reaching the inner sanctum and halting Vaermina's hold over the locals' dreams. Access your Items > Potions inventory, and use Vaermina's Torpor to continue. The vision comes quickly as you enter the Dreamstride. Your dream seems to harken back to the Orc warband's attack on the temple. Brothers Thorek and Veren are attempting to keep the Skull from the horde. Veren tells Thorek they have no choice and must release the Miasma. Veren turns to you, addressing you as "Brother Casimir," and orders you to activate the barrier and release the Miasma.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Release the Miasma

Begin your race through the inner temple chambers, heading east and then south into a dining chamber where fighting is already occurring. Ignore the battles entirely; you're here in someone else's past consciousness to turn a dream into a wrinkle of a new reality. Turn left (east), heading into the dormitory. Go up the stairs and to the long corridor running west. Turn north, winding through more corridors until you reach the curved corridor above the Skull. Search for the pull handle, and yank it to release the Miasma. Your vision fades.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Disable the Magical Barrier

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Erandur

You blink into present reality, where the magical barrier blocking the doorway still crackles. Take the Common Soul Gem, which focuses the barrier, from its wall sconce, and the barrier begins to fade. Speak to Erandur. Although wowed by the Torpor's effects, Erandur quickly snaps out of his malaise and focuses on ending the Skull of Corruption.

► Common Soul Gem

◆ OBJECTIVE: Follow Erandur to the Skull of Corruption

At this point, you and Erandur must retrace the steps you took in the dream, all the way back to the area where you spoke with the two Brother monks. Erandur leads the way. Back him up when the sleeping Orcs and priests stagger to their feet and fight each other and you.

Continue until you reach the lower passageway with the Skull of Corruption glowing behind its shield ahead (west) of you. At this point, Brothers Veren Duleri and Thorek, now awakened from their slumber, approach Erandur, who is happy they are alive. The feeling isn't mutual, as Veren spits verbal hatred to "Casimir," Erandur's real name (and the body you were inhabiting during the Dreamstride!). Veren calls Erandur a traitor who left them to die and fled before the Miasma took hold. The priests aren't about to let you disturb this Skull. There's only one way out of this mess....

◆ OBJECTIVE: Defeat Veren and Thorek

◆ OBJECTIVE: Speak to Erandur

Bring your battle to the two priests, focusing on the one that Erandur isn't fighting so that combat is quicker. When both priests are dead, approach Erandur, who seems genuinely remorseful for killing his friends. Answer him how you wish, before Erandur steps forward, ready to perform the ritual Lady Mara granted to him.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Wait for Erandur to dispel the barrier

Erandur slowly ascends the steps and implores Lady Mara to break through the barrier and send the Skull to the depths of Oblivion. A moment later, the barrier disappears. The goddess Vaermina now speaks from inside your head, attempting to convince you to kill Erandur and grip the Skull of Corruption for yourself! At the same time, Erandur begins a ritual spell. This takes 30 seconds to complete, leaving you this much time to decide between two possible choices: murder Erandur or let him complete his ritual.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Murder Erandur

◆ OBJECTIVE: OR Allow Erandur to complete his ritual

Quest Conclusion 1

It takes only a couple of swings into Erandur's back to betray him and claim the Skull of Corruption for yourself! Continue to strike him until he falls.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Take the Skull of Corruption

Step up to the Skull Pedestal and activate it. The Skull of Corruption, a staff of ill repute, is now yours! Use it in Vaermina's honor.

► Skull of Corruption

Quest Conclusion 2

It takes only 30 seconds for Erandur to finish the ritual, banishing the Skull of Corruption and Vaermina's influence. Erandur stays at the temple entrance, by the Shrine to Mara. As you aided him, so shall he aid you:

OTHER FACTIONS QUESTS

OVERVIEW

Optimal Quest Start

Quests involving the more minor factions of Skyrim have specific prerequisites as listed below. In general, in order to undertake the missions for the Greybeards or the Blades, you must progress through the Main Quest until those factions become available. However, you may visit and help the Bards College at your earliest convenience.

NOTE Cross-Referencing: Do you want to see maps and learn more about the traps, non-quest-related items, collectibles, crafting areas, and other important rooms of note in every location during these quests? Then cross-reference the location you travel to with the information on that location contained in this guide's Atlas.

AVAILABLE QUESTS

There are a total of 10 different quests and other activities available from these factions.

THE GREYBEARDS QUESTS

The following activities occur after you complete certain parts of the Main Quest. From this point on, High Hrothgar in Whiterun Hold is the main base of operations for the Greybeards. Providing you partner with Master Arngeir and Paarthurnax and do not complete Main Quest: Paarthurnax, you can help the Greybeards preserve the Way of the Voice. There are now two Radiant Quests you can attempt.

OVERVIEW

Sanctuary: High Hrothgar, in Whiterun Hold

An ancient monastery high up on the slope of the Throat of the World, High Hrothgar is home to the Greybeards, masters of Thu'um—the voice powers made famous by Tiber Septim.

Important Characters

Leader: Paarthurnax

Paarthurnax lives above High Hrothgar, at the summit of the Throat of the World, and serves as the supreme master of the Greybeards. He remembers back to the days of the ancient Dragon War when Alduin was defeated and imprisoned. He views events from a distance and from a uniquely detached point of view.

Elder: Master Arngeir

Arngeir is the most powerful of the Greybeards, although this isn't immediately obvious to the rare visitors he receives. His initial reaction to you is cautious; he wants to believe that a Dragonborn has returned but hardly dares to hope it is true.

NOTE The other Greybeards—Masters Wulfgar, Einarth, and Borri—do not speak; their voices are too powerful. Only Master Arngeir is skilled enough to master his voice to the point of conversation. However, they have been known to attempt conversations with those powerful enough to withstand their voices. They excel in the training of Shouts by gestures and demonstration.

WORD WALL REVELATIONS*

NOTE * Quest names marked with this symbol do not appear in your Quest Menu list, although objectives may.

This Radiant Quest becomes available as soon as you complete Main Quest: The Horn of Jorgen Windcaller. You can complete it multiple times. It is always given to you by Master Arngeir.

Speak to Master Arngeir about the Greybeards, and he mentions that there are Words of Power scattered across Skyrim. Most are lost to the world, found only by those stumbling into underground passageways or snowy mountains not used for centuries. If you want, Master Arngeir can place a marker on your world map, randomly showing you a Word Wall you haven't yet discovered.

Speak to Master Arngeir about the Greybeards, and he mentions that there are Words of Power scattered across Skyrim. Most are lost to the world, found only by those stumbling into underground passageways or snowy mountains not used for centuries. If you want, Master Arngeir can place a marker on your world map, randomly showing you a Word Wall you haven't yet discovered.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Find the Word of Power in [random location]

Quest Conclusion

Journey to a location that Arngeir marked, and absorb the Word of Power. This may involve battling any number of guardians, usually Draugr or a dragon. The Word Walls Arngeir reveals may be ones perched atop mountain peaks or hidden in deep dungeons. He usually won't reveal locations you've already been to, unless you've forgotten or missed the Word Wall at that location.

► Word of Power

Postquest Activities

You can return to Master Arngeir and begin this quest repeatedly. A section in the Training Chapter on page 47 lists the locations of all the Word Walls and their associated Shouts.

NOTE Sometimes this quest won't be available; this means that Arngeir hasn't discovered a location for you at the moment. It is wise to return later (try around three days) to see if his scrying has revealed any more locations.

NOTE This Radiant Quest becomes available as soon as you complete Main Quest: The Throat of the World. You can complete this multiple times. It is always given to you by Paarthurnax.

Trek to the summit of the Throat of the World and speak with Paarthurnax. He has much to tell you about the Words of Power and can even teach basic meditations to your Words of Power. Ask Paarthurnax if he trains people, and after the response, ask about the meditations. Paarthurnax grants you a single meditation. The exact one is up to you:

- Perk: Force Without Effort (Fus)
- Perk: The Fire Within (Yol)
- Perk: Eternal Spirit (Feim)

Quest Conclusion

Fus grants you 25 percent defense against stagger, and you stagger opponents 25 percent more often. Feim grants you 25 percent more health regeneration while you're ethereal. Yol grants you 25 percent bonus damage when you use the Fire Breath Shout.

Postquest Activities

You can return to Paarthurnax at any time and change the Meditation to another of the three perks. You can have only one Meditation at a time.

THE BLADES QUESTS

The following activities occur only after you complete Main Quest: Alduin's Wall. From this moment on, the Sky Haven Temple in the Reach is the main base of operations for the Blades. Providing you partner with Delphine and Esbern and complete Main Quest: Paarthurnax, you can help the Blades to gain a foothold in Skyrim once more. There are now four Radiant Quests you can attempt.

OVERVIEW

Sanctuary: Sky Haven Temple, in the Reach

An ancient Akaviri sanctuary, Sky Haven Temple was built as a hidden outpost. The secret interior chambers are dominated by Alduin's Wall, the ancient mural that shows the history and future of Alduin—how he was defeated in ancient times and the prophecy of his return.

Important Characters

Blade Leader: Delphine

The last Blade left in Tamriel (as far as she knows), Delphine is hard-bitten and a survivor. Any idealism has been largely driven out of her during her years on the run. Competent, she tends toward paranoia. She hates the Thalmor above all and will stop at nothing to see them destroyed. Full of darkness and despair, she may yet be turned back toward idealism and the rebirth of the Blades.

Blade Archivist: Esbern

After the Blades' destruction, Esbern went underground, ignoring any messages for help from other Blades (having seen that this was often a Thalmor trap), which allowed him to survive. Esbern has been obsessed with the end of the world for decades. Now that Alduin has returned, he immediately recognizes this as the beginning of the end—without a Dragonborn, there is no hope to stop him.

REBUILDING THE BLADES*

NOTE

* Quest names marked with this symbol do not appear in your Quest Menu list, although objectives may.

This Radiant Quest becomes available as soon as you complete Main Quest: Alduin's Wall. You can complete it multiple times. It is always given to you by Delphine.

Delphine asks if you know of any like-minded individuals who can give their hearts and minds to this course.

Speak to Delphine about the Blades, and she mentions how few of them are left; in fact, there are only two in existence! To bolster the numbers, and because it is the Blades' sacred duty to protect the Dragonborn (you),

Journey to a location where you left a Follower or where you can obtain one. Then return and speak to Delphine with the Follower accompanying you.

Quest Conclusion

Delphine welcomes your Follower into the fold. As time passes and you return to see your Follower, they are able to wear Blades armor and carry weapons used by the Blades, and they live in the Sky Haven Temple. They can accompany you on travels just as before. You can repeat this quest, turn in two additional Followers, and pick one to travel with you, just as before.

Postquest Activities

This is a good way to amass a small "pool" of Followers to take with you on journeys in the future.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Bring a Follower to Delphine

DRAGONSLAYER'S BLESSING*

NOTE This Radiant Quest becomes available as soon as you complete Main Quest: Alduin's Wall. You can complete it multiple times. It is always given to you by Esbern.

Speak to Esbern and ask if the sage has any advice for you. Providing you're in good standing with the Blades, he mentions a blessing he can perform. Request this blessing, and he duly obliges.

Quest Conclusion

You are imbued with Esbern's Dragonslayer's Blessing, which gives you a +10 percent Critical Hit versus dragons for five days.

➤ Dragonslayer's Blessing

Postquest Activities

Once this wears off, ask Esbern to renew it if you wish.

DRAGON RESEARCH*

NOTE This Radiant Quest becomes available as soon as you complete the Blades Quest: Dragon Hunting.* You can complete it only once. It is always given to you by Esbern.

Once you've completed your first Dragon Hunting Quest for Esbern, report back to him. He's interested in you locating any Dragon Scales or Dragon Bones you may have pried off the corpses of the dragons you've slain previously.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Bring a Dragon Scale and a Dragon Bone to Esbern

Quest Conclusion

When you return with a Dragon Scale and a Dragon Bone to Esbern (which you may already have gathered, in which case, speak to him again), he concocts a strange potion and hands it to you. This potion imbues you with a 10 percent damage reduction from dragon attacks.

➤ Esbern's Potion

➤ Perk: Dragon Infusion

DRAGON HUNTING*

NOTE This Radiant Quest becomes available as soon as you complete The Blades Quest: Rebuilding the Blades.* You can complete it multiple times. It is always given to you by Esbern.

Once you've turned in three of your Followers to Delphine, and she's welcomed them into the fold, speak to Esbern, steering the conversation toward dragon lairs. When you ask Esbern if he has knowledge of any lairs, he informs you that he does and points out a [random] lair on your world map. If Esbern hasn't found a dragon lair, he'll mention the realm is quiet at the moment.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Kill the dragon in the [random] dragon lair

Quest Conclusion

Set off on your journey to slay the dragon, which is, after all, the raison d'être of the Blades. Begin combat with this hated beast. The Followers you have accrued will also stand and fight with you, making for an epic assault. Bring down the dragon and then report back to Esbern.

➤ Dragon Bone

➤ Dragon Soul

➤ Dragon Scales

Postquest Activities

Protect any Blades you wish to see live to fight another day; once Blades (your old Followers) die during battle, they cannot be replaced.

THE BARDS COLLEGE QUESTS

THE BARDS COLLEGE

Sanctuary: Bards College, in Solitude

This College has attracted the young, gifted, or rich and ungifted from across the realm of Skyrim. It is where Nords send the few sons and daughters without an aptitude for farmwork or battle.

Important Characters

Headmaster: Viarmo

Viarmo is totally apolitical when it comes to the Civil War. His only concern is the welfare of the Bards College. He is politically shrewd but has masterfully steered clear of taking sides or taking stands on any of the issues of the day. The Bards' role is to entertain and record the events of history, not to make them.

Dean of History: Giraud Gemane

Giraud also carries out many of the bureaucratic duties at the College. He is a mousy, quiet man, and not at all what one would expect from a bardic performer. In truth, he has a certain degree of stage fright. However, his mathematical precision and perfectionism have made him one of the best performers of the drums, piano, and several other "lesser" instruments.

Dean of Lutes: Inge Six-Fingers

Inge doesn't really have six fingers, but anyone who watches her play the lute believes she does. She is an old, crotchety woman who would rather burn her own lute than become headmaster because it would remove her from teaching. However, she will reluctantly put the needs of the College ahead of her own feelings if necessary.

Master Vocalist: Pantea Ateia

Pantea is one of the youngest masters of Voice that the Bards College in Solitude has ever had. Her performances are highly sought after, and she frequently plays at the palace for Elisif. Unlike Headmaster Viarmo, she is a supporter of the Imperial cause in Skyrim. In deference to the headmaster, she keeps her opinions largely to herself.

There are also students inside the College. These include the following:

Jorn: The most advanced student in the school. He is particularly enamored with the battle drum.

Aia Arria: The best singer. She is keenly aware of how she can enchant people with her voice, especially men.

At-Af-Alan: He has just started his lessons and spends more time with Giraud learning rhythm and beat.

Ildi: A recent enrollment and enthusiastic about memorizing the tales of old, her performances are timid and underwhelming.

PREREQUISITES: None

INTERSECTING QUESTS: None

LOCATIONS: Dead Men's Respite, Solitude, Bards College, Blue Palace

CHARACTERS: General Tullius, Giraud Gemane, Jarl Elisif the Fair, Jorl, Svaknir, Viarmo

ENEMIES: Draugr, Frostbite Spider, King Olaf One-Eye, Skeever

- ◆ OBJECTIVES: Find King Olaf's Verse, Return to the Bards College, Help Viarmo reconstruct Olaf's Verse, Meet Viarmo at the Blue Palace, Watch Viarmo perform Olaf's Verse, Speak to Viarmo, Speak to Jorl, Attend the Burning of King Olaf

With the Draugr temporarily thwarted, head through the doorway that opened and around to another sighting of the ghostly form; it bears the name Svaknir. Don't focus on it as you walk down the corridor; there's a floor pressure plate that triggers a spear trap for the unwary! Follow the narrow crypt corridor around and down, to a seemingly dead end. Look to the right for a chain that rotates the stone wall in front of you, opening up a way into the main crypt.

Svaknir walks out of sight, leaving you to fend off some Frostbite Spiders. Carefully pick your way past more cobwebs to another chain (in a crypt with fallen masonry) and pull it. The walls rotate once more, opening a new path through the tombs and unlocking several more chambers with Draugr. Fight or sneak through to the stairs heading down, avoiding the flame trap at the bottom.

You come out into a cobwebbed chamber with a floor grate, where more Frostbite Spiders descend to fight you. After looting the room, open the grate via the chain on the east wall, and drop into the water below. Wade into a damp burial chamber with spiral wooden steps that Svaknir wanders up while you deal with more Draugr and Skeever. Expect attacks from Draugr bowmen on the upper platform. Head up the steps, into the caged platform, and take stock of the path ahead of you.

On the floor to the door's right is a hinge trigger wire. Disarm it (Lockpicking: Adept) and you can open the door and safely cross the bridge.

Otherwise, open the door and carefully time your movements past the deadly swinging blades, stopping at the safe spots indicated by the candles (and lack of blood). Hurry! The longer you wait, the less synchronized the blades will be, making your run that much harder. You can also try a direct sprint (augmented with spells or a Shout if necessary), or leap to a side alcove and back onto the bridge, avoiding some of the blades. Activate the chain at the bridge's opposite end to stop the blades (allowing your followers to pass), and exit via an upper door.

Svaknir appears again near a sealed door in the next corridor. You cannot open the door for now, so continue deeper into the crypt. Deal with more Draugr along the way and a nasty magic caster trap as you move into a connecting chamber with a floor grate. Look down, and you see Svaknir descending the steps. Then look back up to see the Draugr rushing you from all sides.

◆ Unearthing Arcane Edda

If you speak with any of the Bards who sing and play (usually in the main inn or tavern in any of Skyrim's main cities), they mention that you might be interested in becoming a member of the Bards College. These hints are optional to find but point you in the direction of the College.

When you're ready to become a Bard, visit the Avenues District. One of the fancier buildings houses the Bards College, as indicated by the door icon on your local map. The College Headmaster Viarmo is in the lobby of this building.

He warns you that the College accepts few applicants, but for your interview, he has a task that might be appropriate. He tells you that the Burning of King Olaf Festival, held by the College each year, has been forbidden by Solitude's Jarl Elisif. He believes he can change the Jarl's mind if he can perform a reading of King Olaf's Verse, a part of the living history of Skyrim called the Poetic Edda that the Bards College keeps.

The College historian, Giraud Gemane, believes that the only surviving copy of King Olaf's Verse was buried in the old king's tomb. Giraud's research leads him to believe that Dead Men's Respite is the location where the king still lies. Look here.

◆ OBJECTIVE: Find King Olaf's Verse

◆ TARGET: King Olaf's Verse, in Dead Men's Respite

◆ A Ghost of a Chance

From Dragon Bridge, you can head south along the road to Robbers' Gorge, then follow the river east to the tomb, or take the longer (but safer) road past Fort Snowhawk before heading through the mountains. Enter the ancient barrow and head into the entry chamber, where you encounter the ghost of a bard. It turns and walks through the portcullis, fading out before you can interact with it. Return to the table and remove the Ruby Dragon Claw from the pressure plate, which raises the portcullis. You'll need the Claw later, but first, defend yourself from the restless Draugr. Your claw removal startled them out of slumber.

► Ruby Dragon Claw

After dealing with the ambush, activate the chain between the two carved dragon heads on the south wall to open the grate. Descend the spiral steps below, use the handle, and you come upon the final resting place of Svaknir, the bard who wrote King Olaf's Verse and who first began the festival so long ago. The specter sits next to his corpse, waiting for you to bear his masterwork out into the world. Pry it from his bony fingers.

➤ King Olaf's Verse

◆ OBJECTIVE: Return to the Bards College

Ascend the spiral stairs and retrace your steps, fighting off any surviving Draugr along the way. When you return to the sealed door, Svaknir is waiting for you. He beckons you to follow and casts a spell at the door, removing the barrier. He then draws his sword and races down the hall. Follow him.

At the hall's end is a Nordic Puzzle Door.

Puzzle Solution: Bring out the Ruby Dragon Claw you took in the entrance embalming room, and inspect the palm. The forms of a Wolf, a Hawk, and another Wolf are etched into the surface. Make sure the door's outer, middle, and inner rings have those carvings shown before you insert the Claw to unlock the door.

Head up the stairs beyond the door, where Svaknir waits with ghostly sword drawn as you enter the ceremonial burial chamber of King Olaf. Svaknir challenges the dead king, and the Draugr who protected him in life rise from their thrones to defend him once more. Join the bard in battle and cut down your foes as quickly as they rise.
